"Old Main" Destroyed by Fire

Oldest College Building Burned on August 27 With Heavy Loss

FIRE of undetermined origin, discovered before dawn on August 27, before nightfall destroyed "Old Main", classic Bucknell building, in the most disastrous calamity in the history of the University.

The first alarm was turned in before daylight by Herbert C. Grice, '18, who was awakened at his home on Brown Street by an explosion. The entire central unit of "Old Main" was then in flames. The fire had evidently been raging for several hours as within a few moments and before the local fire company could respond to the alarm the entire dome of the building crashed into the raging inferno. Companies from Milton, Sunbury, and Mifflinburg aided in the work of fighting the blaze and protecting East and West Colleges. The entire central unit of "Old Main" was completely destroyed with the first and fourth floors of both wings badly charred and the entire roof collapsed by the intense heat of the flames. The firemen remained on duty until late Saturday afternoon, more than fourteen hours after the discovery of the fire.

Many Losses

The most tragic loss to the University in "Old Main" was the museum collection gathered over a period of forty years by Professor Nelson F. Davis, '95.

The entire collection of geological specimens, zoological exhibits, and the heterogeneous material of the museum was completely destroyed and now lies buried under the debris and the crumpled walls. A few meteorites and stones may possibly be recovered during the excavation work.

Office equipment in the wings of the building was damaged by heat, smoke and water, and many machines, desks, files, etc., ruined. No valuable records were lost although some were partially damaged. Vaults in the offices of the Registrar and Recorder preserved all academic records. These vaults were unopened until four days following the disaster but all contents were found intact.

The destruction of "Old Main" caused the loss of twelve classrooms including famed Euepia and Theta Alpha, Commencement Hall, The Museum, and offices of President, Dean, Registrar, Recorder, Dean of Freshmen, Summer School and Extension, Education, Radio Station WJBU, Electrical Engineering Department, Commerce and Finance Department, Surveying Department, and Superintendent of Service. Stock rooms for office supplies, bedding, and all building equipment were heavily damaged by both fire and water. A conservative estimate places the total fire loss at approximately $300,000.00. Insurance was carried to the extent of $295,000.00.

History

"Old Main" was once known as the "most beautiful college building in America". It was designed by Thomas U. Walter, architect of the dome and wings of the Capitol at Washington, D. C. The West Wing of the building was erected in 1850 and the central unit in 1857. The facade of the building was three hundred and twenty feet including the eighty foot square central portion. Each wing housed more than fifty students on the three upper floors.

The building crowned the crest of College Hill and faced due North. The severely squared Grecian lines were given additional beauty by the four massive columns in the front. The entire quadrangle side of the building was covered with ivy vines which lent an appearance of age and academic dignity.

Destruction

Thousands of curious visitors and many hundreds of Alumni were attracted to the ruins of the building over Sunday and the week following the fire. Many witnessed the demolition of the building by wrecking crews. The walls of the central unit were pulled down one by one to leave a yawning chasm of ruin, still smoking, as this is written, more than two weeks after the blaze. The decision as to the wings of the building is held up pending the report of the insurance adjusters.

Temporary Quarters

With less than three weeks from the date of the fire to the beginning of Freshman Week and the opening of College, officials were faced with an immediate emergency. President Rainey announced through the press that College would open as scheduled. Offices were quickly moved into West College where for the present all administrative work will be conducted. Class rooms have been provided in other buildings to meet the situation and dormitory rooms in East and West Colleges have been "doubled up" to care for the incoming class. The ruins of "Old Main" have been roped off and the quadrangle closed to all but pedestrian traffic.

Rebuilding

Many plans for the reconstruction of "Old Main" have been advanced and more than several archi-

A NEW epoch in Bucknell affairs lies just ahead. "Old Main" will become a modern building, following, we hope, the exterior lines of the one dear to all Bucknellians, and academic and administrative changes are demanded in the exhaustive study made public by the survey committee. Our growth will be two-fold, external and internal. May it be balanced!

FOOTBALL also enters a new phase in the evolution of the great American game. "No more scholarships" means different things to different people. This change will have a decided bearing upon the newer Bucknell.

PRESIDENT RAINEY addressed the first faculty meeting of the year on Saturday, September 10. The report of the survey committee was made public at the meeting. Faculty comment is rife as to the when, where, why, what, and how of the practical application of the many suggestions and implications. An interesting and exciting year is ahead as new plans evolve.

WEIGHT is some indication of the strength of a team in football, all other things being equal. Given an even break the Bisons this year can hold their own in any group of heavyweights. Nine varsity men are members of the "200 Pound Club" with Judson Ruch as president at 240 and Captain Neid as vice-president at 230. Just little fellows!

THE death of David M. Nesbit, '62, on September 8, 1932, at Washington, D. C., transfers the title of "Senior Alumnus" to Mr. Thomas J. Phillips, '67, of Atglen. Mr. Nesbit was buried in Lewisburg on September 10. His family for several generations has been prominent in the community.

DEPRESSION notwithstanding, the Bucknell enrolment of students keeps up for 1932-33. A slight decrease of less than fifty in the total student body speaks well for the regard in which Bucknell is held by her constituency.

PICTURES of the "Old Main" disaster reproduced in this magazine are available for photograph collections. A complete set of eighteen different prints sells for one fifty. Address the Alumni Secretary. "Old Main" plates have gone up with sales on the increase. The price remains the same.

LEGACIES are become more legion on the campus with each succeeding class. Figures in another column list some seventeen sons and daughters of Bucknellians in the Freshman Class. Fathers and Mothers were much in evidence during "Frosh Week" — many of them as young and eager as the second generation.

HISTORY tells us that the first Bucknell football game was with Lafayette here in 1883. The last game with the Leopards as opponents was here in 1929. This season the Eastonians have drawn the Homecoming Date — October 22 at Lewisburg as the two teams renew athletic relations. It will be a corking good game with two stellar teams well matched and eager to start the new series of games with a victory. Will you be here to see it?

HOMECOMING is October 22 — Lafayette plays here — it will be a great game — and it is staged for the Alumni — YOU! We have not been able to devote much space to the plans for the game as they are still maturing. Bucknell Homecomings are always worth while, however, and all we should need to do is remind you of the date. See you all then!

Alumni President Pangburn '15, Writes

THOUSANDS of Bucknellians were stunned at the news of the loss of "Old Main". Did they realize before what intrinsic value that building had, and what its influences have meant in their lives?

The scar of the burn will remain for some time, yet its flames may re-ignite a united effort of the students and the alumni which will soon obliterate the scar, and as a result Bucknell will be stronger.

Our University and its new president need the immediate and active support of each alumnus and Bucknell friend. The record of the next decade at Bucknell will depend largely on the support you give your Alma Mater.

I am going to ask each alumnus of Bucknell to make a personal inventory of his or her activities toward the College during the past ten years. If you are satisfied that you do not owe the University anything, then the future of Bucknell is at stake. Do not allow the years that have passed since you graduated to be a barrier, but lose that feeling by an occasional letter to an old friend, securing the Alumni Magazine, an occasional trip to Lewisburg to renew old acquaintances there, and Bucknell will come very close to you.

Each alumnus can receive dividends by devoting a portion of his time to some form of Bucknell life that he or she is particularly interested in. I know of an alumnus who lives two hundred miles from Lewisburg, and he knows each member of the football squad by his first name. He finds that his college days are not past forever, and he states that great returns are to be had in his active association with Bucknell life. He receives from the boys a renewed spirit of loyalty and devotion, not only to his school but his country, his business associates, and his family.

This Fall is an excellent time to renew your Bucknell life. Get acquainted with the students and the faculty, and you will have the same feeling to get back to the Hill as you did in your college days.

Take a one-day vacation each week-end, follow the football team. Get acquainted with these boys, meet the coaches who are training your boys, and if their spirit will not give you a severe case of Bucknellitis, then you are immune to any spirit and should be in the morgue. This Fall meet Bucknell people in Lewisburg, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Scranton, and Washington, D. C.

Support the Alumni Fund — it is your financial contribution to the needs of the University.

Ask yourself one question: Am I a credit to Bucknell? Be proud of your school; live so she will be proud of you.

An Open Letter on Loyalty

Minneapolis, Minnesota.
July 21, 1932.

Fellow Alumni:

In one of my letters to my classmates of 1926, last spring, I ventured the suggestion that, in addition to the material growth of the University, which has been especially marked since 1920, Bucknell has built up certain intangible assets including what I then referred to as a "living endowment." It was my contention that each person accepted into the University represents an investment, an academic risk, on which some kind of return is to be expected. The reasonable dividend from such an investment should be paid in terms of better living, and in respect for and loyalty to the institution.

I soon had it brought forcefully to my attention that not all such investments are productive of such dividends. One of my classmates who still had enough respect for the opinions of others to hide behind the anonymity of a New York post-mark (and I can think of nothing more anonymous) promptly deplored the beggarly policy of the University and complained bitterly because Bucknell failed to recognize that every student is a future alumnus and to treat him as such during his student days. The further insinuation (and it wasn't too gently made) was that many more like himself either looked with contempt on Bucknell or were apologetic for the "inferiority" of the institution. Further, the only ones who were loyal were a group of specially favored "Campus Scavengers."

I have a strong suspicion that this particular individual could have withdrawn from Bucknell if he didn't like the atmosphere or the quality of the work there, and that the University might have been able to withstand the loss. He didn't. Instead he apparently resisted suggestions and encouragement to go elsewhere. His attitude must have been: "You can't put me out but you can't make me like it," and now apparently is: "The only reason I'm glad to be an alumnus of Bucknell is that, as one, I can be more of a nuisance to the institution than in any other way."

Thus far I have given more attention than any one properly should to a writer of anonymous letters. I have done so, however, because I want to make use of the sentiments he expressed.

One such person is a crank. Two of them are a couple of cranks. But any considerable proportion of them in the Alumni body is a matter of concern. How many such have we? To what extent are their claims against the University valid? If the University is at fault what can be done? If the program of the University is fundamentally sound, and I believe it is, then what can the great body of real Bucknellians do to minimize the effects of such cantankerous fault-finding?

I am putting this before the Alumni as a challenge. Bucknell is a growing, improving, progressive insti-

DR. HUNT TO VISIT INDIA

President Emeritus Emory W. Hunt plans to leave Lewisburg early in October for a trip around the world, stopping for several weeks with his daughter Helen, Dean of Women at Judson College, Rangoon, during the Christmas season. Dr. Hunt will sail from San Francisco on the Dollar Line steamship President Hayes on October 24. California Alumni plan a reception for him in Los Angeles several days before he sails. He will return from the East via Egypt and Palestine on the President Van Buren to Egypt and the President Garfield from there to New York to arrive March 14.

President Rainey has received several checks from Alumni to be applied to the rebuilding fund. One writer requested a burned brick from the ruins as a souvenir. It was duly sent. No definite announcements can be expected within several months.

tution. She is, I believe, performing a worthy service both to the individual students and to the society in which they, as Alumni, must work and live. We are her sons and daughters. It is up to us to pay our dividend of loyalty.

That doesn't mean merely attending football games and concerts, sending in students, supporting funds, and putting clauses in wills, although all of these are legitimate expressions of loyalty. I believe careful, frank, honest criticism, directed to the proper authorities is a high expression of loyalty. Defending the College from unwarranted attacks by such defamers as this one ranks equally high. It is a difficult thing to do for seldom do such persons do their work openly.

The challenge, Alumni, is to know more about Bucknell; what she is doing and what she aims to do; what her policies and her program are. You can be depended upon, then, to make and acknowledge the true criticism; to recognize and refute the false. It is a challenge both to your intelligence and to your loyalty.

Sincerely,

Eugene D. Carstater, '26.

Football Prognostications

By Arthur L. Brandon, Director of Publicity

DESPITE the loss of twelve lettermen from the unbeaten team of 1931, football prospects at Bucknell for the present season are bright. Ten lettermen from last year will return, six members of the squad who just missed letters are available, and eighteen sophomores come up from a successful freshman team.

Carl Snavely will start his sixth year as head coach. His assistants are Max Reed, '24, Malcolm Musser, '19, and Merle Stonebraker, '32. In the five-year Snavely regime Bucknell teams have won 31 games, tied seven, and lost only ten. The Bisons have scored 871 points to their opponents' 297.

Among the returning lettermen are three guards, three backs, two tackles, an end, and a center. The whole squad, as arranged in spring training, is well balanced, with an even dozen backs, six ends, five or six tackles, eight or nine guards, and four centers.

Edward Neid, 230-pound tackle and captain, from Danville, heads the list of old men. At the other tackle is Jack Dempsey, another 200-pounder, a product of Ridley Park. Newcomers who will be tackle candidates are Harry Bergkamp, Ridgefield Park; Leslie Berk, a junior, from Frackville; Carl Ray, Williamsport; and Judson Ruch, Osceola.

Much New End Material

Jack Dorman, a guard last year, is the only letterman who is an end candidate. The Smithton lad's speed and versatility caused Snavely to switch him to end in the spring training period and he was an immediate success. Especially promising end material comes from the freshman team with Gene Zanarina, Jeannette, and Leonard Kachel, Newark, N. J., heading the list, closely followed by Joe Delaney, Ambler, George Berry, Elmira, N. Y., and Andy Giermak, Edwardsville.

The team is better fortified with veteran guard players than it is in any other department. Owen James, Scranton, regular last year, and Henry Seiss, Alpha, N. J., and Edwin Wood, Haddonfield, N. J., first class substitutes and lettermen are back on the squad. Leading the new men are George Boiston, 200-pounder from the Abington high school, Ralph Furiell, Rome, N. Y., and Jack Drayton, Manchester, N. H., James Fraser, Pittsfield, Mass., and James Phillips, a junior from Carthage, N. Y., will offer keen competition.

Strong at Center

Famed for excellent centers in recent years, Bucknell will again be strong in this position. Nicholas Farina, Steelton, a junior, participated in the important October and November games a year ago and was never outplayed. Walter Gilleland, Wilk-insburg, a capable man last fall is back, as is Michael Stranko, St. Clair. George McGaughey, Vandergrift, looked like varsity material last season as he played with the freshmen.

Bucknell is going to miss Clark Hinkle at fullback! What team wouldn't? But the work in spring training of Charles Peters, Chambersburg, and Joe Reznichak, Perth Amboy, N. J., indicates that the Bisons are going to have capable line plungers. These boys are husky and fast. Raulston More, Sunbury lad, is also a capable fullback.

Edward Myers, York, and George Vetter, Elmira, join Peters in being the only letter backs in College. Hubert Verhey, Ridley Park, John Kubacki, Reading player, who kicked one of the winning touch-down points against Fordham, Joe Caravaglio, Norwich, N. Y., speedster, who was injured at the beginning of last season, and Roland Bean, Creamery, fast developing halfback, are the veteran members who will be available.

Joe Rhubright, Tamaqua, is one of the best punters and passers to enter Bucknell in many seasons. He was a regular on the freshman team last season. John Walsky, Frackville, is probably the fastest man on the squad. Harry L. Jenkins, a Germantown boy, is the team's lightest candidate, weighing 150 pounds. Harold Kenseth, Milton, Mass., junior, is the newest backfield candidate.

If the schedule were an ordinary one of four or five major games, it would not be foolish to predict that the Bisons would go through the season with only one or possibly two defeats. But the athletic council has picked off a hard list of opponents for a team that lost twelve lettermen. Considering the caliber of the opposing elevens, the writer believes that Bucknell will have another highly successful season. Each alumnus can write his own predictions!

Fordham, Temple, and Lafayette will have three of the eight really strong teams of the East this year, and Bucknell meets them in order in the month of October before the juniors and sophomores have had enough time to mold themselves into a smooth football machine. But the success of the spring practice also leads this writer to predict that the Orange and Blue will perform even above average in these three big tests.

The complete schedule in my judgment is as difficult as any ever attempted by a team at or near the class of Bucknell. The preliminary contests with St. Thomas and Albright bring to Lewisburg the toughest teams among the secondary elevens in Eastern Pennsylvania. Then come the triumvirate already mentioned, followed by Villanova, Western Maryland, Washington and Jefferson, and Georgetown. Just a bunch of setups!

Ticket Applications

Order forms for tickets to all games on the schedule may be secured from the office of The Graduate Manager of Athletics, Lewisburg. Applications will be filed in order of receipt. Alumni who desire choice seats are advised to request order forms at once. Prices and regulations on the sale of all tickets are furnished with application forms. Order forms are not being mailed to all Alumni as heretofore in order to save expense and avoid duplication.

Home Game Prices

General admission to all four home games in The Memorial Stadium has been announced by the Athletic Council as one dollar. All seats will be at this low level price for the first two games, St. Thomas and Albright on September 23, and 30, respectively. The Lafayette game, Homecoming, October 22, top price will be $2.50 with other reserved sections at $2.00 and general admission at $1.00. A fifty cent top for reserved seats over the general admission price will be charged for the Western Maryland game on November 5. Prices on all away from home games will be printed on the regular application blanks.

ALUMNI OFFICE MOVED

Campus visitors will find the Alumni Office in Room Number 119, West College. This large central room was formerly Number 4 and according to many reports has a history rich in Bucknell lore. The former offices of the Alumni Association in the northwest section of the building have been taken over by the administrative officers of the College. The new quarters are entered from either side door of West College. Visitors are always welcome despite the crowded conditions caused by the loss of office space in "Old Main."

FEDERAL BUILDINGS

NEARING COMPLETION

The Northeastern Penitentiary and the Lewisburg Post Office and United States Court Building, Lewisburg's boom centers are both rapidly nearing completion. The Penitentiary guards have been on duty during the summer months and when interior fittings are placed the giant structure will be ready to receive the first quota of prisoners reported due on October 15. Concrete has all been poured for the Post Office at Third and Market and carpenters are at work finishing the exterior lines. Occupancy is scheduled for the first of the year.

The Answers

President Homer P. Rainey,
Bucknell University,
Lewisburg, Pennsylvania.
Dear Sir:

The discussion which follows is based on a three day visit to Bucknell University and upon an examination of nine survey reports prepared by committees of the faculty of Bucknell University.

On the occasion of the visit to Bucknell conferences were held with a number of faculty committees. Individual conferences were held with the President of the University, the Dean of the University, the Comptroller, and with a number of individual members of the faculty. A meeting of department heads was held for discussion of problems treated in the survey reports. An inspection trip was made to the University Library and through certain other buildings and about the grounds.

The survey reports prepared by faculty committees covered the following matters:

Administration Faculty
Curriculum
Personnel, Parts I, II, and III.
Student Health Service and Sanitation Religion
Physical Education and Intercollegiate Athletics Engineering
Physical Needs

There was also available a personal schedule completed by each member of the faculty.

The preparation of these survey reports by faculty committees under the leadership of the President of the University is worthy of the highest commendation. The problems selected for study are fundamental in the life of the institution. They have been approached with understanding and courage. The treatment is frank and the resulting manuscripts not only give a candid exposition of the present conditions at Bucknell University but the recommendations for improvement are worthy of the most serious consideration by all who are concerned with the future of the institution. Activities of this nature are a token of high morale in the faculty and evince a willingness to join in a cooperative effort to further the cause of higher education in this community.

Recommendations

I. Continued Study

The first recommendation to be made arises from this successful endeavor of the faculty to study its own problems. It is proposed that this initial effort be capitalized and that there be created a continuing committee on institutional improvement. In many ways higher education is in a transitional condition; the live institution must keep alert to adjust its program to new conditions; the continuing study by the faculty of its problems is essential to healthful growth. A definitely recognized agency within the institution for such study with some subsidy for investigation and research is clearly desirable.

II. College Organizations

It is recommended that Bucknell continue to maintain a single collegiate organization directly under the administration of the president. In an institution of the present and probable future size of Bucknell University the creation of separate collegiate units within the institution will not merely create a needlessly expensive administrative set-up; it will introduce unfortunate cleavages into the intellectual and social life of the University that will affect unfavorably the welfare of the students themselves.

III. New Divisions

It is recommended that the curriculum of the University be reorganized so as to lessen the present excessive departmentalization of the curriculum and of the faculty. A divisional organization is recommended. The scope and character of such an organization is a matter for faculty consideration and action, but the feasible divisions would appear to be as follows:

1. Biological sciences
2. Physical sciences including engineering
3. Social sciences including psychology and education
4. The humanities including music and other fine arts

The allocation of individual subjects of study to divisions should not be over-rigid. Some of the present departments will find difficulty in confining themselves to a single division since cross-relations are also important. Thus, mathematics while finding its most natural affiliation with the physical sciences has also important affinities with the biological sciences and with the social sciences. Like conditions prevail as to other subjects. Provision will, therefore, be necessary for freedom in crossing divisional boundaries both in matters of curricula and of personnel.

The advantages of the suggested divisional organization are as follows:

1. It will simplify administration since it will replace the present 27 departments with four or five administrative units.
2. It will lead to a reorganization of the curriculum, to the elimination of duplicating courses and course content, to a conservation of faculty time and energy, to a richer and a better integrated curriculum for students.
3. It will facilitate the intellectual and social contacts of members of the faculty.
4. It will render the conditions at Bucknell more suitable for advanced work particularly work at the graduate level. The inevitable restriction of numerous departmental offerings at the lower levels will conserve resources for work at advanced stages of student progress.

IV. Curriculum Changes

It is recommended that the work of the first two collegiate years be so organized as to emphasize general education and that the work of the upper years be organized into curricula of two and three years in length leading to the bachelor's and master's degree with specialization in the field of major interest. The advantages of this arrangement are as follows:

1. It will provide emphasis upon the completion of general education by the end of the sophomore year.
2. It will make possible a better integration of the work in the first two collegiate years with the work which students have previously taken in the secondary schools, a matter which should have careful study by the university.
3. Specialization will be reserved for more adequate preparation and greater maturity on the part of the students.
4. The proposed organization would provide a satisfactory program for the development of work up to the level of the master's degree. Bucknell University can provide the conditions for sound specialization up to this point. It is not desirable that it attempt to go beyond the master's degree at the present time. The proposed five year program, that is, two years general education and three years of specialization, would render possible the type of engineering education which an institution like Bucknell University should seek to promote. Engineering degrees would be based upon a better general education than is possible under present arrangements. Adequate opportunities for specialization would also be provided.

V. Fine Arts

In view of the student clientele of Bucknell University it would seem desirable to expand the curricula offering in the field of music, and in the plastic, graphic, and related fine arts. Such expansion would involve a larger and better trained faculty in the fields in question. It would also require a more generous acceptance of courses in these fields for meeting the requirements for the University's degrees. The improved provision for music and the fine arts is recommended.

VI. Administrative Division

It is recommended that there be created an administrative division to have charge of all matters relating to students excluding from control of this division all matters relating to instruction and the curriculum. Among the matters to be assigned to this division are the following: a. admissions; b. housing and food; c. health; d. guidance; e. measurement; f. student activities; g. personal problems of students including financial problems; h. student organization; i. student publications; j. student records; k. student discipline.

Such a division would assume most of the obligations now devolving upon the offices of the Dean of Freshmen, the Registrar, the Dean of the College, the Dean of Women, the Director of the Health Service, the Director of Religious Work and certain faculty committees concerned with student problems.

Ultimately all of these functions should be assumed in a single administrative division and be subject to the administration direction of a student management office directly responsible to the President of the University. The working out of an harmonious and effective organization will require considerable time and a gradual program of adjustment of functions and personnel. It may be desirable as a first step towards an ultimately satisfactory form of organization to associate into a Committee on Student Management the offices and the present administration of the functions indicated above. Gradually there should be developed a more integrated administrative organization than can be provided by this initial committee system.

Care should be taken in the development of this student management unit that the information to be derived concerning students should be readily available to faculty officers and committees concerned with curricula and instruction. Between these two groups there should be the freest possible exchange of information and counsel.

VII. Summer School

It is recommended that the summer school be continued. Emphasis in the announcement of courses should be placed upon those curricular offerings which are demanded by the types of students who are able to attend college in the summers. In general the summer session should be a self-supporting unit of the University. This would mean that for the present it would not offer courses which are called for by only a small number of students although a limited offering of advanced courses, if demanded by students, should be encouraged.

It is recommended that the extension work be not expanded. There is no apparent great demand for extension courses from Bucknell University, and conditions for developing a well rounded program of extension work are not promising.

It is not recommended that Bucknell University attempt to go on a four quarter system. The demand for college work at Bucknell University in the summer session is not likely to develop in the near future so as to justify the change from the present semester system to the four quarter arrangement.

VIII. Faculty Salaries

The following recommendations are made in respect to the faculty:

1. Faculty salaries should be substantially increased. The records show that the median salary for full professors is $3100. Eighteen of the 32 persons holding the rank of full professor receive $3100 or less. No full professor except the Dean of the College receives more than $3500. In comparable institutions of the best rank average salaries of full professors are not less than $4000 and range upwards to $5000, $6000, and $7000 for outstanding individuals.

A flat salary increase to all members of the faculty to the amount indicated above is not recommended. The present practice of equal salaries to all holding the rank of full professor is not in keeping with sound administrative policy in higher institutions. Extreme care should be exercised in giving salary increases so that the really competent men should receive recognition. The factors to be taken into account in salary increases are:

- a. The amount and character of educational training beyond the Bachelor's degree.
 - b. The record of productive scholarship as evidenced by scholarly publications and contact with learned societies.
 - c. The acknowledged competence of an individual as an instructor of college students.
 - d. The capacity for cooperative administrative service in the institution.
 - e. The personal leadership of an individual with the students and with colleagues in the faculty.
2. It is recommended that a satisfactory retirement system be provided. Thirteen members of the present faculty are 55 years of age and over. Seven of these are sixty or more years of age. The time is not far distant when some or all of these men should be relieved of their instructional obligations and retired in a manner consonant with the values of their past services and with the dignity of their profession.
3. It is recommended that great care be given to the recruiting and selection of new members of the faculty. As in the matter of faculty salary increases, emphasis should be placed upon adequate educational training and upon a record and promise of scholarly activities. The foregoing items become increasingly important as Bucknell University attempts to expand its advanced offerings and opportunities for graduate students.

4. It is probably desirable to increase the number of the teaching staff whose training has been secured in institutions other than Bucknell University. The present staff contains an undesirable percentage of men whose major or only training has been secured at Bucknell University.

5. The quality of work at Bucknell University would undoubtedly be improved if the teaching loads of members of the faculty were reduced. While the present load is apparently no greater than in many institutions of similar type, it is in excess of the teaching load in a number of the admittedly high grade colleges. It is recommended that special studies be made of the curricula with a view to reducing the number of small classes and the teaching load of those members of the faculty who are engaged in productive work. It is not recommended that the teaching load be uniform for all instructors or all departments. It should be possible with a reorganized curriculum and with certain readjustments in the staff to arrange a median teaching load not to exceed 12 credit hours; 10 credit hours is a more desirable standard. About this median the range can be considerable depending upon the amount of preparation for instruction required, the nature of the class periods, the amount of outside work and other related matters.

IX. Scholarship

Desirable standards of student scholarship are primarily dependent upon high scholarship in the faculty. The first step in the improvement of student scholarship is the improvement of faculty scholarship. In addition, however, there are certain supplementary techniques which may be usefully employed. Among these are the following:

- a. The generous public recognition by the faculty and students of high scholarship among students. This can be furthered through the expansion of the activities of honor societies, the awarding of honors by the faculty for excellent scholarship, and by stated occasions for the public recognition of superior intellectual attainments.

b. The improvement of college examinations is another aid to further scholarship. The use of standardized examinations in subject matter fields which are used by other institutions should provide comparable data by which Bucknell University can view its relative accomplishments. The results of such examinations, however, should be carefully scrutinized and not blindly accepted at their face pattern as indicating inferiority or superiority in Bucknell students.

c. Most collegiate institutions, and this doubtless includes Bucknell, can improve the examinations which are regularly employed. A careful and considerate use of the general final examination should serve to integrate various courses taken by students, and should result in a better scholastic accomplishment.

d. Institution of honors courses or independent study courses for really competent students providing large liberty on the part of the students is another useful method for improving attainments.

e. A study of the success of Bucknell graduates in professional schools and in graduate schools would be an indication of the quality of student ability and training found at Bucknell.

It is recommended that the faculty give consideration to all of the above methods for increasing the scholastic attainments of its students and make use of such as are adaptable to the local situation.

X. Athletics

It is recommended that Bucknell University accept and adhere strictly to the recently adopted requirements of the Association of the Middle States and Maryland in reference to intercollegiate athletics. This would mean the abolition of athletic scholarships and the subsidizing and recruiting of athletes. Such action would be in line with current trends throughout the country and in the interests of the whole body of students.

It is important that intramural activities serve all students, with special concern for those in need of particular forms of physical training and that these activities be encouraged. It is important that the health service information be made readily available to the student counselors. If the student management division as suggested under V above is adopted this result would follow.

XI. Financial

It is recommended that the financial and accounting system developed by the President of the University and the Comptroller be adopted and put into practice. Such a system is an absolute essential to an effective management of the institution.

XII Building Program

It is recommended that the University outline a comprehensive building program that will, through a period of years, develop for Bucknell a modern and adequate plant. A first step in such a program is a clarification of the purposes of the University as an educational institution. It is necessary in the interest of a sound educational program that the institution define the limited functions which it will seek to promote. With this accomplished it will be possible to place emphasis upon fundamental building needs and to obviate the expenditure of funds upon the construction of less important buildings which not only fail to meet the most pressing institutional needs but which tend to distort the sound pattern of institutional growth.

It is recommended that first consideration in reference to buildings be given to a new library building. The present building is badly located for its satisfactory use by all of the students, and it is inadequate in its provision for stack rooms, general reading rooms and special collections and for administrative offices. With the construction of a new building the present one could be used for class rooms, or for the better provision of college offices. Better office facilities for the Registrar, Comptroller, the Dean and the President of the University are greatly needed, and should have early consideration by the Board.

The gymnasium facilities are inadequate and a new building is greatly needed. The early construction of a new gymnasium building would be in the interests of the entire student body.

Respectfully submitted,

(Signed)

SENIOR ALUMNUS DIES

The death of David M. Nesbit, '62, "Senior Alumnus" of Bucknell occurred in Washington, D. C., on September 8, 1932. Interment was in the Lewisburg Cemetery on September 10. Representatives of the University, Alumni Association, and Phi Kappa Psi fraternity were in attendance at the services. Mr. Nesbit was a native of Chillisquaque and upon graduation from College entered the Union Army.

While at Bucknell, Mr. Nesbit was enrolled in the "Scientific" course, and graduated with the degree of Ph.B. He is a member of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity and also a member of Theta Alpha, a society which had, "meetings on Saturday forenoon of each week for orations, essays and debates." Each has a convenient hall; and by an arrangement of the Faculty, will always have about an equal number of members."

Mr. Nesbit held the rank of First Lieutenant in the 131st Pennsylvania Volunteers, which he joined immediately upon leaving College.

At the end of the war, Mr. Nesbit engaged in his chosen occupation, farming. Here he had scope for his energies, which later developed into work in behalf of the farmer in Washington. Occasionally he wrote for publication, one of these instances being a paper on "The Uplift of the Farmer" which was read before the Vansville Farmers' Club on November 7, 1908. At that time Roosevelt (who was president of the United States) had proposed an Act of Congress for the uplift of the farmers. The paper as written and read by Mr. Nesbit defends the farmer from the attack of "five gentlemen—not one of them a farmer." These five men composed a Commission on Country Life, which was to tell Roosevelt how the uplift was to be accomplished.

GRADUATE COURSES IN EDUCATION ACCREDITED FOR SUPERINTENDENTS AND PRINCIPALS

Bucknell University was recently accredited for the training of superintendents and principals for the public schools of the state. The other accredited state institutions are University of Pennsylvania, Penn State, Temple University, and the University of Pittsburgh. Courses leading to certification as county or district superintendent, supervising principal, elementary principal and high school principal may be obtained in these institutions.

The Bucknell department of education will issue in October a bulletin on the work of the department. This will contain lists of courses acceptable for the various certificates, and other pertinent information.

A new degree, the Master of Science in Education, has been authorized by the faculty. This degree is based on undergraduate preparation equivalent to that for the degree of Bachelor of Science in Education as given at Bucknell.

Graduate requirements for Master of Arts and Master of Science in Education are the same. A thesis based on research is required, as well as a final oral examination. No specific courses are stipulated for the degree, the candidate being required to show his competency in the final examination. A maximum of six semester hours of the total of thirty may be allowed for the thesis.

Throughout the year the department offers each Saturday morning between the hours of eight and one o'clock two graduate courses in education. Those offered this semester are: 8 to 10, Education 217 — Supervision of Instruction; and 10 to 12, Education 313, a seminar in education.

It is expected that President Rainey, who has lectured the past two summers at the University of Minnesota, will offer courses in educational administration at Bucknell next summer. Doctor Rainey is the author of a well-known text on the financing of public education.

ACADEMY NAMED TAYLOR HALL

Acting upon a recommendation made by the Class of 1872 the Board of Trustees approved in June the naming of the Academy Building Stephen W. Taylor Hall in memory of the pioneer president of the University at Lewisburg. This structure with architectural lines similar to those of "Old Main" was the first structure on College Hill. It was erected in 1848, two years after the founding of the University. Here Dr. Taylor graduated the first class from The University at Lewisburg in 1851. The building has been known as Biology Building since the passing of Bucknell Academy in 1916 and has been used for classes and laboratories of this department.

A sketch of the work of Stephen W. Taylor in founding the University is taken from the notes of Dr. William C. Bartol, '72, who addressed the Pi Mu Epsilon fraternity several years ago on the life of this first professor of Mathematics:

"Stephen W. Taylor was born in Massachusetts in 1791. He was graduated from Hamilton College and was made principal of Lowville Academy, N. Y. After a sixteen year tenure of office there he was invited to a similar post at the Academy at Madison University (now Colgate). He was later elevated to the position of Professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy in Madison University. In 1845 he resigned to accept the post of "General Agent" for the Northumberland Baptist Association in their work leading toward the establishment of the University at Lewisburg. His immediate work was to raise an endowment of $100,000. With the aid of prominent Lewisburg families and Philadelphia Baptists he succeeded in raising $60,000 in one year and secured a charter for the new college from the Legislature. He planned and built the building that now bears his name and there graduated the first college class in 1851. He resigned the same year to accept the presidency of Madison where he died five years later, January 6, 1856."

THREE HUNDRED MARK

More than two hundred and eighty five freshmen swamped the registration headquarters on College Hill on Wednesday, September 7 for the opening day of the annual Freshmen Week. A regular program planned in advance was carried out by the faculty committee in charge despite the many shifts in locations due to the fire. As this is written the week comes to a close and the regular opening of College is scheduled for the morrow. Registrar H. W. Holtzer, '24, predicts a total enrolment in the entire student body in excess of one thousand. This figure will represent a slight decrease as compared to the student body of the past year.

BOSTON ORCHESTRA, SEPTEMBER 27

The annual Artist's Course at Bucknell opens on September 27 with the Boston Sinfouietta, famous orchestral ensemble composed of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The organization appears at Bucknell on its first trip outside New England.

BOOK SHELF

NEW ATHLETIC GAME

Mr. W. L. Park, '16, is the inventor of a new sport which he calls "The Game of Dix" and which is fully described in a book of the same name recently published by the author and inventor. The game is an outdoor sport designed for colleges, schools and independent teams. The playing field is 50 by 100 feet and the standard soccer ball is used for play. Goals are scored by advancing the ball, using any part of the body, and placing it through goal posts. The game is a combination of soccer, football and volleyball. It requires no expensive equipment or unusual ability. The inventor hopes that it will become the standard high school sport as a substitute for football, inasmuch as entire student bodies may take part in the game. His book is dedicated to a Bucknell comrade in arms, C. O. "Dick" Yoder, who died in France in 1918. Copies of the new book may be secured at a nominal price by addressing the author at Montandon, Pa.

The Alumni Fund is a plan developed by and for the Alumni, designed to provide financial support for Bucknell through the medium of annual gifts.

Weekly luncheons are held by the Pittsburgh group at Kauffman's, Thursday, 12:15 p.m.

THE best news of the year is the announcement that came from the special meeting of the Board of Trustees at Homecoming that Jens Larson had been retained as Bucknell Architect. More about this man and the program of development will be found in the President's Page — a new feature of this issue.

M. R. LARSON has done a masterful piece of work at Dartmouth in the development of that campus from a sprawling group of unrelated buildings fifteen years ago to one of the most beautiful campuses in America today. Bucknell chose wisely in bringing to Lewisburg one of the foremost if not the foremost college architect in the country.

HOMEcoming was great! The victory over Lafayette was well earned and it was a great game. There were less than eight thousand who were here and among the crowd were many alumni. It was not up to par as alumni crowds go but what was lacking in numbers was made up in enthusiasm.

MANY regrets were expressed at the failure of the New York Alumni Club to hold their annual dinner in connection with the Fordham game. The parties of the past two years were such outstanding successes that the absence of any gathering this year left an unfulfilled hope for many. Alumni Headquarters established by The Alumni Council at The Hotel Plymouth served as a meeting place where several hundred dropped around to say "Howdy" and meet old friends.

PRESIDENT RAINEY'S speech (it was really just a talk with the fellows) before the Philadelphia Alumni Club on the eve of the Temple Game was a dandy! He sold his hearers to a man on his ideas of a plan for the future of Bucknell. The startling thing to us about his revelations (they really were such) was that he had the courage to ask alumni consideration BEFORE he went to the Board of Trustees. The alumni appreciated his confidence and we were delighted to see the age old tradition of secrecy and mystery which has always surrounded any "big doings" shattered to bits by this new president who talks straight from the shoulder. Bravo!

ALUMNI golfers at Homecoming, observing a bevy of attractive equestrienne co-eds on the "four mile" which skirts the golf course, allowed as how they were graduated just a couple of generations too soon.

WE publish in another column a letter from a Dad to his Freshman son at Bucknell this year. It is not the usual Father to Boy letter. It is most unusual. We recommend it to every alumnus. If more sons had Dads of this type many problems would be solved not only for the college but for modern civilization.

THE passing of "Old Main" has brought grief to the hearts of many. One alumnus of an earlier day writes as follows: "I had hoped some day to get back on the campus again, but the going of 'Old Main' mightily lessens that pull. The last time I was there I stood with President Hill and we talked of what 'Old Main' meant to us. All my college life was spent in that building. I lived in East Wing and every lesson, lecture, and recitation was in that one building. A better building will take its place but it will not be mine. 'Time marches on.'"

THE Bucknell Survey work goes on. Committees are about ready to report more findings to the regular faculty meeting next week — just too late to make the columns of this issue — but watch our next number! We understand from our under cover agents that fireworks are about to pop in the educational world at Bucknell—and as far as we can tell they are welcome and much needed pyrotechnics. Bring 'em on!

THE new development program, architecturally speaking, will present many problems to our new architect. A good friend of the college told us the other day she could see the day approaching when football would be played by mail or some other medium than actual conflict and she wanted to suggest to the architect that he design a roof for the stadium to make it a giant auditorium so that it could be put to some use.

The Survey Goes On

IN the preceding issue of this magazine we published the first report of the much talked of "Bucknell Survey". We also wrote an editorial dealing with the findings of the "experts" who made sweeping recommendations for changes in the college organization. Somehow that editorial never got into print, and the original copy has become "lost, strayed as stolen". We beg leave to present our ideas in this issue, with due apology for tardiness.

The best recommendation made by the surveyors was embodied in their initial paragraph asking for continued study of our problem. We quote: "It is proposed that this initial effort be capitalized and that there be created a continuing committee on institutional improvement. --- A definitely recognized agency within the institution for such study with some subsidy for investigation and research is clearly desirable". Agreed!

Various committees are at work with President Rainey at the present time but their functions are limited and no provision has as yet been made for a genuine continuing committee as suggested. We urge upon the administrative authorities and the Board of Trustees the consideration of a plan suggested in these columns more than three years ago. That plan called for an "All College Council" which would meet regularly and make recommendations on immediate and future development. The proposal suggested the personnel of this Council and we have yet to hear of a better qualified group to handle the problems that are demanding solution. We named to this Council the President, Dean, Registrar, Publicity Director, Health Director, Comptroller, Alumni Secretary, one local member of the Board of Trustees, and the President of the Senior Class. Every group is represented and every viewpoint on matters affecting the welfare of students, faculty, administration, and alumni would be heard in the discussions of this Council. Is there any existing agency where such complete representation is afforded every integral part of the University?

Faculty Salary Cut???

A campus rumor of an impending salary cut for faculty members has come to be the nightmare of every member of the teaching staff. President Rainey has hinted several times that there is a possibility of such a cut. At the same time he has made himself clear that such a measure would be his last resort to balance the budget. In the face of the recommendations of the survey for an INCREASE in the entire salary scale can the University afford to slash the meagre incomes of her teachers?

These teachers are flesh and blood to alumni. They are known and loved. Their welfare is of vital concern to every alumnus. The alumni will demand the facts if the men they revere are to suffer. The survey definitely pointed out that Bucknell is "over administered". Administrative costs are completely out of proportion to faculty salaries and educational expenditures. Cannot the necessary paring be done at the top? It seems to us that the business, the chief business, of the college is teaching — not administration. The faculty should be our first line of defense and if someone is to be short rationed it should be the reserves far behind the lines and not the fighters. There must be many changes that can be made in the interests of economy long before it becomes necessary to rob the thinly lined pockets of our teachers.

An Actual 1932 Letter---Dad to Son

September 26, 1932.

Dear Son:

Mother and I have just returned from Lewisburg after our visit to you, we have talked over the impressions gained while on the college campus viewing the young men who passed, the various buildings, and in particular that slain giant of tradition, "Old Main". Much thought can be aroused in a person's mind in a few minutes, especially, a person who has rubbed elbows with life sufficiently to realize the value of education as a key to opportunity.

As I stood before "Old Main" my imagination ran riot, I thought of the many young men who lived and received their education within this and other buildings on the campus, scattered as these men now are, some dead; some old; some just in their prime of life; some just facing the world; some who have used the knowledge gained as a stepping stone to success; some who have not made the most of their opportunities; some who failed because they did not have the foresight to realize that the battle of life becomes more specialized and complicated as time goes on, they failed to realize that a trained mind, a mind supplied with knowledge handed through generation after generation, a mind trained to think logically, is as important and outstanding in attaining success as is the physical skill of the trained boxer. Some who overlooked the fact that their physical self must be given a square deal as it is the custodian of the trained intellect, that any damage or neglect of the body places a still greater task on the mind in achieving success.

As you well know that I am not a college graduate, what little success I have achieved has been the result of a continuous battle from the age of thirteen up to this day. I firmly am of the opinion that it would be impossible to duplicate my success were I pitted against college-trained men as would be the case today. I intend to continue my battle so as to give you the benefit of an education, which will pave the way and perhaps be the determining factor in any success you may attain.

Oh, if you boys could be given one of life's battle-scarred minds for a few minutes so that as you view "Old Main" you would realize the following:

That as brick by brick properly dovetailed and placed first built "Old Main", so must you build and

Building for the Future

YEARS ago President Harris said that Bucknell should not build for a day or a year, but for fifty — one hundred years into the future. This is a fundamental concept for the building of an educational institution. If colleges or universities are going to live for centuries, as they surely do, then they should be planned for centuries.

Bucknell is approaching its first century mark. It is in a stronger position today, both educationally and financially, than it has ever been. It certainly is in a position, therefore, to look toward the next century with renewed hope and with assurance that its sphere of usefulness and service will be vastly enlarged. In order, therefore, that it may take full advantage of its opportunity for enlarged service, it should plan definitely and wisely for the future. The University is standing today at one of the most important crossroads of its history. A disastrous fire has devastated the most historic and beloved building on the campus. Something must be planned to take its place. The problem, however, is much larger than that of replacing "Old Main". The problem is one of planning for our entire building program over a long period, so that whatever building is done in the immediate future may be properly related to an evolving campus for the future.

In thinking of this plan for the future there have been two ideas uppermost in my mind. In the first place, we have one of the most beautiful natural campuses in America. Our building plans for the future should take full advantage of this opportunity to make it as architecturally beautiful as possible. In the second place, it must be planned to serve definite educational ideals. This means that we must plan, first of all, an educational program and then build architecturally to give that program its fullest and richest expression.

These two plans are being evolved under as careful supervision and wisdom as can be provided. The faculty and administration, through the survey which has been made, are trying to build a progressive and constructive educational program for the future. The Board of Trustees are cooperating with the President of the University in planning the building and architectural development for the future. The Board has employed Mr. Jens Fredrick Larson, architect, of Hanover, New Hampshire, to develop a long-time building and development program. Mr. Larson is the architect who has built the "new" Dartmouth College. He has given his entire time for the past thirteen years to that project. He has, in these years at Dartmouth, developed one of the most beautiful college campuses in America. He is now to be associated with Bucknell indefinitely to render us a similar service. His entire time will be devoted this first year to the development of our general plan. At the end of this year a complete miniature model of the future campus will be made and placed at a conspicuous place on the campus so that it may be seen and studied by all friends of the University.

JENS LARSON, Bucknell Architect

Plans for the first year will also include the building of a utility classroom and office building to meet the present emergency for classroom space and offices for the faculty. It is hoped that this building will be ready for use at the opening of school in September, 1933.

Space will not permit a further elaboration of these plans. I sincerely hope that they will meet with general approval among the alumni and entire constituency of the University. I will welcome any suggestion or evaluation on these matters from an alumnus. I covet your enthusiasm and loyalty for a finer and more beautiful Bucknell.

Faithfully yours,
Homer P. Rainey.

dovetail knowledge if you wish to attain the success in life that "Old Main" has been as a building. Could you but fully realize that "Old Main" in its present state, with all its bricks present, but scattered with only the lumber missing, can be compared with a man who has a scattered knowledge but with some important necessity missing. A man in this condition is just as useless as "Old Main" is today.

Yes, "Old Main" in all its helplessness can still be of service to you young people. Consider how this building to beauty, character, and tradition has been ruined by fire, just so completely can your character and any success of yours be destroyed, either by misfortune or improper action on your part.

No doubt some fire insurance was carried on "Old Main," insurance means that foresight was used, your education is insurance against the future as well as foresight on the part of someone. When "Old Main" was built fireproof construction was not yet practiced but today where funds are sufficient, foresight will suggest fireproof buildings.

If your life at Bucknell teaches you foresight alone, you will have made a great stride towards education because after all an education is knowledge associated with foresight. A very successful friend of mine whose affairs go along very smoothly, despite the rough going at present, was told the following by a party: "I would like to see how you act in a jam". To which my friend replied, "I generally use foresight and, therefore, seldom get in a jam". Yes — son, "Old Main" was a beautiful building erected in a wonderful location through foresight on the part of someone.

Remember this, the greater your knowledge the greater are your possibilities for accurate foresight. Your college uses foresight in its policy of holding freshman week to have you become acquainted with your classmates and your surroundings. A happy contented student is not only more likely to remain at school, but, is more apt to make progress in his studies. Foresight will tell you that when you leave Bucknell the important thing will be what you carry away in foresight, knowledge, character, manners, and physical well-being.

Bucknell will be pleased to let you go forth to take part in the battle of industry, for any success you may achieve will be a credit to the institution which gave you the weapons to progress. You in turn will no doubt always endeavor to be a credit to the spirit of "Old Main". Take another look at "Old Main", viewing it from the angle I have given you. Yes, it is old, broken, but, still respected for the service it has rendered, and, always remember you can only obtain the love and respect of people by the service you render. I close with a snatch from Kipling, which reads:

"If you can fill each unforgiving minute with 60 seconds worth of distance run, Yours is the earth and everything that's in it and what is more you will be a man, my son".

Dad.

P. S.—I am pleased to hear that you were among the ten highest in the psychology test.

THE STORM IN PUERTO RICO

Rev. George A. Riggs, '07, who has general charge of Baptist mission work in Puerto Rico, has written home a thrilling description of the hurricane which devastated the island October fourth. The struggle he and other occupants of his house had to keep the storm from breaking into the house and perhaps wrecking it is vividly told. The storm began at midnight.

"... It had begun to beat in on all sides. We seemed to be in the midst of a whirl. The atmospheric pressure changed so rapidly it was hard to breathe, and my ears began to snap. The force of the wind with a sucking effect began to pull out on the shutters of the south windows of the front bed-room — and the top catch slipped out. We both hung onto the shutter as best we could until in an instant of slack I was able to hit the catch a blow with the hammer and re-engage it. We had already nailed a board on the inside. All this time the wind was roaring so that we had to shout to be heard; sheets of zinc, pieces of tile from Villa Roble and other wreckage was banging on the roof and against the walls and windows; and water was pouring in torrents. Floors upstairs and down were covered with two inches or more of water and we were as wet as if we had been in a river. . . . Before the danger became so great I was a bit nervous, but as the severity of the storm increased I had to work and elected to pray. There was a perfect calm within. Of course, I knew that my life might be crushed out at any moment, and thought of that, but it did not especially concern me. . . . At three a. m. we noted a slight easing off, though zinc and other debris flying through the air and banging against the house kept up a terrible din. By half past three we decided to lie down on our beds and rest a little. . . . The number of dead now known has gone beyond the two hundred mark. . . . Loss to the churches of the mission will run to about $36,000. . . . Ten chapels, all small, were completely destroyed and perhaps that many more damaged. I know of four members of our churches who were killed".

Mr. Riggs has been in Puerto Rico ever since his graduation from Rochester in 1910. For many years now he has full charge of the work. In 1928 he was enjoying his furlough in the states when the terrible hurricane of that year visited the island. He rushed to New York and took the first steamer out to help in reconstruction, in which he played an important part. For the past several years Mrs. Riggs, who was Margaret Leshner, '07, and the children have remained in the states. Mr. and Mrs. Riggs attended the twenty-fifth reunion of their class at the last Commencement.

PLEDGING RUNS HIGH

Fraternity and sorority pledging on the campus this year ran into high figures. Phi Kappa Psi captured honors among the men with twenty-five pledges. Sigma Chi ran second with twenty-two. A total of 165 freshmen were pledged to all groups. In the sorority field, Delta Delta Delta leads the list with sixteen new sisters. Pi Beta Phi followed with twelve. A total of fifty-nine girls were pledged to all the sororities.

Alumni Groups Honor Varsity

Philadelphia and Scranton Hold Parties---Western Penna. Club Plans Big Affair at Washington on November 12

THE Alumni Clubs of Philadelphia and Scranton were first in the field this season with gatherings in honor of the varsity football team. Philadelphia, under the able leadership of President H. Frazier Sheffer, '18, and a strong committee headed by Kenneth W. Slifer, '26, staged one of the best smokers held in the City of Brotherly Love in recent years. More than one hundred alumni were in attendance at the Manufacturers and Bankers Club on the night of October 13 to hear President Rainey, the guest of honor, and see motion pictures of the campus exhibited by The Alumni Council. T. Burns Drum, Esq., '26, spoke briefly on the duty of every alumnus to hold up the hands of the Alumni Council in their work of publishing The Bucknell Alumni Monthly and managing the affairs of a great body of some six thousand alumni.

Rainey Outlines Plans

President Rainey in addressing an enthusiastic audience outlined his hopes and plans for the architectural development of the college along modern lines. His talk was fully reviewed in The Philadelphia Bulletin the following evening. We quote from the article written by Cy Peterman:

"I have a plan I hope to install at Bucknell," he said, and one would never guess that this man at one time whipped curves across the chests of such as Rogers Hornsby, Pete Donohue, "Perfect Game" Charlie Robertson and Bib Falk down in the Texas League. "A plan that I think is the coming thing in American Colleges and Universities. I want to see more art in our Arts Colleges, a new academic prospect which, in our particular case at Bucknell, I would have woven in with an architectural plan as well."

According to this new Moses in the educational field American Colleges have been for years too heavily occupied with things other than the internal development of our people: The thrusting out of geographical frontiers, the industrial development of the nation, its rise to commercial power — all these placed a demand upon the educational centers that left little time, says Dr. Rainey, for a development of true culture, true art and their appreciation.

"I think the time has come now to separate our professional training from the first four years of college life," he went on outlining his hopes for Bucknell in this direction.

Humorously he joshed the "cut system" at our colleges, told how Bucknell has abandoned compulsory class attendance in the belief that college students ought to know how and when to attend if they would gain knowledge.

When he had finished half apologetically for taking the time every man there realized he is an unusual chap in a college president's chair.

SCRANTON LUNCHEON

Prior to the annual Bucknell-Villanova tilt in Scranton a luncheon was held by the Scranton Alumni Group at the Hotel Casey. Part of the crowd of alumni, students, and friends, attended in response to the announcements for the luncheon which promised "No Speeches". The promise was strictly adhered to.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA PARTY

Through arrangements perfected by the Bucknell Alumni Club of Western Pennsylvania with Washington and Jefferson College authorities Bucknell alumni and guests will share with W. & J. alumni in celebration of their Founders Day Banquet at The Hotel Washington, Washington, Pa. on Saturday evening, November 12, following the Bucknell-W. & J. clash in Washington. The price of the dinner has been set at $1.00 per plate. President Rainey has been invited by President Stewart of W. & J. to speak at the Founder's Day Banquet. Following the dinner a combined W. & J.-Bucknell Dance will be held in the Armory. Pittsburgh alumni leaders are enthusiastic over the arrangements and are urging as many members of the Western Pennsylvania Bucknell Club as possible to attend the game, dinner and dance.

BERKS COUNTIANS IN TWO MEETINGS

The Bucknell Alumni Club of Berks County held a benefit card party on October 4, at the home of Mrs. Mary Stanton Speicher, '07, Vice-President of the Club. The returns from the party were invested in The Berks County Bucknell Scholarship Fund. Those in charge of the party were Miss Laura Smith, '22, Miss Angeline Kissinger, '22, Mrs. George Ennis, '27, and the hostess Mrs. Speicher.

The next regular meeting of the club was held the following Monday evening at the Wyomissing Club with President Rainey as guest of honor. He outlined his plans and spoke at length on the value of the survey to the college in future development. Toastmaster for the evening was Dr. Joseph R. Wood, '94, who acted in the absence of President Howard V. Fisher, '13.

DR. A. A. COBER, '96 RETIRES

The Rev. Alvin A. Cober, '96, who has been for the past several years pastor of the First Baptist Church of Jeannette, retired from the pastorate in August, after having had his resignation refused a year before. He is now making his home with his son, Rev. R. Larue Cober, at 171 Brooks Avenue, Rochester, N. Y.

The natural sorrow at surrendering his life work was intensified by the death of his beloved wife, Frances Kling Cober, on the very day the two had planned to leave Jeannette for a period of rest after long labors.

Reared in the Dunkard church, in which he was made a minister at the age of 19 years, Alvin Cober followed a conviction in transferring to the Baptist Church during his theological training at Lane Seminary, and was ordained a Baptist minister. After serving several pastorates he continued his education by taking the four year course at Bucknell, being graduated with the class of 1896. He served pastorates at the Neyberry, Pennsylvania Church and the Memorial Church of Dayton, Ohio, from the latter of which he was called to take up home mission work in Puerto Rico. After four years of faithful labor on this field he was attacked by sprue and compelled to return to the United States for treatment. Even before he was recovered sufficiently to take up active work, he was invited back to the pastorate of the Dayton church. He returned there and served for six years, resigning when he felt his mission was ended. He went from there to the First Baptist Church of Mt. Gilead, Ohio, but after a short pastorate was invited to return to the Newberry Memorial Church which he had served immediately after his graduation from college. He remained here five years, during a part of which time he was on leave for a special mission on the Baptist field in Central America. During his stay in Newberry he was active in the organization work of the Northumberland Association, of which he was moderator. From Newberry he went to the Jeannette church. While there he was instrumental in the planning and erection of a new building to replace the one destroyed by fire shortly after his coming to the field.

Last year he offered his resignation, feeling that his work was done, but the congregation refused to accept it, and urged him to remain another year, at the end of which they reluctantly allowed him to depart.

Mr. Cober has always been gifted in his ability to unite and strengthen churches, largely through his self-effacing and gentle leadership. In 1918 Bucknell recognized his service by conferring on him the degree of Doctor of Divinity. Even in his retirement he will be active in the work of the Genesee Baptist Church of Rochester, of which his son, Larue is pastor.

In all his pastorates Mr. Cober was greatly aided by the devoted and sacrificial labors of his wife. She took a large part in the organization of Sunday Schools and in the general pastoral care. In Jeannette she was among the leaders in the creation of a community reading room for the use of students and unemployed. Both have left hosts of friends in every field on which they have served.

Two of the children of Dr. and Mrs. Cober are Bucknell graduates: Vera Cober Rockwell, of the class of 1911, now a resident of Lewisburg, and the Rev. Kenneth L. Cober, '27, now pastor of the First Baptist Church of Canandaigua, N. Y.

BUCKNELL GRAD MEETS von HINDENBURG

Alfred "Mickey" Boerner, '32, had the unusual privilege of a long chat with the aged President von Hindenburg during the late summer. Mr. Boerner, who majored in German and political science at Bucknell, besides captaining the boxing team, being a contributor to 'Bucknell Verse' and taking an active part in student life generally, received one of the coveted fellowships awarded by the Institute of International Education for study in Germany. Leaving Lewisburg early in July, he spent the summer as the guest of a German nobleman at his castle in Marienwerder, West Prussia. Through his host he had the privilege of meeting many of the outstanding figures in German political and literary life, and of seeing at first hand the terrible conditions produced by the Treaty of Versailles along the Polish corridor. Among others President von Hindenburg was introduced to him and engaged him in conversation for some time.

At the beginning of the fall semester Mr. Boerner will matriculate at the University of Hamburg, at which he will probably remain for the entire year. He expects later to travel throughout the other parts of Germany, in order to acquaint himself with the general social and economic situation in the reich.

LEWISBURG ALUMNAE

The October meeting of the Lewisburg Alumnae Club was held Tuesday evening, October 11 in Larison Hall. The President Mrs. Helen Egge Kunkel presided. After the routine business was finished Miss Carry Foresman, chairman of the program committee took charge. The Melrose trio sang two selections after which representatives of various women's clubs of Lewisburg gave splendid talks on their local and national projects. The organizations with their representatives were: D. A. R., Mrs. Lewis E. Theiss; Civic Club, Mrs. Miller A. Johnson; Parent Teachers Association, Mr. Philip Harriman; American Legion Auxiliary, Miss Jessie Parmer; The Eastern Star, Mrs. Frank Zimmerman; The Business and Professional Women's Club, Miss Edna Moyer.

Guy Ellsworth, member of the Freshman Class, won himself fame before coming to college this Fall, with his victory in the National Outboard Motor Boat races on the Schuylkill River at Philadelphia. He was the winner of the famous Lipton Trophy for amateurs. He will retain his amateur standing. His home is in Big Moose, N. Y.

Homecoming Victory

Bisons Defeat Lafayette 14-6 Before Eight Thousand. Review of Season to Date and Future Prospects.

THE twelfth annual Bucknell Homecoming was celebrated by a crowd of some eight thousand who witnessed a strong Bison gridiron machine match touchdowns with a stalwart Lafayette Leopard in the third quarter of a classic football battle and add another to bring the final score to 14-6 in favor of Bucknell. From a purely technical standpoint it was a well played, clean, hard fought football game with the losers threatening to score again before the whistle blew. From the average spectator's point of view it was a thrilling game, exciting, replete with tense moments, long passes, great defensive stands, and to Bucknell followers a glorious finish.

After a week of steady rain and murky weather, Saturday, October 22 dawned with clear skies and a brisk football atmosphere. The day was perfect to continue the Homecoming record of twelve years of fine weather for the "Big Game".

Four Game Start

The Bisons entered the Homecoming fray with a batting average of .500, having won two games from St. Thomas and Albright and dropping two to Fordham and Temple. The initial games, played under the lights in Memorial Stadium, were both hard fought, tough games. The team, composed largely of sophomores, lacking varsity experience, was rated by experts as powerful but "green". The Fordham game at the Polo Grounds in New York was a rout for Bucknell with the heavier and far more able Fordham teams (there were three of them) completely outclassing a subdued Orange and Blue. Cripples from the Albright game numbering six varsity men were left at home and their places filled by sophomores. Physically beaten by the Fordham system of substituting complete teams during the first half the Bisons were no match for the Rams in the last canto and to save his men Coach Snavely withdrew the varsity when the score reached 17-0 and injected more youngsters into the fray to gain experience, regardless of the score which finally mounted to 30-0.

Still bruised and battered the Bison tackled the Owl of Temple under the lights in Philadelphia on October 14. A scoreless first quarter and then a single touchdown by the Owls brought the half time score to 6-0. In the third quarter long passes just missed the fingers of Bucknell receivers by inches to rob the Orange and Blue of several possible scores. The Owl was outplayed completely in this stanza but in the fourth quarter an intercepted pass and a dazzling run by Johnson of Temple for fifty-seven yards and a second score placed the game on ice. The final whistle found the score 12-0.

Comeback

The victory over Lafayette was decidedly a comeback for the Bisons with every man playing heads up football to win. Great team play on the defensive held Lafayette twice for four downs inside the five yard mark to rob them of likely scores. A long pass Reznichak to Myers in the third quarter brought the first Bucknell score as the fleet "Eddie" snared the pigskin on the dead run just past middle field and raced to the one yard line where he was forced to step out of bounds. On the next play Reznichak, sophomore battering ram, crashed over for the score. Kubacki kicked goal. Within the space of minutes Lafayette executed two similar plays, a long pass and a line buck to make their solitary counter. Then the Bison came back to life as "Eddie" Myers tore through the left side of the line and with perfect interference and an able straight arm fought his way for sixty-three yards to another score. Kubacki again tallied the extra point. This ended the scoring but twice the Leopards executed long passes into the end zone for what seemed to be certain scores. The first pass was dropped by the receiver and the second, although caught, was illegal, as the receiver was standing with one foot outside the marked off zone.

A happy Bucknell crowd of alumni and friends celebrated the victory at numerous fraternity house dances and an All-College dance in Tustin Gymnasium.

Four More

"Villanova at Scranton" reads the schedule for the next Bison gridiron tilt which will be history before this is printed. It is even possible that Western Maryland at Lewisburg will be just another football game before this magazine reaches its readers. Both games are high hurdles to take without a falter.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA TILT

The ever active Bucknell Alumni Association of Western Pennsylvania is booming a crowd for the W. & J. game at Washington, Pa., on November 12. Special arrangements have been made for a large dinner and dance following the game. President Rainey has accepted the invitation of President Stewart of Washington and Jefferson to speak at their Founders Day Exercises. Bucknellians will hold a dinner at the George Washington Hotel and attend the alumni dance which follows. The Presidents are always a strong team and reports indicate exceptional strength this year. Orange and Blue followers believe that the youngsters on the team will have become well seasoned in time for this game. It will be well worth seeing from a football standpoint.

The season closes in Washington, D. C. the following week when Georgetown acts as host to the Bisons.

Conference on Education

Friday and Saturday, November 18 and 19

THE seventh annual Conference on Education will be held at Bucknell University on Friday and Saturday, November 18 and 19. Each year beginning in 1926 the committee in charge of the conference has succeeded in bringing outstanding talent to the various meetings and this year is no exception to the rule. Headliners for the general sessions are Dr. Boyd H. Bode of Ohio State University; Dr. Frank N. Freeman of Chicago University; Dr. James N. Rule, Superintendent of Public Instruction for Pennsylvania; and Dr. W. D. Reeve of Columbia University. Doctors Bode and Freeman will speak at the two general sessions in the afternoon and evening of November 18, and Doctors Rule and Reeve are the speakers for the general session on Saturday morning, November 19, at eleven o'clock. Dr. Bode appears on the secondary school program at four o'clock on Friday and Dr. Freeman at the elementary school program at the same hour. On Saturday morning Dr. Reeve is the main speaker at the mathematics section at nine o'clock.

Some of the prominent educators appearing on the section programs are Dr. H. P. Rainey, president of Bucknell University; C. C. Ward, director of teacher training for the state of New York; Dr. Lester K. Ade, principal of the normal school, New Haven, Conn.; A. O. Roorbach, chairman of the committee on the social science curriculum for the state of Pennsylvania; Dr. L. H. Dennis, deputy superintendent of public instruction, Pennsylvania; W. H. Bristow, deputy superintendent of public instruction and director of curriculum studies for the state of Pennsylvania; John F. Brougher, assistant director of secondary education, Pennsylvania; Dr. Harry R. Warfel, assistant professor of English, Bucknell University; Dr. C. H. Richardson, head of the department of mathematics, Bucknell University.

The general topic for the meeting is "Education for a Changing Social Order." Sectional meetings on Friday afternoon at four o'clock are planned for those interested in secondary schools, elementary schools and teacher training. The Saturday morning sessions are in the fields of English, foreign language, mathematics, industrial education, science, social science, and religious education. A feature which has been attracting attention for the past two years is the round table conference for beginning teachers. This is an informal meeting where teachers just entering the profession, or those who have had enough experience to begin to be conscious of the many problems confronting them, may bring their problems to experienced teachers or supervisors and ask for help on their special problems. This round table conference will be held this year at four o'clock on Friday. New sections appearing this year are those on elementary education and industrial education. These additions grew out of the belief that these two important phases of our educational system need attention in this particular section of the state.

The Pennsylvania Modern Language Association and the Susquehanna Valley Secondary Principals' Association are holding their annual meetings in conjunction with the Bucknell conference.

The proceedings for the meetings beginning in 1926 have been printed and it is expected that the publication will be continued. All persons interested in the problems of education are cordially invited to attend the meetings.

Each year a large number of Bucknell Alumni come back for the conference and it is expected that this year will show the largest attendance of Bucknellians.

YOUTH'S GREAT ENEMY

All of us experience a sense of shock and tragedy when we hear of the untimely death of a boy or girl, a young man or a young woman. How much greater the shock is when we stop to consider the number of such deaths caused by one single disease, tuberculosis, and how much greater the tragedy when we realize that this disease is to a large extent preventable.

According to our most recent knowledge, the germs of tuberculosis find their way into the body early in childhood in most cases, where, during the grade school period they may develop into what is known as the childhood type of tuberculosis. The damage at this time is usually slight and noticeable signs of illness may be entirely absent. But when the stress and strain of adolescence comes, there oftentimes comes, too, the chance for the germs to bring about actual destruction of the lungs, the part of the body most often attacked. It is at this time, too, that the disease begins to take its heavy death toll in young lives and climbs to first place as a destroyer of life, a place it holds through early manhood and womanhood and up to the period of early middle life.

Although great strides have been made in bringing tuberculosis under control and many lives have been saved since the specific cause of the disease was discovered, it still takes a toll of close to 90,000 lives in this country every year. More than half its victims are young people between fifteen and forty years of age. During the years when tuberculosis claims the greatest numbers of girls and young women, that is, between the ages of fifteen and thirty, almost a third of all deaths are due to this one cause. In other words, about one out of every three young women who die during this period of life falls a victim to tuberculosis. Among the male sex, at no period of life do the tuberculosis deaths quite reach this astounding proportion, although in the fifteen years between the ages of twenty and thirty-five, one out of every five deaths is caused by tuberculosis.

Dr. Charles W. Harvey, who has been on the staff of the International Committee of Young Men's Christian Associations in China for the past thirty years recently presented his resignation and announcement of his retirement to the International Com-

Interest has long been centered on these young groups, starting in the schools and in many instances extending into business and industry. Because prevention is comparatively easy and sure, and cure difficult and uncertain, it is the aim of tuberculosis associations to detect in children, through the schools, the presence of infection with tuberculosis germs, and to encourage the school authorities and the parents to keep a close watch over those who show suspicious signs.

Business and industrial concerns, because they realize that the health of their employees means dollars and cents to them, have set up machinery. In many cases a permanent medical service with a full-time staff of doctors and nurses is maintained as an important part of industrial organizations. Others have gone even further and maintain vacation and rest camps for the benefit of their employees, and sometimes private hospitals for the treatment of those who fall ill. Other organized groups, such as trade unions and professional societies, likewise maintain various services, including sanatoria for the treatment of tuberculosis. Tuberculosis associations have in numerous instances stimulated such measures which now exist for the health of industrial groups.

There is still much work to be done, however, before tuberculosis is reduced, during the period of early adulthood to the minor position that it has come to occupy in the earliest years of life and in the population as a whole. Tuberculosis has been aptly termed the "Foe of Youth" and to fight this foe is the important work which more than 2,000 affiliated tuberculosis associations all over the country carry on throughout the year. It is to maintain this work and to continue to promote the organization of measures that will prevent the untimely death of so many thousands of our young people, that the penny Christmas seals are sold each year at this time. Each year brings improvement and with it the chance for a longer, happier life for all of us.

"This ticket and five cents will admit you to the 'Happy Hour' for boys and girls on Friday nights at seven o'clock at the First Baptist Church. Beautiful pictures. Stories. Songs. Movies. Orchestra. Do not lose this ticket. Have it punched each night."

The foregoing announcement, printed on a pink piece of cardboard, tells the story of the latest move by the Rev. Louis J. Velte, A.B., Bucknell, '10, A.M., Pennsylvania, '12, B.D., Chicago, '16, to serve the youth of Chester, Pa., where he is pastor of the First Baptist Church at Seventh and Fulton Streets. So great has been the response to these Happy Hour entertainments that Mr. Velte now has a weekly audience of some 600 children. The attendance grows constantly.

The Bulletin of the Crozer Theological Seminary tells about this new move to serve the children of Chester. "In order to help them grow into happy useful Christians," says the Bulletin, "the First Church of Chester has opened wide its doors to the boys and girls each Friday night in its program of community service. These 'Happy Hours' are conducted by the pastor himself and are run in series of eight to ten nights each. Each child is given a ticket which is punched each night and a treat is given to the children who have a perfect attendance record for the series. Each part of the program is brief and varied. These two requirements are necessary to secure and maintain interest. The whole program from beginning to end is designed with the idea of interpreting God to the soul of the child."

BOOK SHELF

HOECHST, '07, AUTHOR

The Board of Education of the city of Pittsburgh has just published a "Handbook of the Department of Extension Education" compiled and prepared by Dr. Coit R. Hoechst, '07, director of extension education of that city, and his staff. The handbook, which is of more than a hundred pages, reveals the wide range of the instruction under the direction of Dr. Hoechst, and especially the sections dealing with adult immigrant education show what a splendid piece of work is being done in the attempt to make worthy citizens of these new Americans.

The book is another indication of the excellent reason for the confidence and respect which Dr. Hoechst has earned during his occupancy of the directorship.

OUR Alumni Association through the officers, executive committee, and class agents asks the support of every alumnus in the various programs that are ahead of the University and the alumni organizations. The alumni whose names appear at the head of this article are your agents, charged with the responsibility of conducting the affairs of this great body of alumni. They need and ask for your support. Hold up their hands, Bucknellians! They are serving you.

During the year you will be asked to contribute to The Alumni Fund, you may be asked to serve on regional or class committees, and if your class reunies this June you will receive invitations to take part in a class program. Answer these calls! They are all parts of a great alumni plan of development that is being formulated to go hand in hand with the new University plan which President Rainey explains on the opposite page. The success of Bucknell in educational fields and alumni work is largely dependent upon YOU — THE ALUMNI.

A definite program of CONTINUING ALUMNI EDUCATION is now being drafted by your Alumni Association. We hope to interest the faculty in a plan which is already at work in several sister institutions where alumni as individuals are given advice and encouragement by their former teachers in their own particular fields. The University, through the faculty, plans to be of real service to her graduates. You will hear more of this plan during the coming months. We quote from the creed of a great University to present the whole idea: "We believe that the relations between the alumnus and his University should be beneficial to both, and that mutual assistance provided by the graduates and by the institution should be limited only by their powers of service ----- We believe that to the University the alumnus is a member of a brotherhood bound by the spiritual ties of faith in the ideals of education".

Your support of alumni programs will speed the day when Bucknell University shall stand before the world as a beacon light of education, guiding the youth of America to a life of rich usefulness to state, community, and family. As Bucknell grows so your pride will increase in the institution whose stamp of approval you bear.

EDITOR'S CORNER

THIS special issue of your magazine carries Christmas Greetings and Best Wishes for the New Year from Bucknell to all Bucknellians. The message of the President tells of the new educational developments that are taking place on the campus. Our own article at the head of this page pleads for your support of alumni programs that are marching in step with these for a finer Bucknell.

THE full worth of the new plan cannot be realized within several years. It is a plan for the future. Dean Charles H. Judd of the School of Education, University of Chicago, in writing to President Rainey expresses his faith in the plan as follows:

I have gone over the program which has been adopted by Bucknell as a result of the survey made by yourself and the faculty. It seems to me that you have taken a very progressive position in the development of this program. I am very greatly impressed by the series of survey courses that you have decided to give, and it seems to me that your program of divisional organization, as a substitute for the older program of strictly departmental organization, has many marked advantages. I congratulate you and the faculty on what you have accomplished.

REGISTRAR Henry Walter Holter, '24, is charged with a full share of responsibility in providing new students next Fall when the new program goes into effect. He will need the assistance of the alumni. Can you recommend exceptional students to Bucknell and Bucknell to these students? It is one manner of doing Alma Mater a service. Bucknell was recommended to you! Prove your faith in her by sending her students.

A GAIN our personal wishes for happiness and cheer in the year ahead. Your many letters are always welcome. Only through your interest can this magazine be published. We thank our friends of the past and trust that their number may become legion in the interests of a newer and finer Bucknell. A Right Merry Christmas and a Bright New Year!

PRESIDENT'S PAGE

As a result of the recommendations of the Survey of the University which was made last year the faculty has made some significant and far reaching changes in its academic program. The new program is designed to meet certain specific educational needs, and is based upon certain fundamental educational principles. In the first place it is designed to clarify, in so far as possible, our present confusion of programs which is caused by attempting a multiplicity of functions. The University, at present, is trying to perform at least four educational functions:

- (1) It is attempting to complete the processes of secondary education begun by the secondary schools.
- (2) It is also providing a general or liberal education for a portion of the student body.
- (3) It is providing pre-professional training in several fields.
- (4) Finally, it is actually offering professional training in several fields — particularly in Engineering, the training of teachers, and in Commerce and Finance.

This multiplicity of functions greatly complicates the work of the University, and reduces its effectiveness. It has created almost insurmountable curriculum and administrative problems. Colleges that ought to be concentrating all their meager resources upon their primary function are forced to maintain from three to six pre-professional curricula. The new program is organized upon the principle of an upper and a lower division corresponding to the last two and the first two years, respectively, of college work. The attempt has been made to free the first two years, in so far as possible, of pre-professional and professional work, and thus offer our students the opportunities of a broad general education in the lower division; and, in turn, the last two years are freed entirely for concentration, pre-professional, and professional specialization. We believe that this organization will be of tremendous value in enriching our program of general education in the first two years, and will also make our concentration work much more effective, since there will be no interruption in this work during the last two years.

The program for the first two years is built around the idea of orientation and is made possible by the use of general or survey courses. The soundness of this idea has been demonstrated in a number of institutions. We are convinced that we have found a method of introducing students to the fields of knowledge which is workable and productive of valuable results. The program for the first two years is as follows:

FRESHMAN YEAR

- A survey course, The History of Western Man*
A survey of the Natural Sciences — for students not majoring in a Science
(Astronomy, Geology, Biology, Chemistry, Physics)
A survey course in European or World Literature, with English Composition for those students who need it
Hygiene, and Art or Music
(One each semester)
Physical Education
Prerequisite — elective subjects
Academic subjects

SOPHOMORE YEAR

- A survey course in the Evolution of Modern Social Institutions*
Principles of Economics
Psychology and Physiology
Religion, and Music or Art
(One each semester)
Physical Education
Two prerequisites — elective subjects
Academic subjects

EXTRA REQUIREMENT FOR GRADUATION

- A reading knowledge of a foreign language.*
(French, German, Latin, Greek or Spanish)
It should be noted in this program that sufficient time has been left in both years for students to begin the pre-requisite and pre-professional courses. The new program will not in any way hamper or delay a student in beginning his pre-professional training in any field.

NEW ENTRANCE PROGRAM

In addition to this curricula reorganization, the faculty has taken a progressive step in evolving a new entrance program. In place of our present entrance requirements we have substituted the following regulation:

That all applicants for admission to the University shall (1) be a high school graduate; (2) be admitted to the University on the basis of individual qualifications to do university work as indicated by such criteria as high school grades, rank in their graduating class, principal's rating, intelligence as measured by a good intelligence test, character, maturity, and any other pertinent factors; (3) that admissions be handled administratively under the supervision of the Registrar.

FIVE DIVISIONS

A third progressive step was taken by the faculty in regular meeting in December when five main divisions of courses were created to take the place of the former twenty-seven departments. Each of the five main divisions will be headed by a director whose duties it shall be to coordinate the work of the group. The five newly created groups are Social Science, Physical Science, Engineering, Language, and Religion and Philosophy.

UNIVERSITY COUNCIL

The University Council, also newly created, will assume the work of many former standing committees of the faculty. The Council is composed of the five group heads and members of the administration. This Council will coordinate the entire plan and work of the University.

Bucknell is pioneering educational developments. The changes effected by the foregoing steps are among the most comprehensive since the founding of the University. The educational world will watch with keen interest the unfolding of the future work of students at Bucknell.

Editor's Corner

OBSERVANT readers will notice a new cover design on this January issue of our pride and joy (not to mention headache and eternal worry). The new dress is in celebration of The New Year, The New Plan, The New Deal, The New Salary Scale, The New Budget, and whatever else YOU can think of.

OUR old cover won a first prize. Someone might send us a bouquet on this one but it should be one small straw flower as the new cover is dictated by necessity. The old one was just a bit expensive for these days.

"THE axe has fallen" is an old expression brought into vogue once again. It fell on the checks of all on Bucknell's payroll on December 1, 1932. Would we were a poet to paraphrase the last verse of "Casey at the Bat." However, gloom soon passes and all are now consoled by the thought that the army of the unemployed was not increased in size.

SOMEONE should think up a name for The New Plan. We will conduct the contest. All entries must be wrapped in cellophane and toasted. Four out of five will be chosen after government emergency tests have been passed with the highest octane rating. They will have to be good to get where they are going, believe it or not.

THE Mathewson tragedy in China has elicited much sympathy to members of the family from faculty, students, and townspeople. Young Christy is reported recovering slowly in the Shanghai Country Hospital.

SPRING sports eliminated at several institutions was cited as good precedent for Bucknell to follow by some critics on the campus. The Athletic Council moved sanely to curtail schedules and minimize costs without sacrificing the sports themselves.

OUR change in entrance regulations gives us cause for applause. Now a student is admitted on personal qualifications and ability in addition to units of work completed. Each case is an individual one not regulated by a set of archaic rules.

BUILDING plans move slowly through the delayed adjustment of insurance on the destruction of "Old Main" by fire. The appearance of Architect Larson on the Board meeting in December is indicative of progress.

BUCKNELL must have earned a reputation for surveying. President Rainey, Dean Rivenburg, and even your humble editor have all recently been engaged in researching for three different educational societies.

THE ruins of classic "Old Main" still attract visitors. Incandescents strung about in the trees on the Quadrangle illuminate the ghostly remains at night. It is a pathetic sight to see the crumbled giant scarred and burned but with the four great pillars of the front still standing defiant.

DEPRESSION cures have an echo in Lewisburg where the chain selling idea has found customers among the student body. Several young men have received commission checks from a new company organized by two faculty members promoting the sale of automatic pencils.

A GOODLY number of the faculty attended conferences of various learned societies and organizations during the Christmas holidays. We liked Ed Wynn's comment on the fact that while the cat was away the mice would play — but — the cat was probably having a good time too!

THE NEW PROGRAM

THE revolutionary program recently adopted by the Bucknell University faculty involves three distinct changes: (1) separation of the work of the first two years from that of the last two; (2) substitution of uniform requirements for all non-engineering students, in place of requirements varying with the different courses; and (3) arranging the subject-departments into five general groups.

The first change meets with general approval, and its wisdom is undoubted. There has been in the past much difficulty in harmonizing and unifying college work, because of the fact that some of it is distinctly of the nature of that done in the secondary schools. The new division makes a clear-cut distinction between the more elementary or general work of the first two years and the more concentrated or specialized advanced work of the last two. It differentiates between the liberal education of the first two years and the pre-professional training of the last two. The provision for a general examination as a basis for admission to the junior year puts the work of the lower division on the basis of attainment instead of upon the basis of an accumulation of credits. Eventually this will lead to provisions for superior students, enabling them to go at their own pace.

The program of required courses for the first two years is excellent in many respects. While the amount of required work has been reduced, giving the student greater freedom of election, the requirements have been broadened. For the A.B. course, for instance, a minimum of six hours of work in English will be accepted from the average student instead of twelve; sixteen hours of work in religion and the social sciences will be required instead of fifteen, as at present; requirements in art, hygiene, and music have been added; while those in natural science, philosophy, psychology, and physical education remain unchanged in quantity. The only hour-requirements eliminated are those in foreign language and mathematics, an attainment requirement being substituted in the case of languages.

The establishment of five groups in place of the old subject-departments will undoubtedly facilitate the administration of the new program and should attain the other intended objectives. It is particularly suited to the work of the first two years. That of the last two years will in many cases have to be taken in charge departmentally as in the past or by a professor delegated by the group chairman. Graduate work will remain almost necessarily in the hands of the subject-departments. There is a possibility that some of the new groups may prove too large or too diverse in subjects for complete supervision by part-time chairmen. If too much work has to be delegated back to the teachers of the various subjects, the result might be practically a maintenance of the status quo ante, with the nominal addition of five new executives to our already heavy administrative set-up.

The various engineering courses, now grouped together in one group have been unable, because of multiplicity of subjects, to adopt the uniform changes which will regulate all other courses. A step in the general direction has been taken, however, in arranging all of the first year's work on a general plan for all engineering students, whatever particular branch of engineering they intend to major in. The work of rearranging the engineer curricula has been in the hands of the various professors of engineering. In another column will be found more detail about the rearranged courses. It is cheering to note in this connection that more time has been allotted for the pursuit of cultural subjects by engineering students than heretofore. One professor recently stated that he favored the new plan for engineers because it afforded the necessary cultural background without any sacrifice of technical training. We congratulate the engineers on the partial concession which they have made to editorial demands for a more comprehensive and less confined curricula.

WHAT A BATTLE!

To the Editor:-

Recently I noticed a communication from one of the Bucknell fraternities to an alumnus about this year's rushing. For the moment I forgot when and where I was and thought I was reading the account of the battle of the Marne. My blood tingled and cold perspiration trickled down my noble brow. Here are a few lines of exact quotation, . . . "which will go some distance in driving home to you some idea of the terrific battle the rushing men had. Bitterly and savagely the work was carried on by each fraternity. Thrown into that turmoil there was nothing to do but fight harder than ever. . . ."

I am sorry I could not have been there to witness the gigantic struggle from a place of safety but I hope I shall be invited to the convocation when the distinguished service medals are awarded. What a pity that the men who fought in this struggle were not better equipped. They waded in empty handed without musket, helmet or machine gun; not even a gas mask; and all in the name of brotherhood. May I suggest that an alumni committee be appointed to raise a fund so that next fall the fratres may not lack armor and ammunition to go at this business of brotherhood in such a way that our old friend Mars will feel like one of the unemployed.

Sincerely yours,

"An Ancient Brother."

WELCOMES LAYMEN'S REPORT

ONE of the most thoughtful and sane criticisms of the much discussed Laymen's Report on Missions is that of Frank Rawlinson, A.B., '99, D.D., '17, in the Christian Century for December 28. With enthusiastic approval he greets this harbinger of a new day in missions. Some striking statements are "That laymen . . . sponsor this change is significant. It shows that the challenge to put missions on a higher level comes out of the heart and mind of Christianity. 'Rethinking Missions' is therefore the call of a new leadership in worldwide Christian effort. I welcome it" . . . "For the unwieldy organizations which have made Christians falter in their stride, a cooperative Christian fellowship is proposed. . . It is a stirring proposal . . . If followed through it will tame that rugged individualism — religious laissez-faire — which now thwarts Protestantism" . . . "Conversatism, devoted and tireless though its adherents be, must no longer impede the progressive forward movement the times demand. The laymen show the way out. Let us take it".

Such words as these, coming from a man who is recognized as being one of our leading Christian statesmen in the mission field, should have great weight with thoughtful American Christians.

To All the Alumni of Bucknell:

I take this opportunity at the beginning of the New Year to extend to all of you my kindest personal greetings and best wishes for the New Year, and I sincerely hope that the New Year may bring to all of us improved economic conditions and a new hope for the future.

There are certain things concerning the work of Bucknell University that I should like to bring to your attention. In the last two years we have had a decrease in enrollment of approximately 14 per cent. The income of the University has been decreased accordingly. Financial readjustments have had to be made. Salaries and wages of the entire organization have been reduced and every other possible economy is being made to place the institution on a balanced budget.

A thorough reorganization of the work of the University has been accomplished and we begin next year on the new program. An outline of these changes was given in the last issue of the ALUMNI MONTHLY. There is wide interest in our new program from virtually every quarter, which is very encouraging. The Alumni can be of tremendous help to us in the next six or eight months if you will tell of the educational values and opportunities offered in this new program to your friends and prospective college students. We confidently believe that we have an unusually fine educational offering for college students and that these values will appeal to prospective college students if they can be brought to their attention. Will not each of you, therefore, become a personal representative for Bucknell to one or more prospective students during the next few months. This type of cooperation will be invaluable to us in promoting our new program. The administrative offices of the University will be happy to cooperate with you in supplying any detailed information which you may desire. You could also render great assistance by forwarding to the Registrar, Mr. H. W. Holter, the names of any high school graduates that might be interested in coming to Bucknell.

Faithfully yours,

HOMER P. RAINEY

CONTINUING EDUCATION

PROFESSOR Robert L. Sutherland, sociologist, was solicited by a number of seniors during 1932 to keep them advised by letter during the first several years after their graduation of the new developments, writings, etc. in the field of sociology. One letter from the professor to his former students in November asking for information about their coming and goings was answered unanimously. The task of writing personal letters in reply was too great and The Alumni Office entered the picture at the request of the professor.

A sixteen page letter to this group of interested students was written by Dr. Sutherland and mimeographed by The Alumni Office. The letter contained personal news of all who had written in answer to the first letter and paragraphs were lifted from each letter to give a personal glimpse of the writer to his classmates.

Faculty news and gossip, a sketch of the New Plan, and personal observations were contained in the letter which was mailed at Christmas time to the group.

Professor Sutherland has chosen to call the letter idea a Seminar Plan. It is an elementary manner of continuing the education of these interested alumni and the growth of the idea will be watched with interest.

The Alumni Office contributed stenographic services and mailing facilities in the belief that this group of alumni would be appreciative of more news from the college than it is possible to present in a general magazine. The Plan is personal. It is a definite relationship between professor and student and at the same time between alumnus and university.

Other faculty members are contemplating similar Letter Contacts with graduates on the suggestion of The Alumni Association. We believe that in this manner a definite service can be helpful and inspirational to our alumni. Write us or your favorite professor if the Plan is of interest.

HINKLE PRAISED

Clark Hinkle, '32, football player extraordinary, and now a member of the professional Green Bay (Wisconsin) Packers eleven, was recently the subject of comment by Gordon Mackay, sports writer and columnist, in his well known "Is Zat So" column. Friend Mackay's comments have been mailed to Lewisburg by a number of alumni, among them W. A. Wilkinson, '96, of Haddonfield, N. J. Mr. Wilkinson writes:—"the qualities of one of our Bucknell boys who has never received proper credit for his football ability". Writer Mackay is quoted partially as follows:-

This reminiscent screed was conceived after we had read a statement by Curly Lambeau that he judged Clark Hinkle to be a second Thorpe.

Curly is an old Notre Dame man, the coach of the Green Bay Packers, displayed as the greatest football eleven in the world, thrice winner of the national pro championship and now headed for their fourth straight title.

Hinkle is another Ohioan. His home is in Toronto, Ohio.

Hinkle for three years was an outstanding back in this part of the world. He played for Bucknell and played wonderfully. He was leading scorer in the East one year, was never excelled in his performances. Behind a team that was never rated with the Grand Magogs and the Real McCoy's, Hinkle sparkled.

Did they choose Hinkle for the All-American? They did not. They overlooked the star of them all, then hibernating in Lewisburg, Pa. The latter town is the seat of Bucknell University. The experts simply passed Hinkle with a perfunctory bow or a cursory nod.

Hinkle now is the spearhead of Green Bay's offensive. He does everything perfectly, is a triple-threat man of Goliath proportions. Against the cream of football talent in the land, he has performed in such majestic fashion that Curly Lambeau hails him as a player who is "a second Thorpe."

So much for that All-American "error."

DECEMBER BOARD MEETING

The Semi-annual meeting of the Bucknell Board of Trustees was held in Philadelphia during the holidays according to custom. The only important news to come from the session was the creation of a group of twelve new scholarships at $1000 each covering the full four years of undergraduate work. Three of these new awards will be made to members of the Freshman Class entering Bucknell this Fall and three more each year.

Mr. Jens Frederic Larson, University Architect, was in attendance at the meeting and presented preliminary plans for the future building program.

MEMORY OF GENERAL

BLISS HONORED

A portrait of the late General Tasker Howard Bliss, '73, Honorary Doctor of Laws 1916, and former Chief of Staff of the United States Army, was recently presented to The Council on Foreign Relations, 45 East Sixty-fifth Street, New York, N. Y., by a group of his admirers and former compatriots. The presentation of the portrait was made by Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War and great friend of General Bliss'. Elihu Root, Secretary of the Council, accepted the memorial.

SHAKESPEARIAN PLAY

FOR CAMPUS

The Bucknell Artists Course in conjunction with the Departments of Art, Music, and Dramatics is sponsoring the presentation on February 22 and 23 of three performances of "Romeo and Juliet". The leads will be taken by two actors from The Group Theatre in New York. The remainder of the cast is recruited from the faculty and student body of the University.

WARDEN ADDRESSES STUDENTS

Warden Henry C. Hill, former Major in the United States Army, and now in charge of the new Federal Northeastern Penitentiary at Lewisburg was the speaker at a meeting of The Bucknell Sociological Society recently. Warden Hill spoke at length on the new theories of penology being used as directing forces at the new jail. There are more than three hundred prisoners at present housed in the "Big House" on the hill to the north of Lewisburg.

BASKETBALL SEASON OPENS

The Orange and Blue basketball season opened with an overwhelming defeat for the home team when Western Maryland visited Lewisburg. The next two games were in the nature of come-backs for the Bisons with a one point win over Susquehanna at Selinsgrove and a swamping defeat for Washington and Jefferson in Tustin Gymnasium. The schedule has been cut considerably due to economic conditions. Varsity material is plentiful as the Interfraternity League closed prior to the opening of the varsity season. Kappa Sigma won from S. A. E. to clinch the title in the finals of this league.

1932 PLEDGE BANQUET

REV. Frederick B. Iglar, '12, Baptist Student Pastor at the University of Pennsylvania, was chosen by the Bucknell Y. M. C. A. to deliver the annual address at the Fraternity Pledge Banquet, a new feature on the Fall calendar of the organization. We are privileged to quote from the excellent address of Rev. Iglar:

The occasion which brings us together tonight can be significant in college and fraternity life. I am happy that your committee asked me to share in it with you. Twenty-four years ago this fall, I too, like yourselves, was pledged to a fraternity on this campus, and because of the great contributions which fraternity life made to my own life, I am exceedingly happy to be sharing my thoughts with you.

My intimate connection with fraternity life since that year forms the basis of what I have to say to you tonight. I would far rather sit around a fireplace with small groups of you men and in a much more informal manner than is possible here discuss with you these organizations called fraternities, which can mean so much that is worthwhile and then on the other hand, can be so destructive in the area of the good life.

Now while we are rejoicing this evening in this occasion which reminds us that we have been chosen, picked, selected, set apart from our group, we ought, too, to be very humble as we think of the other members of our class who for various reasons are not with us. This gathering would be fatal to the larger purpose for which we have come together if in any sense it created within us attitudes of superiority, if in any sense we looked upon ourselves as set off against non-fraternity men.

I have known recently a University man who on his campus was a so-called "big shot". He had acquired practically all the honors available for any one man. He used to speak of his fraternity connection in this wise — "Our house is here and the other houses are there, and between us there is a great gulf and chasm, and it is only given to a few men in a college generation to bridge that chasm". He came to commencement time of his Senior year, and as he reviewed the four years of University life with all its so-called honors and achievements, he was lamenting the fact that he had only two real friends. What else could one expect of an attitude which set a few men off against the campus?

If there is one damning thing which can be said against modern American college fraternities, it is that they create a spirit of aloofness, build up a barrier between those who belong and those who do not. Such an attitude if not checked is a legitimate charge on the part of students who do not belong against any college administration. In its implications it is against sound educational theory and antagonistic to the fundamentals of democracy.

How would we feel if we had to eat in drab boarding houses or commercial restaurants and then hoof it back to the dormitory room day in and day out? What would be our reaction if house parties, dances, and bull sessions around the fireplace brightened college life for the chosen few but not for us? I am wondering if our fraternities have ever worked at the problem of holding open house for non-fraternity men or of inviting them to meals or to our frolics so that the expansive life which is ours is frequently shared?

A few weeks ago I heard a Senior talk to a group of fraternity men in just about these words — "We men get a great kick out of spending an hour or two a week leading underprivileged boys in the slum districts of our city, thinking we are sharing our strength with their weakness, and tonight we are getting a great thrill out of the possibility of creating social consciousness in the dormitories by showing pictures of underprivileged life. I want to say to you men as I say to myself that unless we become mightily concerned about the class distinctions, the divisions, the attitudes of superiority and inferiority which we men are creating in our own fraternity relationships and permitting to go unchallenged, we graduate to perpetuate the type of philosophy which makes slums a natural by-product and settlement houses necessary. Then our children's children will go through the same process of trying to share an hour or two a week with the unfortunate people of our city." To my way of thinking, this young man struck the nail on the head!

Let us admit tonight in all humility that we are not a whit better than men of our class who did not join. In the years to come you will frequently ask yourselves — "How did I get by? Why did they choose me?" The measure of a man is not his fraternity membership!

I want to share with you a bit of verse that I picked up the other day:-

"The black shirts of Italy are arrogant and vain,
The brown shirts of Germany I fear I can't explain,
The red shirts of Russia are riding for a fall,
Then hip-hooray for Gandhi who wears no shirt at all!"

I want to paraphrase it as we think of our relationship tonight with the so-called non-fraternity world on our own campus:-

Many fraternity men are arrogant and vain,
Many fraternity men I know I simply can't explain,
Many fraternity men so the professors say are riding for a fall,
So let's in the spirit of true brotherhood tonight give a hip-hooray for the man who wears no pin at all!

I am hoping you will learn through your fraternity relationship the art of living together. The world needs nothing more right now than to have great groups of its citizens learn how to live together.

Our world is a paradox. We are all here, necessary to each other, sinking or swimming together, and yet we have not made much progress in learning how to live together. Men and women marry, start to build a home and trouble ensues because they haven't learned how to live together. White folks and black folks in so many places live in a spirit of constant tension. We have our slums and our residential districts and nothing more than a theoretical objection from those on the hills. We have the invidious distinction of white collar jobs as over against the workers with hand and brawn. We tag a man who does not agree with our political opinion a red, a radical, a bolshevik and urge his arrest or deportation. Many employers say they'll be damned before they will recognize the workers' union.

Internationally it is just the same: Germany is having a terrific fight between groups which would steer her course; France is more heavily armed than before the World War; England has her hands full with troubles at home and also in Ireland and India; the Polish corridor is the corridor of hate and threatened vengeance; Russia is still "the big red bear" which strikes terror in the hearts of statesmen; Mussolini says the way to live together is for one man to tell folks when they can speak and what they ought to say; Japan makes her contribution in terms of — when you see what you want that belongs to your neighbor, go take it as she has done in Manchuria; China is floundering around between civil war lords and bandits as she tries to learn the lesson of how to live together — thus we might continue. Gossip, suspicion, hatred, divorce, class warfare, lynching, black-lists, strikes, bad names, segregation, lockouts, greed, cannon, tear gas, submarine, hand grenades, trenches, warships, unequal treaties — thus runs the record of the way in which people today are trying to live together. No wonder someone has said that "if the universe has a madhouse, our world must be it".

You are saying "how far removed all this is from fraternity life". Permit me to remind you, however, of the way in which fraternity chapters treat each other in the period of rushing, not to mention other seasons of the year. What mud can be slung; what harsh and unkind statements made; what tricks reverted to; what ungentlemanly conduct engaged in — all in the name of brotherhood. Then within chapters we find cliques based on campus politics, religion, and social "good times". The gods of brotherhood must frequently laugh in derision.

We will never learn how to live with other people until we are able to change seats with the other fellow, to sit where they sit in sympathetic understanding. For fraternity men this must mean good sportsmanship, gentlemanly conduct, a policy of living and letting live, a change in the standards by which we choose our brothers in the bond, the development of a new spirit of friendliness between ourselves and those who do not belong (non-fraternity men); less of the spirit of (our chapter has arrived — we are it); an aggressive attempt to find ways and means by which a fraternity can serve the interests of education based on character for which the University stands.

The world has a right to expect our colleges to train its men in the art and technique of living together. This should be the first contribution our alma mater makes through its graduates. The university ought to demand that our fraternities — special houses of privilege — extend themselves in the development of this most needed of all the arts.

Make your fraternity life the source of many of the most pleasant memories of the future. The poet spoke the truth when in saying — "come, grow old along with me, the best is yet to be, the last of life for which the first was made" — he meant to picture the years ahead as filled with adventure and romance. It is equally true, however, that with the increasing years one lives more and more with the memories of the past. We are peculiarly made for the events of the past which we would forget come crowding in upon us when we would least be conscious of the same.

I am suggesting to you that you make your four years of college life, and especially your fraternity relationships, the source and center of the sort of wholesome memories which when the days come when you sit by the fireside with the children at your knee, the life of these four years will be pleasant to remember. Such memories should be the magnet to draw men back to the old stamping ground.

What a source for pleasant, abundant, expansive memories our fraternity life could be! If it taught us how to be loyal to our group while at the same time it showed us the more primary loyalty to University and to mankind; if it demonstrated in daily practice the true meaning of brotherhood; if it trained us in the technique of living together so that we could make a contribution to the world's need in this area, then our memories of fraternity days and fellowships would be the bright spots, the magnets which they ought to be and which you fellows, if you care to do so, can make them.

COLGATE-ROCHESTER

DEDICATION

OVER a score of Bucknell alumni were in attendance at the dedication of the new campus of the Colgate-Rochester Divinity School at Rochester, N. Y., on October 27 and 28.

President Milton G. Evans, '82, was one of the speakers at the dedicatory exercises. Dr. R. M. West, '89, and Professor Leo L. Rockwell, '07, represented the University.

Others who were present included Rev. William Golightly, '25, Rev. Donald Cloward, '23, and Esther Fleming Cloward, '22; Rev. David N. Boswell, '18; Rev. Philip G. Murray, '29; Dr. A. A. Cober, '96; Rev. Kenneth L. Cober, '24 and Clara Price Cober, '25; Emma Kunkel Cober, '22; Vera Cober Rockwell, '11; Rev. Logan E. Jackson, '13; P. V. Arrow, '28; Rev. Finley Keech, '22; Lois Hamblin Wendell, '24; Rev. Roland Hudson, '24; Rev. L. L. Hutchinson, '23; Idris Jones, '31; C. V. Smith, '31; Frank E. Johnston, '28.

The dedicatory address was given by Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick of the Riverside Church, New York City. Dr. Fosdick pointed out the crying need for trained young ministers to help shape the new social order which is in the making. The little theater which is part of the new equipment was dedicated by the presentation of Charles Rann Kennedy's play "The Servant in the House".

The Bucknell seal is numbered among the seals of some thirty colleges which adorn the beautiful Gothic refectory in which the alumni banquet and the luncheon to the academic representatives were held. The seals represent the colleges from which the divinity school has drawn the largest number of students.

PRESIDENT ON TOUR

Dr. Homer P. Rainey, Bucknell President, early in January made a ten day tour of Middle Western Colleges gathering material for a survey he is conducting for the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

NEW CURRICULUM ADOPTED

AT a special meeting held November 16, the faculty of Bucknell University took what seems to be the most progressive step that has been taken in the last ten years, though it is in many respects but the culmination of the progress made during that time. The work of the first two years in all except the engineering courses has been definitely separated from that of the last two, with provisions for comprehensive examinations to be given to determine students' fitness to embark upon the "concentration program" beginning in the junior year after two years of liberal arts work intended to furnish a broad foundation for specialization. The amount of required work has been considerably reduced, and ample provision made in the first two years for courses prerequisite to the work for the degrees of Bachelor of Arts, and Bachelor of Science in Biology, Commerce and Finance, and Education. To facilitate the administration of the general survey courses planned for the first two years, the old subject-departments have been arranged in five groups.

Beginning next fall the program of each non-engineering student will include the following required courses:

History of Western Man (three hours each semester during the freshman year)

English composition and general literature (three to five hours each semester during the freshman year)

Introduction to natural science (three hours each semester during the freshman year for students not planning to major in a natural science)

Evolution of modern social institutions (four hours the first semester of the sophomore year)

Principles of economics (four hours the second semester of the sophomore year)

Introduction to psychology (three hours either first or second semester of the sophomore year)

Introduction to philosophy (three hours either first or second semester of the sophomore year)

Hygiene (two hours either semester of the freshman year)

Appreciation of Art (two hours either semester of either freshman or sophomore year)

Appreciation of Music (two hours either semester of either freshman or sophomore year)

The Religions of the World (two hours either semester of the sophomore year)

Physical Education (one hour each semester of freshman and sophomore years)

No other required courses are specified, but before graduation each non-engineering student must acquire (either in high school or college) a reading knowledge of French, German, Greek, Latin, or Spanish. The required academic work amounts to a minimum of forty hours or a maximum of forty-four hours. This compares with the present requirements ranging from a minimum of fifty-one hours in the A.B. course to a maximum of sixty-eight in the B.S. in Biology course.

Wider Election

Besides the required courses, each student will be allowed to elect during the first two years a total of eighteen or more hours of work prerequisite to work in his major field. This work will normally be in languages or mathematics or both, the student planning to major in a natural science being allowed to substitute a specific natural science for the general introductory course. Thus the required work for the biological student during the first two years will amount to a minimum or thirty-four hours, allowing him to elect thirty-four hours of work in biology, chemistry, foreign languages, and mathematics. The commerce and finance student will be allowed to elect in the first two years from eighteen to twenty-eight hours of work in language, mathematics, and economics. The elective hours of the student of education may be given to that subject or to preparation for his major work in teaching subjects. The arts student will have from eighteen to twenty-eight hours of practically free elective work in the first two years, subject to the approval of the executive chairman of the group in which he plans to do his major work.

New Survey Courses

Of the twelve general introductory or survey courses in the program adopted, five or six will be practically new courses. In some cases these will be symposium courses, in which the lectures will be given by teachers of several different subjects, under the general direction of the executive chairman of a division or another professor especially assigned to the course. To facilitate the administration of these courses, to provide general supervision of the work in related subjects, and to eliminate duplication of subject-matter in the offerings of the various departments, the following groups have been established:

- (1) English, French, German, Greek, Latin, Spanish;
 - (2) Economics, education, history, political science, sociology
 - (3) Astronomy, biology, chemistry, geology, mathematics, physics
 - (4) Art, music, philosophy, psychology, religion
 - (5) Engineering, drawing, surveying
- At the head of each of these groups there will be an executive chairman, who will be an administrative officer devoting only a part of his time to teaching. The heads of the groups were recently appointed by President Rainey as follows:-

- (1) Language Group, Professor H. W. Robbins
- (2) Social Science Group, Professor R. L. Sutherland
- (3) Natural Science Group, Professor F. M. Simpson
- (4) Adaptation Group, Professor G. B. Lawson
- (5) Engineering Group, Professor S. C. Ogburn Jr.

To correlate the work of the five groups and unify the entire plan a University Council has been created. This council will meet regularly every two weeks and is composed of the President, Dean, Dean of Freshmen, Registrar, Director of Summer School and Extension, Chairman of Advanced Degree Committee, and the five group heads.

DEAN RIVENBURG HONORED

Dean R. H. Rivenburg, '97, was recently elected president of the Eastern Association of College Deans and Advisers of Men at the annual conference of the organization at Atlantic City, N. J. He succeeds Dean Norman Alexander of the University of New Hampshire, retiring president.

The Dean was also given wide press recognition because of an address to the Pennsylvania State Education Association during the holidays. His address was on the effect of the depression on Pennsylvania Schools and Colleges and was replete with statistics and charts covering the last several years at the institutions covered in his survey.

GLEE CLUB REORGANIZED

Professor Melvin Le Mon, instructor in organ, has been selected as the new director of the Men's Glee Club of the University. Mr. Le Mon is a new addition to the faculty. He was formerly at Eastman School, Rochester, N. Y.

FROSH UNBEATEN

1932 Freshman Squad

Coach "Mal" Musser, '18, writes own account of the work of a Frosh Coach and review of season.

I HAVE been asked to write an article about Bucknell University Freshman Football, and particularly this season. So I picked up the pen and here it is.

During the first few weeks of September a group of 45 men trot out on the field at the Stadium in answer to a call for candidates for the Freshman Team. Forty-five men — freshmen — fresh from high school and preparatory school. They have their own ideas of the game, with football systems instilled in them from their former play as varied as their own dispositions.

Some people get their greatest pleasure from music, others from art. I get mine from mixing and working with human beings. Here are 45 young Americans, strong, fresh, smart, eager and, in the position of coach, you can play on their hearts, minds and souls most any tune you desire. What an opportunity; what power in your hands; and I ask my God frequently to direct me to direct them, constantly, in the best and highest way. This may sound somewhat strange coming from the realm of football where roughness and toughness seemingly predominate but at the foot of the raging rapids of emotions and actions is the calm deep pool of the soul. Under every countenance it rests and when you are dealing with souls you are dealing with Eternity. Can you not see the thrill, the kick, the ever changing and interesting situations in coaching young men?

But let's see, this is to be an article about the Frosh Football season.

I stated there were 45 men reporting for practice. After the first or second scrimmage with the Varsity the squad dwindles to 25 men, but these 25 men usually report faithfully to the end of the season.

It is not long before the first game rolls around and what a game that first Freshman game is! Generally we have 11 quarterbacks on the field calling signals in the huddle and there is always present in that first game, 25 captains, 11 on the field, and the rest on the bench. You see it is difficult for these young men to control themselves at the outset. A number of them have been quarterbacks and captains in high school and preparatory school days and those "psychology behavior patterns" just must get in their work. But this year was unusual in this respect. We had a captain and quarterback, "Johnny" Sitarsky, who was a natural leader and led the team to its first victory of the year over Shenandoah High School 33-6. Shenandoah had been defeated only twice in three years.

Western Maryland Frosh were defeated 19-0 in our second game. Our men were a little stronger at the finish. It was Western Maryland's first game.

Stroudsburg State Teachers College Frosh were taken into camp 36-0 in the next game played. Stroudsburg was willing but outweighed.

Bellefonte Academy was the fourth victim in a night game at Williamsport. The Frosh started to show real speed and power. The score 25-0 was a good indication.

The last and hardest game was the annual setto with Wyoming Seminary at Kingston. The Frosh stepped out to the best victory of the year, 19-7.

In my humble opinion we had a great Freshman quarterback and captain in "Johnny" Sitarsky, 200 lbs. of speed, football brains and fight. He was a greater star than Hinkle in Hinkle's freshman year. Don't misunderstand me. Sitarsky is not Hinkle — he may never be, time only will tell. I said in Hinkle's freshman year. Sitarsky was uncanny in the way he would rally his team around him, as a unit, in a pinch, and carry them forward with "the old fight".

This team was an offensive team. They wanted to receive when winning the toss at the start of the game. They desired to get their hands on the ball. They had confidence in their offense. Their keenest delight was to open holes in the opponent's line and run with that ball. When they made one touchdown they wanted two. When they achieved two they worked for three, etc., they never let up.

Their cooperation and spirit were commendable. I received my biggest thrill of the season Thanksgiving Day when with the score 13-7 and Wyoming Seminary coming strong, being at this point of the game encouraged by a touchdown, the Frosh received the ball and walked over, under and through the opponents for another score. As is always expected of the play of a Freshman team this 1932 club improved with each game.

I have been asked how a Freshman team is developed, handled and trained. Here is my answer summarized in six points:

(1)—Tell them what you expect of them in their actions on the trips, in the dressing room and on the field of play.

(2)—Attempt to teach them the two most important fundamentals of football, blocking and tackling.

(3)—Get general and throw them a football.

(4)—Get technical and teach them Coach Snavely's football plays; when and how each man blocks and runs on every play.

(5)—Give them a talk on spirit, Bucknell tradition, and history.

(6)—Before every game; "Play the game hard, to the end, and always play it clean" is put in the form of a petition to our Maker — and Presto-Chango — the result — A FOOTBALL TEAM.

NEW PLAN BRINGS INQUIRIES

The revised college curriculum which has been called "The New Plan" for want of a better name has attracted wide interest as a result of newspaper publicity accorded the changes during the holidays. Letters are deluging the office of Registrar H. W. Holter, '24, from prospective students seeking more information on entrance conditions and the practical aspects of the system.

ENGINEERING OBJECTIVES

THE objectives of the engineering courses are to direct the student in the studies of the principles and methods of engineering and to those elements of liberal culture which serve to fit him for a worthy place in society and to enrich his personal life. The curricula, therefore, are directed to these ends, and are distributed over four years and one summer session.

The work of the first two years is largely devoted to the study of fundamental tool subjects which form the basis for the professional courses given during the last two years of his program; and, to the pursuit of those studies which broaden his cultural background. The first year's work is the same for all engineering students. It includes chemistry, drawing, and mathematics together with the freshman survey courses in English literature and the History of Western Man. The second year is devoted to the common preparation courses in physics, mathematics, mechanics; to specific preparation courses for the engineering curricula selected; and, to the sophomore survey courses in the Principles of Economics and the Evolution of Modern Social Institutions.

The summer session for chemical engineers is given between the junior and senior years at which time the course in unit operations and the principles of chemical engineering is given. For each of the other engineering groups the summer session is given between the sophomore and junior years. At this time the civil engineers take field work in surveying; and the electrical and mechanical engineers take direct current machinery and machine shop.

The last two years consists principally of professional subject matter given in the respective groups, together with elective courses which may be taken either in fields related to their major line of study or to such subjects as psychology, philosophy or political science, or both. The professional work is designed to instruct the student in the principles and practices of the engineering group concerned so that the graduate may be qualified to enter the industrial activities usually pursued by that profession, or to enter upon a graduate program.

Detailed information concerning the curriculum and laboratory facilities of each of the engineering groups may be obtained from the Engineering Bulletin or the Annual Catalogue.

Semester Hours

Each candidate for the degree of Bachelor of Science in chemical, civil, electrical or mechanical engineering is required to complete one hundred and forty-two semester hours, not including physical education which is required of all students during the freshman and sophomore years.

Quality Credits

Each candidate for the degree of Bachelor of Science must secure at least one hundred twenty quality credits. Three quality credits are given for each semester hour graded A, two for each hour graded B, and one for each hour graded C.

ENGINEER TALKS ON RUSSIA

Harry Herman Angel, '19, Bucknell Electrical Engineer, returned to the campus in December to talk to embryo engineers about his experiences in Russia during a sixteen month contract there as a specialist of The International General Electric Company. Engineer Angel was employed on the giant Dnieprostroy Power Plant project. His talk included references to Soviet technical practices and the contribution made by American engineers in the building of the Russian plants at Dnieprostroy and Kuznetsk, Siberia.

PROFESSOR COLESTOCK ILL

Early in January Professor Henry Thomas Colestock, '96, was forced by illness to give up his classes. An announcement by the Dean indicated that several months of rest would be necessary before Professor Colestock could resume his activities. Substitute instructors have been arranged for to conduct the professor's classes for the second semester.

CHRISTMAS ORATORIO

Early in December the combined musical organizations of the University presented the Bach Christmas Oratorio on two successive evenings to capacity crowds at the Lewisburg Baptist Church. The musical festival was conducted by Professor Paul Gies of the Department of Music. Guest soloist was Harold Giffin of the Eastman School, Rochester, N. Y.

UNITED STATES COURT

The last term of United States Court for the Middle District of Pennsylvania to be held in the old Union County Court House at Lewisburg is in session as this is written. The new home of the court, The Lewisburg Federal Building and Post Office, is expected to be completed in time for the Fall term. Judge Albert W. Johnson, '96, was on the bench. Another Bucknellian, Herman F. Reich, Esq., '17, Assistant United States Attorney, was in charge of several important cases for the government being tried by the court. W. N. C. Marsh, Esq., '03, United States Commissioner, was also in evidence during the court term.

NEW TEACHERS

THE Bucknell Department of Education and the Bucknell Teacher Placement Bureau are cooperating at the present time in the preparation of material designed to aid graduates in securing teaching positions. A special bulletin about Bucknell courses in Education has been prepared and is available on request.

The present Senior Class numbers among its members some thirty-six who are preparing to teach. All will be completely certified upon graduation in June in the various fields of their choice. Professor Frank G. Davis, Department Head has characterized this year's class as one of the best in years in ability. June graduates in Education in the various fields are grouped as follows:

English	12
History and Social Science	9
French	5
Mathematics	4
Biology	3
Elementary	1

Alumni in executive positions are urged to consider Bucknell graduates for possible vacancies in teaching positions. In addition to the new class each year the Teacher Placement Bureau has a complete file of experienced men and women available for positions.

"Names Make News"

The following list of Bucknellians were those who during 1932 gave evidence of their support of the policy of The General Alumni Association to aid worthy students to their degrees via The Bucknell Alumni Loan Fund. The list is arranged by classes. These alumni have helped to make more loyal sons and daughters of Bucknell in the persons of those who were assisted with loans made possible by the many small alumni gifts to this great cause. These Bucknell names made real Bucknell news for 1932.

If your name is here keep it here for 1933 — if it is not — why be a delinquent? The 1933 Alumni Fund is on the way. You will hear more later from your own Class Agent. Express your faith in Bucknell through The Alumni Fund.

TRAGEDY IN CHINA

NEWSPAPERS of the death of Mrs. Christy Mathewson, Jr., in an aeroplane crash outside Shanghai, China on January 7, 1933 was a distinct shock to many Bucknellians. Christy Mathewson, Jr., '27, former lieutenant in the United States Army Air Corps was an aviation instructor for the National Government of the Republic of China stationed at the National Air School at Hangchow. His bride of two weeks, the former Miss Margaret Phillips of Philadelphia had journeyed to China with Mrs. Christy Mathewson, Sr., arriving in Shanghai on December 24, 1932. The wedding of the young couple took place on Christmas Day in Shanghai. After a two weeks' honeymoon they were taking off for Hangchow from the river in a giant twin motored amphibian plane loaned them by Mr. T. Y. Soong, Finance Minister of the Chinese Republic. The crash occurred on the muddy bank of the river a few seconds after the take off and before the ship had gained fifty feet altitude. An inquiry is being made into the cause of the accident. Officials suspect that the ship had been tampered with. It is understood from press dispatches that Lieutenant Mathewson was being groomed as a Special Pilot for General Chiang Ki Chek because of the recent resignation of Eddie Smith, famous pilot.

Lieutenant Mathewson was severely injured in the crash, suffering a broken leg, two broken arms, and internal injuries. Reports on his condition at this time are meagre but doctors at the Shanghai Country Hospital where he was taken expressed hope for his recovery after a long hospitalization. Mrs. Mathewson, Sr., remained in China visiting friends after the wedding and is now with her injured son. The body of the bride was shipped to the home of her mother in Philadelphia for burial.

BOOK SHELF

HISTORY OF MATERIA MEDICA.

Dr. Heber W. Youngken, '09, Professor of Materia Medica in the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy is the author of an article entitled "Seventy-five Years of Progress in Materia Medica" which appeared in the December, 1932 issue of The Druggists Circular. The article deals with changes in the profession due to Federal Regulation, new drugs, new applications of old drugs and the entire field of medicine. It is a scholarly treatise on development in this field.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

Conceived in Liberty: A Series of Essays on Vocational Education. By Gilbert Perez, Superintendent of Vocational Education, Bureau of Education, Philippines. Philippine Education Co., Inc., Manila, 1932.

This latest sheaf of essays from the pen of Gilbert Perez, '07, is a tract for the times. Although the book has sprung from the ground of that ward of Uncle Sam's which is now so much under discussion, and reflects Philippine conditions, it contains much that needs serious pondering by Americans generally. In essence it is a plea for a broader conception both of academic education and of vocational education, and a sane adjustment of the two. Particularly the "white-collar" prejudice which has done such damage to American education is attacked vigorously, and a protest entered against the type of "education" which alienates its victim from his native environment. The American college has not been innocent in this fault, any more than the Americanized schools of our island territories. Mr. Perez says some things that may well be emphasized in our thinking in the present reevaluation of values which is occurring in all lands.

"CHIEF" DIES

Death claimed James Lippiatt, affectionately known as "Chief" to several generations of Bucknell co-eds at his home in Lewisburg on Monday, December 26, 1932. He was eighty-five years of age and a native of England, coming to this country as a boy. Interment took place at Shamokin, his former home.

EDITOR'S CORNER Con.

THE athletic problem of fraternity vs. varsity in basketball was effectively solved this Fall when the interfraternity league schedule was completed before the varsity season had opened. Foolish rules, regulations, eligibility lists, and confusion were avoided by simplifying the matter in the most satisfactory manner. One at a time.

THE creation of new scholarships by the Board of Trustees is a move in the right direction. If we can attract high type students through competitive scholarships the resultant increase in the prestige and position of the university will be a source of gratification to alumni.

Word has been received of the death of Rev. Edwin Todd Trimble who died about the middle of December. Rev. George T. Street gives us the following excerpt from a letter which he received from Rev. Trimble's stepdaughter.

"He went to the state of Washington a few years following his graduation — was quite a factor in the pioneer work of that state as minister, teacher and head of the Theological Seminary and also in the practice of law. In all of these branches of professional work he was highly successful. Cause of his death, the Flu, — age — would have reached 83rd year next April, was the tallest member of the class."

Miss Edith Furst, an art student here in 1886, died January 8 at the Lock Haven Hospital of pneumonia, which followed an attack of the grip. She was a daughter of Cline G. and Jennie Beaver Furst. Her mother graduated from Bucknell Institute in 1858. Her daughter Edith in the eighties and nineties frequently visited her grandfather, Mr. Peter Beaver, whose home is now owned by Mrs. Harold M. McClure, on University Ave., Lewisburg.

Miss Furst was an active member of the Great Island Presbyterian Church and was well known throughout Lock Haven for her benevolence and philanthropy. She is survived only by her younger sister Mabel, now Mrs. C. H. Greenleaf, of New Hampshire. Funeral services were held from the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Sidney D. Furst, with burial in Highland cemetery, Lock Haven.

The Rev. Samuel Sears Merriman, a retired Baptist minister, died suddenly from heart failure, December 27, 1932 at Bolton, Mass., where he had lived for the last six years.

Rev. Merriman prepared for college at Peddie Institute, Hightstown, N. J., entering Bucknell in 1882. He soon became prominent in the musical and social life of the University and town. He served on the editorial staff of the Bucknell Mirror, wrote many college and fraternity songs among which is "Dear Bucknell" and was a member of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity. Mr. Merriman received his Master's degree in 1889, the same year in which he graduated from Crozer Theological Seminary. He helped to organize the First Baptist Church of Merchantville, N. J. where he was ordained in 1890. In 1895 Mr. Merriman accepted a call to the First Baptist Church of Trenton, N. J. as associate pastor. Following this pastorate he was associated with the Central Baptist Church as chorister and for a few years engaged in the advertising business afterwards becoming pastor of the Olivet Baptist Church where he held a long pastorate. An editorial from one of the Trenton papers follows— "Many residents of Trenton will learn with sincere regret of the death of the Rev. Samuel Sears Merriman, former pastor of the Olivet Baptist Church which occurred a few days ago in Bolton, Mass.

For more than thirty years, the Rev. Merriman was a resident of Trenton and was active in the religious and the civic life of the community. He gained a great number of warm personal friends and, working without ostentation, accomplished much good both in a spiritual and a material way. Animated as he was by the highest ideals of citizenship and of Christianity, the Rev. Merriman was a respected citizen of Trenton who served well the city and his people".

Dr. Trainer was born in Williamsport. He was educated in the local schools, Bucknell University, and took his course in medicine at the University of Pennsylvania from which he graduated in 1899. He spent the following year as resident physician at the Williamsport Hospital and then established his private practice in that city. With the exception of his service during the World War, Dr. Trainer continued his practice in Williamsport throughout the years. He was

On this occasion the senior Mr. Coryell recalled his old-time boating days on the Susquehanna and the Pennsylvania Canal. He and William Aurand are the only raft pilots now living along the river between Lock Haven and Marietta. The Sunbury Item says: "Mr. Coryell entered the arduous occupation of rafting at 14. His first work was as lumber jack on the log drive from Cherry Tree, in Indiana County, at the very headwaters of the West Branch, to Lock Haven.

"At 19 he started to run rafts from Lock Haven as pilot and head of the fleet. His first rafts were for Amos Haines at Winfield. Later he ran rafts for McClure and Holt of Northumberland; then for Hiram Meyers; and later for Billmeyer and Himmelreich, of Lewisburg. Some rafts he safely ran from Keating, 40 miles above Lock Haven to Marietta, a distance of 185 miles.

"'In 1891,'" Mr. Coryell said, "'I took my son Harry along while I brought down to Lewisburg the largest oak timber that ever came down the West Branch. The sticks of logs making up the rafts were 34 inches square, and from 40 to 60 feet in length.'"

In a letter to the Editor, Rev. A. B. Claypoole, pastor, of the First Baptist Church of Wyandotte, Mich. writes as follows:

"I have just been reading the current issue of the Monthly and noted how many references are made to the burning of 'Old Main'. It occurs to me that an incident in which I performed the major act (which might have brought about this regrettable calamity at that time) might be interesting and timely.

It occurred during my Freshman year 1905-06. I roomed in 'Old Main' in what was, I think 12½ on second floor, East Wing. Guy Payne, (whom all on the campus at this time know) and his roommate Don Humm were rooming near me. It was late supper time and every one, but myself, had gone from the Wing and practically all had gone from the building in general, to their several eating places. I was hurrying to get to my eating place at Mitterlings. As I rushed from my room, my nostrils were greeted by the smell of burning cotton. I, at once, began an investigation and found that Don Humm had left his electric light bulb lighted and, accidentally, had thrown his pillow over it on his bed. The bulb, thus smothered, had so heated that the bed was on fire when I opened the door. It was easily extinguished, since I found it in time. But, had I not been detained for a little while longer than the other occupants of the Wing, that which happened last summer, might have occurred then.

I am glad that 'Old Main' is to be replaced by a better and modern building, but like the old alumnus of Dr. Hill's time, should I return to the Campus, sadness would grip me at not being able to see the old building in which I spent my first year at Bucknell".

For the average alumnus of Bucknell (five thousand men and women) the following program of

“How I Can Help” is Presented--Here’s How!

(Check them off):

1. Send a gift to The Alumni Fund. Broke? Aren't we all?
2. Interest a likely looking youngster in coming to Bucknell. Don't know any?
3. Talk with the High School Principal and sell Bucknell to him.
4. Answer your Class Agent's card and volunteer to help round up others.
5. Write the Alumni Office about any jobs that you know of for other alumni.
6. Send a personal item to The Alumni Monthly about yourself.
7. Attend Bucknell meetings in your district.

What do you say Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Alumnus? Can you do anything for Bucknell this year or not? One alumnus who read this program in proof sent his check at once and wrote that if we came to his office he would be tempted to give us the furniture.

THERE IS NO DEPRESSION IN ALUMNI

BECAUSE the printer ran out of initial letters for this column last month we decided to try an old editing trick of having the initial letters spell something. Here goes the experiment, and all because we are led to believe that people read this little corner.

UNLESS we are off the track our new cover design has met with a good reception. Many even commented that they were tired of the older one anyway — and it our prize winner! The public is fickle so we are consoled that while the new cover may be good for awhile it will eventually find its way into the discard heap to make way for yet another "new".

CLEVER editors of alumni magazines ask their readers through personal letters to help edit the old sheet. Our budget is too meagre to stand the postage but we do here and now ask for opinions on "What I Like in the Alumni Monthly".

KICK in with an idea, folks, the contest is open to all. We have tried slices of alumni opinion at times by picking names at random from the files and postcarding questions. The magazine has been largely guided by these answers — now the question arises how faithful were those slices of opinion to the entire alumni taste. Mail your suggestions on a penny card. All answers will be acknowledged. For the sake of brevity in answers we present the following list for checking purposes. Just number the types of articles in the order of your preference:

- () Personals
- () College News
- () Historical Sketches
- () Biographies of Alumni
- () Student News
- () Educational Articles
- () Faculty Biographies
- () Athletic Stories

NEVER have we been so inspired as on the occasion of Architect Larson's presentation to the faculty of his conception of the Bucknell of tomorrow. The plan is breath taking in its beauty and simplicity. Those few alumni who have studied the map of the new campus are unstinting in their praise of the plan, and of the architect who drew it. Mr. Larson was unhampered by tradition and provincialism in his conception. Some of the aspects of the treatment of the present Quadrangle come as fresh breezes to a musty closed up mind. Again we see the value of "new blood" pulsing through the veins of an old college. The retention of the four "Old Main" columns with a memorial capstone will appeal to every alumnus. This spot will become an alumni shrine for those classes that knew and loved the destroyed building.

ENTHUSIASM sweeps the campus over the marvelous production of "Romeo and Juliet" on two successive nights by the combined forces of Cap and Dagger, Frill and Frown, and other allied dramatic, literary, art and music talent of the University. The leads were played by professional artists with able support from an all star cast of faculty and students. Much credit for the staging and costuming must go to Professors C. W. Smith and Blanchard Gummo, both ardent workers who devoted many weeks of time to the preparation of the eminently successful production.

LEAF over your calendar pad now and mark a ring around an auspicious date — June 3 — Saturday — Alumni Day of the Bucknell

Commencement Week. If your class is holding a reunion — the threes and eights — make it a double ring. Plan ahead now for that long postponed but promised trip to the campus. Get a chestful of good old Susquehanna Valley air, and a heartfelt of true alumni loyalty to Alma Mater. Refresh yourself. The trip costs little and you profit much in raised hopes and a newer outlook.

LEST alumni fail to receive due recognition on correspondence with University offices it has been wisely suggested to this corner that we pass along a suggestion. Use your class numerals! They are really a mark of distinction and should be used. The Registrar might mistake you for a prospective freshman. The use of numerals on letters from alumni will save clerical time and insure attention. We thank you!

"LET'S LOOK AT THE RECORD"

A prominent faculty member was overheard to say recently that if President Rainey did nothing else for Bucknell he had earned his reputation for the future with the new architectural plans proposed through his efforts. We concur in that opinion for the selection by President Rainey of Mr. Larson as University Architect was a master stroke.

Dr. Homer P. Rainey is still a "new" president. He has been in office less than two years. "Let's Look at the Record", as Al Smith would say. What else has he done for Bucknell?

A "new" president and especially a young man confronted with different surroundings and strange people is "on edge" for a while. He is cautious and like a new Senator not permitted to make a name for himself at once. He is on exhibition for at least a year while faculty and alumni "look him over". Any definite moves are regarded with suspicion. Naturally criticism is withheld in deference to "newness". That period in the present administration is over. The "honeymoon" has ended.

President Rainey now has become a genuine working part of the University and is no longer "on parade". He has heard all manner of criticism and complaint and most successfully weathered all storms. His plans have been pushed forward with vigor and enthusiasm and the latest and greatest move — the architectural plan — has definitely established him as an able leader and far seeing director of the destinies of Bucknell.

Looking at the record we see first his zeal in promoting the general survey of the University. From this work will come many academic changes next year. Before the survey was undertaken the useless and archaic "cut system" was abolished and with it went the disgust of students and faculty alike at being "supervised by a card file". Another early move of President Rainey was to abolish the distinction between the University and The School of Music by elimination of the term "school" and the substitution of the term "department". Thus the foolish and useless separation of the two was encompassed by the absorption of the work in music into the general university plan.

The results of the survey along the lines of admissions and changed curricula are far reaching and will be several years in reaching full fruition. The immediate benefits of the work are seen in the junking of the old departmental system in favor of the divisional grouping.

Minor changes directly attributable to the president are centered about the rearrangement of the financial structure of the university, a change in financial record keeping that is still in process of evolution; and the student attitude toward chapel. Dr. Rainey has directed the changes in both of these fields. The financial field is well known to him. His experiences in studies of public school finance have stood him in good stead in his direction of the changes and evolution from an antiquated financial structure to one more modern and useful. His attempts to place the semi-weekly Chapel on a different plane have been wholly successful. Student attendance and interest in these religious services have proved the value of the change from compulsory attendance at a boresome Chapel service to an eagerly awaited semi-weekly Assembly where a planned and well prepared program is presented.

While it has been manifestly impossible to secure one hundred per cent approval on all presidential proposals and appointments the general feeling is one of hope for the future through the changes already made and those to come. If mistakes have been made in the sweeping changes effected it has been far better to do something progressive along with a few errors than to remain dormant.

The record is dominantly in black ink for all to see and read. A few red entries are balanced by the overwhelming strength of the credit pages. The vision of President Rainey and Architect Larson of a changed academic atmosphere and future campus at Bucknell should stir the pride of every alumnus.

A COMPARISON

ONE of the older colleges in the East reports a gain of 1,400 givers during 1932 to her Alumni Fund. The total cash received as compared to previous years was slightly less than previous "highs" but to realize that the number of donors increased is high tribute to the loyalty of the alumni of that college. More than forty per cent of the college graduates have been contributors to this fund since 1926. A proud record.

Bucknell's Alumni Fund is largely patterned after the unnamed one just mentioned. By the same ratio we should have in 1933 more than twenty per cent of our alumni contributing this year. During the past year less than twelve per cent were on our records.

The Alumni Fund is a CONTINUING plan whereby alumni express faith in Alma Mater — not in dollars and cents — but in annual gifts regardless of amount. During 1933 the plan will be presented to every alumnus. None should hesitate about how much to give. Give something! It is the spirit—not the size of the gift that counts!

We urge that local charities and relief work come first in your budget with Alma Mater second. The Fund is not a charity, and we hesitate to suggest the ranking of second to relief work because of the inference. The Fund is the ONLY channel through which alumni may say to Bucknell "We believe in you and want to help". The Fund was inaugurated in 1930 to do away with the annual dues plan and magazine subscriptions. It is the plan of the alumni — for, of, and by alumni. Give evidence of your faith in Bucknell as well as in yourself by your check to this worthy alumni program.

ECONOMY MOVE

TO save publishing costs the February and March numbers of this magazine have been merged into the present edition. The merger also saves mailing costs and brings a more complete edition than would be possible with two separate numbers. It is possible that further mergers will have to be made. If such becomes the case we beg the indulgence of our readers.

CLASS REUNIONS

"REUNE IN JUNE" resounds again in letters coming through the Alumni Office to class officers and members from reunion boosters. This year all classes with numerals ending in three or eight are scheduled for Alumni Day Reunions. The date is June 3. Get behind your class officers for a good reunion.

New Campus Plans

MR. J. FREDERIC LARSON, University Architect, carried the faculty to the heights early in February as he outlined his architectural development plan for the University. It is the first comprehensive and enlightened conception for the future that has ever been projected at Bucknell. President Rainey in commenting on the plan quoted a prominent trustee as saying that "With the completion of this building program Bucknell will become an Eastern Mecca for tourists, purely from the architectural beauty of the buildings and grounds".

The special faculty meeting was called by the President to permit Mr. Larson to question the faculty on suggestions for changes in his plan. He presented a detailed map of the campus and showed the proposed location for the new buildings, roads, fraternity and faculty homes. His conception of what Bucknell should look like in the future is complete and sweeping in its beauty and mode of treatment.

Individual buildings are already sketched and a conference held with faculty members in the Literature Group relative to interior plans for this building, the first unit to be erected.

Freshman Quadrangle

The future campus will utilize the present Hill Top as a Freshman Quadrangle with The Library converted into a Student Union Building by the addition of wings on the East and West.

"Old Main" Memorial

Special architectural treatment will be accorded "Old Main" with the four main columns left standing as the central figure of a memorial. The damaged East and West Wings will be razed and the land terraced and gardenized. A capstone will be used over the columns of the front portico to preserve the beauty and historic value of the most famed of Bucknell buildings. The brow of "The Hill" will become an alumni shrine with the four giant pillars standing defiant to the North.

A Neat Trick

The removal of the Observatory from its present site to the rise of ground capped by the water tower East of the Stadium will serve a double purpose; obscure the unsightly water tower from the campus view and elevate the Observatory to higher ground. The Observatory will be rebuilt semi-circularly about the West quadrant of the water tower.

New Campus

To the South of the Library which becomes a Student Union the present Engineering wing will be completed and to the West a Science Hall will match the completed Engineering Hall. South and West of these two units The Library will dominate the entire scheme and become the axis for all future buildings. This structure will be in the manner of Independence Hall and will front both to the East and West with the Arts Quadrangle opening to the West with the Humanities Buildings on either side.

Below the Humanities Buildings and on either side of this Quadrangle will be the Chapel and Administration Buildings.

New Roads

The present road to the Stadium from the Sigma Chi House will be relocated to swing in a great arc through the new campus and tie in the Mathewson Memorial Gateway. Behind the Gateway will be built the Gymnasium with Tustin Gymnasium converted into a Freshman Gym.

University Avenue will continue through the 1905 Gateway to swing left and up the Hill back of East College and on through the new campus in front of the new Phi Kappa Psi House to the Stadium. This will unite the present Fraternity Row with the site along the new sloping campus where future chapter houses will be built.

Inn and Golf Course

The University Farm to the West of the Stadium will be converted into an Inn and the Golf course will be enlarged to eighteen holes to circle this social center. Access to the Inn for the public as well as the University will be made easy by the new concrete highway which cuts between the Stadium and the University Farm. When a short Northern link is completed this road will be the direct through route of The Susquehanna Trail from Buffalo to Washington.

Housing Plan

Of immediate interest to faculty members is the work of a trustee committee at present preparing plans for a University-faculty housing plan. The new homes will be built between Seventh Street and the new North-South highway on the Western boundary of the University property adjoining the Lewisburg Cemetery. The homes will be centered about a new President's House that will be directly on the axis established by The Library. Between the faculty homes and the Library Quadrangle will be situated the Play Fields for tennis, baseball, hockey, and all intra-mural sports.

The old Academy Building, now Stephen W. Taylor Hall, will be used for the Department of Music.

Scale Model

The development plan is so designated that units will be created as the need and means are provided. A large scale model of the entire draft is now being prepared and will be placed on exhibition when completed. President Rainey has intimated that in connection with the exhibition of the scale model he will cause to be framed a quotation from the writings of Woodrow Wilson: "Humanity Does Not Forget Its Benefactors".

Mr. Larson was enthusiastic about the natural beauty of the campus and its manifold possibilities. He has utilized long vistas and sweeping panoramas in his new plan. The architecture of all the proposed buildings will be Georgian Colonial with the motive of the four columns of "Old Main" predominating. Colonial red brick will be used.

Early Construction

The construction of the first unit, The Humanities Group, will be started this Spring. The building will be three hundred and fifty feet long with three

"War-Horse Allen Has Fallen"

By A. R. E. WYANT, M. D.

THE passing of my '92 class-mate and Phi Gamma Delta fraternity brother has stirred up memories of old football days. On my office walls in Chicago two pictures have hung for over 25 years. One is of Bucknell's first football team in 1888 and the other is Chicago's first team in 1892. Charlie Allen is with me in both of them. I say Bucknell's first football team, for our freshman class in 1888 defeated the combined upper classes of the University and practically introduced football at Bucknell. In those days at Bucknell we were too poor to hire a coach. Some of us bought our own canvas suits, stockings and shoes. We had no other accouterments except a chrysanthemum mop of hair for a head-gear. Football was real foot ball in those early days for the center stood on one foot and snapped the ball back with the other foot.

Allen was a football enthusiast from the beginning and we made him our first captain. He was so assiduous and efficient as a leader that we re-elected him for each of the three following seasons. During those four years we played over fifty college games. I remember when we defeated Lafayette College on Friday and played Lehigh University the next day on our way home. Our greatest victory in 1891 was over Cornell, 4 to 0, when a former crack halfback at Harvard and coach at Cornell played on the team against us. They nearly killed Allen in revenge the next year when as coach he played with Bucknell's team against them.

Charlie was also an expert left-handed tennis player. He, Pimm, Prof. Bartol and I built a tennis court of our own and played nearly every day during the early summer for four years. He and I held the College championship in doubles during those four years and the last two years also the doubles championship of the colleges of central Pennsylvania.

Stagg was coach, captain and half-back on Chicago's first team. I was Chicago's first elected captain in 1893, and again played under Allen's captaincy in 1894 for on my recommendation he was elected as my successor and also re-elected captain the following year. It was during the Christmas holidays of 1894 that our football team made the first transcontinental trip to play the colleges on the Pacific. This was one of the high spots in our seven years' football experience together. My scrap-book reminds me that we were welcomed at the Bay by a representative committee, among whom was one Herbert Hoover, Treasurer of the Stanford team. What do you think of that! The future President of the U. S. A. was there to greet us. The Press gave us more publicity than we had ever received before. Some marvelous pen-pictures were drawn of various members of the team. Here is one of Captain Allen: "He stands six feet high and is one of the most determined players imaginable. He has a splendid physique and indomitable courage, and is, moreover, particularly well acquainted with every detail of the game. He is gritty, tricky and, above all, never surrenders, no matter how unpromising the prospect. He seems to have a natural propensity for the game. When the fight is the fiercest Allen's genial mood reaches the climax. He was by far the best man to advance the ball for Chicago."

Coach Stagg in his remarkably interesting autobiographical book "Touch-down!" pays Allen a glowing tribute. He rang me up when the Associated Press informed him of Allen's death and the tone of his voice and tenor of his talk indicated that he had lost a real friend.

Recently I conceived the idea of giving a complimentary anniversary dinner at The Quadrangle Club of the University of Chicago to the old boys who played under my captaincy forty years ago. It is planned for October 28th, after the Chicago-Michigan game. It will remind us of our first great victory over Michigan forty years ago when the team was carted by a crowd of enthusiastic students at the ropes to President Harper's home and from his porch he said: "Gentlemen of the football team, I am proud of you. The battle you have fought today is typical of the battle of life. You have won a glorious victory today. I hope you may do as well in life."

Before the holidays I wrote to "War-Horse" Allen to give him an early invitation so that he might plan to come to our "Century of Progress" fair and our anniversary dinner at the same time. And, by the way, if any of the old boys who played with me at Bucknell can arrange to be in Chicago at that time I hereby invite them to be my guests at this dinner.

I was greatly surprised to learn that Allen had been suffering for months from an incurable ailment. He wrote: "I always wanted to come back to Chicago, but was never able and now as I have only a few weeks to live, I never will. We must have our reunion with the 'old-timers' somewhere beyond the Styx." Later his wife wrote: "He is playing the last few minutes of the last quarter of the game of life with the same sporting spirit that has characterized his whole life." Fighting the demon of depression he could carry on; but the devil of cancer laid him low. He died January 26, 1933.

Charles W. Allen was born September 18, 1862. He graduated from Keystone Academy preparatory to Bucknell. After finishing at Chicago, he taught English and coached at Alma College, Michigan, and later at Whitman College, Washington, whose football team defeated the teams of the Universities of Oregon, Washington and Idaho. In 1904 Allen established the Allendale Ranch on the Metolius River and developed the breeding of registered Jersey cattle. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Florence S. Allen, who once taught in a Vermont female seminary; and the following children: John A., a son by a former marriage; Metola and Louise, who both won recognition as high school and college basketball players. His funeral service was held in the local Baptist Church and his body was cremated in Portland.

The Summer Session

July 5 to August 15, 1933. By J. H. Eisenhauer, '05, Director

THE eleventh annual Summer Session of Bucknell University will feature a course in Public School Finance by Dr. Homer Price Rainey, Ph.D., LL.D., President of Bucknell.

The subject is one in which Dr. Rainey is a recognized expert. He has taught the same course at the University of Texas and at the University of Oregon and has spoken on that topic at numerous educational gatherings throughout the country.

He is the author of a college text on the financing of public schools and has written several important monographs on that subject.

Last summer Dr. Rainey taught in the summer school of the University of Minnesota, but has announced his intention of remaining on the Bucknell campus this summer in order that he may give his first course here in the Summer Session.

Public School Administrative Officers

The Pennsylvania State Council of Education has approved Bucknell University for the training of administrative and supervisory officers. The summer program of approved studies in education has been arranged to meet the needs both of those who have already begun their work toward these certificates and of those who wish to begin this summer.

Teachers

The academic and professional requirements for certificates to teach in our schools are constantly being increased. Teachers are increasingly taking advantage of the summer session to fit themselves to do better the work they are now doing and to be adequately prepared for advancement when the opportunity comes.

Undergraduates

The summer session offers undergraduates an opportunity to accelerate their college courses. Opportunities to secure remunerative employment this summer may be few. Undergraduates will therefore find it profitable to use the summer session to prepare themselves for positions ahead of those who do nothing during the summer.

Graduate Work

Bucknell University offers two graduate curricula to students desiring the Master's degree. They are Master of Arts and Master of Science in Education.

Education Bulletin

A special bulletin covering the work in education is available and will be sent upon request. This bulletin gives information on the following subjects: Bucknell University and Teacher Training, Special Activities of the Department of Education, Undergraduate Curricula for Prospective Teachers, Graduate Offerings in Professional Education, Courses in Education for which Graduate Credit may be Obtained, Requirements of the Pennsylvania State Council of Education for Administrative and Supervisory Officers, and Arrangement of Courses for such officers.

The Demonstration School

An achievement worthy of note is a training school for student teachers. The State Department of Public Instruction of Pennsylvania requires 90 hours of observation and practice teaching in a public school or in a school organized to furnish all the conditions of a public school, as part of the requirement for certification to teach in the public schools of the State.

The Demonstration School, in a public school setting but under entire control of the University, combines the desirable features of both the public and the private school. Student teachers observe carefully prepared demonstrations, and endeavor to discover the fundamental principles underlying the work. They teach both large and small groups of pupils and supervise pupil activities. They engage in individual, department and large group conferences. The entire set-up is that of a laboratory, in which persons vitally interested in problems of the teaching profession test out approved theory in practical situations.

Each year applicants must be turned away. Only the better types of students are accepted. Applications should be filed early.

Professor Frank G. Davis is the Director of the Demonstration School. The remarkable growth of this school has been due to his efficient work. Working under his direction are a principal and a staff of teachers especially selected because of their recognized abilities in their respective fields.

Beginning with two critic teachers and a few children from the Lewisburg schools, this special training school accommodated seven student teachers in the summer of 1925. Its rapid growth is best shown by the fact that in the summer of 1932, 59 student teachers were trained by 10 critic teachers in a school with an enrollment of 250 pupils, who came from Lewisburg, Milton, Northumberland, Sunbury, Watsonstown, Montgomery, and Mifflinburg. To attract so many children for voluntary study during six weeks in the heat of summer, without any promise of reward other than the satisfaction of increased knowledge, is no mean feat.

An Ideal Place for Summer Study

Two factors make summer study profitable. The first of these is the satisfaction of worth-while learning; the second, a health building environment.

Courses of study, rich in content, are interestingly presented by competent instructors. Classes are small enough to consider individual problems of interest to the group and large enough to secure widely variable reactions. The President of a well-known college of high rank writes: "I may say that our Professor of Education thinks highly of the work available at Bucknell. That is why you have had several of our students during the summer of 1932."

The beautiful campus causes much favorable comment. Park benches make it possible for students to gather into groups in the shade of the giant oaks.

Excursions

Afternoon and Saturday excursions to near-by places of interest to lovers of the great out of doors are conducted under the personal supervision of Professor Norman H. Stewart.

Woodward Cave, Alexander Caverns, Seven Mile Narrows, Kitchen's Creek Falls, Blue Hill, and Eagles Mere are some of the places to which excursions have been conducted during past summers. Each summer Professor Stewart has also taken his students in nature study to New York City to visit the Aquarium and Natural History Museum.

"The Demonstration School"

In addition to the excursions mentioned above, an annual event has been the Gettysburg Trip under the direction of Doctor Melchior.

The Picnic

The Summer Session without the annual picnic would be like apple pie without cheese. Blue Hill has been the place. Baseball, quoits, contests of various kinds and stunts furnish amusement. Eats! An experienced committee knows what is good on such an occasion.

Golf and Tennis

The Bucknell University Golf Club owns and operates a beautiful nine-hole golf course. Summer Session students may play on this inviting course for the nominal green fee of ten dollars for the entire session. Tennis courts are kept in good condition for the use of the students during the summer.

Readings from Favorite Authors

In the summer of 1930, Professor Coleman gave an hour one evening to readings from favorite authors. The response of the student body was so gratifying that this interesting and instructive feature of the Summer Session has been continued each year.

In the summer of 1931, Professor Warfel continued the work begun by Professor Coleman. Last summer Professor Coleman was again on the faculty and continued what has now become an established event of the Summer Session.

The living room of Larison Hall provides an informal setting for the readings. Here amid surroundings suggestive of home, a part of the Summer Session family gathers to hear a masterful reader interpret great authors.

Special Lectures

Last summer a new feature was added when Mr. George E. Sokolsky was invited to the campus for a day. Mr. Sokolsky is a news reporter who spent 14 years in China. In the morning he met a group of students in an informal discussion of affairs in China. At noon he was entertained at luncheon by the faculty. In the evening he gave a formal lecture on the Manchurian situation. It was a busy day for him but the students spoke in the highest terms of the value of his visit.

This summer Professor Davis Edwards of Chicago has been engaged. He will read "Lazarus Laughed".

The Play

During each of the last two summers, the class in Dramatics, under the direction of Professor Smith, presented a three-act play. In the summer of 1931, Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest" was presented, and in 1932, John Drinkwater's "Bird in Hand". Large and appreciative audiences attended both events.

Social Functions

A reception for faculty and students is held the first Friday of the session. Thereafter informal dances and other forms of entertainment are provided in the living room of Larison Hall.

A Brief History

The Summer Session was organized in 1914, with Nelson F. Davis, Sc.D., as its dean. But hardly had the venture been made when the World War started, and as soon as the United States entered the conflict the Summer Session was discontinued.

It was resumed again in 1923, under the general supervision of a faculty committee, and under the immediate direction of Guido C. L. Riemer, Ph.D., then of the State Department of Public Instruction, who served as dean. In that first Summer Session of the present series, eight departments offered 36 courses. These departments were: biology, chemistry, education, English, history, psychology, mathematics, and music.

In 1924, George B. Lawson, A.M., D.D., became the director of the Summer Session. During the following year, Dr. Lawson still headed the session, and a dean of women was added in the person of Assistant Professor Amelia E. Clark. In the Summer Session of 1926, Professor James P. Whyte succeeded Dr. Lawson as director. Two years later, the present incumbent became director.

The development of the Summer Session has been steady, and the enrollment has shown a consistent growth. In the summer of 1933, 18 departments will offer a total of 79 courses. The teaching staff has grown, until in 1933 there will be 36 instructors in the session. The student enrollment grew steadily from the 126 registered in 1923 to a maximum enrollment of 447 in the summer of 1931. The enrollment in 1932 was 435. In every way, the summer session has forged steadily ahead. It apparently has met a very real need.

Tuition, Board and Room

The tuition fee is $8.00 per semester hour. Board for the six weeks is $42.00. To students who wish board from Monday to Friday only, the rate is $5.00 per week. A room in a dormitory is $18.00 for the six weeks. Hunt Hall will be used as the only residence hall for women this summer. Rooms for married couples who may wish to take their meals at the college may be obtained in private homes near the campus.

Alumni Interest

Alumni suggestions and constructive criticisms are welcomed. Bucknell is one of a very few colleges and universities in Pennsylvania that have been approved by the State Council of Education for the preparation of public school administrative officers.

President Rainey has been well received both on and off the campus. His inspiring leadership is a steadying influence in these days of uncertainty. His presence on the campus this summer will add greatly to the value of the Summer Session.

Friends or acquaintances of alumni who may be thinking of furthering their education this summer will welcome information and recommendations.

A tentative program of studies is available on request. The complete catalogue will be published about April 15.

PUBLICITY FOR NEW PLAN

Bucknell's new plan of courses and revised curriculum has attracted nation wide interest as attested to by a flood of correspondence reaching Lewisburg requesting additional information about the operation of the plan.

The New York Herald Tribune under date of January 22, carried a complete account of the idea from the pen of Dr. Homer P. Rainey, President. Since the publication of this article Dr. Rainey has had numerous requests for similar ones.

In the March issue of The American Magazine of Art published by the American Federation of Art in Washington, D. C., a column is devoted to the place of music in the new curriculum. A forthcoming issue of The Omegon, national fraternity publication of Theta Upsilon Omega, will feature a complete article by President Rainey.

IN ADVANCE — THANK YOU!

Registrar H. Walter Holter, '24, extends thanks in advance to all alumni who fill out and return to him the slip enclosed with this issue of the magazine requesting names of High School seniors planning a college course. Representatives of Bucknell will call upon these prospective Bucknell students to assist them in choice of courses. These representatives are really Counsellors on Education as they make recommendations of not only courses but colleges as well (not necessarily Bucknell if another better fills the need of the applicant).

NEW CAMPUS PLANS COMPLETED

entries when eventually completed. Reproductions of the front of "Old Main", will be used on the entries. The building will house both class rooms and faculty offices. The first floor will be devoted to class rooms opening on a long glass enclosed promenade instead of the usual corridor. Faculty offices and reception rooms will be on the second floor.

The pending insurance settlement on "Old Main" is all that is necessary before construction work begins on this first unit of the new campus.

COLLEGES AND THE DEPRESSION

Colleges, like other institutions, are facing serious financial difficulties and necessary readjustments. Many colleges, like many businesses, have, in recent years, overexpanded their educational programs. Now with decreased enrollments and loss in tuition and return on endowments there is necessity for a curtailment of programs and general retrenchment. The colleges are meeting these difficulties with courage and dispatch. Every possible effort is being made to adjust college programs and budgets to new demands. The colleges are keenly aware of their obligation to balance their budgets, and to operate on a sound financial basis.

There are two encouraging factors for the colleges in the present crisis. In the first place, a recent study by Mr. A. C. Marts, a member of the Board of Trustees of Bucknell University, and of the firm of Marts and Lundy of New York, shows that colleges and universities have had the best record of financial management of all other business institutions, and thus, have withstood the depression better than others. It was pointed out that the business management of these institutions has been wise and conservative, and that the Boards of Trustees and Finance Committees of these Boards have protected trust funds and endowments unusually well. In the face of unprecedented decline in security values the returns from invested funds in many institutions have held up remarkably well. This is true of our own institution. Our income from endowments for the current years has declined less than four per cent. This fact is a fine compliment to our Board of Trustees and our business management. It should inspire appreciation of, and confidence in, their leadership. Furthermore, our Board is taking every care to prevent a deficit in operating expenditures. Reductions have been made in every phase of our program. At the same time every possible effort is being made to protect and conserve the quality of our work.

In the second place, the social and moral qualities which the present crisis is demanding and which we must have to preserve our society and institutions are the values which our colleges have always striven to provide, and are providing in a larger measure than any other social institution outside the home and the church. The present crisis is a spiritual crisis. It is characterized by a breakdown of fundamental moral character and a loss of faith in our institutions and our leadership. Our colleges have always emphasized the development of moral character as their primary aim, and they are today the great stronghold of American idealism.

These two factors should entrench our colleges in the confidence of their constituencies. They are supplying men and women trained in the essential social virtues for the perpetuation of our society, and they have the finest business management of any other institution in our society. For these reasons they deserve the continued confidence and loyal support of their constituencies.

In the development of our new program at Bucknell and in our efforts to meet the unusual demands of a new society, I covet the undivided loyalty of every alumnus and friend of Bucknell. We are receiving many evidences that our program is being well received, in many quarters. Your interest and enthusiasm will do much to make it a success.

Faithfully yours,
HOMER P. RAINEY.

THE STORY OF AN ADDRESS IN THE FILES OF THE ALUMNI OFFICE

ONLY the joy in Heaven over a redeemed sinner come to Glory is comparable to the joy and blissful relief in an Alumni Office when a "Lost" address is "Found". Were it not for the ever present "Lost" file, wherein "wrong numbers" are kept, there would be little work for a clerical staff. This one task of tracing brothers and sisters who steal away in the dead of night from one perfectly good address, kept for years, to a secret rendezvous, unknown to even the post office, required more than half the routine effort expended by the Alumni Office.

In sheer desperation the alumni magazine pages are used once a year to publish the names of those whose cards are marked "Whereabouts Unknown". A few classmates send in sketchy clues and now and then some more than able class sleuth sends in a perfectly fine brand new address. Hosannahs are then sung by the staff with the Secretary leading in his wobbly baritone.

The new address is rushed to the Graphotype machine where a metal plate is embossed with key signals for fraternity and city clubs and duplicate plates created in likeness to the original. The Addressograph caresses each new plate like a maternal Tabby fondling her youngest. The cards that come from this second machine are then compared with the former address cards in Alphabetical, Class, Fraternity, and Club files and information contained on the older cards transcribed to the new ones as supplementary information to the address. After this transcription the new cards take their places like soldiers proud of their new uniforms and the old cards slink away to the musty Biographical File where every old address at last find a permanent home.

The original plate from which the cards are made awaits its turn for filing in the great Addressograph File. Finally it takes its place alongside its brothers in the same city or town and is given a flag to carry to denote degree, sex, and Alumni Fund contributions. The duplicate plates are filed alphabetically in the various fraternity and club files to await special addressing operations to these groups. The great Addressograph File is used regularly in the mailing of The Bucknell Alumni Monthly.

By actual timing of an average operator the routine address change requires twelve minutes of time. Multiply this by the daily average of twenty-six changes and the alumni office workers may receive a bit of your consideration when you change your address.

This short story of the changing of an address is only the last step in the long wearisome, sometimes fruitless search for the address after the older one is marked "N. G." by the post office department. The tracing of an address is yet another story, too long and involved to be told here. Some methods are regarded as trade secrets so complicated is the process. Yes! The Alumni Office exists for and because of the alumni and sometimes in spite of them! It is YOUR office — this story is merely a polite way of asking for YOUR help in tracing some of the "Unknowns" as listed by classes on the following pages. Many thanks in advance!

PRAISES PEPPER

In a letter to the Philadelphia Ledger under date of February 1st, Margaret Tustin O'Harra, '83, pays tribute to George Wharton Pepper as the successful leader of the United Campaign in the City of Brotherly Love. Former United States Senator Pepper received an Honorary Degree of Doctor of Civil Laws from Bucknell in 1926.

"ROUND TABLE" ON TEACHERS

Twenty Bucknell leaders in education resident near the campus were recently invited by the University and The Alumni Association to a "Round Table" Conference on New Students and Teacher Placement. The group met with President Rainey, Registrar Holter, Dr. Frank Davis, and Alumni Secretary Stoughton in a two hour discussion of the problems involved. Several definite objectives were suggested and proposals made for a continuation of field contact work by University officials in the placement of teachers and the selection of students for next year. The "Round Table" is expected to develop into a larger and more exhaustive study of the problems at a later date.

DRAMATIC TRIUMPH

"ROMEO and Juliet", revived by Cap and Dagger and presented by The Artists Course to capacity houses on February 22 and 23, reached a new "high" in excellence for campus thespian activities.

The production was in process for several months with various departments expending time and energy in preparation for the two professional players who were selected to play the leads. Mr. Joseph L. Curtin and Miss Barbara Pearson, as Romeo and Juliet, are pictured herewith in the immortal tomb scene. Their interpretation was attributed to by the reception accorded them by the entire cast and community.

Laurels for exceptional work on the production are evenly distributed between Professor C. Willard Smith,

The Tomb Scene

Director, Mr. H. Hampton Bray, '33, Production Manager, Mr. J. A. Younghusband, '34, Scenery Design, and Professor Blanchard Gummo, '25, Costumer. Ample praise was also bestowed by town and gown on Professor Paul Gies, in charge of the music, and Mrs. Melvin Le Mon, Directress of the dances. The entire cast received fine ovations for their splendid support of the principals.

Faculty members, visitors, and critics agreed that the production was thoroughly professional in all its aspects and a credit to the University. It is highly probable that the production may see several road appearances before the end of the year.

POPULAR RECITALS

Melvin LeMon, Professor of Organ, assisted by the Men's Glee Club of which he is Director recently gave a well attended and enthusiastically received recital as one of a series presented by the department of music. Earlier recitals during the year were given by Professor Gies and the Symphony Orchestra, and Miss Melicent Melrose, voice, assisted by the Melrose Quartette of former pupils.

Mrs. Dora E. Watrous Spratt of Grove Beach, Conn. contributes the following on the life of a classmate:

"Mary Hammond (Norris), Seminary, 1878, finished her life's journey during Christmas holidays, 1930-31, while she was spending the winter with her daughter, Mrs. Marion Gleason. Her other daughter, Mrs. Alvira Bradbury, lives in Fontana, Calif.; so naturally she frequently crossed the continent. Her home for many years was in Pasadena, Calif. After her husband's death she sailed on every ocean. It is a question whether anyone of our Bucknell Alumnae has seen as much of the world as she enjoyed; while few, if any, of our Bucknell men have travelled more miles. She was in nearly every State of the U. S. A. She went to Alaska; to Honolulu two or three times; and also sailed around the world. She spent two years, with her youngest daughter, seeing Europe. She also went to Australia and New Zealand. In fact, as near as her family can sum it up, she covered about one hundred and twenty thousand miles by land and sea. The girls of '78 have journeyed much. Sometime we would like to add up their many miles; but to no one of them can as large a sum total be credited as to her whom we used to call 'Our Dear Little Minnie.'"

Corson was presented with the trophy given annually by Shoemaker Post, American Legion, for outstanding community service or achievement, the presentation featuring a patriotic service held Sunday evening at the First Baptist Church of Bridgeton, N. J. The presentation was made by Corporation Counsel Samuel Iredell in the presence of a representative audience of about 150, including many members of the Post. Both men, who had been at South Jersey Institute and Bucknell together, were visibly affected by the time the presentation was over. Prior to making known the name of the recipient Mr. Iredell referred to their relationship as schoolmates at South Jersey Institute and college-mates at Bucknell University and then went into paying a tribute to the service which led to the awarding of the trophy, telling how he had cared for the sick, responding to all calls, and calling Dr. Corson from the rear of the church, presented the plaque adorned with the Legion insignia.

DAVID JAYNE HILL LIBRARY

The first shipment of more than two thousand volumes from the library of the late David Jayne Hill, '74, has been received by the Carnegie Library. The books are the gift of Walter Liddell Hill, Esq., '98, of Scranton, son of the former Bucknell President. Additional shipments are being prepared and it is expected that the total number of volumes to be added to the shelves will approximate five thousand. The collection is particularly valuable in the fields of Political Science, International Law and Languages.

Miss Eliza J. Martin, Librarian, will write more completely on this handsome and valuable gift to Bucknell in the next number of this magazine.

The Alumni Office is also in receipt of early photographs of Old Main and Bucknell Hall from the collection of Dr. Hill.

A CHALLENGE TO 1915!

"I will match dollar for dollar every gift to the 1933 Alumni Fund made by members of my class" reads a letter to The Bucknell Alumni Fund Committee. There you are 1915 — a real goal to shoot at — everyone may double the size of his gift. Each dollar of class money is worth two! Make the offer valuable to Bucknell and rally that old time class spirit around this new banner! Mail checks to your Class Agent or to Lewisburg. Do it NOW!

N. B.—Are there other alumni who will make this offer to their classes? Shall 1915 stand alone?

BUCKNELL IN BURMA

Bucknellians were in evidence early in January at the quarterly meeting of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees of Judson College in Rangoon, Burma.

Doctor Emory W. Hunt, President Emeritus of Bucknell was in attendance, along with Samuel H. Rickard, '23, Vice-Principal of Judson College, Rev. E. Carroll Condict, '08 of the American Baptist Chin Mission at Thayetmyo, Burma and Miss Marian Shivers, '14, chemistry teacher at Judson College.

At the meeting Vice-Principal Rickard was elevated to the position of Principal pro tem of the College. The minutes of the meeting were recorded by the Secretary, Rev. Condict who writes as follows about the work in Burma:

"Many of these Chins have almost no religion. Their contact with Buddhism has led them to forget much of the spirit worship of their forefathers but they are not Buddhists. Our problem is to reach them while they are in the state of transition, before they become Buddhists. That is, to turn them to the 'Jesus Road', as the American Indian calls it. Unless we can awaken the race to the fact that becoming Buddhists means the extinction of the race and the only hope of the race is in becoming Christians, then the Chins will become Buddhists. I have been working for years along that line — to win the race while it is on the march. A trip in January west of here to the foot hills gives hope that there is a movement towards Christianity and a realization that it is the only hope of the race. Before 1932 the most baptisms by this mission was 108 in a year. In 1932 the number rose to 180. In one week in January, 1933 I baptized 205 Chins, 85 of them I baptized one afternoon. They had walked over a mile to a stream to be baptized. We are reaping where the seed has been sowed again and again during the last 45 years."

THE 1933 GOAL
At Least One Dollar from Every Alumnus before June 1st

Editor's Corner

COMMENCEMENT AHOY! June 3 is Alumni Day with open house at Headquarters all day. Register for badges and information. A statistical chart will be kept of registration by Classes. Help your own class record by registering.

PRIZES were announced last year for various types of registrations. We forgot to award one — to the alumnus travelling the longest distance to get to Commencement. The winner was Harry W. Pierson, '28, son of Rev. R. G. Pierson, '01, of Pittsburgh. Harry travelled some 4,000 miles from his post as Chief Clerk of the United States' Legation at Bogata, Columbia and arrived in time for Alumni Day. Just a little jaunt!

THIS second combined edition (this year) of the old rag has been christened the April-May number just for want of a better name. Economy is not the only reason for the combination. We held the April issue so long waiting for promised news of an insurance settlement on "Old Main" that most of the articles went stale and we had to re-write them in condensed form for this edition in order not to be too far behind the passing scene.

WE are still waiting for news that will mean the breaking of ground for the new campus and the immediate erection of a classroom building to take the place of "Old Main". We had hoped (along with President Rainey at whose request we held our pen poised) for REAL NEWS to cheer up you alumni. Now we are forced to press by the approach of Commencement. We just HAD to print the program and make the announcements for reunions, etc. Maybe we will get our BIG NEWS in time for HOMECOMING. (The date is October 28 and the visiting team TEMPLE, coached by the famous "Pop" Warner).

COLLEGE representatives are touring the countryside interviewing prospective students for next year. Know any? Send their names along to Registrar Holter. A representative will be glad to call in the capacity of Counsellor on Education.

SPRING House Parties have gone quietly into history. Favors were eliminated this year as an acknowledgement of existing conditions. Some dozen fraternities held parties with dances on Friday and Saturday evenings over the week-end of May 5 and 6.

RECENT grads will be shocked or delighted at the news that coeds may now smoke in their rooms instead of along the streets of town or anywhere else that was not campus. The new regulation went into effect early in May.

THE full color reproductions of the print of "Old Main" are meeting with an excellent reception. One is mailed to every donor to The Alumni Fund. You will want one of these beautiful pictures and there is only one way to get it. Mail that Yellow Envelope with your contribution! The picture comes to you by return mail.

COMMENCEMENT visitors should not forget the challenge of the new Bucknell golf course. Greens are faster and fairways better than ever this year. Just try to par number one!

BASEBALL interest on the campus has fallen to a new "low" with the team in a slump of defeats. A short schedule and a lack of pitchers both contribute to the poor record of the nine this year. Hope is kept alive by a good crop of freshmen who will compete for varsity jobs next year.

ONE Buck! Yellow Envelope! Mail! "Names Make News" and The Alumni Fund marches on! Come on! Do it right NOW!

COMMENCEMENT proper will be staged on Loomis Street in front of Hunt Hall with the porch of the building used as a platform. The setting should rival the former one on The Quadrangle in attractiveness. More room is available for guests on the new location.

ANOTHER welcome change in program affords more good music. The Bucknell Symphony Orchestra will give a concert Sunday afternoon on the Women's Campus at four o'clock.

AND ALUMNI DAY IS SATURDAY, JUNE 3! We'll be seeing you!

THAT YELLOW ENVELOPE

(And the Stamp)

ON April 26 the mailing of six thousand letters to alumni was completed. Along with the letter we sent a yellow envelope decorated with a three cent stamp in a most well meant attempt to save valuable alumni time in the dispatching of gifts to The Alumni Fund.

To date (May 1) less than two hundred of these yellow envelopes all addressed and stamped have reached us. Shall we request a Congressional Investigation of the postal service? Surely more than that number were mailed to us.

We refuse to recognize poverty as a reason for the dearth of alumni gifts to The Fund. Poverty is only an excuse — not a reason — for everyone who eats regularly can afford a dollar bill in the interest of ALUMNI LOYALTY.

We have set our goal this month as ONE DOLLAR FROM EVERY ALUMNUS BEFORE JUNE FIRST. How about it fellow alumni? We CAN do it! Many of you have already sent fives, tens, twenties, and a few scattered fifties. Bravo! That makes up for lots of the delinquents — but far from all of them!

We have paid the freight and told our story of the need this year. You do your bit with at least a dollar bill. Come on! Do it now! You'll feel better after that yellow envelope is on its way to Lewisburg. Be LOYAL and read your name in the next issue under "Names Make News". Where is that yellow envelope? TODAY!

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY

ONE of the most interesting events of ALUMNI DAY, SATURDAY, JUNE 3, 1933, will be the reunion of the Class of 1883. Fifty years ago fifteen young men were handed their diplomas on Commencement Day by the late Dr. David Jayne Hill, then President of The University at Lewisburg. Today seven of the original fifteen survive. They have all been invited by personal letter from President Homer P. Rainey to be the guests of Bucknell during Commencement Week.

The seven survivors of the Golden Jubilee Class are scattered from Texas to Florida to Illinois with one member still a resident of Lewisburg. The other three are resident in Scranton, Pittsburgh, and Ridley Park, Pa.

ALUMNI DAY SATURDAY

FOR the second consecutive year ALUMNI DAY of Commencement Week has been set for SATURDAY. This change from former years has been welcomed by alumni everywhere. The registration at Alumni Headquarters last year was heavier than at any time during the past decade. It is hoped that this year the alumni will return in even greater numbers. Geographical figures from Alumni Office files show more than three thousand alumni resident within two hundred miles of the campus — just an easy motor ride to old scenes, old friends, and pleasant memories of by gone days. We'll be seeing you on JUNE 3!

A WORLD VIEW

WE were honored recently by a visit from Carlos Alvarez, '09, Director General of Railways for The Republic of Ecuador. Mr. Alvarez visited the campus for several days after an absence of more than twenty-four years.

Mr. Alvarez believes that the fundamental causes of our worldwide depression are to be found only after thorough back tracking to fundamentals. One cause which he believes to be fundamental is the loss of foreign trade by the United States. He cited an instance of a brother who owned a retail shoe store in Ecuador and sold American made shoes only. With the development of competitive markets and European production, rival concerns were soon patronized almost to the exclusion of American made products. This process has been current in almost every industry and country in South America. Those markets were the contributors to the high standard of living of the United States. Now that a world wide depression has caused a definite drop in standards the United States is beginning to ask why we lost our South American customers.

The Gold Standard makes the resumption of trade with Latin nations almost impossible as their reserves are too meagre. Mr. Alvarez favors a return to a remonitization with silver partially backing the currency of every nation with a suggested ratio of one to fifty or thereabouts.

The direction of events for the future lies with the larger nations of the world for the smaller countries must accept the standards of the leaders. To the oft repeated question "Where are the Leaders of Today" our visitor suggested that Victor Hugo would ask "Where is God"?

The colleges will build leaders for tomorrow only if the young men and women of today study the problems that confront the world now. Economics students particularly should search out the causes of the depression and in a search for them remedies will be suggested.

In commenting upon the present emergency plans for relief and world stabilization our caller emphasized the need for permanent plans for the next several hundred years and not temporary ones to suffice for a few years only.

The World View as we were permitted to come in contact with it through the conversation of Mr. Alvarez is ample evidence by contrast of the isolationist policy of the United States. History will enlarge our horizons and fame and fortune crown the efforts of those who today are able to see beyond national boundaries.

An Appeal To Bucknellians

EVERY Bucknellian will be glad to register an approval of the activities of the new Bucknell. The President of our school, much the same as the President of the United States, is beset with many trying difficulties, and his energies toward making Bucknell a great University will go for nought unless he has the combined support of every element in the Bucknell Family. The Alumni of the school are its representatives in the world of education, business life, and professions. We cannot afford to forget the undertaking the new President has shouldered and must contribute both in thought and financial aid to the projects under way.

Through the medium of the Alumni Monthly and by many personal letters, I do not want to urge, but remind you to make some personal sacrifice to better appreciate your contribution to Bucknell. Think of the joy President Rainey would receive by realizing that he had the active support of this Alumni group. I am going to ask each Alumnus to write him a few lines to assure him of their loyalty and backing in this new undertaking. In this same letter enclose a check or money order made out to the Alumni Fund. The result will be a great joy to yourself and a real service to the school—an institution to which you owe a debt that you can never repay in a financial way.

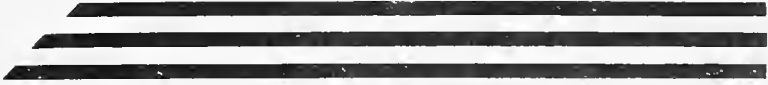

Our effort is to double the Alumni Fund Contribution of last year. Can we depend on you? Alumni activities will be centered about Alumni Day, June 3rd. The idea proved popular last year and this year we are looking for our largest crowd of old-timers.

Will be seeing you at Commencement.

Signed,

E. W. PANGBURN, '15,

President, The General Alumni Association

This number of the ALUMNI MONTHLY brings you the announcement of our forthcoming Commencement activities. It is our earnest hope that an unusually large number of the alumni will return for this occasion. Many of the classes are planning for their reunions. It is the fiftieth anniversary for the Class of 1883. There are seven members of that class living. They are: Reverend Adam Beaver, Reverend William J. Coulston, Dr. Spencer B. Meeser, Reverend Aaron W. Puller, Mr. Charles E. Stein, Reverend William G. Watkins, and Mr. Elmer E. Wolfe. The University has extended a special invitation to all of these members of the Class of '83 to be present as guests of the University.

During the year that is closing the Faculty and the Board of Trustees have made some significant reorganizations in the University, and have developed some far-reaching plans for the future development of the University. It is our purpose to present these plans in as much detail as possible at this Commencement program.

It will not be many years until we shall be celebrating our one hundredth anniversary. It is not too early to begin to make plans for that happy event. I should like very much to relate our developmental program with our plans for that celebration. I should be very happy, therefore, if the alumni at their meeting this year will discuss ways and means of cooperating with the Board of Trustees in developing a comprehensive program for the University which will become our major objectives to be realized in the years that intervene between now and our Centennial. Such a program, of which we shall all be conscious, will unify our purposes and our efforts, and will be a valuable stimulus to our activities on behalf of the University. Two years of relationship with Bucknell have convinced me that we have glorious opportunities before us. May we not begin now to organize ourselves to realize a maximum of these opportunities by the time of our one hundredth birthday?

HOMER P. RAINEY.

A LETTER TO THE CLASS OF 1922

Dear Classmates:

I am sending this communication through the columns of the Alumni Monthly with the hope that each of you will consider it in the same light that you would a personal letter.

As all of you know, we held the ten-year reunion meeting of our class last June. At that meeting I was appointed chairman of a committee whose function was to endeavor to place '22 on the list of Patrons of the University. This was thought to be a fitting class memorial, since the names of all Founders and Patrons are published in each annual catalog by action of the Board of Trustees.

At that meeting our President, Finley Keech, stated that several thousand dollars had been left by our class, and it was voted to use this as a nucleus, in establishing a class fund through the regular channels of the Alumni Association, which would be administered by them in their loans to worthy Seniors. This is an exceptionally splendid plan, as it makes the principal available to the University when the money is loaned to students to pay college bills, and since the students must repay the principal with interest, usually within a year, the fund is not only perpetuated but is increased. I might add that the granting of student loans from the Alumni Fund is in the hands of a committee consisting of Comptroller Dayton L. Ranck, Registrar H. Walter Holter, and Alumni Secretary Alfred G. Stoughton, who require notes signed by responsible endorsers, as well as by the students themselves.

In looking up the records, I found that Finley Keech (who quoted from memory) had erred in his estimate of the amount and the disposition of the money left by our class. As a matter of fact we had $258.22 which was turned over to the general endowment fund in 1925, when the endowment drive was under way. During the past two years, not including 1932-33, the members of the class of 1922 have given $149.00 to the Alumni fund which "Al" Stoughton says can be applied to our account. This credits us with a total of $407.22 contributed to our Alma Mater, leaving $592.78 to reach our goal of $1000.00.

According to the Alumni office records, there were 141 graduating members of our class, and 91 non-graduates. If everyone in the class were to contribute an average of one dollar yearly, we could easily go over the top before our fifteenth reunion meeting in June, 1937. Some of us, particularly in these times, are unable to contribute at all; others can and some have contributed many times one dollar per year. It is the hope of our committee that each and every one of you will respond to whatever extent you are able. Even very small sums mount up in the aggregate.

Make your contributions to: A. G. Stoughton, Alumni Secretary, BUT BE SURE TO INDICATE THAT THEY ARE FOR THE "1922 CLASS FUND", otherwise they will automatically go into the General Alumni Fund and not be credited to our class.

Let us endeavor to make the class of 1922 a Patron of the University by 1937.

Sincerely yours,
W. N. LOWRY.

FINE DEBATING RECORD

Bucknell men's and women's debating teams have just concluded a comprehensive schedule with pleasing results. The women's team continued their unbeaten record through the second season, while the men's teams broke even on decision debates, with all these except one being held on foreign platforms.

Bucknell's debate on Japan's Policy in Manchuria was selected for publication by the national college debate publication, INTERCOLLEGIATE DEBATES. Other topics debated by Bucknell were on the Cancellation of War Debts, The Federation of Labor as a Political Party, and the Influence of the Movies.

For the first time Bucknell sent a women's team on a long trip to the Southwest, where debating is regarded as especially strong. The Bucknellians won four in ten debates on the trip, and were undefeated, the other discussions being non-decision.

Among the colleges met by Bucknell were Rutgers, Pennsylvania, Bates, Colgate, W. and J., Richmond, Oklahoma, Texas State College for Women, Pittsburgh, Penn State, Fordham, Colby, Boston University, Davidson, Depauw, and Missouri.

Two of this year's seniors, Miss Marie Groff, and Charles Bidelspacher, have been on the varsity teams for four years. Three-year varsity debaters are Miss Guinaeth Johnston, Robert Cook, Franklin Cook, and Meyer Ginsberg. Sixteen men and six women participated in the intercollegiate debates. Arthur L. Brandon is faculty director of the teams.

DAVID BURPEE CREATES FELLOWSHIP IN GENETICS

Establishment of a continuous graduate fellowship in plant genetics at Bucknell University by David Burpee, Philadelphia, well-known flower and vegetable seed grower and Bucknell Trustee has been announced by Mr. Burpee and Dr. Homer P. Rainey, president of Bucknell.

The fellowship, which provides $500.00 a year plus tuition, will be established by Mr. Burpee primarily for the development of the scientific study of flower seeds. Candidates for the fellowship may include graduates of Bucknell or of other universities.

Although the fellowship runs continuously through several years, it has been planned to give each student working under it an opportunity to complete at least one job. Some of the tests will require six years to complete, while others will be finished in one, two, or three years.

Dr. William H. Eyster, professor of botany at Bucknell whose studies in the genetics of corn have attracted international attention, has been selected to direct the research under the Burpee Fellowship. Dr. Eyster is a former Guggenheim fellow in genetics.

B. U. VERSE AT WORLD'S FAIR

Publication of the seventh annual volume of Bucknell Verse, a collection of original poems by Bucknell students, was accompanied by the announcement that five of the poems included in the book have been selected for the manuscript volume of poetry to be exhibited at the Century of Progress Exhibition in Chicago this summer.

ALUMNI CLUB AID SOUGHT

President Homer P. Rainey has addressed a letter to the presidents of the alumni clubs in New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Harrisburg, Reading, and Trenton asking for club cooperation on the problem of new students for 1933-34.

The club officers are asked to consider an informal evening meeting to be addressed by a member of the faculty in outlining the new educational program at Bucknell. Prospective students and parents are to be invited to the meetings.

PHILADELPHIA POW-WOW

Kugler's famous restaurant on 15th Street in the City of Brotherly Love will resound to the cheers of Bucknell alumni on the evening of May 26 according to plans laid by a committee of the Alumni Club of Philadelphia and Vicinity. A special menu has been prepared and Mr. Jens F. Larsen, University Architect invited to speak. Notices for the dinner have been mailed to all members of the club. Alumni who happen to be in Philadelphia on Friday evening, May 26, are cordially invited to attend.

REGISTRATION UP

Daily reports on enrolment for the 1933 Summer Session compared to similar figures for 1932 show a decided increase in the expected registration for the six weeks of academic work from July 5 to August 15.

SERVICES OFFERED

The gratis services of The Teacher Placement Bureau are offered to alumni in executive educational positions according to a recent statement by Professor Frank G. Davis, '11, Director of the Bureau. Many Bucknell trained teachers from the past several classes graduated by the University are equipped and trained for teaching special subjects. Complete records of all graduates are maintained by the Bureau. Bucknell men and women in executive positions in the school world are urged to consult the Bureau when in need of teachers.

OFFICE VISITORS

Alumni visitors to the campus in recent weeks have dropped in at The Alumni Office for a moment's chat. Among the many visitors received recently were Carlos Alvarez, '09, Director of Railways for the Republic of Ecuador; R. A. Stoughton, '12, Architect and Engineer of Covington, Va.; Mrs. Myrtle Walkinshaw Shupe, '09, mother of two undergraduate co-eds, Virginia, '34, and Charlotte, '36, of Saltsburg, Pa.; R. L. Talbot, '13, Principal of the High School at Wilmington, Del.; R. B. Mulkie, '98, Engineer and Merchant of Union City, Pa.; J. W. Foster, '25, golf teacher of Oakmont, Pa.; John C. Koch, '23, Dean of Men at Bloomsburg State Teacher's College, Pa.; Frank Kostos, '30, Engineer of Mount Carmel, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. T. Jefferson Miers, '26, of Richmond, Va.; Dayton T. Corson, '14, Sales Engineer of Philadelphia; and Mrs. Anne Dreisbach Henderson, '10, President of the Bucknell Alumnae Club of Philadelphia and Vicinity.

KAPPA SIGMA MOTHERS CLUB

The newly organized Mothers Club of the Kappa Sigma fraternity held a book tea at the chapter house on University Avenue, Wednesday afternoon, April 5. Mrs. Albert W. Johnson is president of the Club. The Mothers Club idea is new on the Bucknell campus, though many fraternities, particularly in the middle and far west have active organizations. The major function of the Mothers Club in practically all fraternities is that of a sympathetic group of women interested in the house both from the standpoint of the Alumni and the active chapter. The membership of the club is made up of mothers of boys in the chapter and wives and mothers of alumni. The present Worthy Grand Master of the fraternity, Oliver J. Decker, '99, after visiting many of the one hundred and eight chapters of Kappa Sigma is deeply interested and endorses heartily both House Mothers and Mothers Clubs.

At the meeting the first Wednesday of April, it was decided to meet at the house the first Wednesday of each month. Dues in all the clubs are nominal, but there will be none at all for the present in the new club. Wednesday, May 3, Mrs. Oliver J. Decker entertained the club at tea in the chapter house from three until five. An invitation was extended to Kappa Sigma women from surrounding towns.

Those attending the first meeting were: Mrs. C. Arthur Lindemann, Mrs. Donald Korth, Mrs. Neal Baker, Mrs. Wm. Leiser, Mrs. A. A. Hoy, Mrs. William Windsor of Milton, Mrs. Oliver J. Decker of Williamsport, and Mrs. Symington, the house mother.

CHICAGO ALUMNI ELECTS OFFICERS

Mr. Robert J. Parmenter, '14, was elected President of The Bucknell Alumni Club of Chicago, Ill., at a recent meeting of the club. Mr. Stephen F. Dimlich, '20, was elected Secretary. The meeting was called in honor of President Homer P. Rainey who spoke at length on the new campus plans. Mr. H. W. Holter, '24, Registrar, was also in attendance. Both President and Registrar were attending meetings in Chicago at the time of the alumni dinner.

COLLEGE REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. W. W. Wilcox, '04, Mr. John Curnow, '32, and Mr. Wilmer Grulich, '32, have been employed by the University in interviewing prospective students. Mr. Wilcox, former Registrar of the College is visiting High Schools throughout the eastern section of Pennsylvania while Mr. Curnow is traveling through the anthracite region and Mr. Grulich in the western section.

EXPLORER

Warren James Hayman, '32, has recently returned to this country with the exploration expedition of Count Byron Khun de Prorok, young French nobleman, from the Mayan Jungles where the party is believed to have discovered the tomb of Guatemoc, nephew of Montezuma and last of the Aztec rulers. Hayman was geologist of the expedition.

REUNION CLASSES

"The Sixtieth"

Trustee William Cameron Walls of Lewisburg will receive the honors for his class on the occasion of the celebration of the sixtieth anniversary of graduation. Mr. John B. Cook of Philadelphia is the only other living member of this group.

"The Fifty-Fifth"

The alumni records show only three surviving members of this class which numbered thirteen at graduation fifty-five years ago. The survivors are Dr. Joseph E. Perry of Brookline, Mass., Dr. George E. Nichols of Philadelphia and Rev. W. K. Lord of Chester, Pa.

"THE FIFTIETH"

On June 27, 1883, fifteen young men received diplomas from the hand of the late David Jayne Hill, '74, then President of The University at Lewisburg. On June 3, 1933 seven of the original fifteen are invited by Bucknell University to return to the campus in celebration of their Golden Graduation Anniversary.

1888

"The Forty-Fifth"

Invitations to Reunion have been sent to all the survivors of this class by Classmate Clipman of Lewisburg. He expects to entertain at least a majority of the even dozen survivors of that day in June forty-five years ago.

"The Fortieth"

Five members of this class which numbered twelve at graduation survive. The Class Reunion will be held at Alumni Headquarters Building, Saturday afternoon, June 3, 1933.

"The Thirty-Fifth"

Class President Roy Mulkie herewith announces the first reunion of the class since 1923 when seventeen members dined together on June 9 at the Commencement week of that year.

"The Thirtieth"

This class captured honors with the best reunion in 1928 at the time of their twenty-fifth anniversary. Letters are being mailed now by a local committee composed of Professor Rhodes and Attorneys Steinger and Marsh.

1908

"The Twenty-Fifth"

Professor Paul Stolz is inviting the class to "Come Home". The reunion five years ago at The College Inn made great plans for this big "Twenty-Fifth".

"The Twentieth"

This "unlucky number" class has made several false starts toward reunions on and off schedule. Alumni Headquarters is the place this year on June 3 with Open House all day.

1918

"The Fifteenth"

There are almost enough brothers of this class living in Lewisburg to stage a reunion any time. Out-of-towners are needed to swell the crowd with wives, husbands and children.

"The Tenth"

This year will be the second attempt of '23 to stage a "Come Back". Five years ago the results were almost negligible. Hopes are higher for this year on June 3.

"The Fifth"

The first reunion! What will the harvest be? Come back and see! Recruits needed for a good turnout of the class.

"The Annual"

All brothers and sisters not members of any regular reunion will gather under the banner of "1492" at Headquarters on Saturday afternoon, June 3.

GLEE CLUB CONCERTS

The men's glee club of Bucknell University, composed of 40 students from five states, is featuring a series of concerts for high school students as part of its Spring program. The club appeared recently in the high schools of Lewisburg, Milton, Sunbury, Mt. Carmel, Williamsport, Jersey Shore, and Shamokin.

Professor Melvin W. LeMon, of the department of music at Bucknell, is director of the club, which features tenor, bass, and piano solos as a part of its regular program. Joseph Wood, Jr., son of Dr. J. R. Wood, '94, and Mrs. Eliza Bell Wood, '94, of Reading, is the pianist.

OPHTHALMOLOGIST

Dr. John S. Cregar, '27, recent graduate of Cornell Medical College, New York, N. Y., and son of Dr. P. B. Cregar, '95, of Plainfield, N. J., has been appointed junior house surgeon of ophthalmology at the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary.

LEWISBURG ALUMNAE ELECT

Officers elected recently for the ensuing year by The Lewisburg Alumnae Club are as follows: President, Miss Kathryn Glase, '25; Vice-President, Miss Elizabeth McCracken, '27; Secretary, Mrs. Christine Sterner Moyer, '28; Treasurer, Miss Jeanette Pross, M'02.

"TAKE THE FURNITURE"

The following little story from real life should be read by every alumnus of every college in America today. It is a story of TODAY.

Acknowledgement is due A. E. B. Jr.

Many thanks!—The Editor.

Dear Al—

You and our class agent have been trying to chisel contributions out of us guys for a long time. I am now writing to tell you that you're a couple of bush-leaguers. The other day _____ crashed in on me and the sales talk he gave me made your most impassioned appeal sound like a lullaby. That bird is GOOD. He had me groggy. When I came to, I was so much impressed by the experience that I called a stenographer and tried to reconstruct the fight talk _____ gave me. I enclose a copy, as nearly as I can recall it, with the suggestion that you try it out on the recalcitrant.

It all began when I said, politely but firmly, "I'm broke. I can't do a thing for Bucknell this year." What follows is _____'s reply:

"All right, brother. You're just the fellow I want to talk to. I'm perfectly ready to believe your first statement. I'm broke myself. We're all broke. So I'll take your word for that, and think none the less of you. That's the beauty of the Alumni Fund plan—you set your own figure from zero on up and we'll cheerfully accept anything or nothing, if it's what you consider right for you. But that second statement doesn't sound convincing—you 'can't do a thing for Bucknell this year.' Why, doggone you, every one of us can do something—and I don't mean money either.

"Of course, we're trying to raise money for Bucknell. Why hesitate to admit such a perfectly obvious fact? The Alumni Fund is totaled up in dollars. That's the only way it can be totaled. But there are a whale of a lot of contributions made every year that help a whole lot, although they don't show up, directly, in the dollar column. So how about contributing to Bucknell's income in another way—persuade some likely looking youngster to enter Bucknell next fall. He'll be paying his tuition and you'll be making a contribution to Bucknell's income with somebody else's money. You don't know any prospective students? Well, you do know where the high school is, don't you? How about going around there some day and getting acquainted with the principal? Tell him you can get him a swell reel of movies about Bucknell to show his pupils and maybe a speaker from the Bucknell staff to address his assembly. You don't want to do that? All right, how about volunteering to help your class agent round up some other alumni in support of the Fund? Haven't got the nerve? Well then, how about looking around a bit to try to find a job open that you could tell the Alumni Secretary about so he could pass the dope on to some other alumnus who needs work? Need a job yourself, eh? Well, that's an item for your class column in the Monthly. You certainly can write a little squib about yourself and send it to The Alumni Secretary. He'll be tickled to hear from you and so will all the fellows who read it in the Monthly. And you'll have done something for Bucknell because you've helped cement the interest of your friends and yourself.

"Now what do you say? Can you do anything for Bucknell this year or not?"

At this point our correspondent, having concluded his reconstruction of the "sales talk," ended his narrative. Our native curiosity was such, however, that we wrote him a note asking what answer he had made to the final question. Our note came back with the penciled notation:

"I gave him a check for $50 and told him to get the hell out of my office before I gave him the furniture."

MOTHERS' DAY PROGRAM

The annual Mothers' Day celebration on the Campus was held on Saturday, May 13, with Miss Fannie Wood, daughter of Thomas Wood, Esq., '05 and Mrs. Eva Stoner Wood, '05, of Muncy, and Kennard Lewis, of Philadelphia, seniors, as co-chairmen of the day's program.

Among the feature events of the occasion were the annual May Day pageant on the lower campus and the annual Interfraternity Track Meet in Memorial Stadium. The Mothers' Day banquet was served in the women's dining hall Saturday evening at 7 o'clock with Dr. Homer P. Rainey as the principal speaker. The mothers met the members of the faculty and administration at an informal reception in Hunt Hall at 9:30 o'clock Saturday evening.

Parents who arrived on the campus Friday enjoyed the Cap and Dagger play, "The Queen's Husband," a sophisticated comedy by Robert Sherwood, presented in the Lewisburg High School that evening.

LOWELL THOMAS ON CAMPUS

Among recent prominent campus visitors Lowell Thomas, radio newscaster, attracted wide attention. He appeared as the closing feature of the Bucknell Artist's Course program. Mr. Thomas was entertained at the Kappa Sigma Fraternity House by the members of the chapter and prominent alumni, including Trustee Oliver J. Decker, Esq., '99, of Williamsport, National President of the Fraternity. Mr. Thomas is a member of the Denver University Chapter of Kappa Sigma.

PROFESSOR HONORED

Dr. Paul W. Gates, assistant professor of history at Bucknell has been awarded a fellowship by the Social Science Research Council for research study in 1933-34. He is one of a group of 19 professors from the leading universities in the country who will receive fellowships from the Council for next year. He expects to secure a one-year leave of absence from Bucknell and will study at Brookings Institute in Washington.

BUCKNELL ALUMNI MONTHLY

Your Help

In bringing Bucknell to the attention of prospective college students will be appreciated. The Registrar needs your assistance--the youngsters will thank you for your thought of them.

THE cover design is made from a photo taken from the roof of East College. The camera was pointed across the new campus toward the stadium which appears in the background. To the right center of the photo will rise the new buildings planned for the greater Bucknell.

COMMENCEMENT was a great success and we have never seen so many young alumni on the campus at any previous affair. Everyone had a fine time and Saturday was a red letter alumni day — you folks who missed it this year should plan ahead to be with us next year.

THE Corporation Dinner which closes the Commencement Program was in the nature of an experiment this year with an admission price charged for the first time. More than one hundred and fifty guests were present at the dinner to hear the honorary degree folks say "Thank You" to Bucknell.

DR. GILBERT PEREZ, '07, responded to his introduction by Dr. Leo Rockwell at the dinner with a most interesting informal talk about his work in the Philippines and expressed the thought that the degree Bucknell had given him was meant also for the hundreds of teachers from this country who had gone to the islands to make a new nation.

MORE alumni gave money to the alumni fund this year (depression?) than last year or the year before. Although the average gift was slightly smaller it is proof of the soundness of the fund principle when the number of donors increases each year.

PRESIDENT and Mrs. Rainey were welcome guests at Alumni Day festivities. They were adopted by the '13 gang and everyone was glad to meet them. We wish to acknowledge here, as well as officially in another column, the gift of Mildred Collins Rainey (Mrs. Homer Price) to the Alumni Fund.

IT is not too early for class officers to get busy on reunions for 1934. That means all classes with numerals ending in four or nine! 1924 is already working with a steering committee looking to next June.

BUCKNELL ventures into a new field with the Junior College at Wilkes-Barre. It will be a boon to the community and help to spread the fair name of old Bucknell. From all reports the new college is meeting with an excellent reception and more students than had been anticipated are registering for the first year of college work.

THIS number of the magazine brings to a close volume seventeen and terminates the record of the academic year 1932-33. We have enjoyed no end the various comments of our readers and bow humbly with profound thanks for the compliments that have reached us on the magazine work. It is only one part of the varied and far reaching efforts of the alumni organization. With a continuing high reader interest we shall go still further in the publishing of a fine magazine for Bucknellians! See you all in the Fall!

EDITORIAL

THE second consecutive week-end Commencement program surpassed in interest and attendance any Commencement of the past ten years. The three days of celebration, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, June 3, 4, and 5, were marked by well planned and enthusiastically received events. Alumni attendance on Saturday reached a new high in alumni office records with more than two hundred registrants. From many viewpoints the eighty-third annual Commencement of Bucknell University was outstanding.

Alumni visitors were received at Alumni Headquarters beginning Friday afternoon. Interest was unusually high in Class Reunions. Attendance figures at the various lunches and dinners showed the forty-five year class, 1888, with the largest percentage of members present. Refreshments were served the visitors to Alumni Headquarters from two to four Saturday afternoon by the members of the faculty of the Department of Music. Fraternity banquets Saturday evening were well attended and an enthusiastic audience enjoyed Cap and Dagger's presentation of "The Queen's Husband."

President Rainey challenged the graduates with a strong baccalaureate sermon Sunday morning. The Lewisburg Baptist Church was crowded with parents and alumni and the hooded and gowned members of faculty and graduating class. The symphony concert Sunday afternoon on the Women's Campus was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience that in former years gathered at the twilight band concerts. The oratorio Sunday evening completed a fine Sunday program, marked with dignity and beauty.

One of the most impressive ceremonies of recent years on the campus was held as a part of the President's Reception Monday afternoon when Walter L. Hill, Esq., '98, of Scranton, presented to the University a portrait of his father, the late Dr. David Jayne Hill, '74, former president of The University at Lewisburg and world renowned diplomat.

The Commencement exercises, the tenth consecutive outdoor program, were threatened by overhanging clouds but unmarred by any rain. The impending storm broke more than an hour after the close of the exercises and just after all the dinner guests had assembled within the protection of the Dining Hall.

Dean Kenneth B. Murdock of Harvard College delivered the address from the commencement platform to the graduates assembled under the oaks in front of Hunt Hall. The speaker stressed the cultural benefits of education and admonished the graduates to consider Commencement as the beginning of true education and not the end of it. President Rainey awarded degrees to one hundred and eighty seniors, twelve post graduates, and one professional. These with the four honorary degrees conferred brought the total to one hundred and ninety-seven.

The annual Corporation Dinner in the Dining Hall attracted some one hundred and fifty guests. President Rainey presided and introduced the various after dinner speakers. The evening and the Commencement program were officially terminated by the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

APOLOGIA

IN the preceding number of this publication a letter to the Class of 1922 was published over the signature of Dr. W. N. Lowry. A mistake occurred in the typesetting which made quite a difference as the word thousands was used where hundreds had been intended. The class fund referred to was audited in regular form and found correct. We are sorry for the mistake that might have caused some questions in the minds of members of 1922 and make due and humble apology for a purely mechanical error. May the Class of 1922 by their gifts to the class fund rectify our unintentional error (probably caused by optimism) and swell the fund from "hundreds" to "Thousands".

THE HILL PORTRAIT

ONE of the finest gifts received by Bucknell in recent years was presented at Commencement time by Walter Liddell Hill, Esq., '98, of Scranton when he gave a portrait of his father, the late Dr. David Jayne Hill, '74, former President of the University at Lewisburg, and world renowned diplomat.

The portrait completes the collection of past presidents of the University. It is hoped that in the new campus development plan ample provision will be made for the appropriate hanging of the valuable portraits of all of the former presidents of Bucknell.

THE Class Gift from the graduating Class of 1933 to the Alumni Fund was a lovely gesture to the less fortunate members of the class who were financially embarrassed and unable to pay college bills. The money from this class fund which amounts to more than twelve hundred dollars was loaned to classmates on the Alumni Fund Senior Loan Plan established by the Class of 1931. Both 1931 and 1932 set the example for 1933 and the new alumni class followed through handsomely. The class gift credits every individual member of the group with a gift to the alumni fund and invests the class money in a great cause. The alumni salute you members of 1933 and bid you welcome as members of the finest alumni group in the world — all Bucknellians!

OLD MAIN

Just as the Monthly goes to press, we learn that a decision has been made to preserve Old Main. The plans call for erecting a temporary roof over the whole structure, and remodelling the wings into modern dormitories. The central section of the building will be converted into a Student Union.

Contracts for the construction of the first building of the Literature group were signed on June 23rd. Work on these two building projects will be started at once.

"The Challenge of The New Era"

Baccalaureate Sermon by President Rainey

"IF the next generation of the world does not go Communistic or Nazi, it will only be because the youths of America and the rest of the world can offer the world a more vital and satisfactory substitute for Communism and Nazism," warned President Homer Price Rainey in his Baccalaureate sermon to the senior class on Sunday morning, June 4.

Speaking on the topic "The Challenge of the New Era," Dr. Rainey outlined a five point platform or program for a "real Christian youth movement for the next generation." He stressed the fact that America, as a nation, moves by a series of impulses. Today we have reached the bottom or lowest point of force in the most recent propelling motive. It is with regard to what comes next that the Bucknell executive outlined his program to the assembled graduates.

"There Was No King"

The President took for his text the last verse of the Book of Judges: "In those days there was no king in Israel; every man did that which was right in his own eyes."

Because we have no one to command, because we are without a spiritual power, chaos reigns over mankind, Dr. Rainey pointed out as the situation in the world at the present time. "All imperatives, all commands, all standards, even the gold standard, are in a state of suspension. Life today is in a period of interregnum—an empty space between two periods—that which was, and that which is to be."

Scorning those who would lie idle, awaiting improvement of its own volition, President Rainey said, "This is no time to look backward. An old era is passing and a new one is struggling to be born. This is no time to lie on our beds and dream dreams, and to speak in platitudes and to sound old shibboleths. A whole social order is crumbling before our eyes." Because of this crumbling, America has become disorientated. The man of this country is undergoing this process of disorientation because "he no longer knows by what star he is to guide his life."

"The Old Order Passeth"

Painting the picture of the utter confusion that is about us, he said, "Let us be specific. Consider the battle that is waging over capitalism. Only a short decade ago it was little short of high treason to question the sacredness of the capitalistic system. Today it is being challenged in every quarter and the mass of men are not so sure as they were ten years ago that the traditional system of capitalism is the best type of economic organization. Consider the present upheaval in the governmental systems of the world. Fifteen years ago no one believed that the present dictatorships in Russia, Italy, and Germany could be possible. And certainly in our own country no one dared question the eternal rightness of democracy. Think of what we have witnessed from Washington in the last two months. We believe what has happened only because we have seen it with our own eyes. Consider again the collapse of moral standards and the present conflict over moral values. Go into any modern art gallery and experience the shock that awaits you. Talk with almost anyone you meet who will discuss religion and theology honestly, and observe the vagueness of their religious concepts, and the instability of their faith."

Need a "Vital Sensibility"

Having established the fact that we are entering a new era, President Rainey next emphasized the need for a new "vital sensibility." "Our world needs a new vital sensibility," he declared. "The time demands a new concept—a new motive—as vital, dynamic, and revolutionary as that provided by Martin Luther in order that the creative powers of this generation may be released. The supreme challenge to this generation of youths is to find that new vital sensibility and to interpret it in such definite and concrete terms that it may be understood by the masses of the population."

In discussing the factors comprising the new challenge, Dr. Rainey pointed out the realization of responsibility, the discovery of the vital sensibility, international understanding and cooperation, and the need for a new concept of religion as the points of greatest importance.

"... live as Christ lived," implored President Rainey. "A serious and sincere attempt on our part to live as He lived will turn the world upside down. Such an attempt will provide the greatest vital sensibility that any society has ever experienced. It will provide a revolutionary impulse of tremendous proportions. Christ, Himself, was the greatest revolutionist the world has ever known. Dare we live as He lived? Dare we love as He loved? Dare we forgive as He forgave? Dare we go the second mile? Dare we resist not evil? Dare we love our neighbors as ourselves? Dare we place the supreme worth of the individual above all other values? Such courage to live is the vital sensibility that this generation so sorely needs."

Program for Next Generation

"In conclusion," President Rainey said, "I venture to submit a program or platform for a real Christian youth movement for the next generation. It would include the following:

"1. We believe in the God revealed by Jesus. We propose to follow the leadership of Jesus in discovering for ourselves the true nature and purpose of God. We demand a religion that is vital, positive, and dynamic. We do not believe in a religion of negations. We believe that religion is a vital area of human experiences, and we propose to explore that field in a positive, dynamic, and creative way in an honest and intelligent search for its spiritual values. We believe that there are positive laws of spiritual growth—that these laws have been fully detailed for us in the life and teachings of Jesus—that we will build up our own religious creed out of the tested experiences that come to us as a result of a practical application of these laws of creative living.

The 1933 Commencement Exercises

"2. We believe in the supreme worth of the individual. The greatest value in the world is a human life—a living personality, created in the image of God and destined for immortality. We will, therefore, strive to create a society in which the supreme worth of the individual shall be given chief concern. We will not sponsor and support a social and economic system which corrupts and degrades men.

"3. Believing as we do in the supreme worth of the individual, we believe that all racial and national barriers should be obliterated, and that we should strive for a world society in which the principles of Christian ethics will be the basis of all laws and government. We will not fight nor murder our fellowmen. We will seek by pacific means only to settle our differences. We will not resort to violence. We will follow the principle of love, and when that fails we will suffer humiliation rather than forsake it.

"4. We propose to inaugurate the principles of Christian ethics and morality into our citizenship. . .

"5. We demand an educational program that will provide for the fullest type of self-realization, and one that places the ennoblement and enrichment of life above all other values"

HARVARD DEAN ADDRESSES 1933

ENTOLLING the ability "to think straight" in order that the graduate may have "the chance to make Commencement really Commencement, to begin education, not end it, on leaving college," Dr. Kenneth B. Murdock, dean of the faculty of arts and sciences at Harvard University, delivered the principal address to 180 Bucknell seniors at the eighty-third annual Commencement exercises recently.

"Let's begin by asking what Commencement is," Dean Murdock suggested. ". . . Commencement must be for anyone who is alive at all, the beginning of something—the beginning of trouble, of mature life, of a career—of anything you like. The point I should like to make is that Commencement is first the beginning of a testing of your college work which will go on throughout your lives and be a testing far more rigid than any examinations you have found in college."

"Education is something too great ever to be accomplished in school or college; the educated men I know are those who have learned more than any school or college teaches; who have lived as well as studied; who have taken the material and tools given them in college and have then for themselves carved an education out of life. You will be spoken of, because you have taken a degree, as educated; if you believe that, I am sure your education does not deserve its name," Dean Murdock warned.

Deploring the fact that yearly the number of college graduates increase, yet apparently the number of men who are "doing good for society" does not greatly increase in proportion to the alleged advances in the machinery of education. Dr. Murdock said, "The colleges, therefore, need to justify themselves if their grants from public funds or their gifts from private donors are to continue, if students are to go on paying tuition fees for the privilege of attending them. There could be no better justification than for their graduates to prove in their lives what the colleges have given them."

". . . The task of the college graduate who wants to profit by college and at the same time to have it profit through him is the task of learning how to use what it offers. And that task, it seems to me, involves first of all learning how to think."

Warning against the adoption of the plans urged by some who believe that professional training should be begun in colleges, Dean Murdock stated "The difficulty is obvious the moment it is thought about. No science worth knowing about, no educational theory, no political system is proof against change and no one has devised, and no one will devise, ways of giving knowledge in college which will, just as knowledge, help much as soon as new knowledge replaces it."

The always-popular topic, that of brilliance in college meaning brilliance in after-life, was brought to the senior's attention with these words: "And I think the relation between good work in college and good work later is as close as it is, simply because good work in college tends at least to indicate ability to think—and it is ability to think straight which gives one the chance to make Commencement really Commencement, to begin education, not to end it, on leaving college."

PRESENTED TO BUCKNELL

The feature event of The President's Reception Monday afternoon in Hunt Hall was the presentation to Bucknell of a portrait of the late David Jayne Hill, '74, former president of the University at Lewisburg by his son Walter L. Hill, Esq., '98, of Scranton. The event was marked with dignity and simplicity and was witnessed by the more than one hundred guests at the reception.

Mr. Walter Hill was introduced by President Rainey as the donor of the portrait. Mr. Hill in his presentation remarks expressed the thought that his gift of the picture of his father to Bucknell was in the manner of a "homecoming" as Dr. Hill had loved Bucknell and Lewisburg. Mr. Hill also expressed the hope that future generations could look through the canvas to see the moral height of the man, and that the picture would ever be an inspiration to the youth of each generation, and that they might adopt the high ideals which he epitomized.

President Rainey then called upon Dr. C. A. Soars, '88, a member of the last class to graduate from the old University under Dr. Hill's presidency. Dr. Soars spoke eloquently in his prayer of the great stature of Dr. Hill as a leader and Christian gentleman and invoked blessings upon Bucknell in the years to come.

The portrait was then unveiled by three-year-old Walter L. Hill, III, great grandson of Dr. Hill, and son of Walter L. Hill, Esq., '23, also of Scranton.

The assemblage then viewed the portrait, a three-quarter length study of Dr. Hill, painted at the time of his ambassadorship to the Netherlands by Anders Zorn, the famous Swedish artist. The picture is a copy of the original that hangs in the Corcoran Gallery at Washington, D. C.

ALUMNAE MEETING

One of the features of the Bucknell Commencement program was the reunion and luncheon of the alumnae, including the graduates of the old Institute, the first of the units for women's training at what used to be the University at Lewisburg.

One hundred and one women, probably the largest number ever to attend, were present at the luncheon. Distinguished among the number was one graduate of the class of 1863, Mrs. Martha Meixel Wolfe of Lewisburg. One member of the class of 1873, Ella Hallowell Sagebeer, also returned. The fifty year class had an especially interesting reunion with five of the eleven living members present.

The class of '83 was in the Institute when the late David Jayne Hill was President, and was the first to receive the diploma without the word "female" engraved on it. The five who were present at Commencement are Mrs. Anna Lowry, Scranton; Mrs. Laura Baker Everett, Pittsburgh (Bellwood); Mrs. Jennie McLaughlin Follmer, Lewisburg; Mrs. Katherine Dill Brown, Wilmington, Delaware; and Dr. Ruth Tustin, Bloomsburg.

FOUR HONORARY DEGREES

BUCKNELL conferred honorary degrees upon four outstanding people in as many fields of endeavor at the 1933 Commencement. The recipients represented cultural education, vocational education, medicine and the ministry.

Dr. Kenneth B. Murdock is one of the youngest college administrators in the country. Not quite 38 years old, he has already made an enviable name for himself in the academic world. He received his Bachelor of Arts degree from Harvard in 1916, and from 1919 to 1922 he was Assistant Dean of Harvard. He spent the years from 1923 to 1926 as an instructor in English at his Alma Mater. He was an assistant professor from 1926 to 1930, an associate professor from 1930 to 1931, and last year was appointed Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences. Dr. Murdock has received an A.M. and a Ph.D. from Harvard, an Litt.D. from Middlebury College, and an L.H.D. from Trinity College. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and also belongs to numerous other educational groups.

He was presented by Professor W. H. Coleman for his degree as follows:

Kenneth Ballard Murdock of Boston and Harvard, identified since his graduation with that ancient seat of learning—for a considerable period as a member of the Department of English and more recently as Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences; biographer of Increase Mather, foremost American Puritan; editor of and contributor to learned periodicals; a brilliant scholar, a capable administrator, a true humanist, he is a typical representative of the aristocratic New England academic tradition adapting itself to the educational aims of an ever-widening democracy. In recognition of the qualities he so well exemplifies, Kenneth Ballard Murdock is recommended for the degree of Doctor of Laws.

Gilbert S. Perez, '07, has spent most of his life since graduation in the Philippine Islands where he has contributed much to bettering educational conditions there. Perez took graduate work at the University of Chicago for two years, but since 1909 has been actively engaged with the Bureau of Education of the Philippine Islands. His first position was that of a supervising principal. In 1913, he became Industrial Supervisor of the Province

Philippines by his ability as an organizer and also writing a number of useful books.

He was presented by Dr. L. L. Rockwell as follows:

Gilbert Somers Perez of Manila; one of the educational pioneers of the Philippine Islands, who has devoted almost a quarter of a century to the cultural advancement of the Filipino race; Superintendent of Vocational Education for the Islands which thirty-five years ago passed from the dominion of old Spain to the enlightened protectorship of the young Republic of the West; wielder of a versatile pen from which have come numerous monographs on education, a study of the Danish folk schools, and a volume of Oriental poems; a specialist in numismatics. In token of his professional achievements, his cultural interests, and his humanitarian services, Gilbert Somers Perez is cited for the honorary degree of Doctor of Pedagogy.

Dr. Mary M. Wolfe is perhaps one of Bucknell's best known alumnae. After her graduation here in 1896, Dr. Wolfe studied at the University of Michigan where she received her M.D. in 1899. The following year she was given her license to practice medicine in Pennsylvania. From 1901 to 1909, Dr. Wolfe was chief physician of the Women's Department of the Norris-town State Hospital. In 1913 she was appointed to the Board of Trustees of the institution now known as "The Laurelton State Village."

She became secretary of the Board in 1914, and the following year was chosen as Superintendent of the institution. During her 18 years as superintendent, Dr. Wolfe has built up the institution, until today it represents an investment of $1,500,000, caring for 660 beneficiaries in residence and 75 on parole. The village today is ranked as one of the leading institutions of its kind in America.

She was presented by Dr. Mary Harris as follows:

Mary Moore Wolfe, M.D., eminent daughter of Bucknell—graduate of the University and a relative of its founder; since 1915, Superintendent of "Laurelton State Village," one of the notable institutions of its type in this country; American delegate to the International Congress of Mental and Nervous Diseases; in vision and resourcefulness, in professional skill and administrative capacity an honor to her sex; in an age of specialists she has taken a liberal attitude toward the important problems to which she has dedicated herself. Because of her inherent breadth of outlook and her constructive contribution to human welfare, she is recommended for the degree of Doctor of Science.

Dr. Mary M. Wolfe, '96

his present position. He has supervision over the activities of 800 Baptist churches with a combined membership of 200,000 and 780 ministers in service.

He was presented by Professor C. M. Bond as follows:

Burton Clauson Barrett of Philadelphia; minister of the Gospel, who has attracted the attention of the Baptists of our Commonwealth by his human qualities, his personal initiative, and his spiritual statesmanship; terse and cogent preacher; builder of churches; recently chosen Executive Secretary of the Pennsylvania Baptist Convention. Because religion and education have gone together since the earliest days of the Republic, this University—a citadel of truth—ever mindful of the power of high ideals and ever eager to honor individuals whose lives are guided by the principles of truth and justice, recommends Burton Clauson Barrett for the degree of Doctor of Divinity.

ALUMNI SOLOISTS IN ORATORIO

Mendelssohn's "St. Paul Oratorio" was presented by the department of music at the Baptist Church Sunday night, June 3, with Professor Paul G. Stolz '08, as conductor.

The program included several solo selections and the rendition of other numbers by the mixed chorus and Glee Club of Bucknell and the Choral Society of Dickinson Seminary. Dr. Homer P. Rainey pronounced both the invocation and the benediction.

Four alumni were selected to sing the solo parts in the oratorio. They were:

Marion Campbell Wilcox '24, soprano; Carolyn Hunt Mahaffey '25, alto; Stephen Fraley Puff '17, tenor; Albert Weidensaul '29, bass.

Chorus: Mixed Chorus and Glee Club of Bucknell; Choral Society of Dickinson Seminary; Organist: Melvin Le Mon; Pianists: Ruth Hlavaty and Harold Richey; Conductor: Professor Paul G. Stolz; Coach of mixed chorus: Grace Jenkins.

SATURDAY SCORES AGAIN

ALUMNI DAY on Saturday rallied a good crowd in 1932 and a better one in 1933. This year the permanence of Saturday as Alumni Day of Commencement Week with the program built around that day was assured. More than two hundred alumni registered at Headquarters — a better record than at any time in the past twelve years.

79 NEW GREEKS

Fourteen of the social fraternities initiated 79 pledges into active membership over the past weekend. The number of initiates is small compared with other years. Three fraternities, Beta Kappa, Phi Lambda Theta, and Delta Kappa Phi, did not hold initiation; 3 more initiated only 2; most of the others initiated only about five; while only two, Phi Kappa Psi and Sigma Chi, received more than ten new men into membership. Of the 79 men initiated, 77 were freshmen, and two were sophomores.

ALUMNI LOAN FUNDS

GROW WITH 1933 GIFT

A gift of more than twelve hundred dollars from the Class of 1933 spelled success for the Alumni Fund of 1933 and enabled some twenty-four seniors to graduate with their class. The class memorial funds were voted to The Alumni Fund as a part of the Loan Plan. The action of the Class of 1933 follows that of the two preceding graduating groups.

Alumni contributions were received during the year in small amounts to a total of more than two thousand dollars from more than five hundred alumni. The Alumni Secretary reported to the General Alumni meeting on the comparison of the present report and the report of the previous year. While the actual cash received was a few hundred dollars less this year than last the number of alumni contributing was some twenty per cent larger than for any previous year.

The report of the Treasurer, Mr. D. L. Ranck, '16, is presented herewith:

1883

TWO of the seven living members of 1883, the golden anniversary class, met on the campus after fifty years of separation. They were Dr. Wm. G. Watkins of Scranton and Mr. Charles Stein of Lewisburg. Their reunion at Alumni Headquarters Saturday afternoon was devoted to the reading of letters from classmates. Several of the letters received by President Rainey in reply to his invitation to attend Commencement are printed herewith:

Lancaster, Texas.

Dear President Rainey:

Your very kind invitation just at hand. I surely thank you. It would delight both wife and myself to be present at the coming commencement. It has been a long time since either of us has been on the dear old campus. Delightful memories cling to the place.

I would be glad to see again the members of '83 yet living, only one of whom I've seen since 1896. My work has been so far away that visits to Bucknell have been impossible. However, the school has been much in my thoughts.

Then it would be fine to meet and greet our new President. Living as I do in Texas, it is fine to think that my State has contributed a President to Alma Mater. It has not only been my lot to be far away from Bucknell, but I have not been near enough to other colleges, except Grand Island, in Nebraska. She graciously conferred an Hon. D.D. upon me in 1911.

I am glad to send most cordial greetings to the alumni as they meet in happy fellowship this commencement. May their highest purposes and plans for the school be more than realized. How I wish I could help — we certainly wish for you the very best possible in your great work at Bucknell.

Very cordially yours,

Wm. J. Coulston,
South Wellfleet,
Cape Cod, Mass.

Dear Dr. Rainey:

Your gracious letter of invitation, with its hospitable offer of entertainment, reached me while I was in process of packing for our summer home. I thank you heartily, but I regret to write that it seems altogether improbable that I can accept the invitation and enjoy the reunion of our class after these fifty years.

I have not been in Lewisburg for more than 20 years. I fear my interest had waned; but that is not my reason for my failure to return on this occasion. Frankly I could not afford the travel expense, which is considerable from this far-distant place, not to mention other difficulties.

By way of greeting I venture the enclosed alumni song. If you think it worth while, use it. If not forget it and me.

I am now a young man of only 74 years and headed for 90 years. Have preached 54 years and taught philosophy and systematic theology to younger preachers for 21 years. I have served, with modesty I hope, in many responsible positions in those years and am still able and ready for more. I quote from our Class Song — "But life is all before us, We sing our song of glee, With a merry laugh and pledge ourselves to dear old '83."

Dr. Wm. Watkins and Mr. Chas. Stein

Again thanking you heartily, I remain, with wishes and prayer for great success to your administration,
Yours very cordially
Spenser B. Meeser, (D.D. Brown '01).

"THE BUCKNELL BROTHERHOOD"

May be sung to the tune

"Materna" — "America The Beautiful"

O! Alma Mater, Mother mine,
How sweet the memory
Of those blest years together spent
In gracious amity.
O! Mother mine, O! Mother mine,
We never can forget
Thy timely toil brought wisdom's wealth
And joys without regret.
O! Mother mine, to Thee we owe,
And to thy diligence,
That we were given vision clear
Of life's munificence;
The good, the true, the beautiful,
To seek with eager heart,
And honor hold with constancy,
In forum, field or mart.
O! Mother mine, nor waifs are we,
But children of thy mind,
By Thee were born, from Thee went forth
In service of our kind;
To glorify thy skill and fame
For Thee win world applause,
To make thy name a talisman,
For every worthy cause.
O! Mother mine, we come once more,
To greet Thee with our gains
To hail thy mastery of men
And honor all thy claims;
To shout with zeal "Bucknell o'er all",
For us the great and good,
To pledge ourselves, now each to each,
The Bucknell Brotherhood.

By DR. WILLIAM VAN VALSAH HAYES

THE 45th anniversary reunion of the Class of '88 took place on the afternoon of June third. All the living members of the class except four took dinner together at the Manufacturer's Club, Milton. The wives or daughters of a number of the men were also present. All took pleasure in learning what the other men had been doing. The record was creditable. All had been rendering real service to their fellowmen in a Christian spirit worthy of Bucknell.

Dr. David Jayne Hill, for whom the class of '88—the last to graduate under his administration, had a peculiar regard and affection was spoken of with much feeling. His passing away was felt as a great personal loss to all of the group. A resolution was carried that our sympathy should be expressed to his family.

Dr. C. A. "Dad" Soars was elected Class Agent for the Class on the Alumni Fund and continued as Class President. Rev. W. H. Clipman was also continued as Class Secretary.

The meeting adjourned after deciding to endeavor to come together again in five years.

Those present:

The thirtieth reunion of the famous class of 1903 was held at the Lewisburg Club on Saturday afternoon June 3. Ten members of the class were present, some with families. In the absence of the president, Professor Walter K. Rhodes, through illness, Attorney Cloyd Steininger presided at the meeting and read letters from the following classmates.

J. Fred Sigel in London, John Young in Bridgeport, Conn., Mrs. Elvie Coleman Herpel in McKeesport, R. E. Carringer in Mt. Vernon, Indiana, Miss Ida Luchsinger in West Pittston, Rev. M. F. Forbell in Sunbury, S. A. Hart in Hicksville, N. Y., John B. Cook in Saxton's River, Vt., Rev. Roger Williams in Greensburg, and Irvin Bartholomew in Nyassa, Oregon.

Those present were Attorneys Reese H. Harris, Cloyd Steininger, and William N. C. Marsh, Mr. J. F. Bond, Mr. W. B. Kester, Miss Emily Ebling, Miss Hannah Goodman, Miss Charlotte Shields, Mrs. Grace Roberts Snyder, and Dr. Harry Mauser.

25TH REUNION, CLASS OF 1908

By CARL SPROUT

THE Class of 1908, as the phrase goes, has "rounded out" a quarter century, and how! Those back for the 25th reunion at Lewisburg on Saturday, June 3, saw the roundest bunch of boys in Bucknell history.

1891
Mr. Judson Hyatt and Dr. A. Lincoln Moore

1908

Take the class president, the Rev. Winfield S. Booth, for example. You called him "Buster" twenty-five years ago, little realizing the name would ever refer to vest buttons. Take any of a dozen others, who looked scrawny even in cap and gown along about the Ides of June in 1908. It's a safe bet that those who returned for the reunion weighed more than the whole class did, diplomas and all, at their commencement.

With this impressionistic picture of those present, let's get on with the story of the reunion.

Some forty, including wives, husbands and families of classmates, were there for the luncheon at Lewisburg Inn and an hour or so of reminiscent chat afterward at the home of the class secretary, Paul G. Stolz and Mrs. Stolz, where a photographer, using a wide-angle lens, was able to get the group of expanded girths all in one picture, including Posey Hayes's smile.

At the luncheon, the roll call brought sketchy reviews of the quarter century. Most of the boasting was about families, very little about degrees in philosophy, size of income taxes paid or refunded, big jobs held or turned down.

Nearly every one in the group had a kodak picture or two, to be brought out, quite nonchalantly, of course, and passed around to be admired, pictures of the second generation.

It was as much a family reunion as a class reunion. For example, Horace King, whom everyone wanted to tell about his success in law which enabled him to build a mansion along the river in Harrisburg almost as big as Buckingham Palace, preferred to tell about his family of five boys and a girl.

Aelfric James's boast was not his progress in teaching young Eastonians, but his family which comes within one of tying King for class honors.

Walter Noll did not talk so much about teaching in Newark as about his family tour of America by automobile last summer.

They also bragged about their wives. Chaplain Reuben Shrum might have recited his experiences here and there with Uncle Sam's Navy; his brief speech was taken up in introducing to his classmates his charming bride from California. Mrs. Shrum responded with the announcement that she has taken Rube "out of circulation."

Other high lights of the luncheon speeches were Joe Shultz's dream of an Alumni House on the Bucknell campus; Joe Henderson's vision of the Commons System at the college; Coxey Thompson's declaration that he is NOT in politics; Grace Royer Maclay and her Franklin and Marshall husband, announcing some Maclay youths ready for either Bucknell or Franklin and Marshall and may the best woman win; Margaret Pangburn Mathias introducing three manly sons; Clyde Hostetter, president of the American Ceramic Society or some such honor, referring to himself as a "glassblower."

After the roll of those present, those absent were referred to by those fortunate enough to know their stories and their successes. Helen Tiffany Blakemore took the honors in this phase of the reunion by supplying information on at least ten girls in the class.

The roll call was answered in person by the following:

The Rev. Winfield S. Booth, of Newark, N. J., in Baptist church work. Mrs. Booth and Winfield Scott Booth, Jr., attended the luncheon with him.

Joseph W. Henderson, Philadelphia lawyer. Mrs. Henderson was also a guest at the luncheon.

Dr. M. E. Sayre, Reedsville, Pa., physician, accompanied at the reunion by Mrs. Sayre.

H. C. (Coxey the 2nd) Thompson, who announced that he was selling sand and gravel, resident of Beaver Falls, Pa. Mrs. Thompson and their niece, Miss Ruth Taggart, accompanied him.

Chaplain Reuben W. Shrum, United States Navy, now stationed with the Coast Guard at New London, Conn. His bride returned with him for the reunion.

Helen Tiffany Blakemore, of the Reading schools faculty, was present with two of her children, Billy and Jeanne.

Joseph R. Shultz, with the Metropolitan Insurance Company, at Trenton, N. J., attended with Mrs. Shultz.

Paul G. Stolz, of the Bucknell School of Music, attended the luncheon with his daughter, Anna Louise Stolz.

Margaret Pangburn Mathias, teacher and dean in the Lewisburg High School.

Grace Royer Maclay, of Belleville, Pa., attended with her husband, Robert Maclay.

James Fuller Hayes came up from Washington where he is affiliated with the United States Department of Agriculture.

Horace B. King, Harrisburg lawyer, returned with Mrs. King and their oldest son, Horace, Jr., a student at Bucknell, also was a guest at the reunion.

Carl Sprout, in newspaper work at Harrisburg, attended the luncheon with Mrs. Sprout.

Aelfric James, in public school work at Easton, Pa., was another guest.

Walter L. Noll, teaching at Newark, N. J., was there.

J. Clyde Hostetter, chemist with the Corning Glass Works at Corning, N. Y., received congratulations of his classmates on fame in his field.

Edward R. Innes, in business at Canton, Pa., and Charles Nicely, in business at Watsontown, Pa.; John B. Boyer, assistant superintendent of Northumberland county schools, resident of Herndon, Pa., completed the roll of those who returned for the reunion.

Two other guests were Leo Rockwell, of the Class of 1907, and Gilbert Perez, also of 1907, who came from an important post in Philippines education to accept honors from Bucknell at commencement.

Word from absent members of the class, some news direct, other indirect, kept interest at high pitch for more than an hour. A letter from Chester P. Higby located him as professor of modern European history at the University of Wisconsin. Regrets at their absence came from David H. Binns, Charles (Zeke) Baldwin, George W. Webster, Alice M. Clarkson, and others.

Booth was re-elected president, Stolz, secretary of the class. Ed Innes and Joe Henderson also were elected something or other; they'll probably write and tell you all about it.

By MRS. GRACE SLIFER DRUM

THE class of '98 held a luncheon in honor of its thirty-fifth anniversary in Lewisburg, June fifth at the Lewisburg Inn. Twelve sat down to the table, and enjoyed exchanging news about ourselves and the absentees, and also enjoyed hearing, especially from our host, Drew Leiser, amusing recollections of college days, nay even of days in the old Academy. It was pleasant to foregather with former classmates but there was an undercurrent of sadness because of the recent loss of one of our number, Benjamin F. Thomas, whose great desire it had been to have this reunion on his lawn.

Before adjournment, J. Elmer Saul, of Norristown, offered, if the members of the class would send him a brief history of their years since graduation day, to print these histories in one pamphlet and mail a copy to each member free of charge.

Plans were made for a reunion five years hence, and R. B. Mulkie, Mary Chambers Flint, and Grace Slifer Drum appointed as a committee in charge of same.

It was a pleasure to have Walter Hill, now a Scranton lawyer—"member of the bar, if you please"—with us, but he had to leave early as he was that day presenting a portrait of his father, Dr. David Jayne Hill, a former president of the University, to be hung in the living room of Hunt Hall, and the unveiling ceremony with its words of presentation from him was now due.

At the luncheon one of our class sisters was heard to say enthusiastically "I've enjoyed every minute since I've been here," which is the way we hope all of those who returned for Commencement feel.

"BLAZE OF GLORY"

George Vetter, erstwhile captain of the the Bison nine wrote finis to an active athletic career in a glorious manner in the eleventh inning of the Bucknell-Army diamond encounter on June 3 at West Point when, with the score knotted at 6 all, two out, and Joe Reznichak perched on third base, he smashed one of Ken Field's offerings to deep left center for the circuit. The Cadets came back with one in their half of the eleventh, but the game ended with the Bisons holding an 8-7 advantage.

Red "Fire Chief" hats with the class numerals pasted thereon featured the reunion of 1913. The sub-committee of the class met Friday night and Saturday the whole gang took over most of Alumni Headquarters Building for the class get-together. Attorney Howard V. Fisher of Reading, Pa., kept things on the jump and supplied the red hats for the first class costume in recent years. M. B. Glover of Vineland, N. J., John D. W. Fetter of Ithaca, N. Y., Chas. A. Fryling of Sunbury, Sterling Post of Northumberland, C. E. Phillips of Shillington, Berkeley V. Hastings of Milton, and James F. McClure and Harold A. Shaffer of Lewisburg made up the crowd.

More than a score of the ten year class gathered for the free ice cream on Saturday afternoon. The girls took the lead in numbers with only a few of the fellows on hand. No formal reunion was held but everyone had a good time trying to remember names after the long stretch of half a score of years.

OFFICERS RE-ELECTED AT ANNUAL ALUMNI MEETING

A handful of alumni convened Saturday morning June 3 at the call of the Vice-President of The General Alumni Association for the annual Commencement meeting in Bucknell Hall. The meeting was routine in nature but marked by keen interest on the part of the few in attendance. The formal report follows:

The meeting was called to order by the Vice-President, Dr. Mabel Grier Leshner, '01.

The roll call was read by the Secretary.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and upon regular motion approved.

The report of the Nominating Committee was read by Dr. Carl Millward and upon motion accepted, re-electing the following:

- Vice-President—Dr. Mabel G. Leshner, '01
- Secretary—Mr. A. G. Stoughton, '24
- Treasurer—Mr. Joseph M. Wolfe, '89

Dr. S. M. Davenport, '16, was nominated to fill the place on the Executive Committee vacated by Rev. Max Wiant.

The report of the Trustee Election Committee was read by Dr. S. M. Davenport. It was moved and seconded that Thomas J. Baldrige be named Alumni Trustee to continue as formerly and that a letter be sent to the Board of Trustees as read.

The report of the Alumni Fund was read by the Secretary. It was moved and seconded that the report be placed in the next issue of the Alumni Monthly.

Informal discussion on how to increase attendance on Alumni Day and at the meeting of the General Alumni Association. It was moved and seconded that a committee be appointed to take up the matter in regard to the hour and attractive features of Alumni Day. It was moved and seconded that the President in consultation with the Secretary and Ex-Officio Members appoint this committee. It was moved and seconded that we send a recommendation to the faculty to continue Alumni Day on Saturday.

Informal talk on the Alumnae business and luncheon hours. Professor Rockwell suggested that if possible they could have their business meeting at 12:00 and luncheon at 1:00. It was moved and seconded that Mrs. Kester present the matter before the Alumnae organization about the hour and request a committee to investigate the matter.

Upon regular motion, the meeting was adjourned.

Junior College at Wilkes-Barre

University Launches New School

BUCKNELL UNIVERSITY will open a co-educational Junior College in Wilkes-Barre early in September with classrooms in the Wilkes-Barre Business College and a resident faculty to be appointed shortly.

Bucknell's trustees authorized the establishment of the college after they had reviewed the many requests made by school officials and others in the Wilkes-Barre district who urged that Bucknell open a junior college to accommodate the many graduates who are unable to go away to college upon finishing high school, but who are eager to continue their education.

Dr. Frank G. Davis, of the department of education, made a thorough survey of the possibilities in the Wilkes-Barre region for such a college and reported to the Board of Trustees that an average of 800 high school students are potential college material each year for a radius of 30 miles. He predicted that 100 will go to a local junior college the first year.

Dr. Davis has been placed in charge of the preliminary organization of the school and during the past several weeks he has visited many of the high schools in and near Wilkes-Barre, explaining the purpose and function of the new college. The entire second floor of the Wilkes-Barre Business College has been leased for classrooms and an office has been set up there for the handling of applications. The building is one short block from the business district and is near the Osterhout Free Library and the Wilkes-Barre Wyoming Valley Historical Society and the Historical and Geological Museum.

The curriculum for the new Bucknell unit will parallel the first two years' work at Bucknell University. Upon the completion of his course at Wilkes-Barre the junior college student may enter upon his junior year at Bucknell or he may transfer to another college. Freshman courses only will be offered for the first year, but in the following year sophomore courses will be added.

Courses to be offered at the college this fall include the first-year's work towards the degree of bachelor of arts and towards bachelor of science degree in biology, in commerce and finance, or in education, as well as the freshman course leading to the degree of bachelor of science in chemical, civil, electrical, or mechanical engineering.

It is expected that the junior college unit will in no way interfere with the work of the University, since the new branch has been established primarily to take care of those students who otherwise would be unable to attend college.

Present plans call for the opening of the college on September 13, which is also the date for the start of Freshman Week at the University. For the time being, library facilities will be provided at the college and at the Osterhout Free Library, which is cooperating in the project. The requirements for admission to the junior college are the same as those observed by the University.

News of the opening of the college by Bucknell was received with keen enthusiasm by residents of Wilkes-Barre, which is now to lose its distinction of being the largest community in the state without a college for both men and women. The new project was given nation-wide publicity by Lowell Thomas, who announced it in one of his daily news broadcasts. Student interest in the college has been even greater than was anticipated and applications for admission began coming in immediately after the announcement was made.

Bucknell is not the first Pennsylvania college to establish a junior college branch. The University of Pittsburgh has junior college units at Johnstown, Erie, and Uniontown. The junior college movement has been spreading rapidly in recent years, especially in the Middle-West and on the Pacific coast. Its growth in the East, however, has been comparatively recent, the greatest progress having been made in the past five years.

The Procession

Two Prexys

BUCKNELL is beginning a new and important enterprise. We are establishing a Junior College unit in Wilkes-Barre. This unit will be opened in September. The University has been considering the matter for several months. A thorough investigation of the need and the opportunities of a Junior College in Wilkes-Barre was made, and the Administration and Board of Trustees were convinced that there is a genuine need for such a college in that territory, and also a fine opportunity for Bucknell to establish it. There is a population of over 400,000 in Wilkes-Barre and Luzerne County within easy commuting distance. There are more than 1200 high school graduates each year within this territory who are unable to go away to college or university. There are no college opportunities for this large group of high school graduates. A state-wide survey was made about two years ago of the cities in Pennsylvania that need a junior college organization. That study showed that there were, at least, ten cities where the junior college is a real need. The report also indicated that Wilkes-Barre offered the greatest need and the best opportunity of all the ten cities.

It is our purpose to offer in Wilkes-Barre the first two years' curricula of the University program. We expect to make it possible for students to get the same program for these two years that they would receive if they were on the campus. At the end of the two years' work there, students will be able to enter the Junior Class on the campus, or transfer to any other institution of their choice with full credit for the work they have done. We will place in Wilkes-Barre a first-class faculty to offer this work.

The citizens of Wilkes-Barre and of the surrounding communities have greeted this matter with genuine interest and cooperation. In fact, the enthusiasm which is being given this proposition by school leaders and citizens alike has been very gratifying.

This is not a wholly new enterprise in Pennsylvania. The University of Pittsburgh has for several years been operating junior college organizations in Erie, Johnstown, and Uniontown. In the country at large the junior college movement has grown very rapidly in recent years. There are now more than five hundred such colleges in the United States. The junior college has become an established and recognized unit of the American School System. We confidently expect that this unit will be a valuable educational asset to the vicinity of Wilkes-Barre and will also prove to be a valuable contribution to the University.

Faithfully yours,

James O. Rainey

PRESIDENT ADDRESSES NEW YORK CLUB

An audience of some sixty alumni and prospective Bucknellian and their parents listened with enthusiasm to an address by Dr. Rainey on the changes, present and future, in Bucknell's affairs in the lounge of the Shelton Hotel, New York City Friday evening, May 26th. Preceding Dr. Rainey's talk, a short business meeting was held and resulted in the election of the following officers:

President, George S. Stevenson, M.D., '15, of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, 450 Seventh Ave., New York City.

Vice-President, Frank R. McGregor (re-elected).

Secretary, Albert Clark, '15, Salmon Tower, 11 West 42nd St., New York City.

Treasurer, James R. Herman, '17, 1 Madison Ave., New York City.

Dr. Rainey spoke with warmth of his belief in the future of the University after two years of association with it. This belief, he stated, was grounded in the potentiality of the power for cooperation and support which he had observed in the alumni organizations throughout the country. He gave his conception of the functions of a liberal college, a conception which has already been outlined in these columns and does not need to be repeated here. His awareness of the changing conditions of modern society and his analysis of the changes necessary in college training to prepare young men and young women for a worthy role plainly delighted his audience which gave him hearty applause.

The President's statement of the University's plans for the re-planning of the campus and the construction of beautiful and adequate buildings was no less eloquent than his interpretation of the changes in curriculum.

The alumni present were in numbers fairly well distributed as to older and more recent graduating classes. Professor Harley of Brooklyn was present with four Bucknell prospects. Dr. Charles Francis Potter, represented the class of 1907. He is engaged in the writing of three books besides serving the First Humanist Church and editing a magazine. Rush Kress, active in planning the event, could not be present because of a minor accident. Others on the committee were Julius Seebach, retiring president, Stanley P. Davies, Ph.D., and Dr. Stevenson. Serving on the nominating committee for the election were Dr. Davies, Thomas Mangan, and Weaver W. Pangburn.

LARSON TALKS TO ALUMNI CLUB

Philadelphia Bucknellians enjoyed a fine evening on May 26 at Kugler's Restaurant when Mr. J. Frederick Larsen, University Architect, outlined the future architectural development of Bucknell. The dinner was presided over by Dr. Paul J. Pontius, '88, who introduced each speaker. Dr. Pontius was presented by Mr. H. F. Sheffer, '18, President of the Philadelphia Alumni Club.

The toastmaster wielded his gavel and his wit in able fashion introducing first the Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Mr. Charles P. Vaughn who told of his first interest in Bucknell and his increasing faith in the small college so finely exemplified in Bucknell. Mr. Vaughn also paid high tribute to President Rainey as one of the outstanding leaders in education in America today.

Mr. Larsen was next presented and outlined with sketches and drawings his plans for the future growth of the University. His talk was most interesting as he portrayed the spiritual growth of the college along with the physical.

Hon. John B. Stetson, Jr., another able Bucknell trustee was then introduced and optimistically spoke of the future and the part that each individual alumnus could play in the great scheme of Bucknell's progress.

Others introduced were Mr. Harry Roberts, '88, who had driven from Los Angeles to attend Commencement and his class reunion, his son J. H. R. Roberts, '12, Romain Hassrick, '06, Dr. E. S. Corson, '92, and the Alumni Secretary, A. G. Stoughton, '24.

DAVIES, '12 WINS HIGH POST

Stanley P. Davies, '12, formerly Professor of Sociology at Bucknell, has been appointed general director of the Charity Organization Society of New York, it was announced on June 4 by Walter S. Gifford, president of the society and president of the Bell Telephone Company.

Mr. Davies was formerly associate secretary of the Charities Aid Association of New York. He has written several books on sociology and has taught at Columbia University. After taking his degree at Bucknell, he completed his degree as doctor of philosophy at Columbia. For fifteen years he has been intimately allied with various types of social service.

In addition to directing the society's regular work of family aid and rehabilitation, he will direct its cooperation with public relief bodies and will head its complete program in four different departments.

In an interview Dr. Davies said, "Regarding social work and service, it seems to me that prevention rather than alleviation must be the keynote and the basis. We must be constantly experimenting, seeking out new ways, and better ones, of helping people to take care of themselves."

Dr. Davies was born in Philadelphia. During the World War he served as an officer on the staff of the Surgeon General of the Army. Later he was chosen by Raymond Moley, now Assistant Secretary of State, and then head of the Cleveland Foundation, to help conduct one of the surveys for which that organization is very well known. Dr. Davies wrote the report of the survey on recreation. In 1919 he joined the State Charities Aid Association of New York, with which organization he has remained constantly with the exception of one year as Professor at Bucknell. He is a member of the Delta Sigma fraternity, and has served as President of the New York Alumni Club.

READING MEETING

The Reading Club met at the Wyomissing Club as the guests of Howard V. Fisher, Esq., '13, President. Professor Harry R. Warfel, '20, of the department of English, spoke on the new curriculum and illustrated the proposed new building program. In the afternoon Dr. Warfel spoke to the seniors in the Reading High School.

FOOTBALL SCHEDULE 1933

Ten games, eight listed against major opponents and two of which are carded with inter-sectional foes, gives Bucknell in 1933 one of the hardest football schedules in recent years. The card was announced in June by Dr. B. W. Griffith, graduate manager of athletics.

The 1933 season starts with two comparatively easy foes, then swings into an eight game stretch over successive week-ends when the Herd must stack up against teams of first class caliber.

The inter-sectional tilts, coming on successive week-ends, are with Furman, at Bucknell on Armistice Day, and Wake Forest, at Norfolk, Va., on November 18. It will be the first time since Carl Snavely took up the varsity coaching reigns at Bucknell that the Herd has faced a team from another section of the country. The last of such games took place in 1926 when Coach Moran took the bellowing Bisons to Kansas where they tackled the Haskell Indians.

The Wake Forest game will be something of a feather in Bucknell's hat because it is being played as the sports attraction at the dedicatory exercises for Norfolk's new community stadium. Wake Forest, from the town of that name in North Carolina, will represent the southern teams, while Bucknell has been chosen as the representative of the north. The game is expected to attract considerable attention.

Furman, of Greenville, South Carolina, is not unknown in the north, last year giving Army the scare of its life in the Cadets' opener when they held the West Pointers to a 13 to 0 victory.

B. U. vs. Temple Homecoming, October 28

The peak of the schedule will be reached, of course, when Pop Warner's Temple Owls appear here on Homecoming Day, October 28. The home season also includes games with Waynesburg, Lebanon Valley, Furman, and Washington and Jefferson.

Prospects are bright for a strong Bucknell team next fall. An undefeated freshman team, and a fairly strong varsity squad from which only four seniors graduate, combine to point toward a successful, possibly undefeated, season.

The 1933 schedule, with location of games, last year's score, and the series results, follow:

Friday, Sept. 22, (Night), Waynesburg, at Bucknell. (First meeting.)

Friday, Sept. 29, (Night), Lebanon Valley at Bucknell. (No game in 1932; Bucknell 5 wins, Lebanon Valley 1.)

Friday, Oct. 6, (Night), Duquesne at Forbes Field, Pittsburgh. (First meeting.)

Saturday, Oct. 14, Villanova at Main Line Stadium, Philadelphia. (V. 13, B. 0; Bucknell 8, Villanova 2, tied 2.)

Saturday, Oct. 21, Lafayette at Easton, Lafayette Stadium. (B. 14, L. 6; Bucknell 3, Lafayette 12, tied 4.)

Saturday, Oct. 28, Temple at Bucknell, Homecoming Day. (B. 0, T. 12; Bucknell 1, Temple 3, tied 2.)

Saturday, Nov. 4, Western Maryland at Brooks Field, Scranton. (B. 14, W. Md. 13; B. 3, W. Md. 1.)

Saturday, Nov. 11, Furman at Bucknell. (First meeting.)

Saturday, Nov. 18, Wake Forest at Community Stadium, Norfolk, Va. (First meeting.)

Saturday, Nov. 25, Washington and Jefferson at Bucknell. (B. 0, W. & J. 14; Bucknell 1, W. & J. 10, tied 1.)

PAUL ALTHOUSE HERE DECEMBER 4

Paul Althouse, member of the Metropolitan Opera Company and considered by many as America's greatest tenor, will be guest artist of the Bucknell University Symphony Orchestra in its concert the week of December 4. Althouse, a member of the class of 1912, will sing a program of the works of Franz Schubert and Richard Wagner.

The first part of the program, devoted to compositions of Schubert, will open with the Tragic Symphony, No. 4. Paul Althouse will sing a group of songs by Schubert, the greatest composer of songs of all time.

The second half of the program is given to Wagner's works in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the death of that composer. Althouse will sing the Prize Song from the Meistersinger Von Nürnberg. The Symphony Orchestra will conclude the concert with the Rienzi Overture.

The 1933 Commencement closed the most successful season of the orchestra since its inception under its present conductor, Professor Paul Gies, four seasons ago. Included in its repertory this year were the Symphonie Militaire of Haydn; the symphonic poem, "Les Preludes" of Liszt; the Bassoon Concerto of Mozart; the Prometheus Overture of Beethoven; and works of Wagner and Rachmaninov.

In addition to the concerts of the Symphony orchestra, the combined organizations of the University will render the Bach Passion according to St. Matthew at Easter time. This will be the fourth annual Bach presentation of the Music Department of Bucknell University.

MANY TRY FOR NEW SCHOLARSHIPS

Forty-one students from six states took examinations Tuesday and Wednesday in competing for the three $1000 scholarships created by the Board of Trustees last December. The scholarships will be awarded to the three ranking students of the group, all of whom are prospective freshmen. The scholarships are worth $250 a year for four years.

Thirty high school seniors from Pennsylvania, four from New York, three from New Jersey, two from Massachusetts, and one each from Connecticut and Vermont were included in the group. All of the students ranked in the upper one-fifth of their high school graduating classes.

Edmund Wells, '69 and nephew, C. Edmund Wells, '33

BAPTIST YOUTH ON CAMPUS

Between six and seven hundred young men and women, members of Pennsylvania Baptist Young People's Societies, will gather on the campus in June for their annual convention. Forums, group conferences, and worship services will feature the three-day program which opens Friday, June 30.

Dr. Oscar M. Buck of Drew University will make the principal address at the opening session Friday afternoon, at which the delegates will be welcomed by Dr. Homer P. Rainey, president of Bucknell. Forums on World Leaders, Rethinking Missions, International Problems, and Disarmament and World Peace will follow the first meeting.

William H. Rhoads, of Toledo, Ohio, president of the Baptist Young People's Union of America, will lead the services Friday evening at which the speaker will be Dr. Bernard C. Clausen, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Syracuse, N. Y.

Dr. Albert W. Beaven, president of the Colgate-Rochester Divinity School and of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, will take a leading part in the convention, as will numerous other prominent Baptists.

Saturday afternoon will be devoted to recreation with a track meet in Memorial Stadium as the principal feature. A stewardship oratorical contest in which the finalists from six districts will participate is on the program for Saturday evening. The winner will be awarded a scholarship by Bucknell University.

Dr. Rainey will preach the Convention sermon in the Baptist Church Sunday morning when a special communion service will be held. The convention closes Sunday afternoon with a final session at which officers will be installed and reports of findings committees will be heard. The Rev. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of the Logan Baptist Church in Philadelphia, will make the closing address.

SUMMER SCHOOL GROWS

Prospects are bright for another successful summer session at Bucknell University, according to Professor John H. Eisenhower, '05, director of the six-weeks' course.

The quota set for the class in practice teaching conducted in connection with Bucknell's Demonstration School has already been filled and further applications for that course are being refused daily, he said. Registrations for other courses continue at a rate that indicates an enrollment approximating that of other summers.

Summer session students will register in Tustin gymnasium on Wednesday, July 5. Classes begin the following day and continue until Tuesday, August 15.

Professor Eisenhower today announced another new course for this year's curriculum. Professor Melvin W. LeMon, of the department of music, will offer a course in pipe organ. A course in Public School Finance to be taught by Dr. Homer P. Rainey, president of Bucknell, was announced for the summer session a few days ago.

STUDENT WINS BOAT RACE

Hard luck rode the waves with Guy Philip Ellsworth, '36, United States champion in Class C outboard motor competition, in the Italian Regatta held at Gardone, Italy, in May, and he was forced to retire from the race after holding the lead for three laps. Engine trouble caused the famous Bucknell student to drop out.

But just as hard luck dealt him this hard blow, so did the goddess of luck ride with him as he drove his Blue Devil, bearing the insignia of Bucknell and of his fraternity, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, to the C Class championship of all Europe in the Grand Prix tournament at Turin, France, on Sunday, May 29.

BOOK SHELF

NEW TEXT BY
DR. C. P. HIGBY, '08
By PAUL W. GATES

It is a pleasure to record the latest achievement of Dr. Chester Penn Higby, '08, one of Bucknell's most outstanding scholars. Dr. Higby, after graduating from Bucknell in 1908, received his doctor's degree from Columbia in 1910. He then taught at the University of West Virginia, the University of North Carolina and the University of Wisconsin, where he is now located as full professor. Dr. Higby has mastered the modern European field and his History of Modern Europe, which has been prepared for college use, has been well received and is being widely used in colleges as a text.

Dr. Higby has given us a well balanced, judicious account of a very difficult period in a readable style. Perhaps his most important success in a field where there are numerous excellent texts is the splendid organization of the materials and the allotment of space. While comprehensive, the book is clear and concise and does not leave one in doubt as to meaning or interpretation. The comprehensive bibliography is especially helpful. The maps are well prepared and aid greatly in giving that necessary cartographical assistance to students.

It would be difficult to touch upon all of the commendable features of Dr. Higby's book, but perhaps his discussion of the industrial revolution is most outstanding. Here he shows himself to be a master of technical detail, a rare ability in historians. Another excellent feature is the admirable review of the post-war developments which should help to make the study of modern European history a living subject to the students.

On completing the book one feels that it should be in the hands of the many people who will never again have the opportunity of taking a college course but who would profit from its perusal as much as the average undergraduate. Dr. Higby is to be congratulated upon his excellent work.

The book is published by The Century Co.

DR. F. G. DAVIS PUBLISHES BOOK AND THREE ARTICLES

One of the most prolific writers among the faculty members this year has been Dr. Frank G. Davis, '11, head of the department of education, who has, since March 1, 1933, had published a book and three professional articles. A summary of the works by Professor Davis follows:

"A course in Supervised Teaching" published by the Inor Publishing Company. This is a workbook for student teachers and persons taking laboratory courses in methods of teaching. The book has received an enthusiastic reception and indications are that it will be used quite extensively next year.

"Practice Teaching in Summer Sessions," a nation-wide study of practice teaching during the summer, published in Educational Administration and Supervision, May, 1933.

"The Development of the Work of the Attendance Officer into that of a Guidance Worker," a historical study of the development of the work of the attendance officer in the city of Philadelphia, as indicated by examinations given to applicants for the position of attendance officer in the years 1914 to 1930, published in Vocational Guidance Magazine April, 1933. Charles A. Wheeler, Bucknell graduate student collaborated in this study.

"The Ethics Code," an interpretation of the Pennsylvania Code of Ethics for teachers, published in the Pennsylvania School Journal, May, 1933. Prof. Davis is chairman of the Pennsylvania Commission on Professional Ethics.

"ENGINEERING GUIDANCE"

By PROFESSOR M. L. DRUM, '02

A most interesting new book has come to my attention. It is entitled, "Vocational Guidance in Engineering Lines." It is sponsored by the American Association of Engineers, published by the Mack Printing Company, Easton, Pa., and costs $2.50 postpaid ($2.00 in lots of ten or more).

The book is written primarily for the high school student or for the college student who has not yet made his choice of a life work. It should interest, also, any college graduate whose experience in engineering has not been as satisfactory as anticipated, for it gives a wealth of suggestive information.

The Editorial Committee is headed by Dr. J. A. L. Waddell, the distinguished engineer, author and teacher and the contributor of each chapter is a man preeminent in his line of engineering. Each chapter in the body of the book endeavors to describe both the general and the special requirements for the particular branch of the profession under discussion, outlining specifically the nature of the work, and in most cases, pointing out definitely the compensation to be expected. Nineteen chapters are devoted to the main forms of engineering. Thirty chapters discussing specialties follow. A resume concludes. The fifty illustrations are largely of the most recently completed projects and are in themselves most thought provoking.

The general reader in addition to learning what is involved in "Ceramic Engineering", "Geodetic Surveying", "Valuation Engineering", etc., will find much of interest. "Prometheus Enchained", Chapter III, is the clearest diagnosis of the malaise of twentieth century civilization I have seen in print. Quotation, "In a sense, the modern world is not led at all. It simply flounders. In the United States, for instance, we have a political government composed of office seekers and chair warmers, who have no more idea of the complexities they are supposed to direct than the man in the moon. The real action in the Republic is provided by business men affiliated with large corporate enterprises. A few of them may possess some sense of state, to use the phrase of H. G. Wells, but the majority neither know nor care where the body politic is headed. So far the Republic moves, however, the man of business provides the driving force, leaving the statesman, the philosopher, the professor, the editor, the general, the parson, to contemplate gloomily the crowns which once they wore."

The tone of the book is excellent, not alone in the chapter, "Idealism in Engineering", but throughout the 500 pages, one finds sentiments expressed by these seasoned engineers and university professors, that would be quite appropriate in ethical discussions. For example, in the chapter on Mechanical Engineering the writer digresses to give his idea of the nature of real success, and in most of the chapters is voiced the appeal to the youth of our land to know the satisfaction of accomplishment, to experience the inner glow of gratification when the hard, but worth while, task has been mastered. The chief value of this is in its incidental nature. You cannot teach such things directly. The young reader would pass hastily the chapter "Idealism", but come to a complete stop when in "Chemical Engineering" he reads how the sulphur industry has been changed in the United States from importing from Aetna's crater, to using the deposits of our own in Louisiana and Texas. — deposits a thousand feet underground, — superheated water introduced through pipes, — liquefied sulphur pumped to the surface, — solidified blocks as large as "Old Main", ground up and sent out to industry. The economist and the sociologist might well pause to notice the immense significance.

Civil and Electrical Engineering are well-treated and have probably more space devoted to them than is used in the description of other lines. One of the illustrations is of the Conowingo hydro-electric project, with which many of us are familiar, — the conception and execution of John Walls, '98, who, so graciously, personally conducted our engineering staff on an inspection of his work not long ago. The eight charts given in the chapter on "Electrical Engineering" by Mr. Dudley, of the Westinghouse Company, showing the steps in each case usually taken by a man entering some one line of work and the resulting advancement he may expect to find leading to a great variety of positions, should be helpful. Any alumnus who finds his progress slow or unsatisfactory might get the lead in these charts that would start him on his way to real success.

From the standpoint of English, the book is exceedingly interesting. Naturally there could be no unified style, but the diction is good and the contrasting types of expression of these engineers on their good behavior form an absorbing study. The chapter "Mining Engineering" proceeds like a ponderous Car of Juggernaut while "Automotive Engineering" capers about and leads the mind a merry dance.

One might venture the adverse criticism that the difficulties in the way of the entering student have been unduly stressed. Youth, however, is optimistic, and those of us teachers who have seen past standards excelled, by individuals in different generations of college students, are optimistic too. Let not the boy who reads turn aside, because hard work and hard study are involved. These specialists are but human. What man has done, man can do. The book is meant to be a kindly, helping hand.

To Jessie Wheeler Armstrong has fallen the honor of having a college named in honor of her gifted husband, Ediom James Armstrong, who died in 1925. The Armstrong Junior College is located in Alderson, West Virginia. It is making use of the property of the former Alderson College, founded eleven years ago and supported by the Baptists of West Virginia, but abandoned by them in June, 1932, when it became impossible for them to continue to support two colleges, Alderson and Broaddus. The two were then combined and the older college at Philippi was renamed the Alderson-Broaddus. To meet the desires of the citizens of Alderson and to create an institution which should serve the southern section of the state, President Ira B. Bush of Charleston (formerly superintendent of schools in Erie, Pa.) was granted by the trustees of the defunct college the privilege of using the excellent, modern buildings and campus of seventy acres to establish a Junior College with a High School Department. This new college Mr. Bush named in honor of Mr. E. J. Armstrong, his friend, who had been a strong defender of his educational policies during his superintendency.

Having successfully completed its first year of existence, the Armstrong Junior College will open for a summer session of twelve weeks on June 12th. Work done during the session in the Normal Department will be accepted by the state for the certification of teachers.

Mrs. Armstrong, who has been since 1927 a trustee of Antioch College, now resides in Yellow Springs, Ohio.

The death of Robert Simpson, brother of Professor Frank M. Simpson, '95, occurred in Columbus, Ohio on May 18, 1933. The following article and editorial are from the Columbus (Ohio) Citizen:

ROBERT H. SIMPSON

Columbus lost one of its veteran public servants yesterday in the death of Robert H. Simpson, city engineer since 1920 and a member of the Engineering Department staff since 1904.

No man has had more to do with the material shaping of modern Columbus than had Mr. Simpson. The flood control development on the Scioto River, designed to prevent a repetition of the 1913 disaster, was carried out under his direction, and this formed the basis of the Civic Center project which has improved so vastly the aspect of the river front area of central Columbus.

He directed almost all of the grade crossing elimination program, which has opened up new avenues of traffic and promoted public safety. He had a share in the O'Shaughnessy Dam construction, which has insured an adequate water supply for the city.

He has planned and directed far-reaching extensions of the sewer system, and his most recent undertaking was the planning of a new disposal plant, which probably would have been well under way by this time had not depression financial conditions blocked the project. He had charge of the construction of Port Columbus, one of the country's major airports.

Mr. Simpson leaves behind him not one but many material monuments. He represented a high type of the non-political public official whose service continues unaffected by changes in partisan control of government.

Robert H. Simpson entered Bucknell in September, 1891 with the class of 1895. During the fall term of 1893, as a junior, he withdrew from Bucknell to enter Cornell University in order to follow a course in Civil Engineering. He was graduated from Cornell with the class of 1896. Entering the employ of the "Big Four" railroad at Cleveland, Ohio, immediately after graduation. He continued with that railroad as Engineer of Maintenance of Way until 1903 when he was appointed to the engineering staff of the City Engineer of Columbus, Ohio. In 1920 he was promoted to the office of City Engineer, which position he held at the time of his death on May 18, 1933. He was recognized by members of his profession as an expert on street construction and lectured at many of the engineering schools of the country, including West Point and Annapolis, on this phase of engineering. The following editorial, taken from the Columbus Citizen indicates that his work was recognized as of an unusually high order by his fellows:

ANOTHER year begins for Alma Mater with her annual group of eager and bright eyed Freshmen everywhere in evidence on the campus. They are a most likely looking lot, keen, awake, and thrilled by the newness of college and the beauty of the old campus. It keeps one young to come in contact with the ever young Freshman group each year.

MORE than two hundred and thirty boys and girls are members of the Class of '37 (think of it!) with the other three classes carrying the total enrolment for the year past the nine hundred mark, a decrease in the entire student body of less than one hundred students. The Freshman Class is smaller this year by forty odd than last year.

THE present student body will witness the fabrication of a large part of the new campus with The Literature Building now rising above ground as the first unit. The model plan of the entire future development illustrated in this issue attracts much attention as students, alumni, and visitors through the exhibition room at The Library where the model is on display.

THE intricate details of trees, roads, buildings, contours, and even a Reading train and the tracks are carried out to perfection in the scale model. The value of the model is to present in three dimensions what is so difficult to visualize from blue prints in two dimensions. All those who have seen the display are enthusiastic over the beauty of the proposed campus and buildings.

SPECULATION is rife among older heads on the campus as to the date when even part of the dream will be realized in brick and mortar. Some guesses are even as far off as 2033! We are optimist enough to have faith in a fine Board of Trustees and a growing alumni body to predict at least three of the buildings now constructed only in miniature will be built before 1940 — and that is only six years from now — with many more occupied by 1946, the centenary celebration year for Bucknell.

WHAT three buildings would be our selection for immediate construction? Easy! Library, Gymnasium, and Bucknell Inn. The Library for further fine work in the development of the arts, The Gymnasium for modern facilities for mass physical education, and The Bucknell Inn for the entertainment of alumni and for profit! Of course, there are other needs, but are there others more important than these three?

WHAT is the football dope? Great! The forty and more candidates for the varsity possess more brain power than any squad we have seen in recent years — and there are no weaklings in the lot when it comes to physical strength. Ample reserve strength and stiff competition for every position on the team will produce touchdowns!

HOME COMING? OCTOBER 28! TEMPLE coached by Glenn Warner vs. BUCKNELL coached by Carl Snively. It will be a football game to treat the fans! Before this classic the Pittsburgh alumni will see the team in action against Duquesne on Friday evening, October 6, Philadelphians get their treat at Villanova on Saturday afternoon, October 14, and many New Yorkers will travel to Easton for their pre-homecoming game to see the Lafayette clash on Saturday, October 21.

GOLFERS will be interested in plans for an alumni tournament Friday afternoon and Saturday morning during Homecoming. Bring your clubs!

THE handsome gifts of Walter L. Hill, '98, to The Bucknell Library, have stimulated interest in the giving of collections and rare volumes to Bucknell. A move is under way now to form a "Friends of the Library Association" patterned after similar organizations at other colleges.

THIS magazine takes another bow in the spotlight of national recognition as we gratefully accept the prize award of The American Alumni Council for the best spot news story of the year in the alumni publications field. Our "Old Main" fire story captured the honors and a fine leather portfolio for ye editor.

BUCKNELL'S NEW DEAL

AS Bucknell University enters her eighty-fourth year the national "New Deal" is being reflected on the campus with new buildings, new curricula, and a new unit of the University at Wilkes-Barre.

The construction of the first unit of the proposed campus definitely commits the University to a policy of growth and progress. It is confidently expected that before this first unit reaches completion funds will have been provided for other units to follow. The building program is designed for the future and is not merely a temporary step.

The modernized and liberalized curricula affords ample opportunity to the new student to widen his horizon and grow with the times. The new educational plan is designed for today and today's needs. No longer is the student living in a cloistered world of his own. The new courses, methods, and surveys make him a definite part of modern civilization.

The policy of expansion evidenced by the Junior College at Wilkes-Barre has been an immediate success. More than one hundred and forty students are now in attendance at the new unit. This number added to the Lewisburg campus group gives a Freshman Class of almost four hundred students at the two Colleges.

With the revival of business and the stabilization of world economics Bucknell stands to lead in the field of modern collegiate education. We shall have a physical plant second to none and a theory and practice of modernized education that will not only attract students but will be a model for progressive institutions to follow after we have blazed the trail.

ALUMNI MONTHLY WINS ANOTHER PRIZE

In the annual alumni magazines prize contest conducted by The American Alumni Council, The Bucknell Alumni Monthly scored again with a first prize for the best spot news story of the year. The winning story was the account of The Old Main fire as written by the editor. A zippered leather portfolio graces the editorial desk of the magazine as evidence of the recognition accorded Bucknell. The editor of the magazine, Mr. A. G. Stoughton, '24, was honored by The American Alumni Council by election to the Board of Directors and appointment as Director of Conventions of this national organization. The American Alumni Council includes some three hundred American colleges and universities in its membership.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON, '27, RETURNS

Christy Mathewson, Jr., '27, and mother, returned to this country in August from China where the young flier had been hospitalized for the past six months as a result of his tragic crash in January while on his honeymoon. Although minus a leg and carrying his left arm in splints, Christy, Jr., was in excellent spirits and possessed of the Spartan courage and fortitude of his famous father. He is at present undergoing surgical treatment for the restoration of the use of his left arm in a New York City hospital. He plans to recuperate at his mother's home in Saranac Lake, N. Y. and probably visit the campus during the late Fall.

COLLEGE INN MAY BE SOLD

A college landmark for the past two decades, The College Inn, under its genial host, Guy Payne, '09, is in danger of passing from the Bucknell scene. The sheriff has levied upon the property and at the expiration of the six weeks' grace, a forced sale may result some time after the middle of October. Since the "Old Main" fire the Inn has been left on a campus side street instead of in the center of activities where it once was and business has consequently fallen off.

THREE NEW FACULTY MEMBERS

Three additions to the Bucknell faculty were approved by The Board of Trustees in June meeting. They are Dr. Cyrus H. Karraker, assistant professor of History; Dr. Robert C. Kintner, assistant professor of Chemical Engineering; and Mr. Harold E. Cook, instructor in Piano.

Dr. Karraker will take over the work in the history department formerly under the direction of Dr. Henry T. Colestock, retired. Dr. Karraker holds his doctorate from the University of Pennsylvania.

In the Department of Chemical Engineering Dr. Kintner will assist Dr. S. C. Ogburn. He holds his doctorate from Ohio State University. In the Music Department Mr. Cook will teach the piano classes of Miss Ruth Hlavaty who is spending a year abroad. Mr. Cook formerly taught at Franklin College.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF OUR PROGRAM

There have been a number of important developments in our program since school closed in June. Early in June a settlement was reached with the Insurance Companies for the loss on "Old Main". This made it possible for us to sign contracts for the new Literature Building. Plans for this building had already been approved and were waiting. The contracts were signed immediately, and the new work was begun with a formal ground-breaking ceremony on July 19.

When it was found that we could get the classrooms and offices for the faculty in the new Literature Building, we were then able to make a most important and significant decision. We were able to save "Old Main". This decision brought great relief and real joy to all of us. The solution of this problem seems to be a very happy and fortunate one. Our plan is to restore the East and West Wings for modern dormitory units for men and to rebuild the "Old Main" center as a "Men's Union". The Union will provide social, recreational and living facilities for our men. Such a Union is a real need on our campus, and when these facilities are provided, they will complete a very fine living section for our men students. Temporary roofs have been placed on the East and West Wings; the windows have been restored; and the property has been cleaned. Thus it will be preserved until such time as we can secure the funds for its complete restoration. This project should make a great appeal to all our alumni.

The completion and erection of a "Model" for our future developmental program is another of the important factors in our plan. This "Model" was delivered to us last week, and will be exhibited in the center of the main reading room of the Library. This "Model" is an excellent piece of work, and is truly an inspiration. My hope is that every alumnus and friend of the University can have an opportunity to see it as soon as possible. The erection of this "Model" completes the last major step in our planning for the future. Our problem from this point is to develop plans for its realization as rapidly as we are able. In this important phase of the work, I earnestly solicit the help of every alumnus and friend of Bucknell. Don't fail to return to the campus for our Homecoming on October 28th. There will be many things of interest for you at that time.

Faithfully yours,

James P. Rainey

NEW CAMPUS BEGUN

Literature Building First Unit To Rise

THE architectural and campus development program for Bucknell was launched on July 19, 1933 when the sponsor of the plan, President Homer Price Rainey, turned the first spadeful of earth on the site of the Literature Building, which is now under construction. The occasion was marked with academic dignity and ritual as the entire faculty and student body of the Summer School marched to the new campus site for the ceremonies.

The invocation was offered by Dr. W. H. Coleman of the Department of English. The Honorable Albert W. Johnson, '96, Chairman of the Building Committee of the Board of Trustees then presented to President Rainey the spade to be used in breaking the ground. He emphasized the important part the building program will play in carrying out the future policy of the University. He declared that this day marked the beginning of a new epoch in the life of Bucknell and predicted that it would mean an even greater future for an already noble and honored University.

"A New Era"

In accepting the spade Dr. Rainey congratulated Judge Johnson and the Board of Trustees for their wisdom and vision in inaugurating the new development for Bucknell. "This is truly the beginning of a new era in American colleges and for Bucknell in particular," he said. He pointed out that we have long been occupied with conquering a physical frontier and that now we must turn our attention to the new social, political, cultural, moral and spiritual frontier. "Our problem now is not to conquer an external environment, but to labor for those values which enrich and ennoble our lives," he declared.

The president commented upon the suitability of erecting a Literature building as the first step in the University's program and then proceeded to dig the first spadeful of earth, after which he handed the spade to Dr. Harry W. Robbins, Chairman of the Language and Literature group.

Dr. Robbins in turn expressed his pleasure in witnessing the beginning of a new building which will house the group that he represents. He pointed out that of the five major teaching groups at Bucknell only two, Literature and Social Science, have been without homes of their own and said that he hoped a building for the Social Science group could be provided soon.

Led by the Baptist Church choir, the students and faculty members then sang the Alma Mater. Dr. Rainey called upon Dr. Raymond M. West, pastor of the local Baptist Church, who pronounced the benediction.

Construction Begins

The next morning, July 20, excavation work was started for the new building. Hegeman Harris Co., Inc., of New York are the builders with Robert Dawson, '23, superintendent in charge. Mr. and Mrs. Dawson and son, Robert, Jr., have taken up residence in Lewisburg for the duration of the construction work on the building.

Prior to the concrete work an average of twenty-two men were employed on the project. At the present time (September 8) some forty men are engaged in the work of rearing Bucknell's newest building. The various sub-contractors on the job include Shipper's Car Line of Milton for steel; Wm. F. Nelson of Washington, D. C., on concrete; American Warming and Ventilating Co., of Elmira, N. Y., on heating and ventilating; Vanderlinde Electric Corp., of Rochester, N. Y., on electrical work; and John A. Clemens of Milton, on excavation.

Three-fifths of the structure pictured is being constructed, the remaining two-fifths to be built when funds are available. The units under construction include an auditorium in what will be the central wing, six classrooms, four offices and a library on the ground floor and six more classrooms, one large social room, and thirteen faculty offices on the second floor of the long present central structure. The three-fifths of the building under construction will be two hundred and eleven feet long with the two wings one hundred and two feet deep. The auditorium will seat four hundred and nine people on the main floor and fifty more in a small balcony. All modern broadcasting, reception and sound devices are being installed in this unit.

Mr. Thomas Tash, representative of Mr. J. Frederic Larson, Architect, is a frequent visitor to the project.

in the construction. The brick is colored after the type used in the Monticello home of Thomas Jefferson and is antique in character. The manufacturer has called this new brick the Bison in tribute to Bucknell. The brick are being laid with recessed mortar joints to create a shadow effect to add to their character. Indiana Limestone trim is to be used on porches and cornices with Vermont granite steps and sills.

Construction has progressed with only five days of rain to the date of this account. It is expected that the building may be occupied during the early weeks of the second semester of the present academic year, sometime in February or March, 1934.

Old Main Preserved

The work of erecting a temporary roof over the burned wings of "Old Main" was completed early in July while the excavation work in the central unit nears completion now to afford the old building a fairly presentable appearance. The complete restoration into modern dormitory rooms in the wings and a Student Union in the main structure is for the future. Mr. Larson, University Architect has prepared sketches for the new treatment of "Old Main" with slight changes on the Quadrangle side which will make it blend with the new campus buildings.

The Quadrangle side of "Old Main" will be restored with the motif of the four columns of the front of the old structure to make a double entry. This treatment will beautify the building on the quadrangle side and keep it in harmony with the entire building program. Detailed plans, specifications, and drawings are in process of completion now for the transformation of "Old Main" into The Men's Union.

FIRE LOSS

Back number files of The Bucknell Alumni Monthly which went through the "Old Main" fire a year ago have been uncovered in the debris of the ruins. Only one volume is completed destroyed—that of May, 1929. The Alumni Office would appreciate receipt of any copies of this issue, Vol. X, No. 8 that are available.

EIGHTH ANNUAL CONFERENCE ON EDUCATION NOVEMBER 17 and 18

Plans are maturing for the eighth annual conference on education at Bucknell. Last year's attendance, which surpassed all previous records will probably be broken this year.

The purpose of the gathering will be to build up morale on the part of teachers, patrons and friends of the schools. With this in view, two new and important additional sections are being organized and programs built. One of these is for school directors and the other for parent teacher associations. Persons of state and national prominence are expected to address these bodies.

Speakers of national and international reputation this year are George Drayton Strayer of Columbia University, professor of school administration, and John W. Withers, dean of the school of Education of the New York University. Both men are known at Bucknell. Dean Withers spoke here at the first conference in 1926 and Dr. Strayer, a Bucknell alumnus, received an honorary degree here a few years ago.

General sessions will be held at two o'clock and eight o'clock on Friday and at eleven o'clock on Saturday. President Francis B. Haas of Bloomsburg State Teachers College, will speak at the Saturday general session and be the guest of honor at a banquet of Kappa Phi Kappa, professional Education fraternity.

Teacher training and secondary education sessions will be held at four o'clock, Friday, and elementary education and subject matter conferences on Saturday morning.

A big feature of the conference will be a continuance of the innovation of last year, a banquet at the Women's College dining room. The attendance last year was about 125 and it is expected that it will be considerably larger this year.

Alumni in the field of education will find this conference stimulating and a trip to Bucknell worth while in many ways.

JUNIOR COLLEGE OPENS

Large Class Enters New University Unit at Wilkes-Barre

By J. H. Eisenhauer, '05, Director

ON Thursday, September 14, the first classes met in the newly established Junior College at Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania. When this was written, one hundred forty-two students had enrolled. Eighty-two per cent of these students graduated in the upper three-fifths of their respective secondary school classes. About sixty-four per cent are men. Registration on Wednesday, September 13, was preceded by two days of orientation. During these two days, placement tests were given and the students were assembled for Bucknell songs and cheers. Tuesday morning President Rainey delivered a challenging address to the entire student body.

Monday evening a reception was given in honor of the first class to enter the new Junior College. Two hundred eighty-three students, parents, and faculty were present. Professor Paul G. Stolz, furnished a program of music that was very much appreciated by all those present. This program consisted of vocal solos by Miss Inez M. Robison, Miss Hazel Gravell, Mr. Herbert Lloyd, and a piano solo by Miss Janet Workman. A reel of pictures depicting life at Bucknell was shown by Forrest Brown. Freddie Kindig and his orchestra furnished music for the dancing.

The work of the freshman year only is being offered during the present college year. In the fall of 1934 the sophomore year will be added. It is not planned to carry the work beyond the second year of college. The curricula and courses of study in the Junior College, with the single exception of the science survey, are identical with those offered on the campus at Lewisburg. The lectures in the survey courses are given by the same men at both institutions.

The faculty for the Junior College has been very largely selected from the Bucknell University faculty and consists of Byron S. Hollinshead, John S. Gold, William F. Schuyler, Majel Brooks, Harold A. Shaffer, J. Orin Oliphant, Forrest E. Keller, and Vincent McCrossan. Mr. George R. Faint is Registrar.

The Junior College is considered an integral part of Bucknell University. The credits earned will be Bucknell University credits. The State Superintendent of Public Instruction of Pennsylvania, Dr. James N. Rule, recognizes this fact when he writes thus to President Rainey: "I note your inquiry regarding the accreditation of the work done by students in the Junior College center to be established by Bucknell University at Wilkes-Barre. My understanding is that the Junior College center at Wilkes-Barre is an integral part of Bucknell University and has been duly authorized by your Board of Trustees; that the University officials will be responsible for the maintenance of appropriate standards governing all work done at this center; and that all credits for work done at this center will be certified by the Registrar of the University as regular standard University credits for which the University assumes full responsibility."

The idea of providing college instruction for Wilkes-Barre and vicinity has been in the minds of progressive people in this community for several years. A committee of Rotarians has been definitely working to this end. Many others have been wishing for such an institution. The large enrollment is evidence of the real need.

The Junior College is primarily a community institution. It provides higher education at very much lower cost to the student, although the tuition rate is the same as at Lewisburg. Students may secure two years of a college education without leaving home. This is considered an important factor because many young people are still in the adolescent stage of their development while doing the first two years of college work. The influence of the home is especially significant at this time.

A committee of public school superintendents and principals called upon President Rainey and presented to him the desires and demands of the people of this community. After giving due consideration to the suggestions made, Professor Frank G. Davis, head of the Department of Education, was sent to Wilkes-Barre to make a detailed survey of the situation. Professor Davis spent the month of June interviewing superintendents, secondary school principals, and citizens. He addressed many student assemblies. His addresses were greeted with enthusiasm. His interviews convinced him that there was a real demand for a junior college. He accordingly made a very favorable report to President Rainey and the action of the Board of Trustees definitely established the institution.

Although everybody seemed to be enthusiastic about the idea of a junior college near home, the enrollment during the early period seemed to be rather slow. One of the reasons for this was the fact that while everyone seemed interested in the possibility of the junior college, many were skeptical concerning the value of the credits earned. Everywhere one was met with the question: "Will other colleges accept your credits?" Some even doubted the possibility of transferring to Bucknell Univer-

TWO CAPTAINS

Lead 1933 Varsity In Ten Game Schedule

TWO captains, Nicholas Farina, center, of Steelton, and Owen James, guard, of Scranton, led the forty-three candidates for the 1933 Bucknell varsity football team onto the practice field on September 5 to hear a welcoming talk from Coach Carl G. Snavely.

The co-captains are two of the eight seniors on the squad and also number among the seventeen lettermen who will compete for first string positions against able competition from a similar number of sophomores who went through an undefeated Frosh schedule last season. Sixteen juniors make up the balance of the squad.

The positions represented by the candidates make up a well balanced squad list with ample reserve strength in all departments. There are thirteen backs, ten ends, eight tackles, eight guards, and four centers. Only four lettermen were lost through graduation in June.

Practice sessions will be held daily in Memorial Stadium with a double stint for the two weeks prior to the opening of the classrooms on September nineteenth. Three days of single sessions precede the first game with Waynesburg College on the twenty-second under the arc lights in Memorial Stadium.

Mose Quinn, '29, and Max Reed, '24, are assistant coaches this season with Quinn replacing Malcolm Musser, '19, as Freshman Coach. Musser resigned to accept the position as Head Coach of Basketball and Assistant Director of Physical Education.

Ten Games

The ten game schedule for the Bisons contains no set-ups. Every game will mean intensive preparation and hard thorough football. The followers of the team are assured of ten exhibitions of genuine competition with every opponent ranking as an able football machine. The opener with Waynesburg, small college conference champions of 1932, should provide some anxious moments and plenty of thrills for both teams and the spectators. Waynesburg boasts of two successive victories over Penn State in the past two years. Lebanon Valley as the second game will see the Alma Mater of Coach Snavely lined up against his pupils. Reports from the "Dutch" camp indicate the strongest team there in recent years. The game will be played Friday night, September 29.

Three Away From Home

The third night game will see the Bisons in action in Pittsburgh against Duquesne on the night of October 6 for their first away from home encounter of the season. Two more week ends in succession find them away from home with Villanova acting as host in Philadelphia on Saturday afternoon, October 14, and Lafayette in the same role on October 21 at Easton.

HOMECOMING OCTOBER 28

The foregoing games are all prelude to the real classic of the season when "Pop" Warner brings his first Temple University team to the Memorial Stadium for the big Alumni Homecoming game. Athletic authorities expect a crowd of at least ten thousand to witness this game.

The annual charity game in Scranton has been changed to furnish a new opponent for the Bisons in the Electric City. Western Maryland will furnish the opposition on November 4 in place of Villanova.

North vs. South

Furman University of South Carolina journeys to Lewisburg on November 11 to aid in the presentation of an intersectional tilt for the edification of sports writers.

The final game of the season brings an old Tartar in Washington and Jefferson to Lewisburg on November 25, the Saturday before Thanksgiving.

When the story of this season is written it will be referred to as a most unusual and yet difficult schedule. Every game won will be a triumph and every one lost will be a "tough one". The reserve strength of the Bisons cheers the fans as they enter this 1933 season. The able aces of two past seasons are also counted upon for thrills and touchdowns. Coach Snavely in his usual taciturn manner has no prognostications to offer and this writer shall not risk any sweeping statements except to predict that there will be plenty of good football played by a strong Orange and Blue machine composed of a fine lot of men who will go into every game to play hard and clean until the final whistle blows.

INITIATES LARGE CLASS

Kappa Phi Kappa, professional education fraternity, presented a program this Summer for the first time. A luncheon meeting was held early in the Summer to plan the program. Following this an initiation of twenty candidates, all graduate students, took place. This ceremony was held at the Sunbury Country Club. Dr. D. Montfort Melchior, for eleven years a member of the Summer Session teaching staff, was initiated and delivered the address of the evening.

At this time officers were elected for the direction of the remaining Summer program. Henry S. Jones, '05, superintendent of schools at Plymouth, Pa., was chosen president; Willard E. Ackley, principal of the high school at Sunbury, vice-president; and Fred W. Diehl, '31, county superintendent of Montour County, secretary.

Following the initiation, two meetings were held. At one of these with about 30 men in attendance, a fun meeting, the faculty of the department of education were put on the rack and given a dose of their own medicine. On the last Monday evening of the Summer Session an open meeting was held with Dr. Lochtenberger, of the University of Pennsylvania as speaker. An unusually large crowd was present. Plans are already in motion to carry on an effective program next Summer.

NEW CREATIVE PROGRAM

President Rainey Outlines Plan In New York Times Feature Article

The Model

The Plan for the Future Bucknell Now on Exhibition at the Library

The following article from the pen of President Homer Price Rainey was printed in the New York Times under date of Sunday, July 23 and attracted nation wide attention:

That further revolutionary changes are coming in the liberal arts college is widely predicted. Some now being introduced at Bucknell University, at Lewisburg, Pa., are described below by its president.

By HOMER PRICE RAINEY

President of Bucknell University

Among educational leaders and others interested in the fate of the liberal college there is at present considerable discussion of its aims and purposes. Some critics say that its leaders do not have a clear conception of its functions, and hence, do not know where it is going. Still other more severe critics are saying that the four-year liberal arts college has no longer a function in contemporary society and is inevitably doomed.

With the latter point of view the writer has no sympathy. The programs and methods of the college have been ill-adapted to social needs, but the values of a genuine liberal culture are of greater importance today than at any time in our national history. There is serious need, however, for a redefining of the functions of the college, and for a thorough revision of the institution to meet modern social demands.

A liberal arts program should deal with the whole life as men are living it today. It should make men and women intelligent about every factor of contemporary life. It should make them masters of their environment to the degree that they can control and direct it toward chosen goals.

A Modernized Program

When the liberal college is truly functioning, what should it be doing? It should, first of all, be an arts college. The first two arts to be considered are landscape and architecture. The external environment of the campus must be beautiful. This establishes the tone for everything else. A beautiful campus is itself a significant discipline.

Art in the external environment should be accompanied by a representation of all the other arts in the curriculum. They should be there on a par with every other subject, and their curricula and methods of instruction should be determined by their own requirements.

Furthermore, the expressive and creative functions of the arts must be given full recognition. For example, students in Bucknell University have this year been participating in a number of art functions. There is a symphony orchestra which has one full rehearsal each week under skilled leadership. It has given several programs during the year on the campus and elsewhere. It has combined with a large mixed chorus for such oratorios as Handel's "Messiah," Bach's "Christmas Oratorio," and Mendelssohn's "St. Paul." Students receive credit toward an arts degree for this work.

A Call for Creative Activity

In addition to these functions the department of music has contributed a great deal to the cultural enjoyment and atmosphere of the campus as well as the surrounding community by recitals and chapel programs during the year by members of the faculty who are artist teachers. Ten or more such recitals have been given. This is the arts college functioning through music.

The other arts should occupy a similar relationship to the campus and community. First of all there should be creative artists on the faculty. In the past, colleges have had only art, literary and music critics. Very few, if any, of them have had either the desire or the ability to create. Colleges and universities take great pride in having on the faculty research scientists, and even demand productive scholarship of their men in various fields. Why should not the same encouragement be given to creative work in the arts? It is the writer's intention to do just that at Bucknell University.

A college will really function when it reaches the level of creative productivity in all fields. Our method of teaching literature is a good case in point. In most instances it is taught by persons who have never even attempted to produce a piece of literature.

What would it do for literature in America if we should insist that teachers of it should also be producers of their art? It would smash the present system to smithereens, but it would doubtless pave the way for a great period of creative literature. There are colleges that have been teaching English and American literature for a century or more that do not have one creative writer among their alumni. This ought to be ample evidence that something is wrong.

Creative Social Sciences

There are a few signs that this is being recognized by the colleges. Last year Thornton Wilder was a member of the faculty of the University of Chicago, and recently Knox College and Bucknell University each had Miss Ida M. Tarbell on their faculties for a period. Robert Frost, the poet, has served in a similar capacity at Amherst and the University of Michigan.

How will the arts college function in the social sciences? At this point the entire philosophy and program of the college must be reformulated. In the past the social program of the college has been largely passive. It has taught history, economics, government and education, etc., but the methodology has been quite theoretical and academic. It has taken no responsibility for the formulation of a social program. It has attempted to teach its students a social and moral idealism wholly out of harmony with the economic and political institutions of society.

It has thus produced a moral conflict in the minds of its students that has almost incapacitated them for active social, economic and political leadership. The educated man or woman either shrinks from active leadership or is forced to remain on the sidelines.

The social sciences must become creative. They must turn their intelligence to social objectives and to human planning. They must evolve social programs and set up and conduct experiments to achieve those predetermined ends.

Opportunity for Experiment

How can these functions be performed? There are numerous possibilities. In the first place most college campuses, and in particular those outside the urban areas, are quite definite social units and offer unusually fine opportunities for social experimentation. The organization and administration of student government provide an excellent opportunity, so does the administration of the college itself.

A campus with 1,000 persons in a small town, for example, provides an unusual opportunity to experiment with socialized medicine. The fact is that at Bucknell we are now operating a fine system of the kind. Each of a thousand students pays $6 per year as a medical fee. The university maintains a full-time resident physician, three full-time graduate nurses, and a hospital with fifteen beds. The student's fee of $6 entitles him to a medical examination and all medical services, save major operations, that he may need. With a little additional financial aid these services may be extended to include full clinical facilities.

The opportunities for such experimentation extend beyond the local campus, but it will require the cooperation of various groups and governmental units. The administration of relief, housing problems, health and recreational programs are only a few examples of such cooperation with towns and communities. The doing of such things will raise the social sciences to the level of creativeness, and will represent the liberal college functioning at its best.

There is another field in which the liberal college may function effectively. It is in providing a health, recreation and physical education program for all students. The recreational program, for example, might well include practically everything that adults enjoy doing, from individual hiking to the most formal institutional functions, from games to trips to weekend lodges in near-by mountains, and a well-balanced social program for dances, parties, etc.

In the realm of ethics, morality and religion similarly, the liberal college must become creative.

The New Teaching

In order to make it possible for members of college faculties to do creative work, it will be necessary to change rather radically the present emphasis upon the teaching function. Burdensome teaching loads will have to be reduced. This can be done without any serious loss. Colleges, at present, attempt to do entirely too much teaching and do not place enough emphasis upon learning. College teaching could be reduced 50 per cent with fine results, if students were made to assume that much additional responsibility for their education. This would have several splendid effects upon the college program. It would substitute a good educational philosophy for a poor one, and it would release much of faculty energy, now used for drudgery, for creative work.

Thus, when the liberal college is functioning creatively in all its areas, it becomes a social institution of unusual significance.

"THE CONQUEST OF A CONTINENT"

A pictorial representation of the westward progress of the pioneer in this country is clearly given in a new historical map of the United States of America entitled, "The Conquest of a Continent". It was published in May, 1933, sponsored by the National Fellowship Appeal Committee of the American Association of University Women, the chairman of which is Mrs. Frederick G. Atkinson of Minneapolis, Minn. Sale of the map is handled by the Association's branches throughout the country, with all profits dedicated to the Million Dollar Fellowship Fund.

A bird's eye view of the whole pageantry of the nation's history rewards even casual inspection of this map, which is as pleasing pictorially as it is accurate, historically. The map has a broad appeal, both as a document of historical importance and as a decorative wall picture. Interpretative panels border the map, those at sides and bottom picturing twenty-eight significant scenes in the country's history, with three scenes at the top showing three determining factors responsible for its development. The peoples of Europe are pictured arriving here as emigrants, "bringing with them their age-old cultures and customs to be modified under new surroundings." A second scene at the top pictures the early settlers gazing upon the panorama of free land spread before them — free land, the conquest and settlement of which "determined the course of American history, changed the thoughts and habits of a people, created the Manifest Destiny of a World Power." The third picture shows airplanes, modern trains, factories and other inventions of the mind of man which "conquered the limitations of time, space and human strength."

The body of the map proper has been presented in the modern spirit, with large areas of flat color and the elimination of unimportant detail. There is clear designation of the various routes by water and by land which were traversed by hunters, traders, missionaries, settlers and industrialists, and the map defines the larger areas of the country in the order of their annexation. A significant feature is the listing of "milestones" on the way towards the development of universal education, starting with the year 1636, when Harvard College was "founded by the Puritans to train the clergy", and closing with the years 1847 and 1850, when Iowa and Utah, respectively, opened state universities equally to men and women.

The historian responsible for the map was Mrs. H. K. Painter, of Minneapolis, a graduate of Mount Holyoke College, and a former teacher of American History. Mrs. Painter spent two years in careful research for this project, and the historical details have been checked for accuracy by Miss Agnes Larson, assistant professor of history at St. Olaf College, a fellow in history of the American Association of University Women. The map was drawn by the Minneapolis artist, August Kaiser, and it is published by the Bureau of Engraving in Minneapolis under the auspices of the Fellowship Committee of the A. A. U. W. It is lithographed in full color upon a good quality of paper, 21 by 27 inches in size.

All inquiries concerning "The Conquest of a Continent" may be addressed to the Chairman of the Map Committee of the Million Dollar Fellowship Fund, in the American Association of University Women, Mrs. Frank N. Edmonds, 2119 Girard Avenue South, Minneapolis, Minnesota.

sity at Lewisburg. Current reports concerning the impossibility of transferring credits were contradicted by generous advertising in the daily newspapers and by frequent news releases. Personal interviews by our contact men definitely assured prospective students of the possibility of transferring credits. Students began to enroll. The acceptance of students, and the publication of this acceptance, brought an increasing number of applications for admission. The net result was 142 as given above. Since the above was written, word has come that eight more students from Hazleton will enroll Monday morning, September 18.

Hershey, former head of the Department of Political Science and International Law at Indiana University, and a member of President Wilson's peace commission at Paris in 1918-19, died on June 12, 1933 at the State Hospital in Madison, Ind. after a long illness of Bright's disease and nephritis. He was 65 years old.

law at the Harvard Law School in 1891-92, and then went to Heidelberg University, where, in 1894, he received a Ph. D. degree, and later spent a year at the University of Paris.

He went to the University of Indiana in 1895 as Assistant Professor of Political Science. In 1914 he was appointed head of the newly created department of political science at the university.

Dr. Hershey spent a year, in 1913-14, as a fellow of the Kahn Foundation, travelling in Europe and the Orient. After his return from the Paris peace conference, he lectured at Harvard on government for a year.

Dr. Hershey often spoke on international topics at various gatherings. In 1916, at a meeting of the American Society of International Law in Washington, he criticized the unrestricted use of submarines by Germany and urged the formation after the war of an international high court to regulate the use of submarine and mines.

In 1928 he was the guest of honor at a reception given by the Mexico City Bar Association. Americans, he said at that time, did not want intervention in Mexico or territorial expansion, and were good friends of Mexico.

He also contributed to publications on political science and law.

The Cincinnati Times-Star carried the following article in their "Who's News Today" column about Dr. George D. Strayer:

Dr. George D. Strayer of Teachers' College of Columbia University, deserves some kind of a trophy for the way he has plugged for education since the start of the depression. Dr. Strayer is more or less of an old-line educator, never deeply engrossed in modern theories, who observed that education would be one of the major casualties of the smash-up unless somebody did something about it. He has pleaded for Federal and State aid, and for the maintenance of standards, and he now presents to the national conference on the financing of education an informed and spirited appeal for Governmental action, in accord with his previous pleas for Federal aid without control.

Dr. Strayer has been on the Teachers' College faculty for twenty-eight years. A native of Wayne, Pa., he was graduated from Bucknell, and later took his doctor's degree at Columbia. He is the author of many books on education, an earnest and diligent advocate of basic and adequate provisions for public education.

Editor's Corner

THIS is the special "Come Home for Homecoming" issue. As if such were needed with five thousand loyal Bucknellians just pawing the air in anticipation of the big day. What was that date? Oh! Yes! October 28!

EVERY indication points to one of the best games and one of the best crowds and THE best program ever arranged for Homecoming. Our best advice would be to get here Friday in time to enter the golf tournament so that the week-end enjoyment need not all be crammed into Saturday. (You can still play your golf Saturday morning in order to get a shot at the fine prizes).

THE Alumni Banquet to follow the game is arousing wide interest. One must eat and we have been promised a fine meal at the Dining Hall at six p. m. There will be no "requests" and only one short after dinner talk—that by President Rainey who wishes to meet the alumni and recite to them some of his plans for the future. We can guarantee that those who wish to drive home yet that evening will be on their way by eight thirty o'clock!

AS for game predictions we are always Scotch and cautious. We do know, however, and pass it on for what it is worth, that "Pop" Warner of Temple never coached a poor football machine! Likewise and even more so Carl Snavely knows a thing or two and his team CAN score!

IN the midst of writing this corner we received the golf trophies and only by sheer mental will power and the arguments of our secretary were we kept writing instead of going out to practice a few pitch shots! The plaque for low gross (anybody's prize) would look great over any mantle—and for the hot shots who deal only in pars and birdies the low net cup would not be sneezed at!

THE singing by the student body last year in The Baptist Church of "The Pagan Love Song" was matched at Convocation this year when the faculty paraded into the edifice to the strains of "The War March of the Priests".

WHETHER John Erskine "got it" or not is still a moot question but he did a little polite knifing of pedagogues and he might have been "tuned up" by that prelude on the organ.

WE say an editorial "Amen" to John Erskine's philosophy of "Learn to Live". His address at Convocation, reported in another column, was one of the best in years on this old campus. His refreshing modern viewpoints blew away a lot of musty cob webs that stifle the air at educational institutions.

WHILE we are writing of air you just must come back to see all the air that is being filled by the new Literature Building. It is rising now to the roof timbers out there toward the Stadium. One becomes increasingly proud of Alma Mater as she puts on her new dress of buildings.

IS there any use of our going further with our arguments? You WANT to come to Homecoming! All right! COME! It's your party and we need YOU to make it a success.

COME HOME FOR HOMECOMING.

THE ALUMNI BANQUET

PLANS for the first alumni homecoming banquet are meeting with fine receptions among alumni everywhere. The idea has met with instant approval and a capacity crowd of five hundred is expected at the dinner following the football game. Invitations have been extended to all alumni and alumnae clubs to send representatives in order that the message of the president may be relayed to all Bucknell clubs.

The dinner will be served promptly at 6 P. M. in the Dining Hall at The Women's College on St. George Street. The menu will consist of cocktail, chicken a la king, salad, potatoes, cauliflower, ice cream, cakes, coffee, mints, and the nominal price of fifty cents per plate has been set to insure a capacity crowd. Reservations are now being received. Limited accommodations in the Dining Hall make these advance reservations necessary.

President Homer Price Rainey will acquaint alumni with the future plans and policy of the University. There will be no "requests" of any sort and the dinner is planned as a general meeting place for all alumni. President Rainey will also present the Homecoming Alumni Golf Tournament awards at the dinner.

A TOUGH ONE TO LOSE

DUQUESNE University with a big team ably coached by shrewd Elmer Leyden, he of Four Horsemen fame, eked out a six to nothing win over the Orange and Blue in smoky Forbes Field on the night of Friday, October 6. Bucknell played good football — they had to to keep the score at six to nothing — but not one single "break" came the way of the Bisons. We believe that the entire season will see no such "breakless" game as this one. The Bisons came out of the fray "bloody but unbowed" as they took the bitter cup that Fate had handed them. There are six more games!

HASSRICK, '06, HOMECOMING CHAIRMAN

Dr. Edward W. Pangburn, '15, President of The General Alumni Association has appointed Romain C. Hassrick, Esq., '06, Chairman for Homecoming, 1933. Mr. Hassrick is a past president of The Philadelphia Alumni Club, and a prominent legal figure in the city. His committee members are all outstanding members of the alumni groups they represent.

The chairman and his committee with The Alumni Secretary will have charge of the program beginning Friday, October 27 with the Golf Tournament and winding up Saturday evening, October 28 with The Alumni Banquet. The committee members are:

New York	Dr. George S. Stevenson, '15
Philadelphia	Mr. Barton Mackey, '18
Pittsburgh	Earl A. Morton, Esq., '05
Reading	Howard V. Fisher, Esq., '13
Harrisburg	Mr. Nelson S. Rounsley, '21

NEW YORK CLUB SPONSORS EASTON LUNCHEON

Special arrangements have just been concluded as we go to press for a Bucknell Luncheon in the Gold Room, Hotel Easton, Easton, Penna. on October 21, 1933 at 12 o'clock noon, prior to the Bucknell-Lafayette football game. President Homer P. Rainey will probably attend and a Bucknell crowd of more than one hundred is expected. Luncheon will be served a la carte and Hotel Easton will be Bucknell Headquarters.

MESSAGES FROM TWO PRESIDENT'S

To The Alumni:

I am happy to take this opportunity of extending to you my personal greetings and also my personal invitation to attend our Homecoming activities on October 27 and 28. We are making an unusual effort to make this one of the finest Homecoming programs we have ever had, and I am very anxious to have an opportunity of presenting to the Alumni at this time our program for the future.

Yours for a Happy Homecoming,
HOMER P. RAINEY

BUCKNELL'S GREATEST HOMECOMING

Sons and daughters of the University do not have to be invited to Lewisburg on this occasion; merely reminded of the date

Saturday, October 28, 1933

Plans are definitely formed to make this day the occasion for the greatest celebration by alumni in Bucknell history.

A fine group of boys, coached by Carl Snavely, will act as hosts to Pop Warner and his Temple University Owls. Look for plenty of real football entertainment.

Golf; very impromptu gatherings of former college friends and lastly the alumni banquet.

At the banquet you will meet President Rainey and learn of his program which will mean much to the future of Bucknell.

A week-end spent with real friends under ideal conditions.

Do not fail yourself.

E. W. PANGBURN, '15,

President The Alumni Council

ALUMNI GOLF TOURNAMENT

Trophies to be Awarded in Annual Homecoming Golf Matches, October 27-28

A LARGE silver plaque properly inscribed and a modern golf cup will be awarded as tournament prizes to the low net and low gross scorers in the annual Alumni Homecoming Golf Tournament on October 27 and 28. The prizes are on exhibition at The Alumni Office and will be later displayed at the Golf Club.

All alumni, regardless of class, degree, or residence are eligible for competition. A tournament fee of $1.00 will be charged to defray expenses. No qualifying round will be necessary and awards will be based upon eighteen consecutive holes, played either Friday afternoon or Saturday morning. Mail registration for the tournament will be accepted. Home club handicaps will be used in computing the low net scores.

The tournament is strictly for alumni and faculty although the course will be open to friends, students, parents, and visitors with tournament players having precedence on the tee.

A number of the larger Bucknell Alumni Clubs are sending teams to participate in the tournament. Some dozen club members holding the alumni

Dr. James P. Whyte
President B. U. Golf Club

LIFE membership are registered to date. The first entrant, the president of the club, whose picture we present opined that "The first shall be last—etc." Nevertheless he is only one of the stalwarts who will welcome the visitors and arrange the flights.

The awards for the tournament will be presented at the Alumni Banquet after the game by President Rainey. The best prize, the plaque for low gross, has been termed "anybody's award" with the dub on a par with the professional in shooting at par minus a handicap. The cup for low net will, of course, go to the best in the field and we understand that New York, Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh all are sending brothers with explicit instructions to bring it home.

The Club House will be golfers headquarters for two days, October 27 and 28. Ample dressing rooms are open without charge and a special crew of caddies is now being recruited by the caddy master, Harold Evans. Every arrangement possible will be made by the committee in charge to assure alumni of a cordial reception and an enjoyable visit.

A PREDICTION

ALL the signs, omens, and stars point to October 28 as the biggest Bucknell week-end in many, many years. Alumni Homecoming plus the golf tournament, football game, and alumni banquet will bring more alumni to Lewisburg than have ever been here before. That is our prediction.

Our fellow secretary at Temple University tells us that The Reading Railroad will probably declare an extra dividend after collecting all the fares of Temple rooters and students who will follow the team to Lewisburg. They have already engaged one special train with probably more to follow.

Bucknellians from near and far are writing for tickets and our own correspondence has never been so heavy, not to mention that of Graduate Manager B. W. Griffith.

This Temple-Bucknell game looks like a natural! Are YOUR tickets ordered yet?

ERSKINE CONVOCATION SPEAKER

Noted Author and Teacher Issues Challenge at Exercises Marking Formal College Opening

DR. JOHN ERSKINE, Columbia professor, novelist, and musician, delighted students and faculty alike as he addressed them at Bucknell's Convocation exercises on September 22. Dr. Erskine was presented by President Rainey as the man "who best typifies the creative spirit in the world of education". With subtle wit and barbed shafts, aimed here at the students and there at the faculty, the speaker made a lasting impression with his address on "Creative Education".

Convocation was held in the Lewisburg Baptist Church with academically gowned faculty and students filling the auditorium to capacity.

An idea quite radical was broached by Erskine, when he stated that he advocated "a college education for only that sect known as the creative class". He pictured what a college education would be like under such ideal conditions, describing a system which would completely eliminate the old academic scheme of things, abolishing survey courses and other landmarks of the old school.

"Keats and other greats of literature could not make much headway by the non-creative method", he pointed out. He praised Keats as being one of the greatest creative geniuses that ever lived. "He suggested real thoughts throughout his works", he said, pointing out that Keats' genius lay in his ability to understand the reaction of his audience.

He scorned the idea of the psychologists in attributing every human act to motives. "There isn't any such thing as a motive to the average individual", he declared, "and if motives do exist, they are known only to Freud and a few of his associates."

Erskine paid especial tribute to the writers of the Old Testament. "They were real creators", he said. In speaking of the various characters of Biblical days, he laid particular stress on the story of David. "We would like to be able to describe a character who does wrong. David did wrong many times, and yet he is believed to be a great hero. If I told a story about him and signed my name to it, I would be severely criticised, and the criticism would probably be justified, because I more than likely would not employ the proper method".

His closing words were particularly impressive, but at the same time simple. Stressing the idea of hope for the future, he said, "I think that we have the greatest chance in the world just to live. The greatest pictures haven't been painted, and the greatest books haven't been written".

At the conclusion of Dr. Erskine's address, President Rainey awarded the various college prizes won during the year 1932-1933.

Challenges Faculty

Following the exercises Dr. Erskine talked to the faculty at luncheon in the Dining Hall. He challenged them to "be themselves" for a while, if necessary to the neglect of the students, as they would eventually become more human folks and thoroughly likeable as individuals instead of mere names in the catalogue and persons aloof and unknown to students. He urged the teachers to make their work more attractive to students and cited an example of his own student days wherein he told of how he and several of his colleagues had a most difficult time "making the course interesting for the teacher".

More than one hundred members of the faculty and friends enjoyed the luncheon party with Dr. Erskine. Later in the day he talked to several of the composition classes of Dr. Harry R. Warfel, '20, his host on the campus.

Convocation marked the official and formal opening of college although classes had opened the week previous. Enrolment at the time of Convocation had reached some 940 students, only a slight decrease over the enrolment of the past year.

BROWNSVILLE WINS B. U. CUP

TEAM PREPARES FOR TEMPLE

By Arthur L. Brandon, Director of Publicity

HOMECOMING! The Bucknell Bisons! The Temple Owls! The Alumni Dinner! The Golf Tournament! Any one of these features is enough to make the friends of Bucknell want to be back on the campus October 28; all of these combined make it a celebration not to be missed.

Homecoming and Football have become synonymous in American colleges. The academic is not thrust aside....football merely expresses the "call of the outdoors"....on an occasional week-end. And this year one of the best choices of all time is available for the alumni of Bucknell....the Bisons, coached by Carl Snavelly, and the Owls, coached by Glen "Pop" Warner....meeting in the Memorial Stadium.

What of the game? It should be a thriller. All Temple-Bucknell games have been. In six meetings, only a scant touchdown separates the total scores of the teams. Both teams will be at their peak for the game. Dr. Pangburn sends word that the Temple squad voted that the Bucknell game is the one above all others that they wish to win. You know how the Bisons feel about it! And "Pop" Warner and Carl Snavelly are friends! Oh, well! They'll just have to be "enemies" for a day... but they can take it. Carl and the team want your support in this game....in the stands....Ray! Bucknell!

The Bisons have looked like a real football team in their first three games, winning from Waynesburg 46 to 7 and from Lebanon Valley 34 to 0. Duquesne, with one of the East's best teams, won 6 to 0, though the Bisons appeared to be their equal in all departments—a "break" decided the game.

Bucknell coaches have molded a better balanced team this fall than at any time in recent years except possibly in 1929 and 1931. If the team starts clicking it may be the equal of either of those great elevens. The co-captain plan has been very successful and in my opinion the spirit exceeds any we have had on the squad in many campaigns. Owen James, stellar left guard, leads the offense, and Nicholas Farina, the hard-fighting center, directs the defense.

The end positions have been played mostly by Jack Dorman and Harold Endler, with William Wilkinson, Bob Pethick, and Tim Delaney giving them valuable aid. Jack Dempsey, George Boiston, and Harry Bergkamp are taking care of the tackle posts. Supporting James at guard are Ralph Furiell and Jack Drayton. George McGaughey relieves Farina at center.

Backfield talent is plentiful, with at least eight men doing splendid work. The usual starters are John Sitarsky, a sophomore, at quarterback, Eddie Myers and Joe Rhubright at the halfbacks, and Charles Peters at fullback. Joe Reznichak and Phil Miller, have played prominent parts in each game, and Edwin Raymaley and Roland Bean have figured in all the games. The eight men have handled the spinners, reverses, passes and the kicking game creditably in all their appearances.

Warner will bring a team primed to the hilt for the Bison encounter. Most of the veterans who beat Bucknell a year ago are on the squad, and several sophomores have been added, including Don Watts and Henry Smith, backs, and James Russell and Joe Zanin, linemen. Joseph Pilconis, end, is regarded as one of the leading all-America candidates this season, after being placed on many teams a year ago.

"Pop" Warner's homecoming visit will not be his first to Bucknell. Many years ago on occasions he brought his Carlisle Indians to the campus, and in 1928 he conducted a coaching school here. The Bisons met his Cornell and his University of Pittsburgh teams on their home fields.

Warner is using a "squirrel cage" line shift this year that is attracting much attention. He promises to have it perfected by the time of the Bucknell game. Snavelly uses the single-wing back system with both the balanced and the unbalanced line. Spinners, reverses, cut-backs, passes, and quick kicks all evolve systematically from the formations. The attack is largely a modified Warner system of other days. The battle between Warner and Snavelly promises to be one of the features of the week-end.

But football is not all. A soccer match will be played, with the Temple booters the opponents of Joe Reno's fast-developing team. Golf! The course is in better shape than ever before. Bring the clubs.

And while you are visiting the campus drop in on some of the classes and see some of your student and teacher friends in a serious part of their college life. The "new plan" is working. The "old plan" is working. Bucknell is carrying on!

WELCOME FROM THE CHAIRMAN

Romain C. Hassrick, Esq., '06, Homecoming Chairman for 1933 wires the following welcome to all Bucknellians for October 27 and 28:

Entered as second-class matter December 23, 1930 at the post office at Lewisburg, Pa., under the Act of August 24, 1912.

WE salute the Bisons! Every wearer of the Orange and Blue this season deported himself with glory to Alma Mater and distinction to himself in winning great football triumphs over our four oldest rivals, Lafayette, Villanova, W. & J., and Temple. Bravo! Boys! May your successors on the striped turf do as well.

WE pay tribute to the men of the team and the staff of coaches, trainers, and managers in a longer article on another page. We mention here the names of a few loyal rooters and advisers (not of the Sunday coaching department) who have been morale builders for the coaches and the team throughout the season. The list is headed by none other than the President of The General Alumni Association, that ardent and loyal medico from Holmesburg and a member of the Class of 1915, Dr. Edward W. Pangburn. "Dr. Ed" takes his vacation in week ends throughout the Bucknell football season and is with the team at every game. He has become an integral part of Bucknell athletics. B. R. (Young "Cosz") Seemann, '21 and John ("Crissy") Crisswell, '14, are dyed in the wool fans from Pittsburgh as is James Alfred ("Jim") Pangburn, '20, member of the Athletic Council. Edward ("Ed") Innes, '08, of Canton also roots hard at every game. Thomas ("Tom") Wood, '05, journeys from Muncy to see nearly every game and his sage counsel and enthusiasm are always evident. The President of the Philadelphia Alumni Club, H. Frazier ("Jim") Sheffer, '18, seldom misses and always lends a hand where needed. These few fellows and many more that space alone prevents our listing are one of the reasons for great Bucknell teams, and proof of the ever-existent Bucknell alumni spirit.

ROBERT DAWSON, '22, Superintendent in charge of construction of Bucknell's new Literature Building is doing a great job. The building has stabbed the Bucknell skyline with remarkable speed and as we go to press the interior work progresses toward the opening in late February or early March.

REPORTS from the new unit, The Junior College at Wilkes-Barre, indicate a fine reception by the citizenry of the community of this project. More than 160 students are members of the freshman, the only class at the Junior College. This number is expected to double next year when the second class enters.

BUCKNELL honors an alumnus, Paul Althouse, '12, in inviting him to appear with the campus symphony orchestra here and at Wilkes-Barre. Both concerts are expected to draw capacity crowds because of the prominence of this Metropolitan star and the fine reputation earned in one year by the new Bucknell Symphony Orchestra.

THE Junior College had a football team, developed in October and playing three games. One was won, two lost. Perhaps next season they may schedule a game with the regular freshman team on the campus here. Bucknell vs. Bucknell, but with the players absolute strangers to one another!

WE enjoyed a great alumni dinner recently at Easton, Penna. It was a Lafayette party and we were the guest of the Alumni Secretary there. Coaches Snavely and McCracken of Bucknell and Lafayette respectively, were speakers. How about an alumni party for Lewisburg next year to honor a visiting coach on the night before the game? Bucknell has more than one hundred alumni in Lewisburg and it has been years since we had a Lewisburg alumni party.

WE bring this column up to date with a quotation of Dr. Charles Francis Potter's, '07, gleaned from the daily press in which he advocates changing the term "lynching" to "Rolphing" transferring the honor from old Judge Lynch of Virginia (who never did deserve the doubtful honor) to Governor Rolph of California who, says Dr. Potter, "praises such acts and should receive the honor of having his name attached to them".

AT this glad season --- no ---- let's start again ---- When Yuletide comes 'round ---- that's hackneyed too ---- try again ---- With crisp winter snow and joy in all hearts --- whoa! -- that's terrible! Anyway --- to Bucknellians everywhere

A MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A HAPPY NEW YEAR!

ALUMNI!! KNOW YOUR ALMA MATER!!

The following editorial from the pen of a former editor of this magazine, Dr. Harry R. Warfel, '20, tells of the Bucknell of today. We present this treatise to inform alumni of the changes that have taken place on the campus since "Way back when".

—THE EDITOR.

A COLLEGE, like a business concern, is known both for its products and its methods. When Henry Ford startled the world with his automobile, he likewise interested his competitors in his method of plant layout and assembly. That method was taken over and used elsewhere. But when his product was surpassed in quality by that of other manufacturers, Ford had to alter his car. The sweep of other cars to the front is symbolical of the eternal need for change and improvement.

Bucknell University has not been unaware of the need for changes for improving its methods and to produce, if I may use the term, a better product. From the day of our founding in 1846 until the present time, Bucknell has held an honorable place in American higher education. For many years, since the development of accrediting bureaus, Bucknell has been a grade A college on the lists of the American Association of Universities. This honor is shared by some two hundred of our thousand American institutions of higher learning. Our quality is unquestionably high.

But, unsatisfied with high rating, we are aspiring under the leadership of President Homer P. Rainey to be one of a smaller circle of truly great and uniquely powerful institutions. Great wealth may not be ours; majestic structures may not dot our campus. But in the essentials of an educational institution we boast superior possessions. Our faculty is composed largely of men and women who have become widely known for their book and magazine contributions to learning. Headed by our president, a recognized authority on school finance, our professors are known for their contributions to most of the fields of knowledge. Our campus is one of the few naturally beautiful ones in the country. Our physical and laboratory equipment, though adequate, is constantly being improved. We have embarked upon a building programme which will give us a plant both useful and beautiful.

Our student body, a cosmopolitan cross-section of the East, in a recent nation-wide test, stood well up among the first fourth of the institutions of America. In a professional aptitude test, of twenty-seven seniors who took it, nine stood above ninety per cent. The others stood high. With this record of achievement in the past year, we feel certain that Bucknell University offers the best opportunities for future success to its students.

Our past history is equally fine. In every profession and business, Bucknell graduates hold places of trust and supremacy.

It is to the immediate future that you and I look with greatest interest. Is Bucknell, you may ask, planning to uphold its high history of achievement? The answer is an unqualified Yes. In every department and in every activity our future will continue to command the respectful attention and admiration of our public and alumni.

In the belief that collegiate education must prepare a graduate both to live happily amid the myriad beauties of the universe and to take his place among the leaders of his business or profession, we believe that a well-rounded education in the arts and sciences is compatible with the best training for vocational success. But in giving this full training, this wide-visioned understanding of the problems of society and men's efforts to make life beautiful, we are not reducing the usual amount of pre-professional training. Our programme is strengthened and improved in every department. Our pre-professional work in engineering, law, medicine, and social science will be better.

Our new programme involves two changes in organization and procedure. The first change has led to the division of the college into two parts: the first two years, in which general education is stressed; and the second two years, in which specialized, or technical, pre-professional education engages the undivided attention of the student.

By this change several beneficial results are obtainable. First, the student is given a complete orientation in all the major disciplines in his first two years. Here he is acquainted with the history of mankind and the meliorative efforts of our great workers in religion, law, science, literature, and the arts; with the facts of physiology and hygiene; and with the basic courses pre-requisite for his last two years. The roster of courses in these two years is this: In the first year — World Literature, The History of Western Man, A Survey of the Natural Sciences, Personal and School Hygiene, Survey of the Fine Arts, and Musical Culture. In the second year: Modern Social Institutions, Introduction to Philosophy, General Psychology, Founders and Leaders of the Great Religions, and Principles of Economics.

The second beneficial result is the intensive study of a student's major subject in his last two years. If he desires to go to medical school, or law school, or to go to another professional school, or if he desires to specialize in engineering, or in business, or in a teaching subject, or in a cultural group, he is free to do so. During his last two years, therefore, a student is definitely engaged in mastering those materials with which he will shape his future career. No side-issues take his time from his main interest.

A third advantage accrues to the student through this programme. In his first two years he, like Balboa surveying the Pacific from a peak in Darien, becomes acquainted with the fundamental problems and situations in life. In his last two years he specializes in the solution of these problems from the vantage ground of his chosen business or profession. He works not aimlessly in the task of amassing mere information; he works with the full knowledge that this information can appreciably lead his steps toward a rich personal life and a wholesome personal contribution to the guidance and improvement of society. A man thinks as wisely as he has complete information or facts. Under our plan no graduate should be found wanting either in cultural or pre-professional knowledge.

Bucknell's second major change lies in its revised entrance requirements. Applicants for admission are accepted on the basis of individual qualifications to do college work. In general any high school graduate of good moral and intellectual standing may be admitted without regard for the subjects he studied in high school. By this change we make possible the opportunity for advanced study on the part of those who, lacking technical, required courses under the old plan, have been shut out. But in no sense is this a reduction of standards. We offer every young man and woman the opportunity to secure a higher education. His success will depend, as always, upon the capability he demonstrates.

Dean of Students

Under the leadership of Dean J. H. Miller student activities have been centralized. A student-faculty congress, charged with regulating the complicated maze of organizations on the campus, is attempting to make the students think intelligently in terms of making the so-called extra-curricular activities contribute to the educational process. A measurable improvement has been marked by this reorganization, so that student activities are now really meaningful.

In athletics Bucknell has always stressed the full development of intercollegiate sports. At the present time we have a successfully organized "Athletics for All" programme which really functions. Few students during the year do not take part in either class or society or varsity games.

Bucknell, by its new plan, offers a sound curriculum, administered by successful educators. We bespeak the interest and cooperation of our alumni and friends in its successful development.

CHRISTMAS BOOK SALE

THE Alumni Office announces on the outside back cover of this issue of The Bucknell Alumni Monthly a special sale of books which will make an attractive and appreciated Christmas gift for any Bucknellian. The selection includes the privately printed "Thirty Years as President of Bucknell with Baccalaureate and Other Addresses" by John Howard Harris; "Memorials of Bucknell University—1919-1931, the Administration of Emory William Hunt", published by the University, and "The Inaugural Address of Homer Price Rainey," published by The Bucknell Alumni Monthly.

These three books chronicle the history of Bucknell University from 1888, when Dr. Harris was elected President to the present time with President Rainey as the chief officer of the institution.

The regular price of the three books and the picture would be seven dollars if purchased separately. The special Christmas offer for four dollars is effective only as long as the limited supply lasts.

Limited Supply

Only a limited number of copies of the Dr. Harris book were printed in 1926 by his family. Less than one hundred copies remain for sale. The books were presented to The Alumni Association by Dr. Mary

B. Harris, '84, with the proceeds from the sale directed to go to The Alumni Fund.

As a special offer we include with the purchase of each set of books a beautiful photograph, suitable for framing, of the artist's model of the future campus plans. This photograph of the model is known as "Bucknell Today and Tomorrow."

PRESIDENT RAINEY — AUTHOR

Three important articles from the pen of President Homer Price Rainey have recently appeared in print. The first article entitled "The Arts in the Liberal Arts Colleges" was featured in the November number of The University of Chicago Magazine. A picture of Dr. Rainey with his daughter Lenore appeared with the article.

In the New York Herald Tribune under date of Sunday, November 5, President Rainey describes the purpose and function of The Junior College. The article was featured in the section devoted to editorials and news of education. Many letters have been received by Dr. Rainey in praise of this article and inquiring about the Junior College and Bucknell.

As a sequel to former articles dealing with the Liberal Arts program in theory The Bucknell Journal of Education in the October number published "The Liberal College Functioning" by President Rainey. This monograph details the workings of the new program at Bucknell.

SEEMANN, '17 CAPTURES HONORS IN HOMECOMING GOLF TOURNAMENT

Fourteen alumni golfers competed for honors in the 1933 Homecoming Tourney staged on Friday and Saturday, October 27 and 28. Only six of this field finished and turned in complete cards. Both low gross prize and low net were won by Samuel Leroy Seemann, '17, of Pittsburgh and The Alcoma Country Club.

The two awards, a bronze plaque for low net and loving cup for low gross, were presented at The Alumni Banquet Saturday evening. The winner, Mr. Seemann, was unable to be present at the banquet but his prizes were gathered in for him by a proxy in the person of Mr. A. R. Mathieson, '20, former president of the Western Pennsylvania Alumni Association.

Mr. Seemann turned in a card of eighty-four for low gross score. His nearest rival was N. F. Ziegler, '32, of Harrisburg who shot an eighty-six. Third place on the scoring chart went to Wm. T. Windsor, Esq., '15, Milton, with an eighty-eight.

The double winner, Mr. Seemann, on his playing recorded four pars and two birdies. The birdies were hung up on holes four and five. With his Pennsylvania Golfers Association official handicap of twelve Mr. Seemann netted a seventy-two for the second trophy.

DEAN RIVENBURG CHAIRMAN

As President of The Eastern Association of College Deans and Advisers of Men, Dean R. H. Rivenburg, '97, presided at the annual convention of this organization at Atlantic City on December 2. He also addressed the convention on the subject "A Dean's Chance".

I am happy to have this opportunity to convey to all the alumni and friends of Bucknell my greetings and best wishes for the Christmas season. Since this is the only practical means at my disposal of reaching you, it is my earnest hope that each of you will regard this as a personal greeting.

Your alma mater through the years has emphasized the supremacy of spiritual values over material things. Due to the tremendous strain and trials of the last three or four years there seems to be emerging today a more genuine appreciation of the functions and social significance of human, moral, and spiritual values. Christmas is the institution, par excellence, in human society which is the supreme glorification of these ideals. This Christmas, therefore, should have a deeper meaning and significance for all of us than others of recent years have had. My wish is that all of us may, in some genuine measure, catch its real meaning and become imbued with its spirit this season. May it bring to all of you good health, joy, and an abiding peace.

"It isn't far to Bethlehem town!
It's anywhere that Christ comes down
And finds in people's friendly face
A welcome and abiding place.
The homes of folks like me and you."

Sincerely and faithfully yours,

James P. Rainey

FOOTBALL REVIEW

Bisons Smother W. & J. in Final Game to Bring Season's Total to Seven Out of Nine.

SEVEN out of nine is the season's record for the 1933 Bucknell football team. The final game was won in a blaze of glory for the players and a rare treat for the fans on November 25 in Memorial Stadium at Lewisburg when Washington and Jefferson was routed 38-6. This was the nineteenth consecutive home game victory for the Bisons. The seniors on the team, Eddie Myers, Jeff James, Nick Farina, Jack Dempsey, Chuck Peters, Jack Dorman, Hub Verhey, Roland Bean, John Kubacki, and Walt Gilleland may boast of their freshman and three year varsity record of never having been defeated in their own stadium. Every one of these seniors took a large part in the final decisive game. The 1933 season, just closed, marked the defeat by Bucknell of her four major opponents, Lafayette, Villanova, Temple, and Washington and Jefferson in a single season. Only seven points separated this great Orange and Blue team from an undefeated season. Six of those points belong to Duquesne and one lone one to Western Maryland, left by the Bisons on the fields of play at Pittsburgh and Scranton, respectively. Sports writers in the daily press rank Bucknell in eleventh place in the East as a result of her season's record.

Two Night Games

The campaign of the Thundering Herd was begun with night games and large scores over Waynesburg and Lebanon Valley in the Bucknell Stadium. The third game, also played at night in the smoke of Pittsburgh's Forbes Field, was a headache and a nightmare with a "break" giving the game to Duquesne 6-0. Many Bucknell fans still refuse to believe it.

The Villanova Squeak

The first Saturday game found the Bucknell "power house" functioning against Harry Stuhldreher's Villanova machine at Philadelphia. This encounter was one of the most hair raising games we have ever thrilled to. The great Villanova ace, Whitey Randour, ran wild in the first half to register the score at 10-0. An inspired Bison team returned to the game to score twice with lightning speed on two great marches. It was then 13-10 with Bucknell on the long count. Villanova flashed to score and it was 17-13. With one minute to play an intercepted Bucknell pass became Villanova's ball on their own four yard line. Leonard Katchel, Bucknell tackle, was rushed into the game to block the kick. He not only blocked it behind the goal but fell on it in the promised land and the game ended Bucknell 19, Villanova 17.

Jersey No. 60

The next week was Joe Reznichak's turn to grab a little glory. Lafayette will long remember Bucknell jersey number 60 and the pair of legs that raced that jersey through, around, over, and under the Easton team in their own backyard to the tune of 21-0. It was a complete rout of the oldest Bucknell rival, Lafayette.

Homecoming Victory

Then came the great Homecoming game with "Pop" Warner of Carlisle Indian, Cornell, Pitt, and Stanford fame bringing his Temple University Owls to Lewisburg to face the Bisons. Their faces were turned largely after Bucknell ball carriers Myers, Peters, and Reznichak as they raced across the Temple goal line three times to wind up a great game 20-7 to the delight of a great alumni homecoming crowd of some twelve thousand.

Scranton Headache

The let down came the next week at Scranton when the Bisons was trailing at the final whistle 14-13 to an inspired Western Maryland team.

Furman Frozen

The Purple Hurricane from Greenville, South Carolina, known as Furman University, swept north but was chilled and frozen by the icy blasts and snow in Memorial Stadium on November 11. The Bisons turned loose their power through real team play with every man jack of the eleven doing his bit to earn a 12-0 victory over a game and fighting team of frozen Southern boys who played valiantly until the end.

Grand Climax

The season's wind up came in startling fashion as Bucknell completely dominated the W. & J. game with a great crew of seniors playing their last for the Orange and Blue. Eddie Myers raced the ends for two touchdowns, Hub Verhey intercepted a pass and ran ninety-four yards for a score, and later was the third man on a triple pass to score again, Joe Rhubright, a junior, caught a long heave from Joe Reznichak for a thrilling touchdown and still not satisfied went through the line for another. The superb line play of Dempsey, Dorman, James and Farina looked like all America performances with Chuck Peters, the great blocking back taking out men like puppets to pave the way for long gains and touchdowns by his team mates in the backfield. It was a thrilling and spectacular triumph to close the football season for a great Orange and Blue team.

THE BISON COACHES

Much has been written in sports articles about the high calibre of Bucknell's coaching staff. They deserve all that has come their way and more. Carl Snavely was paid high tribute by President Rainey at the Homecoming Alumni Banquet as a gentleman and superior type of coach and leader of men. As excellent testimony to the work of the coach along lines other than pure football, is the great respect in which Bisons teams have been held by alumni, faculty and friends who know the individual boys. They are young gentlemen whose conduct off respect in which Bisons teams have been held by college men representative of the best traditions of Bucknell.

Malcolm Musser, '19, Freshman Coach in 1932 and for several seasons prior to this time, has earned the respect and the esteem of the boys who now make up the varsity teams. They learned about Bucknell and football first from "Mal" as freshmen, before their entrance into varsity competition under Snavelly.

Quiet, reserved, shrewd, Max Reed, '24, assistant varsity coach, speaks only when necessary. His words are never wasted so that the men know when he does talk to them he has something worth listening to. In a quiet manner he commands the admiration of the men. They know from his record and his coaching that he is a man among men.

Mose Quinn, he of the Southern drawl and polished manner, is officially new to the Bison Frosh this year but the men for several years have known him as an ardent football fan and former player. His work with the freshmen this season has been outstanding. The boys like "Mose" and work willing for him. He not only coaches them well but inspires them to play their best in every game.

THE TRAINERS

George "Peachy" Kling is the oldest Bucknell trainer in point of service but George "Doc" Hoskins antedates him in numerical years and grey hair. The two are indispensable men to the physical health and moral stamina of the team. Both will long be remembered by every boy that has worn the Orange and Blue under them. A new man in the person of Joe Reno, soccer and boxing coach, also works with the team in the dressing rooms and is an expert on bruises, sore muscles, and the necessary rubbing operations before and after every game. Joe, like the older men, has become a valuable fixture in Bucknell football.

THE ATHLETIC COUNCIL

Loyalty that knows no bounds has indelibly tied Dr. Benjamin W. Griffith, '99, to Bucknell athletics as player, professor and Graduate Manager. His patient dealings with the men earn him complete respect from every one of them. His position often places him in awkward situations but through native ability and the help of a strong athletic council membership he remains today as perhaps the most important cog in all Bucknell athletics.

The Bucknell athletic set up is second to none in ability, attention to detail, and everlasting work against the greatest of odds, financial and athletic.

We know that the Orange and Blue will ever wave with honor and respect from every quarter with able men giving their best to uphold Bucknell and sports traditions.

ALUMNI AT CONFERENCE

Alumni of Bucknell dominated the recent annual Conference on Education held on the campus. More than thirty alumni names appeared on the printed program and it is estimated that more than one hundred Bucknellians engaged in the educational field were present among the five hundred delegates.

FINE ALUMNI BANQUET

More Than Four Hundred Celebrate Victory and Hear Talk by President.

CELEBRATING the Bucknell football victory over Temple and climaxing the Homecoming program for 1933 more than four hundred alumni and friends of the University gathered in the Dining Hall at Women's College on the night of October 28 for the largest Bucknell party ever held on the campus.

President Rainey delivered the address of the evening, relating the plans for the future as drafted by The Board of Trustees and Mr. Jens F. Larsen, University Architect.

Romain C. Hassrick, Esq., '06, of Philadelphia acted as Toastmaster and introduced the speakers and guests of honor, including Honorable Charles P. Vaughan, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Mr. Larsen, Dr. E. W. Pangburn, '15, President of The General Alumni Association, Carl G. Snavely, Head Coach of football, and A. G. Stoughton, '24, Alumni Secretary. Mr. Stoughton presented the golf awards, a bronze plaque and loving cup to Mr. A. R. Mathieson, '20, representing the winner of both prizes, Mr. Samuel Leroy Seemann, '17, of Pittsburgh.

President's Address

President Rainey in responding to his introduction by the Toastmaster stated that with such an occasion and fine crowd he could not abide by the rules to make only a short after dinner talk. His address outlined the program in both the academic and building fields that had been laid down by the Board of Trustees. Dr. Rainey expressed the belief that much of the great building program planned would be realized in time for the centenary celebration in 1946. He estimated roughly that the program would necessitate the expenditure of some five millions of dollars, two million for buildings and three million for endowment.

"Bucknell is known as a football college" stated the president during the course of his address. The audience was tense, awaiting a public statement of policy on athletics. The president then lauded the accomplishments of The Athletic Council and the various teams in all fields of sport. Rather than resort to mediocre ranking in the sports world, the other departments of the College were challenged to match the fine records in sports. Dr. Rainey expressed the conviction that with the strengthening of other departments to bring them on a par with athletics Bucknell University as an educational institution would rank second to none. His tribute to Coach Snavely as a leader and fine coach in building great teams was responded to by great applause.

In his closing remarks President Rainey urged alumni and friends of Bucknell to take an active part in promoting the welfare of the University through an understanding of her problems and the presentation of her pleas to people of financial means.

The banquet was such a pronounced success that many requests were received for its repetition next year and inclusion on the calendar as an annual part of Homecoming.

The dinner was complete and ample in the way of fine food, well prepared, under the direction of Mrs. Clara G. Sale, Dietitian. Special music was furnished on the dinner program through the Department of Music. Mr. Harold E. Cook, teacher of piano, played a piano solo and The Bucknell String Quartette, under the leadership of Mr. Charles Stickney played The Finale from Dvorak's American Quartette.

Small Crowd at Dance

The Alumni Dance, transferred from the scene of former dances, The Gymnasium, attracted only a small number of dancers following the banquet. Those who did attend enjoyed the music of Eddie Hoffman's ('30) Orchestra and the ample dancing space provided by the new Dining Hall.

An alumni quartette of more than the required number harmonized during intermission to the delight of many hearers. The dance was over at midnight and the "Greatest Homecoming Ever" became history.

BUCKNELL TEACHERS

Educational administrators are reminded that an important function of Bucknell University is the training of teachers. The University has a tradition in this field of which it is justly proud. The present administration is encouraging this work in every possible way. Alumni probably need not be reminded that Bucknell is one of six institutions in Pennsylvania whose graduate credits in education are accepted by the State Department of Public Instruction toward the administrator's certificate.

Furthermore, they need not be reminded that Bucknell's graduates just as the graduates of other teacher training institutions, are many of them "all dressed up with nowhere to go." Bucknell will appreciate it if when you are looking for teachers for next year, you ask the Appointment Bureau to submit the credentials of worthy candidates. This will be just one additional way you can help us to weather the depression.

KAPPA PHI KAPPA INITIATION

Bucknell's Alpha Xi Chapter of Kappa Phi Kappa, professional education fraternity held a banquet at Round Top Inn near Muncy following the Saturday general session of the education conference. Five undergraduate students and two graduate students were initiated. In addition, President Francis B. Haas of Bloomsburg State Teachers College and Dr. George B. Lawson, head of the Philosophy and Psychology Division of Bucknell were made honorary members. This fraternity, which was organized on May 9, 1930, now has somewhat over one hundred members, many of whom are prominent educators.

EIGHTH CONFERENCE ON EDUCATION CONSIDERED BEST OF SERIES

Teachers and administrators from Pennsylvania and other states were in attendance at Bucknell's eighth annual Conference on Education which was held at Lewisburg on Friday and Saturday, November 17 and 18.

A number of new features attracted a larger body of educators than has ever attended the conference. The banquet on Friday evening under the direction of Mrs. Clara G. Sale, attracted 264 persons who were delighted with the address of Wilson MacDonald, Canadian Poet. Mr. MacDonald was so good that a number of people have asked how they might get in touch with him for future engagements.

Dean John W. Withers of the New York University School of Education and Dr. George D. Strayer, Professor of Education at Teachers College, Columbia University, were the high lights of the Friday afternoon and evening conferences. Both spoke at the general sessions at two and eight P.M. and at smaller sections at four o'clock, Dr. Strayer speaking to school directors, parent teacher associations and secondary principals and Dr. Withers to the teacher training groups.

Speakers at the last general session, Saturday at eleven A.M., were President Francis B. Haas of Bloomsburg State Teachers College and Rabbi Louis M. Levitsky of Temple Israel, Wilkes-Barre. Dr. Haas spoke on "A New Deal for Education" and Rabbi Levitsky on the subject "A New World Symphony."

Speakers at the section meetings included a wide list of persons prominent in the field of education. A listing of them would almost require the reprinting of the entire program.

The general theme of the conference was "Building Morale for the Public Schools." In an endeavor to make the influence of the conference as wide as possible, two new sections were added and will be continued. They were the section for school directors and the one for parent teacher associations. Also the elementary section was moved from Friday to Saturday and had a large attendance.

A large number of Bucknell alumni and faculty members participated in the program. President Rainey extended his greetings and good wishes to the banquet group, President Emeritus Hunt presided at the Friday evening session and the school of music furnished entertainment at the Friday general sessions. Hazel Gravelle and Paul Confer sang at the two o'clock meeting and the Friday evening music was furnished by Inez Robinson, contralto and Charles Stickney with The Bucknell String Quartette.

FIRST HIT OF YEAR

"The Royal Family" presented by Cap and Dagger to an enthusiastic audience on November 2, scored the first dramatic hit of the year for this organization. Many comments were heard upon the thoroughly professional manner in which the play was given. Lighting, costuming, stage, scenery, characters and acting were all praised by the audience. Miss Hannah Raphael, freshman co-ed from Pittsburgh, took the feminine lead and in her initial performance received high praise from the critics.

1934 BOXING CARD

Bucknell has the best boxing schedule this year ever arranged for the mittsters. They meet five foes in the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference, of which the Bisons are members, and three in the Eastern Association. In addition to the regular matches, the Bucknell boxers will also take part in the annual boxing tournament held by the Conference.

The schedule:

January 13—West Virginia at Morgantown
January 20—W. and J. at Washington
January 27—Carnegie Tech at Lewisburg
February 2—Temple at Lewisburg
February 7—Penn State at State College
February 17—Army at West Point
February 24—Western Maryland at Lewisburg
March 3—Duquesne at Pittsburgh
March 16 and 17—Conference Tournament at Morgantown, W. Va.

WRITES ON PUBLICITY

The last issue of the COLLEGE NEWS BUREAU BULLETIN prints an article on College Publicity by Arthur L. Brandon, Director of Publicity at Bucknell. The other contributors are L. C. Boochever of Cornell, Earl Silvers of Rutgers, W. A. Dill of the University of Kansas, and E. C. Wilson of the University of Iowa.

Mr. Brandon's article deals with three types of newspaper publicity. First, the special feature articles, such as those recently written by Dr. Rainey for the New York Times and the New York Herald Tribune. Second, the localized publicity, such as that prepared for the football team for its games in a specific territory like Pittsburgh, or for a glee club trip, and third, the home town story, which gives an account of the individual accomplishments of the student.

Mr. Brandon points out that in these days of low revenue for newspapers it is "harder to get into print", and the type article cited above is more likely to be used than the older style generalized story.

ALUMNI MEMENTO TO "POP" WARNER

Before the kickoff in the Bucknell-Temple Homecoming game "Pop" Warner, Temple coach, was presented with a memento from Bucknell alumni and The Athletic Council welcoming him back to Lewisburg. The presentation took place on the field. The gift, a silver cigarette lighter embossed with a Bucknell seal, was presented to Coach Warner by Al. G. Stoughton, '24, Alumni Secretary at Bucknell.

PUBLICITY DIRECTOR GETS BOUQUET

"Old Timer" in The Harrisburg Telegraph recently handed a nice bouquet to Arthur L. Brandon, Bucknell Director of Publicity. His comment was as follows:- "Bucknell can boast of a live wire as Director of Publicity. His name is A. L. Brandon, and judging by the good reading he sends out he evidently works overtime."

R. M. WEST, '89, BAPTIST STUDENT PASTOR DIES

By Prof. Lewis Edwin Theiss, '02

DYING as he had expressed the wish that he might die—"in harness"—the Rev. Dr. Raymond M. West, alumnus, trustee, and student pastor of Bucknell University, minister of the Lewisburg Baptist Church, and member of Phi Gamma Delta, expired suddenly in the study of his church immediately after he had concluded his morning sermon on Sunday, October 15. In the audience assembled in the church auditorium were his wife, Mrs. Harriet Eldredge West, his daughter, Mrs. Ethel Knapp, of Lewisburg, and his son, Russell E. West, of Little Falls, N. J. For the first time in months the entire family was come together. They had met to celebrate Dr. West's seventy-first birthday; for had he lived twelve hours longer, he would have completed the Biblical three score years and ten.

In the spring of the year, Dr. West, who had always been a man of unusual physical force and vigor, suffered a sudden heart attack. For four months he was unable to perform his accustomed pastoral duties. With the opening of college he resumed work, taking up his tasks gently, and "easing" into his labors. He seemed to gain strength daily. On the morning of his death he was apparently in excellent condition. He preached a sermon that was by far the most vigorous public utterance he had made since his return to the pulpit. To his audience it seemed as though all his old-time force had returned. Immediately after his talk, as was his custom, he made his way to the church entrance to shake hands with departing church members. There he suddenly crumpled. Ushers carried him into his study, where he shortly expired without regaining consciousness. Memorial services were held in the church on Tuesday afternoon.

Tributes to the departed were spoken by President Homer P. Rainey, of Bucknell; the Rev. Dr. Henry C. Robbins, of the Colgate-Rochester Theological Seminary; and the Rev. Dr. Charles A. Soars, of Philadelphia, former secretary of the Pennsylvania Baptist Education Board. Prayer was offered by President Emeritus Emory W. Hunt, of Bucknell. The deacons of the Church acted as pallbearers.

Interment was made in the Overlook Cemetery, in Bridgeton, N. J., near the birthplace of the deceased. Preceding burial, memorial services were held in the First Baptist Church of Bridgeton, under the leadership of President Milton G. Evans, of Crozer Theological Seminary, who is also a Bucknell alumnus and trustee.

Dr. R. M. West, '89

Thus, in a very literal sense, Dr. West was gathered to his fathers; for he was born on a farm near the country village of Shiloh, hardly three miles from his final resting place. Probably it was as a farm lad that he gained his unusual physical vigor and his indomitable spirit. From the beginning he showed the utmost determination to achieve and to attain the best in life. He got what education he could in the local schools. Then he set out, altogether on his own responsibility and wholly at his own expense, to wrest an education from the world.

He put himself through the South Jersey Institute, a Baptist preparatory school at Bridgeton. Then he entered Bucknell University. It had taken time. He was already 23 years of age. But he had had an experience of life that had matured him far beyond most of his college associates. From the very start he was outstanding.

At one time or another he held most of the "prize" campus offices. He was the manager of the varsity football team. He was editor-in-chief of the college publication, The Mirror. He was editor of the initial issue of the Bucknell yearbook, L'Agenda. He was treasurer of the Senior Class. At that time the student body was divided almost evenly between two great literary societies, that flourished mightily, and he was president of one of them, Theta Alpha. He was a giant in debate. With it all, he was a prize student, for at graduation he was valedictorian of his class and was awarded an oration of the first class, which meant that for his entire four years in college his grades had averaged ninety or better.

He entered the Crozer Theological Seminary, at Chester, Pa., from which he was graduated in 1892. Meantime, he had continued to do some work at Bucknell, and that institution now gave him his A.M. degree, in addition to the A.B. he had won at graduation. To these degrees Denison University added that of D.D. in 1907.

Judge Gilpin, a native of Pennsylvania, had lived in St. Louis County since 1901, when he became superintendent of schools at Virginia. In 1904 he was elected superintendent of St. Louis County schools, which position he held until 1911, when he was elected judge of probate.

He resigned as judge April 15, 1929, to assume the position of trust officer with the City National Bank.

He was born Nov. 20, 1872, at Newfoundland, Pa., the son of Simon Allen and Sarah Ann Croft Gilpin. ZERO! Brrr---Brrr and how the North wind doth blow! West College offices are deserted. A few brave and hardy souls move about all bundled up in overcoats and galoshes as they gather papers and files to adjourn to some warmer spot. It is ten o'clock on the morning of January 30, 1934 and the University offices are almost paralyzed by the cold. The first time in the memory of this reporter—and that is fourteen years.

OTHER campus buildings are warmer as final examinations for first semester go right along with the students more serious and concerned than at any other time of the year — except the finals for the succeeding semester. Once each semester — or it sounds better to say twice a year—college students really do some work!

THE athletic situation referred to in our dignified editorial column is causing work no end for the Athletic office and headaches for the Graduate Manager, Dr. B. W. Griffith, '99. No special trucks are needed to bring in the mail each day containing applications from coaches for Snavely's position but we understand there are about half a hundred after the job. Many are Bucknell men and many are headliners in sport. It looks as though Carl Snavely left a mighty good job.

HE goes from here to a grand old school — North Carolina University at Chapel Hill. We have some good friends down there and have visited the campus, one of the most charming and historic in the South. Good luck! Carl!

HOW do we measure our love for Alma Mater? By our deeds? Our thoughts? Our words? You would not read this magazine if there were not love for Bucknell in your hearts. It is that love which carries us on and on through the years in our sometimes feeble but never despairing task of bringing Bucknell to you who cannot return frequently to the campus.

THE Alumni Fund comes again this year asking for your support and confidence expressed in terms of money. Whatever you send brings you that much closer to Bucknell. It is you coming back home and working for the common good. Importance should not be necessary when sons and daughters are asked to "Come Home". It is truly Opportunity! We have faith that you will express your faith in YOUR OWN BUCKNELL.

THE campus is going "Big time" socially this month with none other than Ozzie Nelson and his orchestra booked for the Junior Prom on February 16. Alumni from many miles around are expected to attend and yours truly is saving pennies now to "go collegiate" once again. See you at the Prom!

"UNCLE JULIUS", as he is known to Columbia radio artists, had a share in arranging for this fine radio band to appear here. Seebach, '20, if you must know the full name, has arranged programs of entertainment for Bucknellians in New York that will long be remembered. Mills, Boswells, Biljo, Carlisle, Street Singer, and other starred names were on the bill. A great show!

THIS corner has never been sullied with politics but tonight we glorify it by reference to the greatest American alive today, Franklin Delano Roosevelt. We have adjourned from our frigid office to the old fireplace at home to finish this corner and we have just listened to our President on the radio acknowledging his birthday greetings and the noble movement in behalf of the nation's crippled children. A man as human as President Roosevelt is too far above party and pettiness ever to be called a politician. He is the personification of the greatness of America. He is America.

IMAGINE the above in the magazine of a rock ribbed Pennsylvania Baptist college steeped in Republicanism! — but we do have a Texas Democrat for President! — and we are liberal in this column to the core! It is a personal corner you know.

THE fire dies to embers and the room chills to remind us of our zero office this morning ---- so ---- good-night!

THE ATHLETIC POLICY

THE question of Bucknell's policy in athletics for the future and the subsequent selection of coaches for football is paramount in the alumni mind today. Since the resignation of Carl Snavely and Max Reed as football coaches speculation in the press has been rife over possible developments and "The Bucknellian", student newspaper, has offered suggestions of every sort.

The first step in the development of an athletic policy must be taken by The Athletic Council and then approved by the President. The Athletic Council is an approved university unit functioning under the Board of Trustees and President and governed by a constitution and by-laws as approved by the Board. Members on this council are drawn mainly from alumni centers. At present Pittsburgh, New York, Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Nanticoke, and Charlottesville, Virginia are represented on the council. The executive committee of the council is made up of faculty members who confer regularly with the Graduate Manager, Dr. B. W. Griffith, '99.

The entire council is expected to meet within several weeks to adopt a policy in conformity with the eligibility rules laid down by The Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. The list of applicants for the coaching positions will be then sifted to find the men who will best fit into the Bucknell picture.

What changes will be made in present policies is undetermined except that the council is expected to confirm their action of two years ago when scholarships for new athletes were first withdrawn. Dr. Griffith recently stated: "We joined with the other members of the Middle States group two years ago in discontinuing new scholarships for athletic purposes".

Bucknell's policy in the past has been an honest and frank one of granting aid to athletes. Such was duly reported to the Carnegie investigators. As the picture changes we will in the words of President Rainey "continue to be honest and abide by the rules which likewise govern our opponents". Our teams will meet others on the same plane as in the past and we will go along with our fellow colleges under whatever conditions are mutually agreed upon.

We have never spent much money on football and to quote one well known alumnus "we get more football per dollar than any college in the country". Now we will spend even less as athletic scholarships become a thing of a past era. Those who worry over a possible decline in inter-collegiate competition (loss of games and inferior opponents) may be comforted by the fact that we are not going "pure" overnight. It is a four year process already two years in operation and our teams have suffered little if any in strength or public appeal. Our neighbors in the east are likewise experiencing the same changes and while the entire level may change the relative strength of teams will remain the same.

The Bucknell "New Deal" has looked ahead to such changes and the new gymnasium is planned for all sports with intra-mural athletic games figuring largely in future plans. During the past year intra-mural sports have grown to almost unbelievable proportions with more than 95% of the entire male student body taking part in these activities.

President Rainey when asked about the coaching situation replied that "alumni need have no fear that a poor coach will be hired. We will hire the best coach possible consistent with our ideals and limitations".

The articulate minority who would continue to grant athletic scholarships have not seen the full picture. The accredited standing of the college in the intercollegiate world would be immediately withdrawn by the Middle States Association and our graduates (not only athletes) would be barred from admission to any graduate school. The penalty is unthinkable and we have no choice but to accept the limitations placed upon the entire group.

Alumni cooperation is needed if we are to keep our place in the sun earned through the years by slow building of good athletic teams. As we make our appeal to high and prep school lads we are on an equal footing with other colleges and universities. Bucknell is just as fine an institution as any of the rest. We should be able to attract our full share of students and athletes and with alumni support and influence in the home towns we will continue to place fine teams on the many fields of play.

ONE THOUSAND --- BEFORE JUNE

THE steady growth of The Bucknell Alumni Fund during its short period of existence coupled with its timely value encourages the committee to launch the annual appeal for the fourth consecutive year.

It is expected that more than one thousand alumni will become contributors between now and June to this greatest of alumni projects. The number of donors last year exceeded seven hundred. The goal this year is one thousand. This figure, which at first seems large, is actually only seventeen per cent of the total alumni body.

In the three years of the existence of the Alumni Fund more than thirteen thousand dollars has been contributed. Of this amount more than four thousand five hundred dollars has been set aside in trust funds. These funds have been the means of financial assistance extended to thirty-five seniors of the classes of 1932 and 1933 who are now graduates and all loyal supporters of the Alumni Fund plan.

At the present time some twenty members of the class of 1934 have applied for loans from this fund and more are expected to need assistance before June.

In addition to making loyal new alumni, the fund also cares for part of the Alumni Association operating expenses. Eventually with increased alumni support this one channel of revenue will not only care for the total operating expenses of the entire Alumni Association and the publication of the Bucknell Alumni Monthly but will be able from time to time to designate funds for special alumni and college projects.

THE OLD RED SCHOOLHOUSE

A T recent meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association, which completely filled the large new auditorium of the Hamilton Park Field House, Dr. A. R. E. Wyant, '92, of Beverly Hills, Chicago, gave this word-picture in speaking of "An Oldtimer's Schoolday Memories":

"How dear to my heart are the scenes of my childhood,

When fond recollections presents them to view;
The orchard, the meadow, the deep-tangled wild-wood

And every loved spot which my infancy knew."

Memory! As I pronounce that word a most cherished scene appears before me. In the grove of oaks upon my native Pennsylvania hillside stands an old dingy-red schoolhouse. The shaved-shingles on the roof have been curled by the scorching rays of many a summer's sun; the dilapidated shutters creak as they swing on their rusty hinges; strips of the weatherboards have been rudely torn away; and many a chink has been picked in the mud of the old flag-stone wall.

Not far off the spring pours out its refreshing waters. A silver streamlet creeps over the mossy brim and steals its unobtrusive way among the grasses. I see the playground where scores of laughing, happy boys and girls are sporting away the noon hour. The wood echoes with their song and laughter. I see again the long, old-fashioned wooden desks and benches carved and disfigured by many a mischievous knife.

Those days were ours. The wild flowers grew for us; the wild birds sang for us; the wild woods gave shade for us; the fields invited us to sport on their green carpets. Oh! Who would part with the memories of happy childhood? Those days when no shadows crossed our path; when no cloud of sorrow ever crossed the sky to hide the light; when no care drew its sharp fingers across our brow.

Alas! Many of my childhood companions who drank from that same battered cup at the spring, whose merry peals of laughter resounded as we sported on the playground, who sat on those quaint benches and perused their lessons, have long since quit earth's scenes and have gone to a fairer region where they are robed in a fairer youth. Oh! Blessed faculty of memory! What cherished scenes it brings back to illumine and inspire our souls! That old farewell school-closing song still echoes in my memory:

"One more song and then we sever;
One more clasp of hands and then
We shall part perhaps forever,
Though we'll hope to meet again."

BISON PLAYER WITH EAST TEAM

Owen James, Bucknell lineman for the past four seasons, was selected by Andy Kerr, coach of the All East Football team to make the trip to San Francisco as a member of the squad. James played in the charity game against the All West team on New Year's Day and earned himself and Bucknell some valuable publicity on the west coast. Walter Diehl, '26, and Clark Hinkle, '32, were members of this the All East teams during their senior years.

COACHES SNAVELY AND REED RESIGN

Carl Snavely, head football coach at Bucknell for the past seven years, and Max Reed, '24, assistant coach, recently resigned their posts to accept similar positions at The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, N. C. They are at present conducting the spring training at the southern institution.

Carl Snavely came to Bucknell in the Fall of 1927 to succeed Charles B. Moran as Bison football mentor. For five years prior to his acceptance of a Bucknell contract Snavely had been leading the Bellefonte Academy teams to nation wide prominence. At Bucknell in seven years Snavely coached teams won forty-two games, lost sixteen and tied eight. The 1931 team was the only unbeaten major eleven in the East. During the past 1933 season the Bisons defeated all of the old rivals on the schedule, including Lafayette, Temple, Villanova and W. & J. Perhaps the most noteworthy accomplishment of Bucknell teams under Snavely to the alumni mind was the defeat of Penn State, ancient gridiron rival, in four successive games.

Max Reed, '24, who accompanies Snavely to North Carolina, was a star lineman on Bison teams from 1920 to 1923 and later played on the famed Frankford Yellow Jackets professional team. He was named assistant coach here in 1929.

FEDERAL BUILDING DEDICATED

The corner of Market and Third Streets in Lewisburg was the scene of much activity on the afternoon of January 15, 1934 when formal exercises marked the opening of the Lewisburg Post Office and Federal Building. Invitations had been extended to a selected list of towns people and public officials of the county, state, and federal government. The courtroom on the second floor was crowded to capacity as Dr. A. A. Winter, Superintendent of the Evangelical Homes at Lewisburg opened the meeting with prayer. Following this invocation a long list of prominent officials and personages were called upon for remarks. The occasion was marked by the presentation of portraits of three United States Judges, the late Judge Witmer of Sunbury, the late Judge Archbald of Scranton, and Judge Albert Buffington, at present on the bench in the Western Pennsylvania District.

The University was represented by President Rainey who spoke on the contribution of education to the law. Honorable Albert W. Johnson, '96, United States Judge of the Middle District of Pennsylvania made the presentation address at the unveiling of the portrait of Judge Buffington.

PHYLLIS JOYCE TO APPEAR HERE IN "THE RIVALS"

"The Rivals" a unique and popular comedy of manners by Richard Sheridan, has been chosen by Cap and Dagger for the lead production of the year on the campus. Miss Phyllis Joyce, talented young English actress, has been secured to take the lead, with all the other parts played by campus Thespians. The production will be staged as the feature attraction of the Artist's Course on February 27 and 28 in the auditorium of the Lewisburg High School. The cast will be directed by Professor C. Willard Smith of the faculty.

LITERATURE UNIT NEARS COMPLETION

The Literature Building on the new campus to the south of The Quadrangle will soon be open. Appropriate exercises will be held to celebrate the completion of the first unit on the new campus. A tentative date of March first has been agreed upon as the opening date. It is probable that a dinner party will be held later in March to formally dedicate the structure. Plans have been in the making for several months for a combined faculty-trustee dinner and it may be that such will be held as the opening ceremony for the Literature Building.

Landscaping and interior furnishings are all that remain on the construction program for the building. The major tasks of construction such as wood work, trim, etc., have been completed.

The photograph accompanying this article is looking at the new home of The Literature Group from the south. Despite the fact that two more wings are needed to complete the whole structure the fabricated three-fifths appear as a completed unit when viewed from the south. The auditorium wing, now the western extremity of the building, will become the center wing when the building is finally completed by the addition of the two proposed wings.

OZZIE NELSON FOR JUNIOR PROM

Alumni are invited to return to the campus for the biggest social event of the undergraduate year—The Junior Prom. The date is Friday night, February 16 and the band "Ozzie" Nelson of radio fame. One of the greatest "big name" bands of the present time, Nelson will appear here with his orchestra and Harriet Hilliard, movie star and soloist.

The Prom will be held in the spacious Women's College Dining Hall and will last from nine until two. It is, of course, formal. The price is five dollars per couple. Tickets may be secured by addressing the Alumni Secretary and enclosing the wherewithal.

Local interest in the affair is high with many alumni of the past decade planning to attend. Reservations were received from Wilkes-Barre, Scranton, Harrisburg, and Williamsport by telephone when word was given out that Nelson and his orchestra had been booked.

The dance is the first class function to be held under the new social order on the campus where all bookings, plans, and financial details must clear through the office of the new Dean of Students. It is expected to be a social triumph for the Juniors and campus society lights are aglow over the prospects of the best dance in years.

GLEE CLUB VISITS WESTERN NEW YORK

Alumni and friends of Bucknell in Rochester and Buffalo, N. Y., were privileged to hear The Men's Glee Club in concerts in these cities in December. Short appearances were also made before the Kenmore High School, near Buffalo, and the mammoth Benjamin Franklin High in Rochester. Attractive souvenir pamphlets of the concerts containing campus pictures were distributed among the high school pupils.

High praise was showered on the Glee Club in Rochester by the press and the audience. The club is directed by Professor Melvin LeMon, former student at Eastman School of Music in Rochester. Concerts on the tour were also given over radio stations WBEN in Buffalo and WHAM in Rochester.

Some twenty alumni in Buffalo attended the concert there in the Delaware Avenue Baptist Church where a short talk on Bucknell was given by the Alumni Secretary. It is probable that a new alumni club will be organized in the city as a result of the Glee Club's visit.

FEDERAL AID FOR STUDENTS

According to word just received from Washington, the Federal Emergency Relief will provide financial assistance to students at Bucknell, the number so aided not to exceed ten per cent of the student body, as of October 15, 1933.

Approximately 100 students at Bucknell can therefore take advantage of this offer. Clerical and other work on the campus will be laid out for which the students will be paid up to $15.00 per month. The project at Bucknell will be administered under the direction of President Rainey.

BUCKNELL has had a splendid history and tradition in all forms of intercollegiate athletics. Its alumni and friends may justly be proud of the record which its teams have made, and also of the fine spirit of sportsmanship which has characterized all its competition. Our teams, in the main, have been coached and led by men who were not only good coaches, but who have encouraged the highest type of ideals among our students. This was especially true of Mr. Carl G. Snavely who has recently resigned his position with us to become head football coach of the University of North Carolina. Mr. Snavely did an admirable piece of work for us at Bucknell and every friend of the University regrets that we were unable to keep him. All of us, I am sure, will follow his career with keen interest and with our sincerest best wishes. Also we are not unmindful of the fine service which has been given to Bucknell by Mr. Max Reed, assistant coach, who went with Mr. Snavely to North Carolina.

The resignation of these men gives the University a major problem in finding their successors. The problem is considerably accentuated because of the unsettled conditions which prevail in collegiate football at the present time. Everyone is aware that, in recent years, colleges and universities have placed a major emphasis upon intercollegiate football, and there has resulted an unwholesome practice of subsidizing and recruiting players in one form or another. Bucknell's policy during this period has been in harmony with the spirit of the times. The Athletic Council has given considerable aid to athletics in the form of scholarships. In granting this aid it has done it frankly and openly, believing always that an honest policy was far less evil than resorting to subterfuges and evasions. Furthermore, the University has insisted that its athletes must meet the same high academic standards as all other students. Also the University has followed a strict rule against playing transfer students. These policies have mitigated many of the evils of the so-called subsidizing system, and have, on the whole, maintained a wholesome spirit in Bucknell athletics.

We are, however, facing a new situation today. Two years ago the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the Middle Atlantic States and Maryland passed resolutions against the subsidizing of athletes either directly or indirectly by colleges and universities within its membership. The Association has ruled that any institution failing to comply with these regulations will thereby become ineligible for membership in the Association. Loss of membership in the Association would seriously jeopardize the academic standing of any college. Those schools which had made four-year commitments to students already enrolled would be permitted to carry out those agreements, but would not be permitted to recruit any new students. Bucknell has been reorganizing its program in compliance with these regulations and expects to continue to do so. Our policy must conform to the requirements of the educational associations to which we belong. We must operate our program in harmony with the best ideals of our profession. That is certainly our wish, and surely we can afford to do it. Bucknell can, and will compete with its rivals upon whatever terms are agreed upon for fair and honorable competition.

We may as well frankly face the fact that there is much scepticism generally whether the rules of the Association against subsidization will be effective, and whether efforts to evade them will not make more evils than now exist. The Prohibition Amendment to the Federal Constitution taught us much along this line. Nevertheless, we believe the rules are designed for the best interests of intercollegiate athletics, and we expect to do our part in carrying on a system that is consonant with the highest educational ideals.

Furthermore, we believe that conditions of modern education demand a more comprehensive health, recreation, and physical education program for all our students than colleges have provided in the past. In formulating our policy for the future we should take this need into account, and provide a program to meet it. Such plans are now a part of our building and developmental program.

In choosing our coaches, therefore, we hope to be guided by these principles which I have stated. There are many difficult problems ahead of us in putting these principles into operation, and I earnestly solicit the sympathetic cooperation of every alumnus and friend of Bucknell in this task.

Faithfully yours,

James O. Rainey

BIOGRAPHY

Mr. Earl Morgan Richards (Class of 1913) whose home address is 1357 Fifth Avenue, Youngstown, Ohio; business address, General Offices, Republic Steel Corporation, Youngstown, Ohio, is Chief Industrial Engineer for The Republic Steel Corporation. This corporation has an approximate capitalization of $300,000,000. and embraces 59 plants, mines and quarries, located in 33 different cities and towns including Youngstown, Cleveland, Buffalo, Canton, Massilon, Warren, Chicago, Brooklyn, Hartford, Gary, Birmingham, Detroit and Pittsburgh. The above details may indicate the tremendous executive responsibility resting upon Mr. Richards for the successful operation of the corporation with which he is connected.

A brief resumé of his record since graduation shows his rapid rise on the ladder. Immediately upon graduation, he was appointed to the position of Testing Engineer with The Westinghouse Airbrake Company and soon thereafter became Assistant to the Chief Engineer, later becoming Assistant to Manager of Engineering. During the period of the World War, he was technical adviser to The Fuel Conservation of Pittsburgh and vicinity, and later, at the request of the government, he was loaned by this Committee to the United States Railway Administration for the supervision of special tests on railway draft gears. He is joint author of a 300 page volume reporting the results of these tests.

During the period 1920 to 1925, he was Vice-President of The Swoboda Engineering Company, a firm of consulting mechanical and electrical engineers of Pittsburgh. 1925 to 1930, he served as Chief Industrial Engineer of The Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, and from 1930 to the present time in his present position.

BOOKS

The Bucknell Bookshelf, as pictured herewith, contains some thirty-five volumes published by Bucknellians. More than half this number were received during the past month in answer to a call appearing in this magazine. The books cover a wide range of interests and represent a good cross section of alumni life.

Classes ranging from 1869 to 1916 have authors on the shelf with six books by faculty members, not alumni. The class of 1911 leads the list with five books. 1908 and 1912 are tied for second position with four books each. The class of 1902 would easily capture first honors if the twenty-two boy's books by Dr. Lewis E. Theiss were added to the shelf.

A complete review of all the books received by March first will be published in the next number of this magazine. Books now on the Bucknell Bookshelf and gratefully acknowledged by The Alumni Office are as follows:-

BOOKS

- Thirty Years as President of Bucknell — John Howard Harris, 1869 — printed by W. F. Roberts Company.

Greenberg Publishers, New York, have recently issued The Modern Hand Book for Girls, by Olive Richards Landers, '08. Mrs. Landers has had considerable previous experience in writing of this type as she was for seven years editor of The Girl Scout Leader. She has also been editor of several denominational magazines, Our Little Ones, Youth's World, Girl's World, and Young People. As a publicity and educational worker on the national staffs of the Girl Scouts and the Y. W. C. A., she has come in close contact with earnest girls of 'teen age.

This 400-page book is a compendium of practical information to show the modern girl of from 8 to 18 how to make the most of her time and appearance, and provide her with many hours of pleasure, and knowledge. Of necessity its very virtues at times become vices, for the book covers so much ground that some of the topics can be treated only superficially.

The chapters dealing with hobbies and handicrafts are most interesting: pottery, enameling, stenciling, book-binding, cooking, dressmaking, mari-onettes, motion pictures, theatricals, and folk dancing. Nor does Mrs. Landers fail to deal with physical things: health, and the care of the various parts of the body.

A valuable portion of the book is the bibliography, at the close of each chapter. This gives a list of books available on the topics treated. With increasing leisure time, for young and old, there is no doubt of the value of books directed to help us make intelligent use of our personal aptitudes and of our leisure time.

The death of Mrs. Jennie Loomis Tyler, niece of Dr. Justin Loomis, former president of The University at Lewisburg, occurred at her home in Attica, N. Y. on January 4, 1934. She was aged seventy-seven at the time of her death. Mrs. Tyler was married in 1856 to Phyletus Tyler in 1878 with Dr. Loomis, who was then president of the college, performing the ceremony. She was a graduate of the High School at Attica and of the Institute at Lewisburg. She is survived by her husband, one son and two daughters.

One of the most loyal of Bucknell trustees and alumni, Dr. Lincoln Hulley, died suddenly of a heart attack at Deland, Florida on January 20, 1934. Dr. Hulley was president of Stetson University. He was the valedictorian of his Bucknell graduating class and later took graduate work at Harvard and the University of Chicago where he added earned A.B., A.M., and Ph.D. degrees to his name. He returned to Bucknell in 1893 as a professor and remained until 1904 when he accepted the post as President and Treasurer of John B. Stetson University at Deland, Florida.

As an undergraduate Lincoln Hulley was one of the editors of Commencement News and Literary Editor of The Mirror. He was also a member of various societies and clubs, a football and tennis player, member of the glee club and active in debating work. Among the many positions he occupied in public life were President of the Florida Banker's Association, Member of the Florida State Senate, and one time candidate for state governor.

Honors were heaped upon him. In 1906 his own college, Stetson, gave him the degree Litt.D. A year later Denison University made him an LL.D. In 1924 Temple University made him a Doctor of Jurisprudence. That same year Bucknell made him a Doctor of Civil Law. A year later Mercer College awarded him a D.D. Furman University gave him another Litt.D. degree, and Southern College at Lakeland, Fla., gave him a doctorate in education.

When, many years ago, the Bucknell alumni demanded a voice in the selection of the Bucknell trustees and that body agreed to elect the person whom the alumni should select, Dr. Hulley was the outstanding nominee and so became the first so-called "alumni-trustee" of Bucknell. He served the University faithfully in that position ever since 1910. He was also a trustee of Crozer Theological Seminary.

President Hulley was twice married. His first wife was Miss Harriet E. Spratt, of Coatesville, Pa., who died within a few years of their marriage. In 1893 Dr. Hulley married Miss Eloise Mayham, of Stamford, N. Y. She survives him, together with three children: Mrs. Louise Turner, wife of Judge James H. Turner, of Chicago; Benjamin M. Hulley, American Consul in Dublin; and Mrs. Bary Beatty, wife of John Beatty of the Carnegie Institute at Pittsburgh. Also surviving is a daughter by his first marriage, Mrs. Harriet Jackson, wife of Dunham Jackson, head of the mathematics department of the University of Minnesota.

The death of Mrs. Blanche Conard Andrews Braker, wife of Rev. James Scovil Braker, D.D., of Sandusky, O., occurred on November 26, 1933. Funeral services were held in her husband's church, The First Baptist, and burial took place at Scotch Plains, N. J.

Word has been received of the death of H. E. Stanton, brother of Dr. Herbert C. Stanton, of Clifton Heights, at his home in Chinchilla. He was also a brother of Mrs. Eveline Stanton Gundy, '90, of Lewisburg, Mrs. Mary Stanton Speicher, '07, of Reading, and Frank W. Stanton, '02, of Cincinnati, O.

We offer our most humble apologies to the family and friends of the late Benjamin F. Thomas and especially to his classmates who have heard of his death and looked in vain in these columns for the obituary notice. Through an unexplainable error the story written at the time of Professor Thomas' death never reached our printer and in the customary haste of publication the omission was overlooked.—The Editor.

Benjamin F. Thomas died at his home in Lewisburg on May 16, 1933 of heart trouble. He was aged sixty-five years. At the time of his death he was an insurance representative and one of the leading salesmen for a nationally known company. Mr. Thomas was a native of Wales and was educated in this country at Keystone Academy and Bucknell. He later returned to Keystone Academy as a teacher and from there went to Peddie Institute. In 1904 he returned to Bucknell as Principal of the Academy where he remained until 1910. He then accepted the principalship of Keystone Academy where he served for eight years only to return to Bucknell in 1918 as Registrar of the University. He resigned this post in 1921 to take up life insurance work.

Mr. Thomas was married in 1903 to Jennie Clark, who, with six children, survive.

H. W. D. Kirkendall of Wenatchee, Washington, reports the death of his wife who has been with him in Washington since 1899.

1894

Contrary to the item in our recent number concerning Chas. F. McMann, we have Mr. McMann's own letter to the effect that his apartment house property was disposed of some considerable time ago. He reports that he is at present engaged as a department manager for the Schulze Baking Company in Des Moines. Mr. McMann resides at the Y. M. C. A. He also chides us gently for being ungallant in listing Dr. Mary Harris with the class of '84 instead of rightfully with '94. Our most humble apologies Dr. Harris! It is unforgivable — even though a typographical error.

1905

We have been advised of the tragic death of Mrs. Elizabeth Ausherman, wife of Jeremiah Ausherman of Reading. Mrs. Ausherman is survived by her husband and one daughter, Nancy.

1906

He was elected one of the delegates to represent the newly formed guild of Record employes to the Washington convention which

The passengers had been unaware that the course had been retraced. Fares, of course, were refunded.

He is also bringing the scholarly "Dictionary of Early Modern English", which is being compiled under his editorship, to the point at which printing of the early letters may soon be undertaken.

At the same time he is putting the finishing touches on a new book, "Inflections and Syntax of American English", which will doubtless champion with a great deal of objective evidence the modern point of view in linguistic scholarship.

All these do not interfere with his family responsibilities. This summer he and Mrs. Fries (Agnes Carswell, '19), taught their 18-months' old son to swim; and "Chucky", the ten-year-old, is already pointing for Olympic swimming honors in 1940.

At the recent St. Louis meeting of the Modern Language Association of America Dr. Fries was made chairman of the Chaucer and the Present-Day English groups.

The Alumni Fund is a plan developed by and for the Alumni, designed to provide financial support for Bucknell through the medium of annual gifts.

Weekly luncheons are held by the Pittsburgh group at Kauffman's, Thursday, 12:15 p.m.

Editor's Corner

THIS corner seems to depend largely upon the weather — not that we haven't anything else to write about, thank you — but our writing does seem to turn on the change of temperature, etc. Last trip down this column of type it was sub zero — now we are writing by an open window looking out to the verdant green of the campus in Springtime. Tra La! Tra La!

WE are advised to expect the "onion snow" before Spring really settles down to business and the golf course becomes playable but why dwell upon such eventualities when the weather is so lovely today?

JUST so with Alma Mater — why be prophets of doom or gloom or such when we are on the High Road to a newer and finer Bucknell? You doubt it? Come to the campus and see for yourself! Just because we have a new president and a new football coach and the old order changeth is no sign that it is not all for the best. We grow and we progress and every day a different Bucknell emerges. Your Bucknell, it is true, is of the past but today's Bucknell is for today and tomorrow and a measure of your progress and modernity is to be found in your interest in the changing Bucknell.

FINE old traditions that have become a definite part of Alma Mater become more firmly rooted as their worth is proved in the testing furnace of time. "Old Main" stands, even in ruins, as a symbol of our strength of purpose, integrity of character, and devotion to the right in the training and education of the youth of today. So, likewise, does the new Literature building face the west with two porches each with the four columns of "Old Main".

THE old is linked with the new in the latest unit to grace the skyline of the hilltop. Inside the building are to be found evidences of the changing order where comfortable seminar rooms take the place of the rigid benches and lecterns of a former day. A lounging room of beauty takes the place of dark hallways and stairs as a student abode between classes. Delicately tinted and modernly furnished faculty offices take the place of "cubbyholes" that were once offices. "Going to college" now has eye appeal and beautiful architecture and decoration will have a definite part in the shaping of young lives.

COMMENCEMENT approaches on wings of speed. All too soon the "glad days of June" will be come and gone for another year. We are planning now for your reception at Commencement time and have new ideas and plans in store to change even the staid and academic Commencement. Alumni Day is Saturday, June 9 and Alumni Headquarters will be in the beautiful new Literature Building on the Hill. Here we will greet you and meet with you in the annual Alumni Association meeting on Saturday afternoon. Here also will be held the Class Reunions. Literature will give way to Alumni on June 9. Are you coming to see old friends amidst both old and new surroundings? Your Alma Mater welcomes you.

WE congratulate the alumni of Northern New Jersey! They have exercised the first right of an American — revolution — and formed the Northern New Jersey Alumni Club thereby declaring themselves a separate nation and independent of the "old country" The New York Alumni Club. We have heard many wishes for a North Jersey group in the past ten years. It took the new generation of alumni men and women graduates since 1920 — to swing the organization but their efforts are bearing fruit in a big alumni party for April 20. Congratulations Northern New Jersey alumni!

WE write of Mylin, the new football coach, in another column, but we might suggest you leaf over your calendar pad to October 27 and mark it with a heavy crayon as Homecoming at Bucknell with Villanova as the gridiron attraction. The remainder of the schedule appears on another page.

THE calendar is complete and we are once again back to Spring — just where we started. See you at Commencement!

WHAT IS THE ALUMNI FUND — — AND WHY SHOULD I GIVE?

A SPECIAL folder designed to restate the history and purpose of The Bucknell Alumni Fund will be mailed to all alumni in the next few days. This appeal has been deemed necessary by The Alumni Fund Committee to enlist further alumni cooperation on this three year old project which has already attracted gifts from nearly one thousand alumni.

The "Whys and Replies" title of the little folder explains the contents wherein questions asked by alumni concerning the fund are answered. It is hoped by The Committee that the answers will be so satisfactory to alumni that our announced goal of one thousand gifts before June will become a reality.

In brief the story of the Alumni Fund is one of organized and planned giving to Bucknell University with the Alumni Association as the channel through which alumni gifts should naturally flow. A gift to The Alumni Fund not only aids in the financial operation of the Alumni Association in its many sided activities but also relieves the University budget of the subsidy that would otherwise be necessary to maintain alumni relations and The Bucknell Alumni Monthly. Thus a fund gift is directly a gift to the University.

The Alumni Fund is the outgrowth of years of experience in collecting dues and magazine subscriptions and special funds in many colleges and universities. It is the modern method of alumni and college financing in that it acts as a parallel and necessary adjunct to endowment funds. Alumni fund gifts are spent in toto each year instead of being invested and the interest alone used.

Thus in any given year a gift to The Alumni Fund is equal in purchasing power to twenty times its figure in endowment funds. A gift of $50 represents to the Alumni Fund the equivalent of $1000 in endowment.

The oft repeated question "Why should I give?" is answered in one word "Loyalty". More than five hundred loyal alumni gave to the fund during the past year. Their endorsement and their loyalty should be a challenge to their fellow Bucknellians.

Use the card enclosed with "Whys and Replies" to mail your gift to Bucknell.

NEW LITERATURE BUILDING OPENED

The first classes to use The Literature Building moved from the old Academy Building early in March to their new home. With furniture installed later in the month the building now is in complete occupancy by classes and faculty members. The auditorium received its first assemblage on St. Patrick's Day, March 17, when more than four hundred bankers of District Four of the Pennsylvania State Bankers Association were guests of the University.

Plans call now for the formal dedication of the building on April 21 when a special meeting of the Board of Trustees will be held on the campus in connection with a dinner and reception to which all faculty and administrative officers and wives have been invited. Photographs and a complete story about the building and reception will be featured in our May number.

DINNER PLANNED FOR ROCHESTER

Plans are being formulated for a Bucknell dinner on the night of May 24 in Rochester, N. Y. in connection with the annual Northern Baptist Convention to be held at that time. Bucknellians in attendance at the meeting and resident alumni in Rochester will be invited to meet with President and Mrs. Rainey at the dinner.

THE CRISIS IN EDUCATION

ONE of the most serious results of the economic depression through which we have been passing is the crisis in education. It is difficult to estimate just how serious the crisis really is. We can cite figures and statistics relative to reductions in teachers' salaries and curtailment of programs and the closing of schools and colleges, but we can never measure the loss in spiritual assets that result from inferior education and the loss of it altogether.

The situation in public education is desperate, and the colleges of the country are suffering equally as much. A recent report from the Office of Education in Washington, D. C. reveals some of the seriousness of the situation faced by the colleges. "Almost half the church colleges are in arrears in payments due their faculties in February." "In 18 church institutions and 3 private colleges, salaries, which were never large, have been cut 50 per cent or more. Twenty-one of 69 private institutions, and 174 out of 210 church colleges reporting have reduced salaries 20 per cent or more." In addition to these facts, many of these same colleges are carrying staggering debts. Eighty institutions including 17 private and 63 church colleges are carrying over 16 millions of dollars of indebtedness, or an average of over $200,000 per college.

I think the Alumni of Bucknell will be happy to know that your Alma Mater has stood the stress of these difficult years unusually well. We have tried to keep our organization intact and to maintain the high quality of our work, and at the same time to operate within our means. Another of our objectives has been the reorganization of the entire program of the University and the formulation of a comprehensive plan to guide our activities in the era immediately ahead of us. We have launched an entirely new enterprise, the Junior College at Wilkes-Barre, which has great promise of becoming a significant part of the University in the future. We have, thus, been trying to do what industry, agriculture, and government are forced to do in order to meet the demands of a radically changed social situation. Our future at Bucknell looks hopeful. We believe that our situation next year will be improved. Our Alumni can render us a splendid service in telling others of the educational opportunities which we offer, and by making new friends and creating goodwill for Bucknell.

We are making every possible reorganization in order to adjust our expenditures to our income for next year. The University needs your loyalty and your sympathetic cooperation and support in these difficult times. You can aid us greatly by your contribution to the Alumni Fund, and by encouraging students to come to Bucknell. Since our endowment is relatively small we are dependent largely upon student enrollment for support. We, therefore, earnestly solicit the cooperation of every alumnus of the University in this important matter. If you know of a good prospective student for Bucknell will you not use your influence with him and encourage him to come, and also will you not notify our offices of such students? Such help now will be invaluable to Bucknell in assisting us to improve our conditions for next year.

Faithfully yours,

James P. Rainey

ARTIST AND COMPOSER

1905 Boasts of Two Distinguished Ladies

MRS. EDITH KELLY FETHERSTON, of the class of 1905, has been much in the limelight because of her paintings. Having been long well known for her connection with the Garden Clubs of several of our largest cities, and with the National Garden Club movement, Mrs. Fetherston is becoming equally distinguished for the excellence of her work as a painter. Her paintings are attracting much attention, especially among art lovers in New York and Pittsburgh.

One of Mrs. Fetherston's pictures has been hung in the Carnegie Art Gallery in Pittsburgh during March of this year in an exhibition of Garden Art, sponsored by the Garden Club of Allegheny County with the cooperation of the Department of Fine Arts and the Department of the Museum of Carnegie Institute. The exhibition is one of the finest, most complete and satisfying of its kind ever held in America. Mrs. Fetherston's picture, loaned at the request of Mrs. Roy Arthur Hunt, and called "Bride's Orchids" was much admired by artists and laymen alike.

Some thirty-eight of Mrs. Fetherston's pictures were exhibited at Ferargil Galleries in New York in May and June of last year (1933) and those Galleries will have a second exhibit of the paintings of this talented artist the latter part of next month.

To Lewisburg, Mrs. Fetherston will always be Edith Kelly. She is the wife of John T. Fetherston, a distinguished engineer of New York, where they reside at 114 East 40th Street. 1905 is proud of the work of this daughter of Bucknell.

COMPOSER

Another very talented and distinguished sister of the class of 1905 has been quietly but consistently developing and gaining fame in Pittsburgh. Only a few days ago the Woman's City Club of Pittsburgh held an afternoon Convocation in honor of Ruth Stephens Porter, (Bucknell 1905), now a composer of note, of whom Pittsburgh, especially musical Pittsburgh, is very proud indeed. For several years Mrs. Porter has been known as Pittsburgh's leading composer of children's songs and children's music. She is admittedly without peer in that City and probably has no superior in America.

Mrs. Porter's published works include:

A book, entitled "Songs of the Season" — published by Willis & Company, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Songs in "The Music Education Series"—Ginn & Co.

Songs in "The Music Hour" by Silver Burdette.

Songs in "The Universal School Music Series." by Hinds, Hayden & Eldridge (edited by Gartlau, Damrosch & Gehrken).

The following periodicals have published songs and articles by Mrs. Porter:

Childhood Education (International Kindergarten Magazine)

American Childhood

Primary Education

Junior Home Magazine

The Instructor

A song, recently given at the Tuesday Musical Club in Pittsburgh, entitled "Spring," has just appeared in the March issue of "The Instructor" (published by F. A. Owen Co., Dansville, N. Y.). A poem by Mrs. Porter, entitled "Mr. Sleepyhead" has been set to music by Arthur Whiting and appears in "The Music Hour" (Silver Burdette). A poem, entitled "The Way to Dreamland Town" has been set to music by G. A. Grant-Schaefer. It likewise appears in "The Music Hour."

Mrs. Porter has prepared the librettos for three operettas for use with the "Universal Series" (Damrosch books) of which one has been published, entitled "The Scouts' Trip to Fairyland." The others, one in verse, await publication.

The productive nature of Mrs. Porter's genius is such that her friends generally and the music world in particular expect to have continued opportunity to enjoy and applaud her works. Mrs. Porter likewise was a Lewisburg girl and now lives with her children in a charming and well managed home in Crafton, a delightful suburb of Pittsburgh. All hail to her and to 1905!

COMMENCEMENT PROGRAM CHANGES

Alumni Headquarters for Commencement 1934 will return to "The Hill" after several years sojourn in The Music Building on the corner of Sixth and St. George Streets, according to a decision of the program committee of the faculty. The change is made to exhibit the new Literature Building where Headquarters will be established for Alumni Day Saturday, June 9.

The second shift in program brings the Commencement Exercises to Monday morning instead of afternoon and the Corporation Dinner to the noon hour instead of evening.

Minor changes list the President's Reception for Sunday afternoon from three to four instead of Monday and the annual Alumni Association meeting for Saturday afternoon at three instead of in the morning at nine.

The complete program with all functions outlined will appear in the May number of this magazine which will reach our readers about the fifteenth of May.

"FIRST HUNDRED" OFFER CONTINUED

The offer of The Alumni Fund Committee to acknowledge the first one hundred gifts to the 1934 Alumni Fund with copies of either Dr. John Howard Harris' "Thirty Years as President of Bucknell" or the University published "Memorials 1919-1931" has been continued to donors to The Alumni Fund until the supply of books is exhausted. Gifts of five dollars or more to the Fund are acknowledged by inscribed copies of the aforementioned books. Many of the "First Hundred" donors have written in appreciation of the books as one of the finest offers ever made by the University.

NEW FOOTBALL COACH

E. E. "Hooks" Mylin Signed by Athletic Council

FROM a field of more than one hundred applicants for the post of football mentor at Bucknell to succeed Carl G. Snavelly, resigned, The Bucknell Athletic Council signed Edward Everett Mylin, Franklin and Marshall 1915, to a three year contract on February 27, 1934.

The announcement of Carl Snavelly's resignation to accept the coaching post at the University of North Carolina came as a bombshell to Bucknell in January after his successful seven year period of coaching the Orange and Blue.

Coach Mylin, who is known as "Hooks", (and doesn't care for the Edward Everett) comes to Bucknell after an eleven year tenure as coach at Lebanon Valley College, at Annville. His playing record as a quarterback at F. & M. before the War earned him national recognition at that time. He was given great credit for field generalship in 1914 when his team beat Penn. After graduation from F. & M. he coached for three years at Iowa State. During the War he was a captain in the 79th Division, A. E. F., and was also director of all athletics for the Division.

Graduate managers and coaches who know "Hooks" praise him highly as a keen student of the game and able teacher. His sparkling personality has won him many friends in the collegiate athletic world and during his brief two weeks of Spring Training at Lewisburg has established himself as a definite part of Bucknell.

McANDREWS ASSISTANT

To replace Max Reed, '24, who accompanies

Snavelly to North Carolina, Coach Mylin brings with him to Bucknell his assistant coach in the person of "Marty" McAndrews, Former Penn State football player and one time intercollegiate boxing champion.

Mylin's record of games in eleven years at Lebanon Valley is impressive for a small college team. Forty-two games were won, twelve tied and forty-one lost. Among the foes to feel the sting of defeat from Lebanon Valley under Mylin were the famous Brown Iron Men, Villanova in 1926 when they defeated Bucknell, and every team in the small college conference group of eastern Pennsylvania.

E. E. Mylin

PRAISE FOR PLAYERS

At the termination of Spring Training at Buck-

nell Coach Mylin praised the men who will comprise the 1934 Bison machine as well taught and able players. A nucleus of more than a dozen lettermen will make up the varsity for 1934. The gaps in the ranks caused by the graduation of such stellar players as Myers, Peters, Farina, James, Dempsey, and others will be filled from the freshman squad of the past season. Mylin expects some of the yearlings to give older varsity men stiff competition for "first" positions.

The new schedule of games for 1934 listing two newcomers to the Bucknell card is partly of the making or suggestion of the new coach. His wide contacts in the football world are expected to produce more newcomers during 1935 and 1936. The Fall Schedule of football games is given in another column.

BOOK REVIEW QUOTED

Professor M. L. Drum, '02, has called attention to a recent circular letter mailed to the entire membership of The Society for The Promotion of Engineering Education in which his review of "Vocational Guidance in Engineering" printed in our June 1933 issue is quoted.

BASEBALL 1934

Coach Carl G. Snavelly working with a veteran infield and a crop of last year's freshmen is rounding out a baseball team for Bucknell this Spring that is expected to produce results in the games won column. The card lists eighteen games for the ash and horsehide boys. They visit Reading to play Albright on April 28, Philadelphia to battle Temple on May 7, and West Point to face the Army on May 23 as their three "alumni" trips. The complete schedule follows:

A WORD ABOUT THE Y. M. C. A.

By Dr. L. L. Rockwell

AMONG the constantly shrinking differentiae which distinguish man from animal, two still remain pretty much unchallenged — language and religion. If human civilization be dependent on the cultural heritage made possible by language, many of humanity's finer achievements are inseparably united with the aspirations we group under the name religion. Religions have come and gone, but religion remains.

In times of rapid social change, the reconciliation of tradition and progress in religion becomes a problem of great difficulty. The dichotomy between the aesthetic and the social phases of religion threatens the effectiveness of religious institutions as instruments of social control. New wine threatens to burst the old wineskins before new ones can be prepared. Particularly under the assault of the aggressive new social philosophies which are now bidding for the loyalty of our youth, religious institutions which functioned a few years ago stand convicted of impotence.

College religious organizations are particularly put to it to justify themselves. Devoted to a group of young men and women suddenly uprooted and tasting for the first time freedom of action, in many instances also for the first time facing the demand for a critical analysis of institutions to which they are accustomed, campus organizations are exposed to frank and frequently hasty and unjust criticism.

Upon these organizations falls the heavy responsibility for aiding students to make an intelligent transition from thoughtless obedience to the patterns of behavior fostered by their home environment, to a thoughtful choice of conduct in religious matters.

At Bucknell the Y. M. C. A. has courageously undertaken the task of formulating a program which will meet this need for students who are genuinely interested in developing mature habits of thought and action. This program has been gradually and soundly expanded over a period of years to include widely varied activities. The recently published leaflet "Adventures in Thinking and Living" reveals this program to be adequate to provide healthy outlets of many types for the religious impulse.

A loan library of works by frontier thinkers, discussion groups, addresses by nationally known speakers of many shades of opinion, provide for intellectual expansion. Father's Day, Mother's Day, the fraternity pledge dinner, popular At Homes (they really are popular!), excursions, take care of the social man. Enlistment in community welfare projects provides active training for helpful citizenship.

Although the working out of the program is a cooperative project enlisting a large group of students and faculty, it would be ungracious not to single out some men who by their loyal devotion over a long term of service have contributed greatly to the continuity of effort and success of the Y. Professors Charles M. Bond and Orel S. Groner have earned the title of "Elder Statesmen" by their veteran service. More recently Comptroller Dayton Ranck, '16, and until his transfer to Wilkes-Barre Professor J. H. Eisenhauer, '05, have made great contributions of time and energy. The mainspring of the organization since his arrival four years ago has been Forrest Brown. His quiet, modest, and cheerful industry and wisdom have been the main-stay of the program.

The success of the effort can be gauged in the gradually changed student attitude toward the Y. M. C. A. At one time regarded with actual hostility by the students in general, it has come to be at the worst accepted and for the most part approved even by those who have no active part in its activities. Those who are active are for the most part enthusiastic over the work. These attitudes are the result of the gradual development of a program which by its broad appeal and sound nature must have the respect of any thinking student.

JERSEY PARTY APRIL 20

Northern New Jersey Alumni Organize New Club With Elaborate Plans for Newark Dinner and Dance.

UNDER the leadership of an active group of younger alumni plans have been completed for the first meeting of the newly organized Bucknell Alumni Club of Northern New Jersey. The plans include a dinner and dance at Hotel Douglas, Newark, N. J. on the evening of April 20.

Several organization meetings were held in February and March to plan the new alumni club. Committees were selected and Charles D. Loveland, '11, named temporary chairman of the new organization. At a later meeting committee reports were heard and permanent officers elected as follows:

President—John Stoughton Cregar, M.D., '27

Vice-President—Paul E. Fink, '29

Secretary—Samuel Bernhaut, Esq., '28

Treasurer—John R. Gilmour, M.D., '27

An executive committee consisting of C. D. Loveland, '11, Weaver W. Pangburn, '10, Rev. Finley Keech, '22, Paul J. Sanders, '11, and Albert J. Clark, '15, was also elected.

In consideration of the fact that the alumni of the Northern New Jersey section embraced by the new club were former members of the Greater New York Alumni Group special provision was made in the constitution of the new club for cooperation with the parent group.

Encouragement and assistance was afforded the new officers by the Alumni Office at Lewisburg in their formation of plans for the April 20 dinner and dance. President Rainey, Coach Mylin, and the Alumni Secretary have been booked as speakers for the affair. Complete details of the party as planned appear in a letter to all alumni from Dr. Cregar on this page.

ALTOONA GIFT TO FUND

With the liquidation of accounts in closed banks by the State, The Bucknell Alumni Fund over a period of months has become the beneficiary of The Alumni Club of Altoona. A recent check from the Comptroller of the Currency as third dividend on the account of the Altoona group runs the total contribution of this Bucknell alumni club to $36.91. Other alumni clubs please take notice!

To all Bucknellians everywhere,

Greetings,

From the members of the Bucknell University Alumni Club of Northern New Jersey:

We are happy to greet you at the Spring of a year which we are sure will be a better one for all of us because of the organization of this Club. The opportunities for renewing old friendships and establishing new ones are almost unlimited, for at its inception this group has some 450 members, and the possibilities for rapid growth are rather startling. We plan to pursue good fellowship to its utmost bounds and we invite every Bucknellian who comes this way to join us. It is our sincere desire that the close of the year shall find our Club a vitally important member of the Alumni family.

Riding on a flood tide of interest and enthusiasm we are beginning our social career on April 20th at the Hotel Douglas in Newark, N. J. Our festival of fun is to take the form of a dinner-dance, and we will assemble in the hotel lobby promptly at 7:45 P.M. Pennants, balloons, and flowers will harmonize to produce a symphony of Orange and Blue in the ballroom. Our entertainment committee, under the guidance of Paul Fink, C-29, as chairman, has arranged an excellent program which includes group singing, a superb orchestra for dancing, and an address by our President, Dr. Homer P. Rainey. Our Alumni Secretary, who has been invaluable to us in our organization work up to this point, will be on hand with Coach Mylin to give us added impetus. By and large, what with good food, good fellowship, keen atmosphere, and something to challenge the interest every minute of the evening, the occasion promises to be a memorable one for all who are privileged to attend.

A cordial invitation is extended to all Bucknellians and friends of the University who may find it possible to be in this neighborhood to participate in our festival of fun. To the New York, Trenton, and Philadelphia Clubs a special invitation is given. Come and enjoy this evening with us. The chairman of the ticket committee, D. Eugene Long, C-29, will be glad to furnish you with as many tickets as you may need, at $1.75 each. He may be addressed at 133 Rhode Island Avenue, East Orange, N. J. (Tel. Or 5-1048).

We give you our pledge of friendship and an earnest desire to serve the best interests of the University as we launch out together into a new era as Bucknellians.

Sincerely,

JOHN S. CREGAR, M.D.

Classmates:

Our loyalty and interest in the welfare of Bucknell increase with the years. When the class roll is called for our response for the Alumni Fund of 1934, shall we answer with every voice "We'll do our part"?

WALTER S. HARLEY

Dear Classmate:

The response last year on the part of '96 to the Alumni Fund was very gratifying. You will remember that we called attention to the fact that the fund would be used for student loans with properly endorsed notes payable after graduation, thus assuring a double gift to our Alma Mater, once when your gift helps the student to complete his course and again when he pays back the loan to the fund.

We also called attention to the fact that the actual present purchasing power of every gift was equivalent to that obtained from an endowment twenty times as large with interest at 5%. $100.00 endowment gives the University $5.00 to use; your gift of $5.00 does the same.

Our class was above the average in its loyalty last year. The successful operation of the plan during these years of distress has proved its soundness. The success of the plan depends upon a large number of relatively small gifts. The aim is to get every alumnus in the habit of giving something each year to the Fund. The appeal is not for large contributions but for a unanimous body of Alumni contributors.

Gifts will be acknowledged by a print of "The Campus of Tomorrow" — a companion print to "Old Main". We thank you for your past co-operation; we appeal to '96 for a class loyalty in terms of a complete roll of grateful contributors. "Something from Everybody".

Yours for 100%,

It will be thirty-seven years at the coming Commencement since we became Alumni of "Old Bucknell". These years have not dulled our memories or lessened our appreciation of the lasting benefits received from four years of student life together. It is well that we confess our debtorship to our Alma Mater on every suitable occasion. Is not the annual round-up of our contributions to the Alumni Fund such an occasion?

In addressing this letter to my fellow classmates of '97, I want to suggest that we qualify as a 100% class. However small the contributions may be, let every one of us be a contributor. More important by far than the measure of our gifts is the proof they will give that we ourselves loyal, grateful, thoughtful alumni, are sending back to dear Bucknell.

Gratefully yours,

EDWARD C. KUNKLE

Gratitude is one of the greatest expressions we can ever make. No doubt every member of the distinguished class of 1901, loyal to Bucknell, has cherished the idea of sometime doing something for the University that has done so much for them. Without waiting until we become comfortably fixed we now have an opportunity to express our gratitude and show our interest by making a gift no matter how small or large and at the same time investing in living personalities. Let's make it 100%.

Sincerely,

FRANK ANDERSON

Dear Classmates:

Has there ever been any depression in our loyalty to Bucknell? Now is the time to let that loyalty assert itself. Why not tell the committee that you are as loyal as in 1902 and prove it by inserting a little gift with that letter? With the original of this letter, inclosed to "Al" Stoughton, is a little gift for 1902 and a little gift for (John M.) 1930. Double loyalty in a single stroke! Come on, Classmates! Let's go!

Sincerely,

The Class of the Thirtieth Reunion:

Read the letters of the other class Alumni Fund secretaries and every good reason advanced for contributing to the Alumni Fund in them apply as reasons for '04's response. A large percentage of responses will indicate 1904's ability to interpret wisely a good thing, and the thirtieth reunion will be all the happier for this knowledge.

Yours for a lot of '04 Givers,

CHARLES M. TEUFEL

Dear Friends:

One Thousand Alumni Donors before Commencement is the goal of that great Alumni body, men and women, who have trod the paths and frequented the halls of Old Bucknell.

The class of 1907 has never failed, and it will not fail now, the cause is worthy and the amount is consistent with our circumstances. You are not asked to give a large amount: but to send something in order that your name may help make that list of One Thousand loyal alumni and the class of 1907 be represented one hundred per cent.

Our class loyalty will be shown by the way we respond to this call of the Alumni Association — So come along class of 1907.

Sincerely yours,

HAVARD GRIFFITH

We are on the threshold of another anniversary of the plan to provide financial support for Bucknell through the medium of annual gifts.

The soundness of the plan, its effectiveness in solving acute problems, and its wisdom in a long range sense, have been conclusively demonstrated.

Anniversaries are useful reminders of what has been achieved, indeed they are stimulating in their challenge to greater achievements.

This year the goal is 1,000 donors to the Bucknell Alumni Fund before Commencement. To achieve the goal requires merely a unity of spirit. And from that impulse will come some small gift, a symbol of comradeship, and the consummation of a genuine partnership of interest in Bucknell.

We have been "Initialed" to death with PWA, CWA, RFC, AAA, TVA and dozens of others but let us add one more with a true meaning for every loyal Bucknellian — EAF Bucknell Alumni Fund.

In the 1933 drive we had many newcomers and this year we want more than last year. Since this year celebrates our 20th anniversary why not begin early and mail your check for any amount NOW to the Bucknell Alumni Fund, Lewisburg.

Better start now to plan for that grand and glorious 20th reunion at Commencement time in June.

See you then,

CLINE LOWTHER.

Kingston, Pa.

Dear Classmates:

Our class has done very well in the past in showing loyalty to Bucknell. We want to continue this, and those who have not joined in previous years will be welcomed this year. It is the number of givers, not the amount of the gifts, that shows the measure of class loyalty.

The Bucknell Alumni Fund presents itself for your active consideration, again this year. In making this appeal, Bucknell is following the custom of colleges to meet the many needs for which a limited endowment does not provide. If you are at all hazy concerning the purpose of the Fund, write me for an explanation.

Do you know of any news for this column? Certainly some big event has happened in your life that you would like your classmates to know about. Send it to me or to the Alumni Office with your gift. A change of address is enough to write about, because our files must be kept up to date.

Remember June 1936. Start to prepare now for our twentieth reunion. We should have 100 per cent attendance at that time. We also should give to the Bucknell Alumni Fund now, as an expression of our faith and hope for a greater Alma Mater.

Very truly yours,

S. M. DAVENPORT.

The Bucknell Alumni Monthly is a blessing to alumni scattered all over the world. Your annual contribution to the Alumni Fund makes possible this service to Bucknellians everywhere. Your check for any amount will help maintain this good work.

Sincerely,

DAVID N. BOSWELL.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

The entire Alumni Fund Movement for securing contributions from Alumni is built around the personal canvass of the Class Agent. Continued success of the Fund depends fundamentally upon his efforts and upon the response of each Member of the Class. In that way the Class becomes welded into a compact and efficient unit working for the good of Bucknell.

Prompt response to each annual call for contributions materially reduces the work required of the Class Agent.

Small subscriptions made annually by the many are more to be desired than a few large contributions. They amount to a living endowment of large proportions. In its endeavor to obtain the moral backing of all Alumni, the Alumni Fund Committee has always stressed the importance of the number of subscribers rather than the amount given. It is not trying to persuade Alumni to "give until it hurts" but to make them realize that "it is a pleasure to co-operate." This alone assures the future growth and stability of the Fund and its position as a reliable resource for the Alumni Association in its outstanding financial needs and developments.

Now as you read the "Monthly" and your thoughts are in Lewisburg, stop for a moment and decide that you will make our list 100%. Send your check now and bear in mind Something from Everybody.

Regards and best wishes,

A. R. MATHIESON.

To my fellow-members of the Class of '21:

"Remember the days of old" — at Bucknell —

"And when the stream which overflowed the soul was passed away,

A consciousness remained that it had left deposited upon the silent shores of memory,

Images and precious thoughts that shall not die and cannot be destroyed."

In the memory of those images and thoughts, let each member of the Class of '21 contribute to the 1934 Alumni Fund; — give something, though the amount be small.

FRANCIS F. REAMER.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Dear Classmates:

Last Spring, with the assistance of the Alumni Office, I sent you three postcards containing brief messages. The first card you received definitely stated that we would not ask for contributions to the Alumni Fund, owing to the economic situation. However, we did try to stimulate a little extra interest to get you to return to Commencement and Homecoming. I didn't go back for Commencement, but I did return to the old Campus for Homecoming and saw the Bison Warriors hang up a 20 to 6 victory over Pop Warner's Temple aggregation.

It was a beautiful day and a great game of football, but the most enjoyable experiences of all were to see and talk with some of the old crowd with whom we buddied — and believe me, there were a lot of them back. Why listen — I was in my seat in the stadium when someone behind me yelled "Hey, Bows" and I looked around and there was one of the old Pals in the person of "Pi" Morrett. What a thrill! That was only one of the many. And if you were there, you experienced a similar delight.

You know, it's just kinda hard to swallow — excuse my getting sentimental — but it just doesn't seem right that the Classmates of 1923 have to be scattered so far and wide and see each other so seldom. I have purposefully said the Class of '23 because I feel there was no class before nor since quite so good. We were the first class to enter Bucknell after the War, and I believe we must have carried with us some of the martial spirit of preceding years, for, as a class, we certainly accomplished things; did them up in genuine thorough-bred fashion; not only those tasks in the classroom, but also those "extra curricular activities." And the result, it seems to me, was to knit our friendships closer than those of other classes.

But, Classmates, we can't ride forever on our laurels — there are still important things to be done, which we can do in that good old fashioned 1923 way, if we will only refreshen our pride with the memories of a few years ago and muster up the same spirit that "Shorty" Parmlee had when he led the Class fight at the flag pole.

The Alumni Fund needs our assistance this year more than ever before. We didn't ask for funds last year, but this year we're not so thin-skinned. Bucknell did a lot for you and me. Let's start this year to express our appreciation and at the same time reveal the pride and spirit of the greatest class to ever enter the portals of Bucknell.

Contribute any amount you wish and pay it monthly, quarterly, semi-annually, or annually — but CONTRIBUTE. Our motto this year is "Something from Everyone." I know two of our classmates who two years ago gave a dollar each and it certainly was appreciated for they made a bigger sacrifice than another who gave $25.00. "It isn't what you give, but what you share, for the gift without the giver is bare."

With sincere good wishes to all and hoping that your name will be on the honored list of donors and your person among those present at Homecoming next Fall, I remain,

Your humble Class Representative,
A. C. BOWSER.

P. S. Make check payable to Bucknell Alumni Fund and mail to me or to Lewisburg. Please do it now before you forget it.

I believe there is something peculiar in the quality of our student generation. For most of us, the impressionable adolescent years coincided with the era of Wilsonian idealism which "kept us out of" — and got us into — war. I believe that in that period we acquired a feeling of social responsibility that is unique.

In the period of the "Coolidge prosperity" we were still students or "apprentices" in business and industry. When the crash came in 1929, most of us had not yet settled into business or professional careers.

I believe that our student generation is better fitted to view dispassionately the breaking up of the old system, to judge with clear vision the attempts to establish new American institutions, on account of this background.

Along with the other institutions, our schools are undergoing change. From top to bottom, from nursery school to university, new aims, new principles, new services are being emphasized — and attacked. What the result will be, no one can tell. But, what the schools of our children will be like is going to depend, to a large extent on us, the decisions we reach concerning the social order in which we shall live, the relations that shall exist between that social order and one of its main components, the educational system.

It is for us, now, to stand humbly in judgment. Where shall we place our support? What tendencies shall we oppose? Indifference is unthinkable. The conflict is too critical, the result too important, for that.

Along with the other educational institutions of our land, Bucknell is undergoing a change. Its change is not random; it is directed. It seeks the liberalization of the liberal arts college, a broadening of the general education of its students, a wider range of appreciations and interests for its graduates, the development within the individual of the resources which will make him not merely economically competent, but also socially conscious and ethically responsible. Do you want to support such an educational aim?

Contributions of money to the Alumni Fund will, of course, be accepted, but your deliberate consideration of the problem, not only of Bucknell, but of the whole educational — and social — order is worth more than any pecuniary contribution you could make. Thought is priceless.

BOOKS

TWO recent publications by faculty members are "The Child" by Dr. Meyer F. Nimkoff of the Sociology Department and "An Introduction to Statistical Analysis" by Dr. C. H. Richardson, Professor of Mathematics. We have given earlier notices of two other works by faculty members which are herein more fully reviewed. We quote our review with acknowledgements to the editors from The Bucknell Journal of Education:

AN INTRODUCTION TO STATISTICAL ANALYSIS

by C. H. Richardson, Ph.D.

Professor of Mathematics, Bucknell University.

New York: Harcourt, Brace and Company, 1934.

It is the aim of this book to present the fundamentals of statistical analysis in such a manner that they can be comprehended by students who have had but little training in mathematics and yet in such a way that they can be studied to advantage even by those who have had considerable mathematical training of the former group, the author has intermittently interrupted the continuity of the statistical procedure by inserting certain sections on advanced algebra and analytic geometry.

The book has been developed upon a well-tried pedagogical plan. Each major topic is introduced with a brief statement of "what it is all about". Then follows a brief statement of the underlying theory of the topic under consideration which leads directly and simply to a development of the necessary formulas and processes. The reader is then shown how to use the formulas and processes to obtain the desired numerical results. Finally, the limitations of the formulas and processes and the significance and the reliability of the computed results are given due emphasis. Thus, a student learns why a formula is applied, whence it is derived, how it is used, and what are its limitations.

The method of treatment is elementary and up-to-date. The graphical method has been widely employed and the numerous illustrations are very detailed. Copious exercises, generally based upon actual rather than imaginary data, abound. Correlation, curve-fitting, and the problem of sampling receive especial emphasis.

ADVANCED EXPOSITION

By H. W. Robbins, Ph.D.

Chairman of the language group and graduate division at Bucknell University and R. E. Parker, Ph.D., University of Tennessee. New York: Prentice Hall Co., 1933.

This college textbook has now been adopted by eighteen colleges. It has been pronounced by one authority "the most outstanding textbook in the field of expository writing." It contains fifteen chapters of theoretical discussions; following each are exercises and illustrative articles drawn mostly from contemporary expository writing found in newspapers and magazines. It is the first book on the subject intended exclusively for advanced students, and the elimination of elementary material has made it possible for the author to include adequate presentation of all forms of exposition, including report-writing, theses and dissertations, which are seldom touched upon in regular textbooks.

COLLEGE BOTANY

By William H. Eyster, Ph.D.

Professor of Botany, Bucknell University. New York: Ray Long and Richard R. Smith, Inc., 1932.

There are many features of this book which raise it above the average botany text. While it is neither too long nor too technical to be covered and understood in a school year, it clearly presents the main essentials of general botany in such a way as to give the student a good understanding of the nature and development of plants.

The book is divided into two parts, each of which can be used conveniently part begins with a brief history of for one semester's work. The first botany. Then it presents the general biological principles which apply to all plants, taking up in logical order the structure of plants, metabolism, growth and reproduction. The second part gives a systematic survey of the plant kingdom.

There are hundreds of clear illustrations to supplement the text, most of them being original drawings and photographs by the author. The entire text is quite readable even to those who have no previous biological training, and all the technical words are clearly defined in a complete but concise glossary.

THE CHILD

By M. F. Nimkoff, Ph.D.

Associate Professor of Sociology, Bucknell University; Director, Institute for Family Guidance, Lewisburg, Pa. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott Co., 1934.

So far as the writer knows, this is the first book on child life to be written by a sociologist. The social objective of child growth is therefore emphasized. Part I deals with the child's physical, mental and emotional development as it contributes to his social adjustment. Part II considers the child's various interests, such as play, work, art, and religion. A chapter of special interest for the readers of this Journal is the one on "The Child and His School Experience". While designed primarily as a College text, the book is written simply and directly, so as to appeal to the general reader. This book should be of practical value to teachers, parents, and other concerned with the guidance of children.

LETTERS

A BUCKNELL WHO'S WHO IN EDUCATION

To Alumni in Education:

The department of education is beginning the collection of information for a Bucknell Who's Who in Education. We are revising our followup system and attempting to get information on every graduate engaged in any type of educational work. We believe this institution has as honorable a record in the field of education as has any in the country. Why not tell our friends and the world what our graduates are doing in this field. If you have not received a communication from the department of education within the past year this probably means that you are not on our list of educators. Won't you sit down and write a post card to the undersigned telling where you are and what you are doing.

The above request applies also to three types of persons not always listed as educators. They are:

1. Graduate students in any university looking forward to teaching or other educational work.
2. School directors.
3. Officers in parent-teacher associations.

We expect to hear more from the Class of 1909 now that Mrs. Myrtle Walkinshaw Shupe writes us for the names and addresses of the members. All this is leading to the reunion in June when "Walkie" prophesies a wagon ride down Market Street and other "high jinx" for the class. Mrs. Shupe knows the class as well as the present Bucknell. BOOKSHELF

Last fall the Bucknell Conference on Education added two new sections, one for school directors and the other for parent-teacher association workers.

Both were successful and we learned the names of several Bucknell people we expect a much larger attendance engaged in such activities. This fall at these meetings and hope that our graduates may have a large part in the activities.

Please send that card at once and don't forget to state the type of service in which you are engaged.

Yours for greater service in the field of education,

Help Them Take The Next Step!

Within a short time thousands of students will be graduating from high schools all over the land. Many of them are planning to go to college. Many of this group are faced with the problem of what course to take and "where shall I go to college?" Their next step is a vital one. It presents a serious problem.

A BUCKNELL BUILDER

"Where shall I go to College?," is a problem that YOU have already solved. YOU JOINED THE BUCKNELL FAMILY. Why not help those who are facing this problem to take the right step. Tell about your University to outstanding boys and girls who would be benefitted by a course at BUCKNELL.

A PERPLEXING PROBLEM

Many who are ready to become college freshmen do not know what their life work is to be. Their course in college ought to help them decide that most important question. It should reveal to them a variety of fields of human endeavor, and enable them to make a more intelligent choice than they could otherwise make.

A SOUND SOLUTION

Bucknell's Survey Courses — which are attracting wide attention — help the youth find himself. In the freshman year, he is given a general survey of all fields, Arts, Sciences, Music, Engineering, Commerce and Finance, and Education. Then he selects the field which interests him for his major. This process continues through the freshman and sophomore years, known as the lower division, during which time every student, irrespective of course, is given a thorough cultural education and an insight into the various fields of effort from which he himself may make his choice.

A CHOICE COLLEGE

Bucknell is an outstanding college — nearly one hundred years old — whose alumni have made an enviable contribution to humanity in all fields of endeavor. Bucknell is one of only two hundred colleges out of one thousand which is accredited by the Association of American Universities. You are proud of being a Bucknellian — tell about Bucknell to choice young people.

The death of Dr. John Heisley Weaver, LL.D., 1924, prominent Philadelphian, occurred at his home in Merion on April 26. Dr. Weaver would have been 75 on May 15. Death was attributed to heart disease.

He began his career as a clerk for the Pennsylvania Railroad in Williamsport and in 1887 entered the coal business, founding the present firm of which he was head, two years later.

He was one of the pioneers in the development of coal properties in Indiana and Cambria counties and was chairman of the board of directors of the Cambria and Indiana Railroad company. He was also president of the West Virginia Northern Railroad Company.

In April, 1921, he was decorated with the cross of Knight of the Order of the Crown of Italy in recognition for his services in expediting the movement of coal to the Allies during the World War.

Kampmann, Jr., Elizabeth S. Kampmann and Marion W. Kampmann, the latter three the children of Marion Weaver Kampmann, deceased.

The death of Dr. Eli Slifer Walls, '03, prominent Pittsburgh physician and former Lewisburger occurred suddenly of heart disease at his home on March 27, 1934.

During the World War he left a lucrative medical practice in Pittsburgh to volunteer in the medical staff of the United States Army, and was stationed at Fort Pike. His ability and services were of such high merit that he was offered great inducements to remain in the Army. However, he thought it better to begin anew private practice and had soon built it up to where he was one of the most outstanding practitioners in his line in the city of Pittsburgh, making a point to keep abreast of the developments in his profession, he made several visits to Europe for medical study and frequently attended various institutions in the United States for study and practice.

Dr. Walls was a member of the visiting staff of St. Francis Hospital in Pittsburgh, and was a member of the American Board of Otolaryngology, American College of Surgeons, Pittsburgh Otolaryngology Society, Sigma Chi Fraternity and Pittsburgh Athletic Association.

Dr. Walls is survived by his father, one sister, Mrs. Harry E. McCormick, of Cornwall, N. Y., and his brother, John A. Walls, '98.

Dr. Walls was the son of William C. Walls, '73, and Anna Slifer Walls. His grandfather, Col. Eli Slifer for whom he was named was State Treasurer of Pennsylvania for two terms, and secretary of the Commonwealth during the Civil War. Another grandfather was Judge John Walls, also of Lewisburg.

The funeral was held in Lewisburg on March 31 from the Walls home on Third Street with burial in the Lewisburg Cemetery. The pallbearers were: Dr. Harry Baughman, Pittsburgh; Dr. George Davis, '05, Milton; Mr. J. Villiard Frampton, '03, Oil City; Mr. George G. Gray, Pittsburgh; Dr. H. OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT OF SIX MILLION PROGRAM

The following press release appeared at the time of the campus dinner of trustees and faculty held on April 21 to mark the opening of The Literature Building:

Lewisburg, Pa., April 21.—At the formal opening held here today of Bucknell University's new Literature Building, President Homer T. Rainey announced a $6,000,000 program of new buildings and increased endowment which the trustees of the University hope will be completed in time for the celebration of Bucknell's one hundredth anniversary in 1946. One-half the funds will be spent for buildings and the other half will be invested in permanent endowment.

The New Literature Building, built and equipped at a cost of $200,000 is the first step in this development program. Other buildings, which will be added from time to time as funds are made available, will be a gymnasium, library, chapel, student union, science hall, social science hall, dormitories, and faculty houses. The library will be the central unit in this new architectural development. Most of the units will be built on the plateau between the new engineering building and the stadium.

A Centennial Commission has been appointed to plan and direct the efforts to obtain the funds which it is hoped the friends of Bucknell will give and bequeath in the next twelve years. The Steering Committee of the Commission is headed by the University's President of the Board of Trustees, Dr. Charles P. Vaughan, Philadelphia business man. Other members are President Rainey, Judge J. Warren Davis, Trenton, N. J., and Arnaud C. Marts, New York. Joseph W. Henderson, Philadelphia and Roy G. Bostwick, Pittsburgh have been appointed on the Bequest Committee, and others will be added.

"We announce this ambitious financial program for Bucknell at this time," Dr. Rainey said, "in spite of the present general tendency among colleges to delay or suppress any development program. We do this after full consideration of the probable difficulties involved, but we have also given consideration to the obligation which is on us for keeping the education of our youth fully abreast with other developments. We have taken counsel of our hopes and convictions as to the future instead of taking counsel of the fears and pessimism of the recent past.

"We believe that America marches confidently on toward 'the more abundant life' and that long before Bucknell's hundredth anniversary year comes in 1946 the friends of the University will be well able, and we trust willing, to give the funds to make this development possible. The times ahead of us call for greater emphasis on cultural and spiritual values, and Bucknell looks forward eagerly to the enlargement of its service in the thrilling days ahead."

A novel feature of the new Literature Building opened today is an hexagonal lecture room seating 450 persons and equipped with movies, talkies, and radio. This is the room in which the freshman class meets in its entirety for the lecture sessions of Bucknell's new "survey courses." Nearby are fifteen offices for teachers that are used for personal guidance conferences, and several small classrooms and seminar rooms.

The building also includes a special library for language students. Amid comfortable surroundings the students will be permitted to read leisurely as well as studiously. "With guidance carried on beyond the classroom, emphasis will be placed on student learning and not teaching," Dr. Rainey said.

The exterior of the building follows the Colonial lines of "Old Main," destroyed by fire in August, 1932. It is made of red pressed brick.

Almost all the trustees of the University were present for the opening and for a business meeting this afternoon and a Trustee-Faculty and Administrative staff dinner tonight.

ARTHUR L. BRANDON

A. L. BRANDON APPOINTED ASSISTANT TO PRESIDENT

Arthur L. Brandon, for the past five years director of The Bucknell University News Service has recently been appointed to the newly created post of Assistant to the President and Director of Public Relations for Bucknell. Mr. Brandon will assume his new duties in July. During his directorship of the News Service he has also taught courses in the Commerce and Finance Department and been coach of debate. He will have charge of the promotional work on the six million dollar campaign and relieve President Rainey of many office details.

ALUMNI SECRETARY HONORED

A. G. Stoughton, '24, Alumni Secretary, has been invited to address the Alumni Congress of Washington and Jefferson College at Washington, Pa. on June 8 as a part of the Commencement program. Mr. Stoughton will speak on alumni loyalty and organization.

CLASS AGENTS ON THE JOB

Letters from many class representatives on The Bucknell Alumni Fund are now being mailed to the various classes. All of the letter writers are emphasizing one hundred per cent cooperation by the class before Commencement. The announced goal of The Fund Committee of one thousand alumni gifts before Commencement is expected to be realized.

The folder titled "Whys and Replies" mailed to all alumni by the Committee has attracted many gifts. The complete exposition of the purposes of the fund and the need for alumni support has won many contributors to the cause.

The personal letters of class agents to their respective groups have followed the mailing of "Whys and Replies".

SENIORS GET ALUMNI LOANS

More than a score of members of the graduating class, 1934, have been awarded Alumni Fund loans to enable them to march upon the Commencement platform on June 11. The loans have been handled by the campus committee acting for The General Alumni Fund Committee and have been awarded upon a basis of merit, need, and ability to repay during the ensuing year.

The loan plan has been further endorsed by the graduating class by vote to invest one thousand dollars of the Class Memorial Fund in The Alumni Loan Account. All of the funds will be loaned to members of the present class and upon repayment during the coming year will be available to members of the next senior class. All loan funds are handled in this manner to make a revolving fund. Many letters from members of the past three classes, 1931, 1932, and 1933, who were aided by loans have testified to the excellence of the plan. The repayment record of those who have been aided, more than fifty-five alumni, is exceptionally high.

BAND UNIFORMS

The Bucknell Band is again arrayed in Orange and Blue. Modern and tailored uniforms have been secured through alumni cooperation and the personal interest of President Edward W. Pangburn, '15, of The Alumni Association. Additional funds are needed to completely outfit the fifty men of the band for the Fall season. Alumni gifts to The Alumni Fund may be specifically designated to the Band Uniform Fund. Dr. Pangburn plans to personally solicit gifts to this account from the many alumni who have written him during the past several seasons. "The Bucknellian", student newspaper, was loud in praise of the new uniforms when the band appeared for the first time this Spring in their colorful and attractive suits.

GREAT ALUMNI DAY

Registration Tops Three Hundred Mark to Break all Records. Entire Program Successful

MORE than three hundred alumni who registered at Alumni Headquarters on Alumni Day, June 9, 1934, broke all existing records for enrolment and enjoyed one of the finest Commencements in Bucknell history. The program for the day was a full and complete one and in circus language "Something for Everyone" was on the long list of events.

Class reunions featured the day with 1924 carrying off all honors for attendance with fifty-five present at the tenth anniversary of graduation. 1909, 1914, 1894, and 1904 all report enjoyable meetings. Symposiums at the various chapter houses were fairly well attended while the Cap and Dagger play drew a capacity house.

Baccalaureate Sunday opened with the colorful and stately academic procession to The Baptist Church for the annual sermon to the graduates by the President. Dr. Rainey chose as his theme the challenge of today in terms of spiritual and character values. The address is published in full on a later page. Rain threatened to move the symphony concert indoors but lifting clouds and clearing skies finally permitted the outdoor concert, enjoyed by several hundred, following the President's reception.

The usual capacity congregation heard the oratorio on Sunday evening in the Baptist Church. The presentation culminated weeks of intensive work on the part of all the members of the music department faculty and students. Imported soloists shared with the choir and instrumentalists the applause and approbation of the many who enjoyed the great Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis".

Commencement morning brought several hundred parents, friends, and relatives of the Class of 1934 to the outdoor ceremonies in front of Hunt Hall. It was the tenth successive outdoor Commencement for the University. President Raymond Kent of the University of Louisville addressed the graduates on "Sides and Angles" of the changing world into which they were about to enter. His address is also published on a later page.

The closing event of the season followed the formal exercises of graduation as the graduates, alumni, faculty, and friends gathered for the Corporation Dinner in the Dining Hall at Women's College. President Rainey presided and presented the members of the faculty who had introduced the honorary degree candidates on the Commencement platform. These, in turn, presented informally the six men and women honored by Bucknell with advanced degrees. All responded briefly in acknowledgment of the recognition accorded by the University. With the singing of Auld Lang Syne another enjoyable Bucknell Commencement program became history.

ALUMNI MEETINGS WELL ATTENDED

MORE than a score of class representatives, club officers, and members of The Executive Committee were in attendance at the annual meeting of The General Alumni Association in the Literature Building on Saturday afternoon, June 9, 1934.

The meeting was called to order by President E. W. Pangburn, '15, and the roll call and minutes of the previous meeting read by the Secretary.

President Pangburn reported on his work of the past year and urged all present to carry the message of need for further alumni cooperation in college programs to their respective classes and clubs. He also paid tribute to the faithful few who have carried the burdens of the alumni organization for many years and asked for others to join in the work of association and clubs.

President Pangburn then turned the chair over to Dr. Mabel Grier Leshner, '01, Vice-President, who introduced the secretary, A. G. Stoughton, '24. The report of the secretary is printed on another page.

Mrs. Gertrude Stannert Kester, '03, reported for the nominating committee and the report was adopted by unanimous vote with the secretary instructed to cast the ballot for the officers for 1934-35 as follows:

President—Dr. S. M. Davenport, '16
 Vice-President—Dr. Mabel Grier Leshner, '01
 Executive Committee—
 Four year term—W. Cline Lowther, '14
 Three year term—Kenneth W. Slifer, '26

The nomination of Earl Morgan Richards, '13, as the unopposed candidate for Alumni Trustee was confirmed by unanimous vote.

Following discussion on new students and suggestions toward cooperation with the Alumnae Association the meeting adjourned in regular order.

ALUMNAE MEETING

A total of 98 members of the Alumnae Association, only 3 less than last year, were present at the annual banquet of the Association, held Saturday at 12:30 p. m., in the dining hall of the Women's College.

Presiding at the banquet was Mrs. Ann Kahler Marsh, president of the association during the past year.

Officers elected for the ensuing year were as follows:

President—Miss Anna Van Gundy, '85
 Vice-President—Mrs. Elizabeth Bates Hoffman, '94
 Recording Secretary—Miss Anna Pines, '02
 Corresponding Secretary—Miss Clarissa Hamblin, '26
 Treasurer—Mrs. Marion Ginter Reamer, '02
 Members elected to the Board of Management included Mrs. Eveline Stanton Gundy, '90 and Mrs. Emma Billmeyer, '69.

DINNER for fifty, including thirty-six members of the class, was served at The Lewisburg Club on Alumni Day to the tenth reunion of the Class of 1924. The attendance of class members broke all records on the campus for reunions and the dinner was the largest ever served a reunion group. The advance publicity accorded the reunion by classmates Stoughton and Holter from the campus by means of a postcard barrage of the members accounted for the large turnout.

At the business session following the luncheon, Mr. H. W. Holter was elected Class President and A. G. Stoughton, Class Secretary. The election followed established Bucknell practice with the nomination of one candidate and the immediate closing of nominations. The election differed from old practices in that there were no fraternity meetings called to pass on the candidates. The new officers have only one campaign plank — a bigger and better reunion in 1939.

Letters were read from a score or more of absent members and pictures of several class babies were exhibited around the table. The class roster was combed for new addresses and information. President Holter in his acceptance speech reported on the operation of the 1924 fiction shelf endowed by the class in the Carnegie Library and urged the visitors to inspect the books, despite the fact that he had not seen them in a year or more. Secretary Stoughton called attention to the Literature Building Headquarters of his department and extended the glad hand of fellowship to all who would inspect the new campus building. Both speakers were rudely interrupted on numerous occasions as various insurance salesmen sought the floor through the intervention of several of the class jesters.

More politics came onto the floor of the convention as Elliott S. Hopley was unanimously elected Class Representative on The Alumni Council and Malcolm Mussina elected Alumni Fund Representative or Class Agent.

President Holter in his inaugural address urged the class to encourage likely youngsters to investigate the possibilities of Bucknell as an Alma Mater and promised the full cooperation of his eminence as Registrar and classmate in enrolling '24 legacies and adoptions in future classes.

The meeting broke up with the entrance of several late comers who missed the luncheon. More reunion, with handshaking all around again and head scratching in attempts to remember maiden names, and the day was called a great success.

By "Walkie"

THE twenty-fifth reunion started with a guess as to who was who, as those present came straggling in, just as we did over twenty-five years ago, only we had wives, or husbands, or families, excepting Charles Mallery the single-lawyer-politician. The old grads were the guests of John T. Shirley. He represents our class by being a member of the Board of Trustees. Rev. Earl Guyer is a Baptist Minister and offered thanks. And don't forget that Guy Payne's basket has become an Inn on the Quadrangle where we ate to our fill. The waiter was Guyer's son, and the waitresses were "Walkie's" girls, Virginia, '34 and Charlotte, '36. This is the roll taken as we were seated: Earl Guyer, Hughesville, Pa.; Charles R. Mallery, Altoona, Pa.; Heber W. Youngken, Boston, Mass.; Charles O. Long, Logansport, Ind.; Charles Elson, Kane, Pa.; John B. Van Why, '37; Vallie F. Owens (Mrs. A. W.), (Illinois, '19); Albert Waffle Owens (Ph.D., Illinois, '18). Belmont, Mass.; Mabel Slout Weeter, Louisville, Ky.; Marjorie Weeter; Jack Weeter; Harry M. Weeter (Allegheny College); Heber W. Youngken, '35; George F. Bailets, Maplewood, N. J.; Mrs. George F. Bailets; G. Norman Wilkinson, Williamsport, Pa.; Katharine MacCart Wilkinson, Eugene Van Why, Winsted, Conn.; H. L. Smith, Pottstown, Pa.; Mrs. H. L. Smith; Mr. and Mrs. Harlan R. Snyder, Catawissa; F. Herman Fritz, Pottstown, Pa.; Mrs. F. H. Fritz; Sara Walters Headland, Slippery Rock, Pa.; Prof. Howard L. Headland; Eloise Headland; Helen Cliber Stone, Hollidaysburg, Pa.; Marion D. Stone; Ethel Plummer; Hazel Craig Jackson, Danville, Pa.; Hazel Jackson, Jr., '37; John T. Shirley, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Mrs. J. T. Shirley; Allen Shirley, '35; Frances Chaffee Evans (daughter and also a friend); Myra M. Chaffee; Charles J. Lepperd; Mrs. Charles J. Lepperd; Norman Lepperd; Ruth Lepperd; Frank E. Shupe; D. Ralston Walkinshaw Shupe, Saltsburg, Pa.; Mrs. J. W. Portser, Chicago, Ill.; Myrtle Walkinshaw Shupe.

No program was arranged. We visited while eating. At 4:10, the '09ers again assembled in the Class Room in the new Literature Building. Every seat was filled, — the children having to "stay out". The names as received from the Alumni Office were checked, then each one present gave an account of themselves for the past twenty-five years. This proved very interesting. After reading a communication from the Alumni Secretary, A. G. Stoughton, the following officers were elected for a period of five years:

President—Charles O. Long
 Vice-President—Earl Guyer
 Secretary-Treasurer—Myrtle Walkinshaw Shupe
 Alumni Council Representative—Newton C. Fetter

Alumni Fund Representative—Newton C. Fetter
 Those '09ers on the campus who did not attend the luncheon, or business meeting were Stanley Rolfe, Wilmer C. Johnson and Rev. Charles S. Roush, and each had a graduate in the 1934 class, known as Doris Rolfe, Eleanor Johnson and Charles S. Roush, Jr.

"Waffle" Owens had a double interest in this Commencement due to his mother receiving her degree.

"Doc" Leiser wanted to get up the Hill but has been incapacitated for the past three years by ill health. Several '09ers visited him at his home on Fourth Street.

Heber W. Youngken received the degree of Sc.D. and Charles S. Roush received the degree of D.D. at the exercises on Monday.

Virginia Shupe, "Walkie's" daughter, received the award for excellency in Music, known as the Aviragnet Prize.

Your reporter was on the campus for ten days so that I could give a report that I missed nothing.

We have five Ph.D.'s:

Present—Albert W. Owens, University of Illinois; Heber Youngken, University of Pennsylvania; Charles Elson, Columbia; Charles Fries, Albert Poffenberger.

P. S.—Any snapshots taken at Commencement of classmates should be sent to the secretary for inclusion in the next class letter.

Youngsters of '84 Return

Brothers Owen and Milton Shreve of Erie were the representatives of their fifty year class of 1884 on the campus for Commencement. The passing of time has dealt gently with these gentlemen who knew The University at Lewisburg before it became Bucknell. Dr. Owen, tall and courtly in manner and speech, is a physician. Honorable Milton W. is a lawyer and former congressman, grown stouter with the years and somewhat more reserved than his brother. Both were interested visitors at Alumni Headquarters in the Literature Building and guests of The University during Commencement.

Mrs. Margaret Kane Pettite of New York, Mrs. Elizabeth Weaver Mason of Williamsport, and Miss Carrie M. Purdy of Sunbury were the fifty year daughters of the Institute who attended the Alumnae Luncheon to represent their class. They were likewise invited guests of the University.

Judge Leshar Entertains 1904

Luncheon at the home of Union County's jurist, The Honorable Curtis C. Leshar was the order of the day for the Class of 1904. Classmates Leshar and R. W. Thompson were the reception committee in invitation and report a small but enthusiastic crowd of reuners. Fifteen members of the class were present along with some nine other members of families. Letters from absentees were read and class lists checked to bring to mind the entire class roster as it was at graduation thirty years ago.

Judge Leshar was re-elected Class Treasurer inasmuch as he could not remember ever having previously submitted an audited report. R. W. Thompson was acclaimed Class President and Miss Elizabeth Reed of Sunbury elected secretary. All three officers were instructed by the class to begin preparation for the 1939 reunion at once.

The 1914 Reunion

By Cline Lowther

TWENTY members of the Class of 1914 returned for the Twentieth Reunion. The luncheon was held at the College Inn followed by the usual "gab-fest" and everything was discussed from the Proc Scrap on top of the observatory in the Freshman year to the unpleasant ducking in the river given us by the Class of 1915. As each event was brought up "Crissy" Criswell would always manage to recall a more startling event in our history. After most of the problems of the day had been settled we adjourned to our room at Alumni Headquarters in the Literature Building.

At this meeting, which was presided over by our Senior President Jesse E. Riley of Parsons, W. Va. a very interesting report was given by Dora Hamler Weaver on the activities of the girls of the Class. Several letters were read from them which showed a wide range of activities and honors which had come to them. Letters and telegrams of greetings were read from several of the boys scattered throughout the United States and several foreign countries.

At the business session C. Walter Lotte of Paterson, N. J. was elected to represent 1914 on the Alumni Council and Cline Lowther of New York City as the Class Agent. Both terms were for five years or until the next meeting of the class at their Twenty-fifth reunion in 1939. A permanent class memorial was discussed and President Riley appointed a committee composed of Joshua R. Golightly of Springfield, N. J. and the two class representatives named above to formulate plans and the form of the memorial. This will be presented to the members of the class in the near future. Cheney K. Boyer captured first prize in traveling the greatest distance in returning from his home in Appleton, Wisconsin.

Commencement Audience

Garner Entertains '94

DR. ALBERT R. GARNER of Norristown entertained his 1894 class at luncheon at The Lewisburg Inn on Alumni Day in celebration of the fortieth anniversary of graduation. More than a score of classmates and families were present. Dr. Garner is president of the class. Rev. George H. Waid of Marshall, Michigan, and daughter travelled the longest distance to be in attendance.

ACTIVE YEAR FOR ALUMNAE CLUB

By Mrs. J. W. Henderson, President

THE Philadelphia Alumnae Club has held four interesting meetings the past year. Last May the meeting was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Henderson. The Honorable John B. Stetson, Jr., a trustee of Bucknell, gave a most interesting talk on Poland. Those receiving with Mrs. Henderson were: Mrs. Romain C. Hassrick, Mrs. Winfield S. Oberrender, Mrs. Earle M. Topham, Mrs. E. H. Flint, Mrs. Thomas Burns Drum, Mrs. Thomas Shallcross, Miss Hannah Goodman, Miss Mary I. Stille, Miss Minnie Eckels, Mrs. Athol V. Wise, Mrs. Charlemagne T. Wolfe, Mrs. Leshner, and Mrs. Weber L. Gerhart of Lewisburg.

Presiding at the tea table were Mrs. I. Harrison O'Harra, Mrs. Edgar D. Faries, Mrs. Eugene Fowler Marsh and Mrs. Samuel Price Wetherill, Jr., a daughter of Mr. William Bucknell.

On October twenty-fourth a meeting was held at the College Club and Doctor Mary B. Harris, a distinguished alumnae and trustee of Bucknell was our guest and told us of her work as the head of the Institution for Women at Alderson, West Virginia. Those receiving with the President were Mrs. Charles P. Vaughan, Mrs. Romain C. Hassrick, Mrs. Frank E. Rockwood, Mrs. J. Gurnee Sholl, Mrs. Stephen G. Duncan, Mrs. T. Burns Drum and Mrs. Charlemagne T. Wolfe. Mrs. Edgar D. Faries presided at the tea table.

Bellevue Luncheon

A luncheon was held February tenth at The Bellevue Stratford Hotel and Doctor and Mrs. Homer P. Rainey were our honored guests. Doctor Rainey told us of the plans for the future of Bucknell which were most inspiring. Those receiving with the President were Mrs. Edgar D. Faries, Mrs. Erle M. Topham, Mrs. E. H. Flint, Mrs. William Spaeth, Mrs. Harry Miller, Mrs. Romain C. Hassrick and Mrs. Weber L. Gerhart of Lewisburg.

First Picnic

On May 12 the first picnic meeting was held. Mrs. Winfield S. Oberrender arranged to have this party on the estate of Mr. Charles H. Grakelow and we had a very delightful outing. Members brought husbands and friends which added interest and we have been asked to repeat this party next year. Mr. and Mrs. Oberrender and Mr. Grakelow were given a standing vote of thanks for their kindness. The log cabin had a large fireplace where a cheerful fire burned and our host was most thoughtful and hospitable.

Word has been received of the death of Mrs. Harry Hopper, a daughter of William Bucknell and Mrs. Samuel K. Bolton — two beloved members of the Philadelphia Alumnae Club, who passed away in May.

SIX RECEIVE DOCTORATES

Three Alumni Among Honored Guests

The Honorary Degree Recipients

SIX honorary degrees were conferred by Bucknell on June 11, 1934, upon five men and one woman, three of them alumni and another president emeritus of the University, for outstanding work in the fields of science, religion, and education.

Three of the honored group received the degree of Doctor of Science, two had the degree of Doctor of Laws conferred upon them, and one received the Doctor of Divinity degree.

The six were:

President Emeritus Emory William Hunt, Doctor of Laws.

Reverend Charles S. Roush, '09, Doctor of Divinity.

Dr. Raymond Asa Kent, Doctor of Laws.

Miss Catherine Ruth Bower, '01, Doctor of Science.

Dr. Heber W. Youngken, '09, Doctor of Science.

Dr. Ivor Griffith, Doctor of Science.

Two Classmates in Group

By a peculiar coincidence, two of the men receiving honorary degrees were classmates at Bucknell, Rev. Roush and Dr. Youngken having graduated here in the class of 1909. Only Saturday they were together in celebrating with their class its silver anniversary reunion.

The degrees were conferred for the University by President Homer P. Rainey following the awarding of the earned bachelor, master, and professional degrees.

Doctor Hunt today received his fifth doctorate, having previously been awarded the degree of Doctor of Divinity by Denison University in 1887, the degree of Doctor of Laws by the University of Rochester in 1902, the degree of Doctor of Laws by John B. Stetson University, and the degree of Doctor of Civil Law by Hillsdale College. He graduated from the University of Rochester in 1884, pursuing a long and active career in theology and education which culminated with his selection as President of Bucknell University in 1919, a position which he held until 1931. He was President of Denison from 1902 until 1913.

Roush and Roush, Jr., Graduate

Reverend Charles Stillwell Roush this morning received his doctor's degree from Bucknell only a few minutes after he had seen his son, Charles Stillwell, Jr., graduate with the class of 1934. Rev. Roush graduated with honors from Bucknell in 1909, and from Rochester Theological Seminary in 1912. For the past 14 years he has been pastor of the First Baptist Church at Wilkes-Barre, where he has been hailed without doubt as the leading Baptist minister in Luzerne County.

Doctor Raymond Asa Kent, the Commencement speaker, is president of the University of Louisville, and graduated from Cornell College in 1903. He received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from Columbia University in 1910. He has pursued entirely a career in education which carried him through a high school principalship, a college professorship, and a college dean's position to the post he now holds. He is editor of Higher Education in America and a member of many learned societies.

Miss Bower Is Famous Nurse

Miss Catherine Ruth Bower, niece of the late Dr. John Howard Harris, former president of Bucknell University, is principal of the school of nursing at the Western Pennsylvania Hospital in Pittsburgh, where she has held that post since 1920. She graduated from the Bucknell Seminary in 1898, received her Bachelor of Arts degree here in 1901, and the degree of Master of Arts in 1902. She graduated from the Hospital Training School at the University of Pennsylvania in 1906 and has been actively connected with the nursing profession ever since.

Dr. Heber Wilkinson Youngken, professor of materia medica and botany at the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy, is a member of many professional societies and is recognized as one of the leading experts in his field in America. He graduated from the Medico-Chirurgical College at Philadelphia before receiving his degree at Bucknell in 1909. Bucknell conferred the degree of Master of Arts upon him in 1912, University of Pennsylvania giving him the Master of Science degree in 1914. He received his Ph.D. at Penn in 1915 and the honorary Ph.M. at Master of Science degree in 1914. He received his son, Heber W. Youngken, Jr., is now a member of the class of '35 at Bucknell.

Dr. Ivor Griffith is professor of organic chemistry at the Wagner Free Institute of Science in Philadelphia, and has been editor of the American Journal of Pharmacy since 1921. He has been the author of many books in his field, and has been director of research for the John B. Stetson Company since 1924. He has had his present teaching position since 1925.

1 PROFESSIONAL, 8 MASTERS DEGREES ARE CONFERRED

Eight master's degrees and one professional degree were conferred by Bucknell at its eighty-fourth annual Commencement. The group of master's included five in arts and three in science. Early Sylvester Dunlap was granted a professional degree in chemical engineering.

The following obtained the degrees of master of arts: Harold Evans Fisher, Mary Kathryn Gross, George Bell Lehman, Theodore Gregory Parker, and Tsi-Hsing Wang. Mr. Wang received his Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Shanghai. He came to Bucknell on an exchange fellowship.

James McQueen Dobbie, John Lawrence Stevenson, and Stephen Lockhart Windes were awarded master of science degrees.

MRS. OWENS GETS DEGREE

Mrs. Jeannette Waffle Owens, wife of Professor William Gundy Owens, '80, is now on the alumni roster of Bucknell with the class numerals 1934 after her name. She received the earned degree of Bachelor of Arts with her class.

Jeannette Waffle graduated from the High School at New Brunswick, N. J., in 1879 and after her marriage to Professor Owens took special courses at the Bucknell Institute. Four years ago, after a busy social and family life, she decided to enter college in a regular course in search of a degree. On Commencement day, June 11, 1934, she completed the four years of required work and was awarded her degree.

Dr. and Mrs. Wm. G. Owens

The four children of Professor and Mrs. Owens are all Bucknell graduates: Elsie (Mrs. W. W. Long, '08; Albert Waffle, '09, Jeannette C. (Mrs. Thomas Fogarty), '17; and Katherine L. (Mrs. Herbert Hayden), '23.

ORATORIO

Along with four guest soloists from Philadelphia, the combined choral organizations of the University, under the direction of Dr. Paul G. Stolz, Professor of Music, presented Beethoven's greatest and most successful work, "Missa Solemnis", Sunday evening in the Baptist Church.

The soloists were Miss Olive Marshall, soprano, Miss Lillian Fraser, alto, Mr. Frank Oglesby, tenor, and Mr. Edward Rhein, bass.

PERFECT ALUMNI RECORD

Captain Adolph Langsner, Chicago engineer, and alumnus of both Northwestern and Bucknell, was recently cited in the Northwestern Alumni News as holding the perfect contribution record to the Northwestern Foundation Fund. Captain Langsner has contributed twice each year to this fund since its inception. Bucknell conferred upon Captain Langsner the degree of Mechanical Engineer in 1931. Since that time he has been an annual contributor to the Bucknell Alumni Fund, and an active member of the Bucknell Alumni Club of Chicago.

DR. WOLFE NATIONAL PRESIDENT

Election to the presidency of the American Association for the Study of Mental Deficiency came to Dr. Mary M. Wolfe, '96, at the recent national meeting of the association in New York. Dr. Wolfe is superintendent of the Laurelton State Institution, near Lewisburg.

FUND OVER FIVE THOUSAND

Four Year Total Reaches $18,546.68---Sixty-Three Loans Made in Three Years

GIFTS from more than three hundred alumni to a total of more than twenty-five hundred dollars added to class gifts of an almost equal amount brought the 1933-34 total of monies received by The Bucknell Alumni Fund to $5,214.05 as the fiscal year ended on June 30, 1934.

The treasurer's report listing all monies received since 1930 by the Trust Fund (B) from which loans to seniors are made annually, shows total assets in excess of seven thousand dollars.

The current account (A), used for expenses and operating costs lists only partial receipts for the year. The balance received during the year just closed is contained in the two class items under 1933 and 1934 and one figure of $258.00 listed as a part of general receipts. These items have all been specifically designated gifts and are segregated in the Trust Fund Account to be used solely for loan purposes.

Since the inception of the Fund in 1930 a total amount of $18,546.68 has been contributed. Over this four year period of business depression the results in final review are exceptional.

The annual report of the secretary to the Commencement meeting of The General Alumni Association called attention to the fine work of class agents and officers in the annual appeal for contributions.

Twenty-eight members of the 1934 class were enabled to graduate through loans from The Alumni Fund. This number brings the total of loans made during the past three years to sixty-three.

A SEARCH FOR VALUES

Baccalaureate Address to Class of 1934 by President Rainey

WE are assembled today in the Baccalaureate Service of an institution that was founded to perpetuate a particular set of educational values. This University was begun eighty-eight years ago in the basement of the local Baptist Church by a group of sincere and earnest Christians who desired to have an institution in which the highest ideals of personal and social character might be taught. For nearly nine-tenths of a century it has been attempting to provide instruction in the arts of good living with increasing effectiveness. It has met every test that has been made upon it. In its early youth it experienced with the rest of the nation the tragedy of the Civil War. The University had great issues to face in those days. It has survived successfully at least four major economic depressions, and in recent years it has experienced the disillusioning aftermath of the World War. It is still in the throes of the greatest economic collapse of modern times.

BUCKNELL IDEALS

It seems quite pertinent and appropriate, therefore, for us to consider at this time some of the basic principles upon which this institution rests, and to ask ourselves quite frankly how these principles shall be interpreted in the light of contemporary issues and demands.

I have attended two large conferences in recent months. Last January at the meeting of the Association of American Colleges in St. Louis the general theme of the Convention was The Search of Values. At its recent meeting in Rochester only a few days ago the theme of the Northern Baptist Convention was For Such a Time as This. I have chosen to combine those two themes for my subject today, and to have you consider with me The Search for Values for Such a Time As This.

Those of us in educational work are accustomed to having many and profound discussions on the meaning and purposes of education. Education is such an intimately personal and so complex an experience that any generalization about it is likely to be entirely inadequate. Nevertheless, the more I study to fathom its meaning and to state its objective the more I become impressed with the idea that the primary concern of all education above the rudiments and tool subjects is the search for values: the quest for things that make a difference. To my mind, an educated person must be able to do something — to express himself in some useful and worthwhile art or skill; but he must be more than that. He must be able to know the significance of what he does, and to determine for himself whether or not what he is doing is worth doing. He must have a set of values. He must be one who cannot and will not do certain things. In the words of another, "he has learned what to prefer, for he has lived in the presence of things that are preferable — he has learned enough about human life on this planet to see his behavior in the light of a body of experience and the relation of his actions to situations as a whole . . . Education has to do with insight, with valuing, with understanding, with the development of the power of discrimination, the ability to make choice amongst the possibilities of experience and to think and act in ways that distinguish men from animals and higher men from lower."

EDUCATION NOT DEMOCRATIC

It should be noted that true education makes distinctions among men. Our theories of democracy and democratic educational practices often cause us to lose sight of this fundamental truth. It is of the very nature of democracy to ignore the cultural differences among men, and the most fundamental weakness of our democratic school system is its tendency to treat all children as if they were possessed of the same mental and spiritual endowments, and to attempt to pour them in the same mold. Instead of leveling out differences among people genuine education intensifies them. Mr. Everett Dean Martin emphasizes this fact in these words: "The attempt", he says, "to place everyone on the same mediocre plane, even though it be a level considerably above the lowest, is not education; it is a kind of social work. Education means finding one's own level. Like all progress it is qualitative and differentiating. Just as organic evolution is a process which can be measured only in the extent of the differences it has made between higher and more complex organisms and lower ones, so with education. It brings out distinctions of human worth, places people on the rounds of a ladder, the graduations of which are discernible in the kinds of interests they have, in the quality of their choices, the perplexities they wrestle with and overcome, the tasks and issues they set themselves."

RELIGIOUS VALUES

It is at this point that the objectives of education and those of religion merge into the same great purpose, for did Christ not say that "The Kingdom of Heaven is like unto a merchant man seeking goodly pearls: who, when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it?" Religion, too, is a search for values, and by this token the quest for education and for religion end in the same place. It is for this reason that we believe that education, inspired by religious ideals and pursued under religious influences, is the highest type of education possible. We are accustomed to speak of secular education and of Christian education. Perhaps, there is a difference, but this difference should not exist, and all efforts to separate education into such classifications cannot but result in a partial and incomplete process. All genuine education must eventuate in the search for values that are eternal; for values that abide amid all the varying vicissitudes of life; for ultimate values whose reality is God.

I have spoken of the search for values as the common goal of education and religion. What may we say of the times in which we live? Some adequate understanding of the factors of contemporary life is essential before we shall be able to answer the fundamental inquiry of "What are the values for such a time as this?" Time will not permit a lengthy excursion into the characteristics of the life of our times. I desire, however, to call to your attention two major facts about our particular period.

It is, first of all, certainly an age of disintegration. Our economic system of individualism and laissez-faire is certainly disintegrating in a large area of the world, and there can be no doubt but that its successful continuance in our own country is seriously threatened.

INSTITUTIONS DISINTEGRATING

The institutions of democratic government have disintegrated in one country after another in the last fifteen years until the forms remain only in three great world powers — England, France, and the United States, and there are many honest doubts about the success of democracy in these countries in the years immediately ahead. These governments are all facing the same challenging question: "Whether a national authority dependent upon popular suffrage and restricted by a liberal constitution can adequately plan and organize a community's economic life — whether it is possible under free institutions to develop the type of state which seems to be required to meet the demands of a new and vastly changed world economy."

MORAL VALUES

This disintegration of our economic and governmental structures is serious enough, but there is another area of our lives where the results of disintegration are infinitely more serious. It is in the realms of individual character and public morality. In August, 1933 Mr. James Truslow Adams wrote a significant article in Harper's Magazine calling our attention to the "crisis in character" that the nation is experiencing. He says: "There is nothing new about the demoralizing effects of both wars and boom times. Every war is succeeded by a shoddy decade, and under the strain of speculative orgies there are always weaklings who go under morally. The conditions among our people in the last few years, however, have been somewhat different and more sinister. Symptoms of this may be found in the absence of trusted leaders, in the lack of courage on the part of the people at large, and in the more universal corruption of all classes in either coarse or subtle form." He says further that "in these last three years and more of financial chaos there has not been a banker whose entire weight has been equal to the late Mr. Morgan's little finger. The old man unquestionably had his faults, but there was a driving power about him, a granite-like character, a knowledge and strength, a willingness to assume supreme responsibility, which not only inspired but compelled confidence. Not one of the bankers who might have been expected to lead in the last three years has succeeded in doing so."

In one of the now famous hearings in Washington in the Harriman Bank case, Mr. John W. Pole, Comptroller of the Currency under President Hoover, informed the Committee under oath that "defalcations are very common in the Comptroller's office." "It is a routine matter," he said. "Do you mean to say!" exclaimed Senator Robinson of Indiana, "that defalcations by bank presidents are common?" "Yes," the witness replied. "Well," said Senator Robinson, "if defalcations by bank presidents are common in the Comptroller's Office it is no wonder, is it, that the people have no confidence in banks?" Mr. Adams continues in his article to show that the same lack of character exists not only in bank presidents but throughout our entire political life. He lays the same charge before the press of the nation. He says that "we have come to expect that a large part of the daily press will deliberately distort news." Furthermore, he says that "moral issues appear to have ceased to make the slightest appeal to the ordinary citizen."

This disintegration of personal and social morality, is, to me, the most ominous factor in contemporary society. No economic system can function successfully unless it is based upon the substantial virtues of personal and social integrity. No form of government, and most of all a democracy, can survive without character in its citizenry. There can be no regeneration of the national character until the individuals which make up our society are regenerated, and this regeneration cannot come as a mass movement. It must come one by one.

AGE OF CONFUSION

Not only is this an age of disintegration: it is an age of confusion. The ancient landmarks in virtually every area of life have been removed, and the mass of the people are groping without guidance. There is abundant evidence that this is true. Consider some of our perplexities. We are destroying wheat and hogs in order that we may have more food. We are plowing under cotton in order that we may have more clothes. We are told to spend our money that we may have more wealth. We are preparing for war in order that we may have more peace. We are told that we must make intoxicating liquors more easily available in order that the amount of drinking may be reduced. In the face of such paradoxical doctrines is it any wonder that the minds of men are confused? Someone has described our situation by saying that we have been led into a dark hole and have blown out the lights. The basic situation is that there does not exist in our cultural pattern those concepts and ideals which are capable of giving guidance and direction to a confused generation which faces the disintegration of an economic and social system and the task of building new ones. We are truly standing between two eras — at the end of one in which most of the standards that men had followed are gone; and waiting for another to be born. The new era cannot be born until our society discovers a new set of values — a new social impulse upon which we can go forward. We need an acceptable and challenging philosophy of life upon which we can expend our loyalty and enthusiasm. We need to find something in which we can believe with all our minds and hearts. We need an economic philosophy that will satisfy our demands for social justice and will be in harmony with our ability to produce such an abundance of every human need. We need a political philosophy that will recognize the highest social ideals as its goal, and will provide us a working program which will give us a reasonable assurance that these ideals will be realized. We need a philosophy of God and human destiny that will give meaning and significance to life—that will provide a motive for great living and a criterion by which all our lives may be judged. We need something superior to live for. Or better still, we need something for which we would be willing to die, for is there not a large measure of sacrifice in all noble living? Woodrow Wilson, speaking of General Robert E. Lee, said: "We reserve the word 'noble' carefully for those whose greatness is not spent in their own interest. A man must have a margin of energy which he does not spend upon himself in order to win this title of nobility. He is noble in our popular conception only when he goes outside the narrow circle of self-interest, and begin to spend himself in the interest of mankind." This principle which is so necessary for success in our individual lives is also true for any group or society. It is certainly true in an institution such as ours. The happiest faculty and student body are those which are working unselfishly for the achievement of a worthy ideal. Without worthy and challenging ideals any group or society will soon disintegrate.

EDUCATION TO LEAD

Our task, therefore, is quite clear. We must find a set of values for such a time as this. I have said that this task is the primary function of all genuine education. I have also said that our time is characterized by disintegration and confusion. Our problem now is to find the values that will lead us out of confusion and uncertainty into an integrated and purposeful society. I would not be so bold as to believe that I could give a complete answer to this problem, but to any thinking and earnest person certain truths suggest themselves.

My thesis is threefold. I maintain, in the first place, that our basic need is for a new emphasis upon character and personal integrity, and that these values should be the primary objective of one's education. It may be necessary to define what is meant by character. After all it is a quality of life that defies definition, but we may approximate it. It is a spiritual resultant of life that is lived according to high purposes and ideals. Character as a moral force that accumulates around a personality as a result of infinite acts of daily experience that are motivated by a spirit of truth and goodness. It is the result of conduct guided by a set of high values. It is a reserved moral force that is always greater than any particular act or piece of conduct. It was said of Lord Chatham by those who heard him that they always felt that there was something finer in the man than anything which he said. Ralph Waldo Emerson says of Washington "that we cannot find the smallest part of the weight of Washington in the narrative of his exploits."

CHARACTER NEEDED

It is this quality of life that is so urgently needed in the current crisis. Within the last year Dr. James H. Breasted, eminent archaeologist of the University of Chicago, has published a significant book called The Dawn of Conscience. In this book he has "disclosed the genesis of the most tremendous transformation in the history of the universe — the process by which man has passed from the conquest of his material world to the amazing discovery of inner values, the victory over self and the vision of social responsibility." The account of this evolution as traced by Dr. Breasted is a thrilling story. He points out that in point of time this age of character which the rise of conscience has produced is only in its beginning and early stages, and that the great achievements in the realm of inner values are in the future. It is Dr. Breasted's thesis that "the most pressing need of America at the present critical juncture is not more mechanization but more character." I quote him further on the value of character and moral ideals:

"The most fundamentally important thing in the developing life of man has been the rise of ideals of conduct and the emergence of character, a transformation of human life which can be historically demonstrated to have begun but yesterday. At a time when the younger generation is throwing inherited morals into the discard, it would seem to be worthwhile to re-appraise these ancient values which are being so light-heartedly abandoned. To gain any adequate conception of the value of ideals of conduct to the life of man we must endeavor to disclose the process by which men first gained discernment of character and appreciation of its value. As we look back into human beginnings we discover at once that man began as an unmoral savage. How did it come about that he ever gained any moral dictates or eventually submitted to the moral mandate when once it had arisen? How did a world totally without any vision of character rise to social idealism and learn to listen with reverence to voices within? Over against the visible and tangible advantages of material conquests how did it eventually happen that there arose the first generation of men with comprehension of unseen inner values? Why should not the young man or woman of today reject as outworn the inherited moral standards of the past, of whose origin neither of them has any knowledge?

MORAL IDEALISM ACTIVE

My next thought is that this high quality of moral idealism must be preserved and carried over into every phase of our social, economic, and political life. Any social philosophy which ignores these moral ideals and sets up man's original nature as a basis for conduct is running counter to the accumulated experience of the race. Romantic love between the sexes, monogamous marriage, and the home are all the result of long centuries of the evolution of moral ideals, and the attempt to substitute any other set of values as a basis for social relations will destroy, in a brief period, values that have required centuries to achieve. In referring to this set of values Mr. Brewster says: "There is one supreme human relationship, that which has created the home and made the family fireside the source out of which man's highest qualities have grown up to transform the world. As historical fact, it is to family life that we owe the greatest debt which the mind of man can conceive. The echoes of our own past from immemorial ages bid us unmistakably to venerate, to cherish, and to preserve a relationship to which the life of man owes his supreme gift." Over against man's selfishness and lust and deep-seated passion for power we must seek to establish the new ideals of self-forgetfulness, self-restraint, and the desire to serve. Furthermore, any economic philosophy which exalts the unmoral idea of self-interest as the basis for our entire economic life is certain to set individuals and groups and nations at war with each other in a series of endless conflicts. And "Any political philosophy," says Mr. Reinhold Niebuhr, "which assumes that natural impulses, that is, greed, the will-to-power and other forms of self-assertion, can never be completely controlled or sublimated by reason, is under the necessity of countenancing political policies which attempt the control of nature in human history by setting the forces of nature against the impulses of nature. If coercion, self-assertion and conflict are regarded as permissible and necessary instruments of social redemption, how are perpetual conflict and perennial tyranny to be avoided? What is to prevent the instruments of today's redemption from becoming the chain of tomorrow's enslavement? A too consistent political realism would seem to consign society to perpetual warfare. If social cohesion is impossible without coercion, and coercion is impossible without the creation of social injustice, and the destruction of injustice is impossible without the use of further coercion, are we not in an endless cycle of social conflict? If self-interest cannot be checked without the assertion of conflicting self-interests how are the counter-claims to be prevented from becoming inordinate? And if power is needed to destroy power, how is this new power to be made ethical? If the mistrust of political realism in the potency of rational and moral factors in society is carried far enough, an uneasy balance of power would seem to become the highest goal to which society could aspire. If such an uneasy equilibrium of conflicting social forces should result in a tentative social peace or armistice it would be fairly certain that some fortuitous dislocation of the proportions of power would ultimately destroy it. Even if such dislocations should not take place, it would probably be destroyed in the long run by the social animosities which a balance of power creates and accentuates."

The utter failure in recent decades to solve our social, economic, and political problems by resort to a sort of primitive realism should lead us to the necessity for giving heed to the claims of the moral idealist. Homes cannot be preserved without the cement of an idealistic love. The most hardened of our economic realists are frank to admit that financial institutions rest primarily upon the spiritual qualities of confidence, faith, and goodwill, and surely no democracy can exist that does not rest upon intelligence, honor, integrity, and a sense of moral responsibility among its citizenry.

FOCAL POINT NEEDED

My final thought is that if we are going to stop the process of disintegration which is now robbing us of so many spiritual values we must establish in our consciousness an emotional focal point around which we can integrate our individual and collective lives. Every stable society in the past has had such a focal point of one kind or another. Sometimes it has been a church; sometimes it has been a family; at other times it has been an individual; and at other times it has been a great ideal. Churches, families, and individuals may have been sufficient to stabilize small groups and nations, but nothing short of a world ideal to which all the peoples of the world can unite in one supreme loyalty will suffice for a world society. Is there such an ideal to which all the peoples of the world will respond? There is much skepticism on this point abroad in the world today. The spirit of intense nationalism which has been sweeping the world in the last three years has done much to rob us of the possibility of the realization of unity. Nevertheless, it is an ideal that must prevail if the values of civilization and humanity are to be conserved. How utterly silly and futile are strifes between men and nations! What a confusion of values when we allow ourselves to be drawn into a war that is so destructive of all that is worthwhile. I want to read into the record today a comparison of values consumed in the last war. These facts were read into the Congressional Record sometime ago.

THE COST OF WAR

"According to the best statistics obtainable the World War cost 30,000,000 lives and $400,000,000 in property.

"In order to give some idea of what this means just let me illustrate it in the following:

"With that amount we could have built a $2,500 house and furnished this house with $1,000 worth of furniture, and placed it on 5 acres of land worth

$100 an acre and given all this to each and every family in the United States, Canada, Australia, England, Wales, Ireland, Scotland, France, Belgium, Germany and Russia.

"After doing this there would have been enough money left to give each city of 20,000 inhabitants and over in all the countries named a $5,000,000 library and a $10,000,000 university.

"And then out of the balance we could have still sufficient money to set aside a sum at 5 per cent interest which would pay for all times to come a $1,000 yearly salary each for an army of 125,000 teachers, and in addition to this pay the same salary to each of an army of 125,000 nurses.

"And after having done all this, we could still have enough left out of our four hundred billions to buy up all of France and Belgium, and everything of value that France and Belgium possess; that is, every French and Belgian farm, home, factory, church, railroad, street car — in fact, everything of value in those two countries in 1914.

"For it must be remembered that the total valuation of France in 1914, according to the French official figures, was $62,000,000,000. The total of Belgium according to Belgian official figures, was in the neighborhood of $12,000,000,000. This means a total valuation of the two countries in 1914 of less than $75,000,000,000.

"In other words, the price which the leaders and statesmen of the Entente, including the satesmen of the United States, made the people of the world pay for the victory over Germany, was equal to the value of five countries like France plus five countries like Belgium."

Are such facts as these not enough to bring us to our knees in humble confession and repentance, and are they not sufficient motive for our allegiance to an ideal of human brotherhood and peace? Is there not enough concern in our hearts for the spiritual destiny of our common humanity to draw all the peoples of the world together into one great ideal that all men shall be free and that all shall be supplied with the essentials of life—that they shall be freed of the grim spectre of poverty and want, and that they may enjoy a large measure of the good life? Is this not "the pearl of great price" for such a time as this?"

This is my message and my challenge to you graduates of Bucknell. The true meaning of your education is a search for the eternal values. The age in which you are called to service is characterized by bewilderment and confusion of values, and by a disintegration of our cherished institutions. You should enter upon your service with pure motives and high ideals, and do not be deceived into believing that idealism is dead and has no place in our individual happiness or in the affairs of our social, economic, and political life. Furthermore, you should carry with you a character that is unimpeachable and a courage and a faith that will cause you to sell all that you have in order to maintain it amid all the storms that may be hurled against you. For what shall it profit you if you gain the whole world and lose your own soul.

SIDES AND ANGLES

President R. A. Kent, of University of Louisville Speaks on Purposes of New Education Methods in Address to Class of 1934

THE foreword to a recent translation of a Russian text on Character Education, states that a characteristic which distinguishes the Russian Revolution most strikingly from the revolutions of the past and which may be expected to mark the revolutions of the future, is the attention given to children and youth in universities of The United Social Soviet Republic. Russian drama, music, and education are attracting universal attention along with their economics and politics.

IN RUSSIA

Children and youth are organized in what is called the Young Pioneers, sometimes called the Third Communist Shift. First, of course, is the Communist Party proper. Only about one per cent of all the Russian population belong to this party. The Second Shift is the young communist or Kom-somol Group. This includes nearly two million young people from fifteen to twenty-three years of age. The Third Shift is the Young Pioneers, made up of children from ten to fifteen years of age, with a membership of about four million. The Fourth is the little Octobrists, age seven to ten, named from the October Revolution which brought the Bolsheviks into power. Thus there is a complete organization which carries an individual from one organization to the next from the time he is seven years of age until he is twenty-three.

These several groups provide specific activities and definitely train individuals for leadership. Their prime purpose of course is political, although health and physical training are included. They seek to impart social knowledge and to give participation in the economic construction of the country. The cultural and recreational objective is also included, shaped in conformity with the concept of a communistic society.

GERMANY

Germany is now making a new tradition, a tradition of the third empire. Saints, heroes, and martyrs are being created. Unlike other traditions this one is new, burning, and contemporary. It fans national pride and seeks directly to encourage dislike of other nations. This concept is expressed not only in music and literature; it is also a matter of text books and educational methods.

Herr Schemm, Minister of Education for Bavaria, in one of his earliest decrees after assuming office in March 1933, declared that in all kinds of schools and school classes there must be a course of instruction on the "Awakening of the Nation" based on the events of 1914 to 1933. In conformity with this decree, Herr Fikenscher has written an article published in the German Teachers' Union Monthly Publication, in which he points out the need of changing methods and content of teaching for the requirements of teaching for the requirements of the new action.

In this article Herr Fikenscher asks and answers three questions. The first question is: "Are teachers equipped in enthusiasm and knowledge to deal with this latest period of history?" This he answers by pointing with satisfaction to the specific preparatory course available for teachers in what concerns history teaching in the schools.

His second question is: "What is to become of the old tag, 'no politics in the schools?'" His answer to this is that party politics have been brought to an end. The National Socialistic Party is not a party, it is the Nation. All teaching, therefore, about history is at the same time teaching about the Nation. Political party squabbles as they affect the schools are therefore at an end.

Herr Fikenscher's third question is: "Is it possible to give history lessons of the kind required?" He answers by saying that those who are teaching the young boys and girls should not nourish illusions as to what can be done with the young children. He points out that the child in the earliest school years lives in the immediate present, and recommends the use of photographs of Storm Troops and any other aspects of the historical period, also of illustrated papers and films. He includes plenty of music and action, with marching and drilling. In this way he says, "knowledge, feeling, and action are to be united in the one idea—everything for Germany!"

On the upper levels, that is, in higher education, the German Ministry of the Interior has given orders for drastic reductions of the number of students in the universities and in other institutions which prepare for the professions. Out of nearly 40,000 candidates who have passed their matriculation examination, only 15,000 are to be admitted the coming year, and of these not more than one-tenth are to be women. The specific qualifications for these entrants to higher education are to be intellectual and physical fitness, character, and "national reliability." The London Times in citing these facts further states that no one who is not a professed Hitlerite need expect any more consideration than an anti-communist would receive in Russia. The statement further points out that the intention of the Nazi government is to divert would-be professional men and officials into occupations where there is more room for them. This is a revolt against the exaggerated importance which the educational system in Germany has attached to intellectual qualifications.

But it is not necessary to go to Russia or Germany to find those who believe that the program of education which is supported by a nation should be definitely planned to train children and youths who are committed to a special form of political and social order.

THE UNITED STATES

There is a group of educators in the United States who are openly and enthusiastically advocating the setting up of a social and economic order which one of their leaders characterizes as not only the latest, but the last word in government, the perfect order. He would have us organize and teach a curriculum which would endue children and youth with a devotion to this order, not second to that which is striven for by the communists in Russia or by the devotees of Hitler in Germany.

To be honest to the whole situation any well informed person is compelled to admit the existence in this country of conditions which in principal are similar, if not parallel in isolated instances, to those which have already been cited on nationalistic scales.

POLITICS

Only recently an acquaintance, whose veracity I have no reason to impeach, told me that during an inspection of one of the largest universities in the United States he asked the head of the department of economics of that institution whether any member of his staff had any leaning toward a belief in the government ownership of public utilities. The reply was entirely negative. My friend's inquiries among the individual members of this staff entirely confirmed the judgment of the head of the department. It so happens that this department has for some time past liberally subsidized by one of the largest utility corporations of the country.

SOCIOLOGY

In another university, located in an entirely different state from the former, the head of one of the social science departments was informed last winter that his services would no longer be needed after the end of the current school year. As far as could be found out the reason back of this action was this professor's deep sympathetic interest in the living conditions of groups of persons employed in a large industry of his commonwealth. Knowing the probable opposition to his point of view from certain centers of influence he had, up to the time that he was notified of his dismissal, restrained himself from public utterance along the line of his conviction. After he had been told of the termination of his services, his courage revived and he made, and published the results of, some scientific studies among the groups where his interests had already been. The validity of the facts which he presented was so overwhelming that the sentiment of the state rolled up in protest at his dismissal, and he was recently informed that his services would be continued indefinitely.

WHY EDUCATION?

This recital, fragmentary as it is, is sufficient to raise the question, "What is education, and what is education for?" I fully realize that in asking this and in making any attempt to answer it, I am treading a path so often traversed that it has become a deep rut; also that this path is open to the sniping of certain sharp shooters who constantly lurk in the background, gleefully anticipating the individual who is so foolish as to tread it. Be that as it may, there has never been a time in American history, particularly in the history of our higher education, when this question was in greater need of sobre, unbiased consideration.

In the first place, I assert that education is not for the purpose of trying to set up or be responsible for the perpetuation of any given social or economic order. It has been the belief of many that the schools are for the purpose of helping to prepare children and youth to become acceptable members of the society of which they are a part. With this principle I most heartily agree. But no period in our history contains more potent argument than does the present, one to support the proposition that any person who is so committed to a given order that he believes a deviation from it to be fundamentally wrong, is a serious deterrent to any improvement. There can be no progress without change, and that person who for whatever cause is opposed to anything different from the status quo, is an enemy to all progress.

NOT FOR PROPAGANDA

It becomes apparent then, does it not, that the principle which I have just stated is valid in both its negative as well as in its positive application. On the negative side the objective of a program of education, I suppose we would agree, should not be to tear down an existing order. On the positive side the objective should not be to defend to the last ditch any given regime. In each case the underlying principle is the same, viz.: the schools, the colleges, and the universities should not be institutions of social or economic propaganda. That youth who through the training given him in the process of his formal education, can see nothing good in anything except that which he has been taught and, on the other hand, in the face of any evidence can see nothing wrong in what he has learned to believe,—that youth, I say, has not been educated,—he has been trained to act and not think. He is the highest known type of trained animal.

THE INDIVIDUAL

This principle further means that the function of education is to maintain a system of learning and to develop the individual, and it is not to indicate either negative or positive restrictions upon the scope of the individual's activities or expression. With the future as uncertain as it now is, no one can tell what changes may come in the next few years. What college or university has the omnipotence to tell its students what order is to be the order, or to attempt to prepare them for any given social or economic regime? Is there any specific book learning which would enable young men or women to accommodate themselves more easily to what may happen if the social order changes,—and it has been continually changing throughout history by revolutionary processes of varying degrees of rapidity? That people will most successfully cope with these changes which can most intelligently make the adaptations necessary.

NEW CONCEPT NEEDED

My second general assertion is that education needs to get a new conception of the function and of the standards of scholarship. It may be that the new German order where every university student will have spent some time in a labor camp, is far superior to the traditional European concept according to which it is a disgrace for a university student to do menial labor. As one has well said, simple increasing education is not going to cure the ills of the world. You remember the story related in the Bible, of the Pharisees who encompassed land and sea to get a convert, and then proceeded to make him tenfold more a child of hell than they were. This they did merely by educating him.

Our so-called colleges of Liberal Arts have traditionally become the greatest strongholds of academic conservatism and reactionary centers of so-called intelligent activities that can be found in any institution in this country. Shackled by the mechanics of credits, time units, and percentage marks of individual achievement, before the progression movements now operating became effective, they bade fair to occupy a place in the educational picture of America comparable with that held by the monasteries in the ecclesiastical photograph of Europe preceding the Reformation.

INTERESTS NOT MARKS

In a recent address on the changing meaning of scholarships, President Henry T. Moore of Skidmore College, has recently well said that we should concern ourselves more in the measurement of the interests of students than in the marks which they make on their examinations. The range of these interests is of far greater importance in the development of these youths, and therefore will be of greater significance to the society of which they will be a part. Professor Paul Douglas has recently pointed out the fact that some of the more corrupt of our political bosses have been men who made high grades in their college courses in ethics and political science. A student at the University of Kansas criticizes our "false criterion of scholarship" as "a dangerous foundation of idealism and achievement." Once an educated person was he who knew the facts of organized knowledge. Now a fraction of knowable facts that any person can assemble has become infinitesimally small. Meanwhile we have come more and more to see the need "That each individual should have within him a sustaining source of creative interests," and of social mindedness. The college which in the face of this new situation still rigidly adheres to the old standards of scholarship is just as guilty of academic indoctrination as is Russia or Germany of social, economic, or civic.

In the third place I assert that the college should seek to develop a new type of rugged individualism. "Confidence in expert opinion is logical and useful in all matters in which reasoning and conclusions can be based on reliable observation.

"The tendency, however, can be carried too far. There are matters of general concern — such as education and politics — in which . . . every man should endeavor to form — in all modesty — an intelligent opinion. In these things we may admit the advantages of special training, but we must also recognize that, even for the trained, the premises for reasoning are uncertain and complex. Excess of authority worship in these things breeds timidity of thought on the part of those who might contribute fresh points of view . . . We have erred in an excess of authority worship in these matters."

THINKERS NEEDED

We need a type of individual who can think, who is not afraid to think, and who actually does think. In the next place we are sadly in need of those individuals who after having thought have the courage to act in an intelligent manner, that is, on a thought out basis.

In one of the moderately sized cities of this country I was recently told by one of its leading politicians that the precinct in which it was most difficult to secure any person to file as a candidate for the City Board of Aldermen is that precinct which has the largest proportion of college and university graduates. No one, I presume, would question the general intelligence or the qualifications of training of the majority of the voters in this precinct. Anyone has a right to question the civic value of their training. They refuse to act on what they know, — in conformity with the civic ideals and responsibilities which I presume we would all accept theoretically, at least, as being applicable to all citizens.

Finally, I assert that the function of education is to develop social intelligence and social conscience. This social mindedness is not in contradiction to the intellectual individualism already referred to but rather in support of it.

BOOK SHELF

The Bucknell Bookshelf has recently received nine additional works by Bucknell men. Dr. Gilbert Perez, '07, sends us from the Philippines two monographs and three pamphlets, while Professor Cyrus H. Karraker of the faculty contributes two books. Professor Paul Gates of the faculty adds one book and Dr. Edwin E. Aubrey, '19, sends his latest.

Perez—Numismatic and Educator

Dr. Perez is the author of numerous articles on Numismatics, one, "The Mint of The Philippine Islands" has been added to the Bookshelf. It is published by The American Numismatic Society. As an educator Dr. Perez has written several manuals and reports published by The Bureau of Education, and one series of essays entitled "Fellow Teachers".

Karraker Receives Praise

The recent publication from the University of Pennsylvania Press entitled "The Hispaniola Treasure" by Dr. Karraker has received wide recognition as an interesting and authoritative treatise on the old treasure hunts along the Spanish Main. Theodore Hall in his column "No Ends of Books" writes "The Hispaniola Treasure" will please the historical expert, I dare say. But I am far more sure that its strange lore and vivid excitement will delight the lay reader". Dr. Karraker is also the author of "The Seventeenth Century Sheriff" published by the University of North Carolina Press in 1930. Both volumes have been added to the Bookshelf.

Gates Studies the I. C.

Published by the Harvard Press as one of the Economic Series "The Illinois Central Railroad and its Colonization Work", by Paul W. Gates, was awarded the David A. Wells prize at Harvard for the year 1931-32 as the best essay in certain specified fields of economics. Professor Gates's study covers so many aspects of Middle Western life in the nineteenth century that it will be of the deepest interest not only to economists but to students of American frontier history, agriculture, immigration, and colonization as well.

The Future of Religion

Dr. Edwin E. Aubrey of the faculty of The University of Chicago delves into the deeper meanings of religion to the youth of today as he writes "Religion and The Next Generation", published by Harpers. The book is destined as an aid to teachers and parents as well as a guide to the understanding of the fundamental aspects of human needs.

DR. HUNT REMINISCES

"Looking Backward Half a Century" is the title of an article from the pen of President Emeritus Emory W. Hunt which recently appeared in the Rochester Alumni Review. Dr. Hunt attended in June the fiftieth reunion of his class at Rochester.

DR. WILLIAM THOMPSON, '01, DIES

Dr. William Thompson, '01, prominent and esteemed Philadelphia dentist died in the Presbyterian Hospital in that city on June 28, 1934. He had been ill for less than a month. Dr. Thompson was a familiar figure at Bucknell Commencements and Homecomings for the past thirty years and his passing will be mourned by countless Bucknell friends.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Louise Ripple Thompson, and three sons: Dr. William E., Jr., '25, John R. and Robert E., both members of the Class of 1935. Two granddaughters, Margaret Ann and Patricia Ann Thompson, also survive in addition to a sister, who resides in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Brief funeral services were held in Philadelphia and burial at Milton, Sunday, July 1.

PRESIDENT ABROAD

Leaving New York June 20 on board the "S. S. Manhattan," Dr. Homer P. Rainey, president of Bucknell, will tour Europe this summer in the company of Dr. Sherwood Eddy and a group of educators. The group will study European educational, social, and economic situations.

SECRETARY'S REPORT TO THE GENERAL ALUMNI ASSOCIATION JUNE 9, 1934, 3 P. M.

Let us go back to last June, when, according to the records, we enjoyed the best alumni attendance at Commencement in history. That season was fully reviewed in the June number of The Alumni Monthly but little attention was given editorially to the detail and headaches of arranging for the best attended Commencement. Those things are taken for granted. They are just done in some mysterious way, probably by the use of mirrors, and there you are. Suffice it to say that no mirrors were used. It was all the result of hard work, many letters, and direct concentration of effort during May toward the one purpose of getting alumni to come back to the campus. The same story repeats itself this year, as it has for the past ten years. We also at this time announce and celebrate our tenth anniversary as your secretary. The past decade has been swift and pleasant and we pay a tribute to the many alumni who have, through cooperation, counsel, and cheerful advice, made of our tasks a pleasure in serving Alma Mater and her six thousand sons and daughters.

—but we started to make an annual report of "High Lights" beginning with last June. After Commencement we attended the annual sessions of The American Alumni Council in Chicago. Here Bucknell gained national recognition through the award of a first prize to The Bucknell Alumni Monthly for the best news story of the year appearing in any college alumni magazine. Your secretary was further honored by this national body of alumni representatives by election to the post of Director for Conventions of the organization. (Probably to get some work out of him to pay for the magazine prize).

Summer work at the office followed the Chicago trip. Our annual overhauling of files requires the full two months of June and July. We check and recheck some thirty thousand cards on which are classified all alumni, men and women, graduates and non-graduates. In the annual "house cleaning" we attempt to repair the damage done during the past twelve months by constant usage, broken sequences, and the inevitable percentage of politely called "erratum". Fraternity files, club lists, class cards, and biographical files are checked against the master plates and as a final filing operation we add the two hundred odd graduates of the past June and their less fortunate class members who have dropped by the wayside during the previous four years. Thus each summer a new group of two or three hundred alumni come into our records as members of the great body we know as The General Alumni Association.

Before the opening of college in September, plans are laid for Homecoming, a chairman elected, and letters and stories prepared to "resell" the annual football classic to the alumni. All of the preliminary work leading to Homecoming culminates on the "Big Day" as last minute rush orders for fifty yard line seats are handled, room reservations booked, and tickets sold for the big dinner, so successfully launched last fall as a new feature of Homecoming.

This alumni dinner after the Temple Game last autumn witnessed the greatest single gathering of sons and daughters of The Orange and Blue on record at Lewisburg. More than four hundred enjoyed the great party with an excellent dinner and the inspirational address by President Rainey. It is estimated that more than two hundred were turned away because of lack of accommodations. It goes without saying that the dinner will be repeated this fall.

Incident to all of the foregoing activities, your secretary acted as editor of The Bucknell Alumni Monthly. The regular September number announcing the opening of college and the new Junior College venture at Wilkes-Barre, the special pre-Homecoming edition, and the follow up post-Celebration and football review number and then the Christmas edition all appeared on schedule.

After the holidays we entered the winter period of club activity with special meetings in Buffalo, Rochester, Pittsburgh, and Newark, Philadelphia and New York were conspicuous by their absence from the list of winter parties. Special recognition should be given the Northern New Jersey alumni group for their fine party in April at Newark. More than two hundred alumni and friends organized the thriving new Bucknell Alumni Club of Northern New Jersey; a notable achievement in alumni circles.

The Alumni Fund, with its endless correspondence with class agents, designs for printing, and special articles in The Monthly took its usual toll of time and headaches. We reported to The Fund Committee this morning of the work of this department. Figures and analyses will appear in the forthcoming edition of The Alumni Monthly. The amount of money contributed to the Fund by the end of this month when we close our books will be in excess of five thousand dollars and will have come from class gifts and individual donations from more than three hundred alumni. There is still much work to be done and there are many alumni whose gifts have not matched their interest in this greatest alumni venture.

The cumulative effect of gifts to The Fund over the four year period has reached a total of more than twenty thousand dollars through which more than seventy seniors have been enabled to graduate by virtue of The Senior-Alumni Loan Plan. On Monday thirty members of The Class of 1934 will receive diplomas from President Rainey through the efficacy of this loan plan.

The Alumni Office, during the past twelve months, as for the past decade, has been open as the "Campus Service Station" for alumni. Many visitors have been entertained and some three thousand letters handled. The multiple and complex services of your Alumni Office have been detailed in the folder "Whys and Replies" recently mailed to all alumni in the interests of The Alumni Fund. Our whole story, "raison d'etre", and hope for the future was contained in the few printed pages of that leaflet. We hope that it was read and appreciated. Extra copies are available on request.

For the coming year we plan a concerted action with university administrators to make the alumni conscious of the six million dollar needs of Bucknell during the twelve years ahead to culminate in the great centennial celebration, now already being planned.

We further will seek to interest class representatives and alumni clubs in the great untapped resources of the alumni fund field, and according to our constitution adopted in 1855, we will continue to promote the welfare and advancement of the university.

In this brief report of "High Lights" we have probably omitted many things that were of exceeding importance during the past year but which have assumed their proper perspective in the "March of Time". We know of only one more item worthy of mention and that is the eternal flame of alumni loyalty to Alma Mater which we believe will burn ever brighter in the years to come as we see the unfolding of a great dream for the college we love and honor — our own Bucknell.

Editor's Corner

GREETINGS Bucknellians! On this warm autumn day we welcome the Freshmen to the campus and our thoughts instinctively turn to another day when we first saw the beauty and felt the quiet charm of Bucknell and Lewisburg. You too knew a day "Way Back When" as you experienced the thrill of the first day at College.

THE great trees and winding campus paths still echo to the voices and tread of eager youngsters. The change in times have altered little the spirit of Bucknell where Freshmen are perennial, sophomores still sophomores, juniors sober and seniors grave. One definitely "feels" the love of Alma Mater as each year she greets her new sons and daughters.

ALUMNI know, but do not always fully appreciate, the embracing faith of Bucknell in her children, whether freshmen or "old grads". Homecoming is planned each year to bring alumni to the campus to renew that faith, inculcate pride for the present and hope for the future.

HOMECOMING is for the alumni, despite the fact that a football game is played in the afternoon as an attraction on the program. Judging from our experience last year in organizing the Dinner and Dance, we plan now for a repetition of these two important functions. Here alumni may see and greet one another and enjoy again the days of yore and the game of the day.

PRESIDENT RAINEY, will again be the sole speaker at the Dinner as he reports on his stewardship. Dr. S. M. Davenport, '16, President of the Alumni Association will preside. Detailed announcements will be made in the October number of this magazine. It is expected that tickets will be limited and advance registration required.

ANOTHER column tells more about Homecoming as it lists the date (October 27—just for emphasis) and the stellar football attraction in Villanova, an old Bison rival, and now coached by the famous Harry Stuhldreher, one of the Four Horsemen of Notre Dame.

JUST in case it is impossible to get to Homecoming, we have an alternative on the schedule in the Penn State Game at Lewisburg on November 24, the Saturday before Thanksgiving. We expect many alumni at this game — but it will not be the equal of Homecoming when we have the big alumni party.

THIS State game is the finest addition to the Bucknell schedule in recent years — in fact, we believe it to be the "natural" as it has been for these many years. The game was agreed upon during the summer and it is the expressed hope of many officials of both colleges that the arrangement may become permanent.

WE hear rumors that the officers of The North Jersey Alumni Club are going to charter a bus or two to bring the younger crowd of alumni to Homecoming. Great idea! Other club officers please copy!

PITTSBURGHERS look forward to the visit of the Orange and Blue to Forbes Field on the evening of October 12 when Duquesne will be met on the gridiron. An alumni party is now being planned for the Hotel Schenley (just across the street from Forbes Field) prior to the game.

CHECKING over enrolment names we find twenty-two freshmen who boast of Bucknell parentage. Four of the lot are truly legacies with both father and mother former Bucknell students. We are reaching collegiate maturity as the youngsters come along from year to year as children and even grandchildren of former students.

OUR "Bucknell Book Shelf" continues to grow with numerous additions received during the summer. Dr. S. Calvin Smith, '01, of Philadelphia has written another fine book about the heart and Dean Miller of the faculty has fathered a book on public prayer. We understand that Dr. Lewis E. Theiss, '02, of the faculty is bringing out another in his fine series of boy's books. All of the aforementioned will be reviewed in our October number.

WE had the pleasure recently of escorting several strangers about the campus and through the buildings. Their remarks and asides to one another in comparing Bucknell to other colleges brought pride to our heart. Of course, we know it is a fine place — among the best — but it does help to hear it from others. Yes! They sent their son here as a freshman and promised a daughter for next year!

THE NEW YEAR

THE beginning of a new school year is always a happy time on the campus. There is always the interest and enthusiasm that comes with the new class. There is, too, an eagerness about the new class—how many there will be, and what will be their quality. Then, too, we all attack our work with new vigor after the vacation. Besides a new class of students there are usually new members among the faculty whom we are always happy to welcome to the Bucknell family. And then there is the prospect of some fine football games just around the corner.

Our prospects for the new year are quite encouraging. We have just enrolled a new freshman class that is as large, if not a little larger than the class a year ago. In the face of continued depressed economic conditions it is source of satisfaction to have no decrease in the size of the freshman class.

There are two important changes on the campus at the beginning of the new year. First, there is a new athletic policy and a new coach of football. Coach Mylin has already begun his duties, and is rapidly winning the confidence and friendship of the entire campus. We are all wishing for him a successful first season. Second, through the generosity of Senator A. J. Sordoni of Forty Fort, Pennsylvania, we have been able to employ a landscape architect for the campus. He is Mr. John W. Stoker, a graduate landscape artist. He will work in cooperation with Mr. Larson, the building architect, in building a more beautiful Bucknell. This is certainly one of the most essential factors in the development of our new program. Mr. Stoker has already begun work upon the trees of the campus.

I should like to remind all our alumni of the Homecoming on October 27, and urge you to plan to attend our second annual Homecoming Dinner on that evening. We have had many expressions of appreciation of the Dinner last year and many requests to make it an annual feature of the Homecoming program, which we have done.

Yours for a happy year,

James P. Rainey

Two Hundred Twenty-Five Frosh

Class of 1937 Equals That of Last Year

TWO hundred and twenty-five freshmen constituted the Class of 1937 on Wednesday, September 12, the first day of the annual Freshman Week. It is expected by Registrar Holter that this number will reach or exceed the figure of two hundred and thirty-five of the Class of 1936 at registration last year. The entire student body enrollment is confidently expected to pass the eight hundred and fifty mark.

Dr. H. G. Moulton, Speaker

Convocation, marking the formal opening of college on Friday, September 21, will bring to the campus Dr. H. G. Moulton, President of Brookings Institute of Washington, D. C. Dr. Moulton is an internationally known economist and formerly a professor at the University of Chicago. He will deliver the convocation address.

Prizes for student achievement in various academic lines for the past year will be awarded at the Convocation exercises by President Rainey.

FACULTY CHANGES

EIGHT new additions have been made to the faculty, including one at the University and seven at the Bucknell Junior College in Wilkes-Barre.

C. W. Patton of Oklahoma Baptist University, Shawnee, Okla., will join the University faculty for the first semester as a substitute for Dr. P. W. Gates, who has been granted a semester's leave to make a special land survey for the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. He will have the title of assistant visiting professor of history.

Miss Ruth Hlavaty, instructor in piano, will re-join the faculty after spending the past year studying in Berlin.

Absent on leave for the coming term will be Dr. L. L. Rockwell, who will go to the University of Michigan to work on the New Modern Language Dictionary, and Dr. Harry R. Warfel, who will go to Yale to complete his biography of Noah Webster.

Junior College

Appointees to the Junior College staff for the coming year include the following:

Dr. Irving L. Churchill of Rhode Island State Teachers College, assistant professor of English.

Dr. Wilfrid H. Crook, director in the Summer Laboratory on Social and Industrial Conditions in Greater Boston, assistant professor of sociology.

Dr. Roy C. Tasker of Cornell University, assistant professor of biology.

Daniel J. Gage of Stanford University, assistant professor of history.

Donald G. Stillman of Forty-Fort, formerly of the Peddie School and the University of Michigan, instructor in English.

Charles H. Godcharles of Duke University, instructor in philosophy and psychology.

Miss Kathryn M. Hughes, graduate of the department of library science at the University of Michigan and assistant in the Osterhaut Free Library, librarian.

Two members of the University staff have been transferred to the Junior College faculty. They are: Voris B. Hall, assistant professor of physics, and John S. Gold, assistant professor of mathematics.

The Junior College is beginning its second year and will offer sophomore courses this fall for the first time.

Second-year students at the University as well as at the Junior College will study under Bucknell's new sophomore survey courses. Introduced to Bucknell freshmen last year, the survey courses, a prominent feature of the Bucknell educational program, have been unusually successful.

EDUCATION CONFERENCE

NOVEMBER 2 AND 3

THE ninth annual Bucknell Conference on Education will be held on the campus Friday and Saturday, November 2 and 3. The program is built around the one hundredth anniversary of the passage of the Pennsylvania free school law. It will provide educational features of significance. Friday evening at the general session a pageant showing the growth of education in Pennsylvania will be presented.

Among the prominent educators who will appear on the programs are: Dr. James N. Rule, State Superintendent of Public Instruction; Dr. Ben D. Wood, Columbia University; Dr. Coit R. Hoechst, '07, of the University of Pittsburgh; Dr. C. F. Sanders of Gettysburg College and President Homer P. Rainey of Bucknell.

For the second year the program will include meetings of school directors and parent teacher association workers. David A. Miller, publisher of the Allentown Morning Call and president of the State School Directors' Association will address the school directors. Mrs. Laura S. Greenwood, president of the State P. T. A. will address the P. T. A. meeting. Mrs. W. B. Kester, '06 of Akron, Ohio, nationally prominent in the P. T. A. will also address the parent teacher associations.

Friday evening a banquet will be held in the Women's College dining room. The entertainment it is hoped will equal that furnished by Wilson MacDonald, "Canadian Poet laureate" last year and which was praised by all who were present.

Bucknell alumni who are chairmen of group meetings include: Dr. Carl L. Millward, '06 of Milton; Katherine Reed, '18 of Sunbury; Stanley A. Galiley, MA'32 of Shamokin; Fred W. Diehl, '25 of Danville; Florence Rollins, '16 of Altoona; Richard B. Vastine, '27 of Roselle, N. J.; C. S. Sanders, '13 of Shamokin; Sylvester B. Dunlap, '03 of Muncy; Robert D. Smink, '26 of Williamsport; Rev. Paul Humphreys, '28 of Huntingdon; F. W. Walp, M. A.'31 of Forty-Fort and F. B. Padgett, '35 of Sunbury.

It is hoped that all Bucknellians who are interested in any phase of education will endeavor to be present.

Twenty-Two Legacies In Class of 1938

Sons and Daughters of Alumni in Freshman Class

BUCKNELL inherits this Fall the sons and daughters, not to mention cousins, brothers, sisters, etc., of more than a score of alumni. The twenty-two sons and daughters of alumni lead the list with five of the lot boasting both fathers and mothers as alumni. Some fifty odd additional members of the youngest class claim Bucknell lineage through brothers and sisters, aunts and uncles, and even grandparents.

The parentage of Freshmen ranges from the Class of 1893 to the Class of 1916. The Class of 1907 leads the list with five children as members of 1938. The complete list of sons and daughters with alumni parents follows:

PITTSBURGH PARTY OCTOBER 12

B. R. SEEMANN, '21, has been named Chairman of Arrangements for an alumni party at Hotel Schenley, Pittsburgh, on the night of October 12. Dinner will be served at six o'clock in a private dining room. The party precedes the Bucknell-Duquesne football game at Forbes Field that night. All visiting alumni and friends of Bucknell are invited to the dinner by the officers and members of The Western Pennsylvania Alumni Club. Hotel Schenley will be Bucknell headquarters both before and after the game.

The game with Duquesne will be the first away from home for the Bisons this year and their second clash on the gridiron. Last year Duquesne, under Elmer Leyden, now Coach at Notre Dame, defeated Bucknell 6-0 on Forbes Field. This year's encounter between the two teams, both under new coaching regimes, is already attracting the attention of sports writers and fans.

Freshmen who have Bucknell relatives, other than parents, comprise a sizable group of the Class of 1938. Many are brothers and sisters, while some are nieces, nephews, cousins, and even grandchildren where the Bucknell heritage was suspended for a generation. The names and home towns of the Freshmen relatives of former Bucknellians are given herewith:

- Thelma V. Slack, Lewisburg, Pa.
- Arrena J. Smith, Nanticoke, Pa.
- Elizabeth W. Stead, Crosswicks, N. J.
- Julia E. Swan, La Jose, Pa.
- Ruth E. Walter, Lewisburg, Pa.
- Ellen Armstrong, Montgomery, Pa.

Ten Game Schedule For Bisons

Penn State Added to 1934 Card for Saturday Before Thanksgiving at Lewisburg. Four other Home Games

THE ten game schedule for the 1934 Bucknell football team is one of the hardest ever faced by an Orange and Blue eleven. The original nine game card was difficult enough for a new coaching regime but with the addition of Penn State at Lewisburg on November 24 the schedule assumes proportions equal to if not more difficult than any faced this season in the east.

The season opens on September 28, at Lewisburg under the arc lights when a newcomer appears to face the Bisons. Davis-Elkins College of Elkins, West Virginia holds the honor spot as the lid lifter. D. & E., as the team from the soft coal fields is known, ranked as highest scoring eleven in the country last season. They will bring an experienced and able eleven to Lewisburg to test the coaching of "Hooks" Mylin, new Bucknell mentor.

Another Newcomer

Pennsylvania Military College, known as P. M. C., appears for the first time in history on a Bucknell schedule this year. They will be played at night on October 5 at Lewisburg as the second game of the schedule.

Duquesne at Pittsburgh

To avenge a defeat by one touchdown of last season the Orange and Blue Bisons will journey to Pittsburgh on October 12 to face Duquesne at Forbes Field. An alumni party will be staged at The Hotel Schenley at dinner prior to the game. This will be the first away from home game of the season and the last night game.

St. Thomas at Scranton

The daylight campaign opens on October 20 at Scranton where the Bisons meet St. Thomas in the annual charity game. The "Tommies" replace Villanova and Western Maryland who were formerly played in the Electric City.

HOMECOMING, OCTOBER 27

Villanova comes to Lewisburg on October 27 for Homecoming. The Wildcats are credited with their greatest team this season and Harry Stuhldreher, Notre Dame Horseman as Head Coach, knows how to develop a football machine. The Dick Merriwell finish of the game last year at Philadelphia when Bucknell won 19-17 still rankles in the Villanova breast. This game promises to be one of the most bitterly fought encounters of the year. The alumni dinner and dance after the game are now being planned and other special features for Homecoming to attract many hundreds of alumni will be announced in the next issue of this magazine.

Southern Journey

The first November game for the Bisons will be played in Dixie on Saturday the third. Furman University at Greenville, S. C. will act as hosts to the invading Yankees from Pennsylvania. Last year this team was played at Lewisburg in a snow storm.

The southern boys were frozen by the weather and a 14-0 score.

W. & J., November 10

The Presidents of Washington and Jefferson are reported as planning a reception that will not be to the taste of the Bisons at Washington, Pa., on November 10. They remember the 38-6 game of the past season at Lewisburg and will make every effort to turn this score about to their own advantage. This will be the thirteenth game between Bucknell and W. & J.

Western Maryland at Lewisburg

Dick Harlow will bring his Western Maryland team to Lewisburg on November 17 to face an angry herd of Bison out for revenge to atone for the one point defeat of the past season. The memory of the Scranton game when Dick Harlow "worked" his psychology on the Bisons is still fresh in the minds of every varsity man. Western Maryland will have trouble at Lewisburg on November 17.

PENN STATE NOVEMBER 24

To the average alumnus and football fan this game looms as the most important addition to the Bucknell schedule in recent years. It was added during the past summer as a result of a conference between athletic officials of both institutions. The contract calls for two games at Lewisburg on successive years. The entire State-Bucknell athletic history will be reviewed for the readers of this magazine in a forthcoming number. The date for this year's game, November 24, the Saturday before Thanksgiving, coupled with the natural rivalry between Bucknell and State is expected to draw the largest crowd of the year to The Memorial Stadium.

Temple on Thanksgiving

Temple has issued a challenge to the ancient rivalry of the Penn-Cornell game in Philadelphia on Thanksgiving Day by bidding for the support of the fans with the Bisons as visitors to their stadium the same afternoon. The game will be the final one of the year for both Temple and Bucknell. "Pop" Warner, Head Coach at Temple, regards this game as one of the most important on his list. Philadelphia alumni are planning a reception for the team and a general alumni party.

A review of the single games listed above as an entire schedule reveals not one so called "set up". Every opponent will challenge the full strength of the Orange and Blue machine. The coaches will be unable to "point" for any single encounter, but instead will prepare for the season game by game. Coaches Mylin and McAndrews are quoted as pleased with the wealth of material and the able work of the veterans. The players, likewise, are working daily with every confidence in the new coaches whom they have learned to respect and admire. The excellent cooperation between coaches and players is indicative of a smooth working machine throughout one of the hardest Bucknell schedules in recent years.

Fifteen Veterans On Varsity

Coaches Developing a Fast Team Around Seniors

FIFTEEN veterans form the backbone of the 1934 Bucknell eleven, now in training under Coach E. E. Mylin and his assistant Martin McAndrews. The new coaches are enthusiastic over the material and in less than a week of practice have their charges well on the way toward scrimmages and pre-season workouts. The fifteen letter men, six of them stars for the past two years, are all being pressed for their positions by the twenty-one other members of the full squad of thirty-six candidates.

Frosh Good

An even dozen husky Frosh of the past season, having bloomed into sophomores, are candidates for every job on the eleven with an extra for reserve. Several show promise of breaking into the lineup in the first game.

Seniors Get First Call

Coach Mylin, when asked for a tentative lineup for his opening game on September 28 under the arc lights in the Stadium, selected all veterans on the basis of their experience under fire. He regards the opening game with Davis-Elkins as one of the toughest spots on the card. The West Virginians are noted for strong, fast teams and early reports indicate the present eleven from below the Mason and Dixon line is no exception. The varsity lineup as listed by Mylin for the opening whistle on the night of the 28th will read as follows:

Ends—Wilkinson and Delaney or Zanarina and Pethick.

Tackles—Bergkamp and Boiston (C).

Guards—Drayton and Furiell (C).

Center—McGaughey.

Quarter—Sitarsky.

Halves—Rhubright and Reznichak.

Full—Miller.

Missing from the lineup will be the familiar names of Myers, Dorman, Farina, Dempsey, Peters, and James. On the line the places of Dorman, Farina, Dempsey, and James will be taken by Wilkinson, McGaughey, Boiston, and Furiell, all able replacements. In the backfield Myers and Peters will be succeeded by Rhubright and Miller, both of whom saw action in nearly every game last year.

Whereas last season the strength of the Orange and Blue lay in the wealth of reserve material which made practically two "first" elevens, readily interchangeable in any position, this year will find a thoroughly seasoned "first" team which may often play an entire game with only minor replacements. If and when reserve strength is needed it is expected the sophomores on the squad will have sufficient experience to carry through a part of each game.

Co-Captains

George "Butch" Boiston, so called from his rotund lines, and Ralph "Chappy" Furiell, of the Chaplin walk, are co-captains of the 1934 Bisons. They were elected to succeed Farina and James of the 1933 eleven. Both are linemen of experience and outstanding ability.

Practice

Coaches Mylin and McAndrews greeted the squad of thirty-six players on Monday, September 10. Since that date three daily sessions have kept them busy. Morning and afternoon practices have been held in the stadium with an evening session in the classroom. With the opening of college on September 19 the customary single practice in the afternoon will be resumed with night practice sessions and probably intra-squad games under the arc lights prior to the three night games that are first on the schedule.

Fast Team

The coaches have neglected no department of play in the early training. Blocking, tackling, charging, pass offense, pass defense, broken field running, punting, place kicking, drop kicking, have all come in for full rehearsals. Scrimmages and the development of plays are scheduled coincident with the opening of college. Watching the development of linemen in practice sessions devoted to "pulling out" of the line to lead interference, a seasoned scout was overheard to remark that it looked like Bucknell would have one of the fastest teams in years.

The physical condition of the players after a summer's absence from the campus was commented upon by a faculty member watching practice. He opined that "every man jack of 'em look like life guards with their heavy coats of tan and rippling muscles".

It is the duty of the two "old masters" as "Peachy" Kling and "Doc" Hoskins are known to keep the players in physical condition. Both are "on the job" as usual with their customary high praise for the "boys".

FOUR FROSH GAMES

With only one home game the 1934 Freshman eleven looks to three trips to challenge Penn State, Army, and Wyoming Seminary on the gridiron. The single home encounter will be with Temple Frosh at Lewisburg on October 12. The State Freshmen will be met at State College on November 3, the Army Plebes at West Point on November 14, and Wyoming Seminary varsity in the annual Thanksgiving Day game at Kingston.

VARSITY SOCCER

Seven games make up the 1934 schedule for the Bucknell Soccer team. The booters open on October 6 with Franklin and Marshall at Lewisburg and close their season on November 24 with Temple at Philadelphia. The complete schedule follows:

Oct. 6	F. and M.	Lewisburg
Oct. 10	Army	West Point
Oct. 17	Dickinson College	Lewisburg
Oct. 27	Lafayette	Lewisburg
Nov. 17	University of Delaware	Newark, Del.
Nov. 10	E. Stroudsburg	E. Stroudsburg
Nov. 24	Temple	Philadelphia

CAMPUS TREES PRUNED

Through the generosity of Trustee Andrew J. Sordoni of Forty Fort, Mr. John W. Stoker, landscape architect, has been engaged for the past several months on the campus in the work of pruning and preserving the trees.

The great stand of virgin timber on the campus has long been the beauty of "The Hill" and the pride of every Bucknellian. Mr. Stoker is scientifically preserving these old giants and the resultant trimming and pruning is expected to prolong the life and enhance the beauty of the hundreds of oaks, maples, elms, and kindred trees.

FACULTY MEMBERS INCORPORATE

Dr. Bruce J. Miller, '27, of the Department of Chemistry and Dr. Alvin B. Biscoe, Economics, have recently formed a corporation for the manufacture and sale of Mar-Va-Balm, an embalming fluid developed by Dr. Miller. The corporation is known as Mar-Va-Balm, Inc. Several salesmen are employed at the present time and Dr. Miller reports a fair market for the product.

RAINEYS RETURN FROM EUROPE

President and Mrs. Homer Price Rainey returned from a more than two month tour of Europe in September. They were members of a party conducted by Sherwood Eddy, and visited Berlin, Vienna, Moscow, Paris, Leningrad, and other prominent cities as well as Oberammergau to see The Passion Play. Many prominent statesmen were met and conditions in all of the countries visited studied by the entire party.

THE 1934 SUMMER SESSION

CONTRARY to the expectations of many people the 1934 summer session was almost as large as that of 1933. About fifteen fewer people were enrolled and it seemed to be the judgment of the faculty that the quality was superior. An unusually large number of students were working toward the Master's degree. Twenty-three persons received the Master's degree in August, which added to the eight degrees granted in June, makes a total of 31 Master's degrees granted at Bucknell for the year.

The Demonstration School was forced to turn away persons desiring practice teaching, as a limit of fifty had been set. Its faculty had five new additions this year: Dr. G. W. Leman of New York University, principal; Dr. Coit R. Hoechst of the University of Pittsburgh, French; William Mann Fincke, Expert in creative education, English; Louise Kaplan of the high school at Elizabeth, New Jersey, social studies; and Earl A. Gill of the Lewisburg High School, mathematics. The school closed with a demonstration of the work done during the session.

Kappa Phi Kappa, professional education fraternity, put on a rich program, initiating fourteen men and closing the summer's activities with a banquet at the Hopp Inn.

C. HENDERSON SUPPLEE DIES

THE death of Mr. C. Henderson Supplee, Trustee of Bucknell University, occurred at his home in Merion, Pa., on September 10, 1934. Mr. Supplee was aged seventy-four. He had been taken ill in Glasgow, Scotland, on August 6 and returned to this country on August 24.

Mr. Supplee was president of Supplee-Wills-Jones, dairy products firm, and vice-president of National Dairy Products Corporation.

As a young man he started a milk business of his own on $1500 borrowed capital. He built up a route supplying 106 quarts of milk daily. Later, the business expanded and he operated two milk wagons.

Merged with Father

He then merged with his father, who also was operating a couple of wagons, and the Supplee Dairy came into existence. Mr. Supplee's father, the senior partner of the firm, retired in 1897. In 1917 Supplee merged with Wills & Jones.

The company of which he was head at his death, supplies over 250,000 customers and operates milk stations for its supply in five different States.

Mr. Supplee's favorite hobby was driving and riding thoroughbred horses. Years ago he belonged to several riding and driving clubs, long disbanded. His daily exercise was a brisk canter in the country surrounding his home.

TWO LOCAL MEN DIE

Dr. Harry Hoffman, prominent local druggist, died as a result of a heart attack on July 18. He is survived by his widow, Elizabeth Bates Hoffman, 194. Another local figure, George Nesbit, died as a result of an operation for hernia on July 17. "George" was known to many generations of Bucknellians as the mail carrier who met all trains.

ATTENTION DOCTORS AND LAWYERS

THE Alumni Office is compiling biographical lists of Bucknell medical men and barristers. Alumni who have received either an M.D. or LL.B. degree since 1930 are requested to advise The Alumni Secretary accordingly giving name of graduate institution and date of degree.

If the address label on the wrapper of this magazine bears the title Dr. or Esq. the listing is correct and notice unnecessary. If you have received a medical or legal degree or have been admitted to practice and either of the above titles do not appear a notice to this effect would be appreciated.

NEW BAND UNIFORMS

Bucknell will again boast of her band this Fall, as twenty-five more men have been added to the organization. It is expected that the twenty-five new uniforms, recently ordered, will arrive in time for appearance at The Homecoming Game on October 27. The new uniforms complete the outfitting of the band, begun last Spring when the first twenty-five were purchased. The fifty piece musical organization will also feature a splendidly dressed drum major. The new uniforms are tailored of blue, trimmed in orange and are the result of careful selection by a committee. Alumni gifts to the band uniform fund, begun last year by Dr. Edward Pangburn, '15, then President of The Alumni Association, are solicited. Checks may be directed to Dr. J. H. Miller, Dean of Students.

WORST SINCE '89

Torrential rains all day Sunday, September 16, forced Bull Run, Susquehanna River tributary, flowing through Lewisburg, over its banks on North Sixth Street and across Market Street for the first time since the memorable flood of 1889. Several feet of water poured down Sixth Street and across Market for several hours Sunday evening, blocking traffic and doing several thousand dollars worth of damage. The sudden rise of the flood trapped patrons of Wagner's Restaurant at the corner of Market and Sixth in the building. They were later carried to safety. Many cellars along Sixth Street were completely inundated. The banks of Bull Run as it flows through the McClure Meadows and under University Avenue were washed away. The Kappa Sigma property and that of Professor William T. Johnson, on opposite sides of the run, were damaged. A near tragedy was averted at the Sigma Chi House when George Boiston, football captain, was washed under the culvert across the road and rescued by several other "Sigs" just before being swept under the Chemical Laboratory.

ANTIQUÉ TELEPHONES TO GO

The so called "crank it yourself" telephones of Lewisburg are doomed. The local Buffalo Valley Telephone Company is erecting a new building on South Second Street to house the exchange and offices of the company, and has ordered modern dial telephones for their system. It is understood that the antique switchboard in use for many years will be sold to the Bell Laboratories in New York as a museum piece. The installation of new 'phones is expected to be completed by the first of the year.

VILLANOVA vs. BUCKNELL IN FOOTBALL

THE ALUMNI DINNER AND DANCE

I SHOULD like to take this opportunity to send my personal invitation to all the alumni to return to the campus for our Homecoming activities. The program which has been arranged offers an attraction for every alumnus.

I am anxious that at the beginning of our twelve year Centennial program all our alumni shall come into close personal relationship with the University: that they may become thoroughly acquainted with every phase and objective of the program, and that they may become actively interested in it in some way. A number of alumni committees are now in the process of being formed, and it is our aim to enlist the active cooperation of every alumnus in our task of building a greater Bucknell. This cannot be done without your help and cooperation. The University needs your loyalty now. The continued depression makes it difficult for us to carry on our program without loss of efficiency. Come back to the campus on October 27th and give us the encouragement of your support.

Faithfully yours,

James P. Rainey

New Coaches Extend Greetings

Head Mentor Mylin and Line Coach McAndrews Promise Good Homecoming Game

To The Alumni:—

At the Homecoming Game this year we celebrate the tenth anniversary of the opening of The Memorial Stadium. This early in the season it would be foolish to predict any winners, but we are confident that the team will give a good account of itself and we are hoping that the score will be a little different than that of ten years ago.

Villanova has one of the best teams in the East and we know that this game will be a continuance of the friendly rivalry, and hard fought games that have marked our meetings in the past.

We have come to know and admire a great many Bucknell alumni in the short while that we have been here, and look forward to meeting many more of you at Homecoming.

We hope that you will enjoy yourselves at Homecoming and we are sure the boys will do their part to make you proud of your team.

Sincerely,

EDWARD E. MYLIN (Hooks)
MARTIN McANDREWS (Marty)

Bisons vs. Wildcats

Bucknell The Underdog in Big Game. Team Wins Opener--- Ties Second Game.

THE Bisons of Bucknell will enter the Homecoming Game against Villanova on October 27 at Lewisburg decidedly the underdogs according to all the accepted methods of rating football teams. Harry Stuhldreher, Head Coach at the Main Line Philadelphia college has a veteran machine that is expected to be at its peak against Bucknell. The memory of the last minute play that robbed Villanova of a victory against Bucknell at Philadelphia last year is still vivid in the minds of the Wildcats.

First Games

At the beginning of the season at Lewisburg Coach Mylin was faced with two strong opponents in Davis-Elkins and Pennsylvania Military College. The first encounter was chalked up on the credit side for Bucknell 12-0 as Stuart Smith, Sophomore back from Montour Falls, N. Y., raced across the last white line for two touchdowns. Davis-Elkins presented a strong array of talent against the Orange and Blue. They piled up thirteen first downs to four for Bucknell, but were held outside the twenty yard stripes by a strong Bison line. The scoring came as a result of passes and long runs early in the game. Reznichak and Rhubright, backfield aces, did not see action due to practice injuries. Filer, star Sophomore end, likewise did not play. Furiell, co-captain, was injured in the game as was McGaughey, center.

Scoreless Tie

Faulty quarterback judgment cost Bucknell a touchdown early in the game against P. M. C. under the lights at Lewisburg on October 5. The ball was advanced on line play and one pass to the three yard line. Here a wide end run was nipped by an alert P. M. C. end for a substantial loss and three more downs were not enough to break down the stubborn resistance of a heavy line. This was the Bison's nearest approach to a score as P. M. C. held them scoreless by long punts and inspired play for the remainder of the game. First downs were heavily in favor of Bucknell.

Injuries

Injuries of the previous week kept five Bucknell regulars out of the fray, placing the burden of the game on the shoulders of inexperienced sophomores. Rhubright was injected into the game late in the hope of scoring but a cast on his injured hand kept him from handling the ball properly. Here again faulty signals cost the Orange and Blue possible substantial gains as Rhubright was given the ball on plays that forced him to use his injured arm. The game was a disappointment in offensive football due to the lack of experience in the backfield. Superb line play and tackling by the Bucknell forward wall kept the visitors well in check despite their weight and power.

As this is written Coach Mylin is experimenting with quarterbacks capable of running the team in the last night game against Duquesne at Pittsburgh. It is probable that the cripples on the squad will be in shape for the game so that full offensive power might be used against Duquesne, then St. Thomas at Scranton on October 20 and HOMECOMING at Lewisburg on October 27.

Freddie Rich To Play For Alumni Dance

Famous Columbia Radio Orchestra Booked for Big Dance to Follow Game and Alumni Dinner

THE success of an unannounced last minute dance, following the Alumni Dinner at Homecoming last year, prompted an alumni committee to book a nationally known and famous orchestra to play for a planned and "demand" dance this year. Freddie Rich and his Columbia Orchestra were selected by the committee from the list of "big name bands" presented. The orchestra will play continuously from nine until twelve in the Dining Hall where the dance will be held, following the Alumni Dinner.

Alumni Dinner

The Alumni Dinner will be served promptly at six o'clock in the Dining Hall at The Seminary. Five hundred places will be available on reservation. The price of the Dinner has been kept at fifty cents, the same as last year. Mrs. Clara G. Sale, University Dietician, has arranged an attractive menu as presented herewith:

President Rainey is expected to announce plans and report progress on the work of the Board of Trustees Centennial Commission, now preparing for the 1946 Centenary Celebration.

Dance Price Lowered

The price of admission to The Alumni Dance, following the dinner, has been brought down to $2.20 per couple, including tax. The Alumni Committee in charge of the affair is headed by Mr. Herbert Grice, '18, with committee members, Mrs. Marguerite Hartman Fowle, M'21, Mrs. Sara Reed Gerhart, '28, Mr. William C. Sutherland Jr., '33, and Mr. William Berlin, '34, President of the Student Interfraternity Council.

Freddie Rich

The story of the rise of Freddie Rich, talented orchestra leader, whose musicians will play for the dance, to make it one of the finest Bucknell social functions in recent years is herewith presented.

Born in Warsaw, Freddie Rich was brought to America while still very young. He grew up on New York's East Side, attending its public schools, and excelling in track and as a member of the Glee Club. Busy with these activities, there was little time to practice the piano. His father, a composer, sought to chastise him and locked the piano, saying that he had to choose between music and sports. Freddie chose to run away. In fact, three times he left town to explore parts unknown in and around Boston, Albany and San Francisco. Having found that home was the best place after all, Freddie settled down to his piano lessons once more, and won a Damosch scholarship, entitling him to instruction in harmony, counterpoint and composition.

He made his debut at the Waco Theatre at the age of eleven, where he played typical Indian music at the appropriate time, and the Wedding March for effective fade-outs. Consequently he felt few qualms when he undertook a vaudeville tour including all the major cities from New York to San Francisco. At the conclusion of the circuit, Rich became musical director for such stars as Eva Tanguay, Marie Dressler, Lou Fields and numerous Schubert productions.

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL

THIS Homecoming (1934) will be the fourteenth annual celebration of the event. The first attempt to bring back large numbers of alumni to the campus was made in 1921 with Lafayette as the football attraction. That game was lost, as were three others, but the credit side of the Bucknell ledger is still in good black ink with six victories and three ties in the thirteen past Homecoming Days. Let us look individually at some of the past games. All bring memories to someone.

The first Homecoming, as well as the second and third in 1921, 1922, and 1923, was staged on the old Loomis Field at the foot of "The Hill". In 1922 Lehigh was defeated and in '23 tied at 7 to 7 (the day the bleachers on the north side of the field collapsed).

STADIUM OPENED IN 1924

Captain J. Wallace Foster of the 1924 team scored the first points in the Memorial Stadium as early in the game against Lafayette he kicked a field goal to register the only three points of the day on the Bucknell side of the score board. Lafayette's big championship team ran roughshod the rest of the game over the Bisons to the tune of three scores and a total of 21 points.

The Haskell Indians from Kansas battled the Bisons under Charlie Moran to a scoreless deadlock in 1925 on the hottest Homecoming Day on record. It is locker room legend that "Ted" Mitchell, center, lost twelve pounds playing that game.

Lehigh appeared in 1926 for her most recent game on the Bucknell schedule. It was a great Homecoming victory for Bucknell, 27-0.

The next year W. & J. still held her jinx over the Bisons and went home with a 19-3 victory tucked away.

Another scoreless draw, this time with Lafayette was the big game of 1928, followed in 1929 by another W. & J. jinx game, 14-6, in favor of the Presidents.

The 1930's seem to have brought good luck and good teams to Bucknell as she opened the new decade of games with the memorable 19-7 victory over Penn State before one of the largest alumni crowds ever assembled in Lewisburg.

JINX BROKEN

In 1931 the long standing W. & J. jinx was broken as Mezza scored two touchdowns on passes from Hinkle. This was the great undefeated year of the Bisons, the only team in Bucknell history to go through an entire season without a defeat.

Lafayette felt the scoring power of a Snavely coached machine in 1932 when Myers raced sixty-three yards for the winning touchdown of the thrilling 14-6 game.

Last season "Pop" Warner of Temple was welcomed to the stadium but his team failed to appreciate it all as Myers, Peters, and Reznichak, each scored a touchdown to bring the final count to 20-7.

All of which brings us up fourteen years from where we started a few moments ago and right into the Villanova-Bucknell classic on October 27, 1934.

OFFERING FOR BAND

THE nattily attired fifty piece Orange and Blue Band will lift a free will "offering" during the Homecoming Game to help defray the expenses of their uniforms. Alumni are herewith advised in advance of the forthcoming "touch" and attention is called to the old song "Brother Can You Spare a Dime" in the interest of a good Bucknell Band. The usual concert will be played by the musicians between the halves of the game. If you like the music and the dressy uniforms an opportunity will be afforded to contribute as the boys pass among you.

GOLF TOURNAMENT

ALUMNI golfers will have an opportunity to test their slices and hooks on an improved University course at Homecoming. Professor William T. MacCreadie of the faculty will have charge of arrangements. A small entry fee will be charged for tournament competition for prizes which will be offered by The Bucknell Golf Club. The awards will be made at The Alumni Dinner, after the game. Trophies have been donated by Mr. B. R. Seemann, '21, of Pittsburgh. Additional prizes of balls, clubs, and the like will also be at stake. Play will open on Friday and the finals run off Saturday morning.

BIG GAME PROGRAM

THE Athletic Council announces the publication of a souvenir program for the Homecoming Game. The booklet will contain the usual line up of the teams and numbers of the players. It will be profusely illustrated with photographs of teams, players, coaches, managers, and the personnel of the athletic departments of Bucknell and Villanova. Receipts from the sale of the programs at the established price of twenty-five cents will be used to defray expenses of the game.

FREDDIE RICH TO PLAY

Deciding to settle down in Manhattan once more, he made his debut as a dance maestro at the Astor, remaining until 1928, when he took his band on a tour of Europe, culminating with a command performance before the King and Queen of England.

The end of the year found Freddie in New York again, this time as one of the principal conductors for the Columbia Broadcasting System, presenting as many as sixteen programs a week. Two of his outstanding broadcasts are "The Columbians" on Tuesdays at 8:00 P.M., E. S. T., and the Georgie Jessel program an hour and a half later.

As a composer, he has to his credit two very successful numbers, "Animal Crackers" and "On the Riviera". His most recent work is an American symphony, in three movements, "Penthouse", in which he describes phases of modern life seen and heard from his penthouse apartment high above Park Avenue. Rich also is known as a brilliant arranger.

The Alumni Fund is a plan developed by and for the Alumni, designed to provide financial support for Bucknell through the medium of annual gifts.

Weekly luncheons are held by the Pittsburgh group at Kauffman's, Thursday, 12:15 p.m.

THIS magazine brings not only news of Bucknell and Bucknellians but hearty Christmas Greetings and Best Wishes for the New Year from all Bucknell to all Bucknellians. Were we better endowed with the world's goods a personal greeting card would come to every alumnus of Alma Mater from The Alumni Association and the editor of this little corner. "Off the Gold Standard" as we are, however, this mass felicitation must suffice. May you all, each and every reader, accept our greetings personally.

HOMEcoming, The State Game, The Great Temple Battle, alumni club dinners, smokers, parties, campus happenings, and the whole panorama of academic life have all passed before us this season. It has been a busy season but withal a most enjoyable one. In these pages we present summaries of the past month of the history of Bucknell.

TO athletics go large laurels for publicity. Without some of the great teams in sport that have made history for the Orange and the Blue our Alma Mater would certainly not be so well and favorably known. The varsity football eleven this year contributes handsomely to Bucknell prestige and fame. The outstanding victories of the Bisons, from the point of view of advertising, have been the W. & J. game at Washington, Villanova at Lewisburg, Penn State at Lewisburg, and Temple at Philadelphia on Thanksgiving Day.

WE salute Coaches Mylin and McAndrews and praise every player on the football squad for their efforts in making the 1934 season a great success. Only a team of inspired players backed by smart coaching could perform so ably. Congratulations!

ALSO laurel branches to Norman Morgan, '23, Howard Fisher, '13, and H. F. Sheffer, '18, active leaders of the alumni clubs in Scranton, Reading and Philadelphia for three fine parties. Great work, fellows! Bucknell thanks you as you honor her.

ACADEMIC matters on the campus received front page space at Homecoming when President Rainey in his Homecoming Address to the alumni quieted rumors that our engineering courses were to be discontinued. Engineering, along with other departments, will be definitely strengthened in Bucknell's "New Deal." The experiments that have been tried in survey courses have produced some fine results. The curriculum for 1934-35 will see more changes with emphasis shifted to so-called "bread and butter courses" such as engineering, biology, and the sciences.

WE mourn with many Bucknellians the passing of such noble men as Charles Way Harvey, Alvin Alonzo Cober, T. Carson Hanna, and Max C. Wiant, all valiant and courageous leaders in the Great Cause. The sympathy of a university is extended to the families and friends of these four great apostles.

WE have heard from a few lawyers and a smaller number of doctors, (Lawyers are better letter writers), in response to our request for degree information. Now we are on the trail of Bucknell Bankers. (No mystery story). All Bucknellians employed by banking houses are requested to so advise the Alumni Office for the purpose of record (No loans requested). Thank you, bankers!

THE University is in search of new students. Can you recommend any fine boys or girls from your own community? For years Alma Mater has been able to select her enrolment.

The situation is now changed with competition on the open market from our colleagues. You can help to sell Bucknell by bringing prospective students for a visit to the campus. Bucknell will "sell" herself on sight! Didn't you love it here? So will your children and those of your friends.

WAS it a good football season or have we asked the question before? You answer it. Villanova, Washington and Jefferson (and in Western Pennsylvania) and Penn State all in the same season is a new record for a Bison team.

BUT we must give real credit to a great band. The Temple musicians played the Bucknell Alma Mater between the halves for the Bucknell stands. A lovely gesture Temple, and Bucknell thanks you. We are still good friends and may we beat you next year!

ALUMNI AWAKEN!

ATHLETIC POLICY — NUMBER TWO

NUMBER one editorial on this subject appeared here in January. This is a restatement of Bucknell's position in answer to the question "What of next year?", and an appeal for alumni to join in a crusade.

The University is in exactly the same position today as in January when President Rainey stated the case. Our stand on athletic scholarships is a forced one, regardless of where the sympathies of president, trustees, or faculty might lie. Our hands are tied by our agreements with the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of The Middle States and Maryland, our accrediting agency. The rule expressly forbids the granting of athletic scholarships, and each year Bucknell's president must testify that no such have been granted. Naturally we are proud that the University is unwilling to resort to the subversive practice of awarding scholarships under cover.

Bucknell has taken great strides scholastically in the past decade. Our academic standards have been raised and our position in the collegiate world strengthened. We dare not sacrifice these advances, and alumni everywhere are unwilling that our football prestige, built up through the years, should suffer. President Rainey has stated that he would like to see every department of the University reach the level of success attained by our athletic teams. Rather than break down our athletics as a sacrifice it is hoped that we can build upon the past to maintain the excellence of sports and at the same time preserve and strengthen our academic ranking.

How can this be done without resort to subversive practices in the award of athletic scholarships? There is only one way open and Bucknell can take the lead in challenging the Association of Colleges on the value of their rulings against scholarships when the problem involved is a much greater one.

Alumni everywhere are urged to "Kick not Growl" (apologies to Review of Reviews) and through our own organization petition the Association to review their handiwork with a view to changing an unwholesome situation. It is the prevailing alumni opinion everywhere that athletic scholarships are granted in many and devious manners by colleges who are signers of the agreement. They are not in a position to challenge, and perhaps do not care to alter the "status quo" as long as they can produce good football teams through underhand methods. Bucknell is not satisfied with the hardships that are worked upon the smaller colleges who have been honorable in abiding by the rules.

We shall continue to be honorable and "Off the Gold Standard" until we can honorably change the whole situation. Let us go to headquarters and demand a review. An awakened and strengthened alumni opinion can be all powerful in remedying a distasteful state of affairs. Bucknell will take the lead if the alumni demand it. Write your letters today to your club president, the Alumni Council, this magazine, or directly to President Homer Price Rainey, Bucknell University, Lewisburg, Pa.

SCHOLARSHIP BEQUEST

Bucknell will receive a bequest of $12,000 from the estate of Mrs. Elizabeth R. Jones, late of Washington, D. C. The money is to be used to establish two scholarships for young men and to help maintain a nurse at the Women's College.

Mrs. Jones was the widow of the late Thomas R. Jones, former president of the National Savings and Trust Company, Washington. The bank was named with Frank W. Swope, Washington, as executor of the will.

Explicit instructions for the scholarships are contained in Mrs. Jones' will, which was probated in Washington. The will directs that the bequest to Bucknell be paid free and clear out of the first proceeds of the estate. The remainder of the estate is divided among a number of relatives and friends with several bequests going to Baptist churches in Pennsylvania.

The scholarship fund will be known as the "Rockefeller-Jones Fund."

NEW SECRETARIAL COURSE

The faculty at Bucknell recently approved a Secretarial Course as a part of the work in Commerce and Finance. The trustees will consider the course at their December meeting and if approved by them it will be offered for the first time next September.

Among the new classes proposed are typewriting, shorthand, and office management, all of an advanced nature. The course will also require extensive work in English and economics.

Many students now at Bucknell have requested such a course. A fairly large number of high school graduates each year make inquiries concerning the course and when they learn that such work is not offered at Bucknell they go elsewhere. With the teaching profession becoming more and more crowded it is believed that the Secretarial Course will provide an excellent outlet for several graduates each year.

Other curricula changes have been made and will be announced more specifically later. They provide for more freedom in all the courses, without losing effectiveness. The changes are suggested by nearly two years of experience with survey and other new courses which were offered for the first time in the fall of 1933.

PICTURE LOAN SERVICE

In an attempt to make art a more vital part of community life for Bucknell the Department of Art has recently established a picture loan service on the campus. Mr. Blanchard Gummo, '25, instructor in art, launched the venture with an exhibition of paintings during November. Many interested students, faculty, and friends attended the exhibit and many pictures were rented. All of the works on exhibit were originals collected by Mr. Gummo from many sources. Eighty-four pictures were hung for this first loan exhibit.

AT the Alumni Banquet at Homecoming I presented to the alumni who were present on that occasion four points in the development of our program at Bucknell. These points are presented elsewhere in the columns of this magazine. I should like, however, to emphasize all of these points to our entire alumni group through the medium of this page.

Real progress is being made by our various Trustee committees in the development of certain phases of our Centennial Program. Mr. Joseph W. Henderson of Philadelphia has assumed the active leadership and direction of our Bequest program. He is organizing a large committee of our alumni group to promote this work. We believe there are great possibilities over a long period of years in this phase of our work. It is our objective that every alumnus and friend of Bucknell shall be encouraged to remember Bucknell in his or her will.

A second important phase of this Centennial Program is what we know as a "New Friends Committee". It is our objective over the next period of years to add at least 15,000 fine new friends for Bucknell. These new friends must be related to the University through personal contacts with alumni and the friends which we already have. There is much that each alumnus and friend of Bucknell can do in his or her community in making and developing these new friends for Bucknell.

May I also emphasize the contribution which every alumnus can make to our immediate problem by aiding the University this year in increasing its enrolment for next year. The University is planning a strenuous campaign to increase its enrolment, and we earnestly solicit the active support of every alumnus in this project.

Since this will be our last communication before the Christmas Holidays I want to take this opportunity to extend to every alumnus of Bucknell my warmest personal greetings and best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Faithfully yours,

James O. Rainey

President Addresses Alumni

Annual Dinner After Homecoming Game Success for Second Year. Alumni President Davenport, Trustee Henderson, and Others Speak. Dancing Follows Dinner.

MORE than three hundred alumni and friends heard President Rainey speak of plans for the future of Bucknell and express hope and faith that with "better times" the University would continue to grow and realize the plans that have been made for her growth. He was introduced by Dr. S. M. Davenport, '16, of Kingston, President of The General Alumni Association. Dr. Davenport also expressed the hope that "Homecomers" would act as special agents for the Annual Alumni Fund during the winter months among their friends and Bucknell neighbors.

President Praises Team and Coaches

Dr. Rainey, in prefacing his more serious report to the alumni on "the state of the University", spoke in praise of the fine football team and introduced the two Bison coaches, Mylin and McAndrews, who were cheered by the assembled alumni. An abstract of the President's Report follows:

The theme of my address to you tonight is that we must set our faces toward the future with faith and confidence. The last four years have been some of the most difficult years in the history of the University due to the severity of the economic depression. Yet in spite of this, the University has been able to maintain practically all its personnel and to keep the efficiency of its work at a high level. We have a few more freshmen this year than were enrolled last year, and we confidently hope that the low point has been reached and that with the return of better economic conditions our enrollment will increase.

We believe that the time has come to make definite plans to promote our Centennial Program. That program, as you know, has for its objective the addition of $6,000,000 in new assets to the University. This may seem an ambitious program. It is. Yet we believe it is possible of realization if we can only enlist the loyalty and enthusiasm of our entire constituency in a well-organized program of promotion. We have as our leader for this program Mr. A. C. Marts of New York, a member of our Board of Trustees, and one of the ablest men in the United States in promoting educational endowments.

Some of the items in this program include:

I. Plans to meet our present enrollment and financial situation. We want to enlist the cooperation and support of every alumnus, student, and friend in a campaign to increase our enrollment for next year. Detailed plans for this work will be given you in a short time.

II. The Restoration of "Old Main". The Board of Trustees have already voted to make this the first project under our new program. The Board has delayed beginning the collection of funds for this work because the general economic conditions have not seemed to warrant it. It is likely, however, that this work may be undertaken in the near future.

Two long-time plans to begin soon:

III. A Bequest Committee. A great part of college endowments come from bequests of friends in the form of wills and legacies. Bucknell has not been, and is not now, getting as many funds from these sources as other institutions. This part of our support has not received proper attention. The plan is to get every Bucknell lawyer and trust officer and general insurance agent to serve on this Bequest Committee. The object of this program is to encourage every friend of Bucknell to remember Bucknell in his or her will. Our slogan might well be: "Where there's a will there's a way—to build up Bucknell" or "Don't forget—in your will—old Bucknell."

This committee is now being organized under the able leadership of Mr. Joseph W. Henderson of Philadelphia. There are great possibilities in this program, and I bespeak for it your loyal and enthusiastic support. I am told that already one will has been written with a fine sum in it for Bucknell.

IV. New Friends for Bucknell. Records of college endowments show that approximately one-half of gifts to colleges come from alumni sources and one-half from non-alumni sources. Our object is to add many hundreds and thousands to our list of Friends of Bucknell.

This cannot be done by chance. It requires careful planning and direction. There are several steps involved in winning new friends: (1) Getting the names of thousands of persons who would be worthwhile friends if their friendship could be won; (2) Keeping them in constant touch with the University and informed of its plans and programs; (3) Arranging for a present friend of Bucknell to be the personal link between the University and the person whose friendship is sought; (4) Finding for each person a place in the Bucknell "family" which will make him a welcome and happy member of our "family".

In this work every alumnus and friend of Bucknell can be of tremendous service to the promotion of our program.

Engineering to be Strengthened

In conclusion, let me say that the administration is going to do everything within its power and ability to promote every interest of the University. Bucknell has had an enviable record in many fields of work — in all the pre-professional fields of teaching, medicine, law, the ministry, et cetera; we are going to continue to promote this work with all our ability. Bucknell also has for a long time been doing a high-grade piece of work in the fields of engineering. We have in these fields some of our finest and most successful alumni. It is our purpose to continue our emphasis upon the work and to strengthen it with every opportunity.

In more recent years Bucknell has developed a fine program in Commerce and Finance. This work is increasing almost every year, and we shall strengthen it wherever possible.

Some of our finest work at Bucknell has been done in the Science departments. These depart-

Varsity Under New Coaches Win Six Major Games--Lose Two and Tie Two---Florida Trip Reward.

THE success of the 1934 football season for Bucknell, the first with the team under the tutelage of E. E. Mylin and Martin McAndrews as coaches has been testified to by the invitation which came to the University to play in the annual Orange Blossom tournament at Miami, Florida, on New Year's Day, 1935. This invitation and its acceptance by The Athletic Council ranks Bucknell among the leaders in football in the entire country.

Old Rivals Defeated

The outstanding victories for the Orange and Blue were over the three oldest rivals on the schedule, Penn State, Villanova, and Washington and Jefferson. The final game tie and outplaying of Temple at Philadelphia on Thanksgiving Day won national recognition for the Bisons. The two defeats, suffered by the Bucknell eleven, were both at the hands of formidable machines, Duquesne, the nation's highest scorers, and Western Maryland, the undefeated eleven, coached by the famous Dick Harlow, of Colgate and Navy fame. The reverse at the hands of Duquesne, 12-0, was an early season upset with the Bisons an injured and crippled team. The Western Maryland game ended disastrously two minutes before the whistle blew when a freak fumble and rolling ball was recovered by the visitors on or near the goal line (a touchdown was awarded by the officials but motion pictures show the ball dead a yard from the goal). The third small blot on the Bison escutcheon was placed there by a great and valiant, although unsung, eleven from Pennsylvania Military College (P. M. C.) as they held Bucknell scoreless without making any points for themselves. This stalemate was the second game of the season and is now almost forgotten but suffice to say that little P. M. C. was unbeaten, unscored upon until their last game, and tied only by Bucknell.

Tough First Games

Under a new coaching regime Bucknell faced in September one of the hardest schedules in the country and one of the very few ten game cards ever booked. Two newcomers, Davis-Elkins from West Virginia, and P. M. C. from Chester, were the first games for the new coaches.

D. & E. was taken into camp, 12-0, as the arc lights shone down on Stuart Smith, Sophomore back, running across the goal line twice in succession. The P. M. C. game was a stalemate despite heavy odds in favor of Bucknell in first downs.

First Loss

Injuries in the two opening games kept five varsity regulars on the bench at Pittsburgh when Duquesne outplayed the Bisons to win 12-0 in the first defeat for the Orange and Blue.

Win at Scranton

A rising star in the football heavens, St. Thomas College of Scranton, played host to the Bisons the next Saturday at Scranton in the annual Kiwanis Club charity game. In the opening quarter of the game Reznichak, kicking, passing, and running back, attempted a field goal from placement on the twenty-two yard line. The ball was perfectly aimed as it hit the cross bar and bounced back onto the field of play instead of over for the score. In the second period Ray Green, sophomore lineman, blocked an attempted St. Thomas punt and fell on the ball in the end zone for the first score. In the third period an eight yard pass Reznichak to Miller who was in the open brought another touchdown as Miller raced along the sideline for the goal. In the final period St. Thomas displayed remarkable power in advancing the ball for sixty yards to their only score. The game ended Bucknell 12, St. Thomas 6.

Great Homecoming Victory

Rain, snow, and mud—Homecoming at Bucknell 1934! In one of the muddiest, almost under water battles ever witnessed in Memorial Stadium the Bucknell Baptists were true to their faith in actually reveling in the mud and slush to skid their way to a 13-0 victory over Harry Stuhldreher's Villanova College Wildcats. Bucknell's line played in Villanova's backfield all afternoon with Captain Boiston of the Bisons recovering numerous fumbles and leading his teammates to a well deserved victory.

Smith, brilliant sophomore back, scored for Bucknell in the fourth quarter on a fifteen yard drive through the visitor's line. Exactly eleven plays later Reznichak slid through the mud for another counter from the two yard line. First downs were Bucknell seven, Villanova three, and yardage gained was three to one in favor of the Orange and Blue.

Invasion of the South

Swinging into mid-season form the team reached the peak of the season at Greenville, S. C., when they defeated Furman University 19-0. Press reports from Dixie hailed Bucknell as the greatest football team to play in the Carolinas in recent years. Superb blocking, tackling, and running enabled the invaders to outplay and win from a strong Furman team.

In The State Game

A Jinx is Broken

The accomplishment of the 1934 varsity in breaking the dreaded "Western Pennsylvania jinx" at Washington on November 10 will go down into history. Washington and Jefferson was taken into the Bison camp by a score of 13-7 as Reznichak tossed two beautifully executed passes to Wilkinson who received both of them standing alone in the enemy end zone. Wilkinson and Filer, varsity ends, were the stellar players of the day, both shining on defense as well as offense to win the plaudits of sport writers and fans as the greatest pair of ends ever to appear on W. & J. turf. Excellent punting by both Sitarsky and Rhubright kept the Presidents well at bay except for their one march to a score in the second period.

A Costly Fumble

With two minutes left to play in the Bucknell-Western Maryland football battle at Lewisburg on November 17 the most costly fumble of the season occurred on the Bucknell twenty as a rolling ball was kicked by several players in the scramble and finally ended up in the arms of a Western Maryland scrambler on or near the goal line. The officials called it a touchdown and the game which everyone thought would be a stalemate ended Bucknell 0—Western Maryland 6. It was a decidedly off day for the Bisons with their offensive game completely bogged down and productive of not a single first down. Defensively it was almost the perfect game except for the last minute "break".

Better Than Homecoming

The reverse at the hands of Dick Harlow's great team from the south must have inspired the Bisons to greater efforts as they staged a remarkable and thrilling comeback against Penn State at Lewisburg on November 24 to the tune of 13-6. Some ten thousand fans witnessed the battle in contrast to the less than five thousand who braved the downpour and the snow of the Homecoming clash with Villanova. The first half was scoreless for Bucknell, but State left the field with a six pointer and the knowledge that they had outplayed their ancient rivals for at least two quarters. Their scoring play came from a place kick formation with the ball being run down the sidelines by the gay receiver who looked like he was going to hold the ball for the kicker. The Bison ends were drawn in on the play in their eagerness to block what looked like a kick from placement.

When the teams returned to the field for the second half there was a new light in some twenty-two Bison eyes and with play resumed the fans saw an inspired Bucknell eleven execute two perfect plays, the first a pass Reznichak to Smith for the first Bucknell score and the second a fifteen yard sweep by Reznichak behind perfect interference around end for the second score.

Throughout the entire second half the boys in blue more than wiped out the first half advantage of the lads from Nittany and generally played the ball game in State's back yard. It was a thrilling comeback for Bucknell and the victory was a hard earned one over a great State team.

No Turkey for Temple

The Temple Owls, under the old master, "Pop" Warner, ate crow instead of Turkey on Thanksgiving Day after the sturdy and determined Bisons under the new maestro Mylin had pushed them all around their own piece of property up in North Philadelphia. The game was booked as a great climax to an undefeated season for "Pop" Warner and Bucknell was on the short end of all predicted scores. Predictors forgot, however, the keen rivalry between the Owls and the Bisons and they did not search far enough back into the records to find where another great Bucknell team rose in its might to smash (or swim as we remember it) to victory over a great team from Rutgers in 1923 in the same city of brotherly love as a curtain game for that season. (The score was 12-7 and is still visible on several buildings in Lewisburg).

Game All Bucknell's

The Temple-Bucknell game was a stalemate but the lion's share of glory went to a valiant line and a great set of backs who wore the Orange and the Blue. On the defensive Bucknell held the mighty Temple, and all American candidate (up to that time) Smuckler, to a niggardly six first downs while on the offensive the great work of Phil Miller, Joe Reznichak, Stewart Smith, and Ed. Rayamley counted for fifteen first downs on the Bucknell side of the statistical chart. Unbounded credit was given by prominent sports authorities and writers who saw the game to a great Bucknell line. Paul Gallico in the New York Daily News writes as follows of this group of Bison forwards: "---it was a Bucknell line that spoiled the party. ---The sum total of Smuckler's advances against this --- apparently impregnable defense was forty-four yards in seventeen tries and his longest gain was five yards.

---When a Bucknell lineman had charged through the Temple forwards, the space left by the passage of his figure left room for three backs to run through tandem". Dick Hanley, Northwestern Coach, Grantland Rice, sports authority, Noble Kiser, Purdue Coach, and others who were witnesses to the inspired play of a Bucknell team that rose to heights of greatness all praised Bucknell and gave full credit to the Bisons in their winning of one of the greatest moral victories on record.

"They Have What It Takes"

This review of the season would not be complete without mentioning the names of players who "have what it takes" who made the season possible by being lowly "scrubs" and affording scrimmages to the varsity. All of them saw service in games. They are the backbone of the team. They are Bill Moir of Maplewood, N. J., George Berry of Elmira, N. Y., George Crouse of Smithton, Charles Sheldon of Philadelphia, Bill Beck of Lewisburg, Carl Giles of Shamokin, Harry Jenkins of Philadelphia, John Wilson of Sunbury, John Walesky of Frackville, Joseph Rosati of Red Bank, N. J., Wladimir Lotowycz of Jersey City, N. J., Howard Whipkey of Connellsville, Joe Fazio of Bridgeport, Conn., Martin Pocius of Riverside, N. J., Ed. Rondeau of Lawrence, Mass., Gene Zanarina of Jeannette, Leonard Kachel of Newark, N. J., and Jim Sturgeon of Oakdale.

The Varsity

The varsity who bore the brunt of the season, but also got the glory that is denied the above list of substitutes, was made up of backs Reznichak, Rhu-bright, Raymaley, Smith, and Sitarsky, all names that have touchdowns attached to them and are already well known to every Bucknellian. Less known are the linemen of Temple game fame. They are Co-Captains Ralph Furiell and George Boiston of Rome, N. Y., and Bethayres, respectively, Jack Drayton of Manchester, N. H., Ray Green of Mt. Carmel, Walter Dobie of Riverside, N. J., and Harry Bergkamp of Ridgefield Park, N. J. The ends who starred throughout the season were Jack Filer of Woodbury, N. J., Bill Wilkinson of Riverside, N. J., Bob Pethick of Kingston, and Tim Delaney of Ambler.

Great Center

We have saved a special closing paragraph for the center, George McGaughey of Vandergrift, who played every minute of nine and one-quarter games. He missed three-quarters of the second game of the season because of an injury. He is one of the great line of centers that have always been Bucknell tradition. He is an able successor to Bihl, Mitchell, Farina, Goodwin, Reed, Pimm, Wilcox, Snyder, Schaffner, and a host of other famous Bucknell names of the past. To "Mac" belongs the season's individual honor for the most valuable player on the squad. Bucknell will miss the seniors, nine of them, who played their last regular game against Temple, but most of all she will miss a great defensive center, George McGaughey of Vandergrift, Penna.

BISONS TO PLAY MIAMI

Bucknell will play the University of Miami in the Orange Blossom football game at Miami, Florida, on New Year's Day. The contest was arranged when the Florida university and a group of civic clubs extended the invitation to Bucknell immediately following the Bisons' great showing in outplaying unbeaten Temple on Thanksgiving Day.

The Bucknell party will leave for Miami December 26 or 27 and will be in the famous Southern resort city five days. By playing during the Christmas recess no classes will be missed by the students, a factor that caused the faculty committee to consent to the game.

This is the third consecutive year for the New Year's game. Bucknell was chosen this year from a fairly large group of Eastern and Northern colleges that were eligible.

The University of Miami is located in Carol Gables. The University consists of a College of Liberal Arts, a School of Education, a School of Business Administration, a School of Music, and a School of Law. The University also runs a special Winter Institute of Literature that carries academic credit. One of Miami's famous courses is that in marine biology. The University is co-educational.

Miami is a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association, the same group of which Furman, one of this year's Bucknell opponents, is a member and champion for 1934. The Miami 1933 team lost only one game, the New Year's clash with Duquesne, a team that also defeated Bucknell. Miami is coached by Tom McCann of the University of Illinois. Last year Bob Zupke of the Illini helped McCann prepare the team for the post-season clash.

temporary activity. The traditions of fine work in all these fields must be maintained.

In short, Bucknell has had a glorious history in practically every field of learning. It is our task today to maintain those fine traditions and heritages given us from the past, and where possible, to carry them to greater heights. To this high task I am faithfully committed. Therefore, on the basis of her past glory and achievements, and in faith and confidence in the future let us go forward to the realization of our goals.

The President then introduced Joseph W. Henderson, Esq., '08, of Philadelphia, Chairman of the Trustee Committee on Bequests. Mr. Henderson asked that every Bucknellian consider himself or herself a member of his committee in presenting the needs of Bucknell to wealthy friends and patrons of education and philanthropy. He placed emphasis upon the need for more Bucknell wills so that the University might grow through gifts of persons both living and dead.

Dancing Until Midnight

Freddie Rich and his Columbia Orchestra furnished the music for one of the largest Homecoming Dances on record. Some five hundred dancers, including faculty, alumni and students spent the evening celebrating the Homecoming victory.

LIST THREE BUCKNELLIAN ON STAFF

Mr. E. C. Condict, '08, Secretary of the Board of Trustees, Mr. Samuel H. Rickard, '23, Principal, and Miss Marian Shivers, '14, Chemistry Lecturer, are three Bucknellians on the staff of Judson College, Rangoon, Burma. Mr. Condict is called by his friends a doctor with the initials D. D. meaning Daring Dentistry. He has extracted more than three thousand teeth among the poor natives of the country in his missionary work among them. Two sons, E. C. Jr., '36, and Clinton A., '37, are Bucknell students.

PHILADELPHIA DINNER DANCE

Billed in advance as the greatest Bucknell party in years the Thanksgiving Day Dinner Dance of the Alumni Club of Philadelphia did not live up to its press notices as far as numbers were concerned but those half a hundred or so who did attend had a grand time. Chairman Barton H. Mackey, '18, and Club President H. Frazier Sheffer, '18, had things well in charge and received many compliments upon the success of the occasion. The Penn A. C. was the scene of the party with attractions in the form of dinner, dancing, floor show, and songs by The Bucknell Glee Club Quartette. A section of the Main Ball Room was reserved for Bucknellians as the entire affair was the annual club party of Pennac members. The quartette was especially well received by the several hundred diners who encored the boys for repeat numbers. Dancing lasted until one A. M. Many minutes thereafter the management finally resorted to darkening the Ball Room to hasten the departure of several Bucknell gatherings that were "way back when" under the halo of reminiscence.

READING PARTY

"'Twas the night before Thanksgiving and all through the house not a creature was stirring" as Marty McAndrews told the Berks County Alumni Club all about Bucknell football. A score of Bucknellians had gathered at the Wyomissing Club in Reading in answer to a summons from President Howard V. Fisher, '13, for the first Fall meeting of the club. Alumni Secretary Stoughton and Assistant Football Coach McAndrews were the guests. Those present engaged in a lively discussion, following dinner, all about Bucknell and her problems. It was a fine club meeting, thoroughly enjoyed by members and guests alike.

ALUMNAE SUPPER

The October meeting of the Bucknell Alumnae Club of Lewisburg was held Tuesday evening, October 9. Mrs. George M. Kunkel, (Helen Egge, '27), chairman, and other members of the program committee were the hostesses at supper. Guests of honor were Mrs. R. H. Rivenburg, Dean Amelia E. Clark, Mrs. H. P. Rainey, Mrs. J. Hillis Miller, Mrs. Clara G. Sale, and Mrs. Edith Corrin.

Professor and Mrs. William G. Owens gave an interesting illustrated lecture on their trip to Alaska.

A short business meeting preceded the lecture at which time the following officers for the ensuing year were elected: President, Miss Eliza J. Martin, '02; Vice-President, Mrs. Elizabeth Bates Hoffman, '94; Secretary, Mrs. Christine Sterner Moyer, '23; and Treasurer, Miss Jeannette Pross, '02.

LADIES DAY LUNCHEON AT PITTSBURGH

According to an announcement received from President S. L. Seemann, '17, of the Bucknell Alumni Club of Western Pennsylvania, the club recently voted to invite the ladies to join with the club on the third Thursday of each month at their weekly luncheon meeting at Kauffman's. Alumnae in the city on third Thursdays will be welcomed at the club luncheon.

This magazine is again indebted to Miss Mary Stille, '66, of West Chester, for her faithful correspondence. The above photograph of her class at the Institute was taken in 1865. Miss Stille was featured recently in an article by Laura Lee in the Philadelphia Bulletin. The writer visited Miss Stille a week after her ninetieth birthday and found her "the jolliest person I have met for quite a day".

CAMPUS VISITOR

Mrs. Louis Daniel Rasor, the granddaughter of Eugenio Kincaid, first agent of the University at Lewisburg, and the actual founder of the College through his solicitation of gifts toward the establishment of the U. at L, was a recent campus visitor. Mrs. Rasor makes her home in Los Angeles and was on a visit to friends and relatives in the east. Among her treasured possessions is one of the early diplomas of the University and other valuable historical documents dealing with the early days of the University.

RECORD ATTENDANCE AT EDUCATION CONFERENCE

More than two hundred teachers and educators from eastern states were in attendance at the annual Conference on Education at Bucknell on November 1 and 2, 1934. This marked a new high in attendance at this annual meeting, sponsored by the Bucknell Department of Education.

Forty-seven teachers representing ten colleges and twenty-five high schools were speakers on the two day program. The presidents of Bucknell and Susquehanna, Dr. H. P. Rainey and Dr. G. Morris Smith, were the featured speakers, along with Dr. James N. Rule, State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

The theme of the conference was the celebration of the centenary of free schools in Pennsylvania.

BUCKNELL

RECENT BUCKNELL BOOKS

Three book reviews were promised for our October issue, but, circumstances beyond our control, plus space limitations in the Homecoming edition, suspended our comments on these recent works of Bucknell authors. We present herewith notes on the three books referred to in our September edition and add one more to the list, recently received.—Editor.

AUTHOR THEISS RELATES EXPERIENCES

NEW BOOK

Another boy's book from the facile pen of Lewis E. Theiss, '02, of the Bucknell faculty has recently come from the press of the W. A. Wilde Co., of Boston. This newest yarn is an intimate and authentic account of the rise of a young pilot in the Pan American Airways service in the tropics and is entitled "The Mail Pilot of the Caribbean". The story opens with Joe "Ginger" Hale on his first flight as co-pilot from Miami to Havana and thence to Merida, Yucatan. The story opens swiftly as Joe makes friends with a wealthy Cuban on the flight and the developments take the lad into some unusual and interesting experiences that prove that romance is still not dead. The book is mainly a story of a plucky youth on his rise to fame but the background of air travel over the route of the famous Clipper Ships makes thrilling and interesting reading. Although designed for boys the book takes the adult reader into new lands and thrilling experiences.

ONE OF SERIES

"The Mail Pilot of the Caribbean" follows the story "Flying the U. S. Mail to South America," and may be said to be the second installment of the history of Joseph Hale, which began in the latter volume. These two books deal with the carrying of mail over the seas. In getting his material for these stories, Professor Theiss flew from Miami to Cuba, across Cuba, and thence over the Caribbean Sea to Jamaica, and back home.

These two flying stories follow five other tales of the air, which relate the history of another youthful hero, and picture flying in relation to the transcontinental air mail, international smuggling, aerial banditry, newspaper coverage, the work of the Coast Guard, and the matter of plane construction.

EDUCATIONAL BOOKS

This suggests that they are educational in their aim, which is exactly the case. When Dr. Theiss was asked how he came to develop this line of work, he said: "I suppose it's just a case of evolution. For more than a decade after I left Mr. Dana's old New York Sun, I was an independent magazine writer, with no thought of ever doing anything else. But I grew very tired of the city, and moved far away from New York — out to a place I had bought in the Muncy Hills, near Lewisburg. I soon found that I was at a very great disadvantage in doing magazine work. Perhaps a main reason was that the war started soon after I moved. Magazines were printing nothing but war stuff, and I was so situated that it was next to impossible to write war stuff. I had to turn to something new. So I handled nation-wide publicity in Washington and also did some editing for magazines. But I was looking for something new that would last.

"Publishers had been after me for years to write books for boys. The time seemed to be ripe to do it. I started. The books succeeded. For some years I wrote about whatever interested me at the moment. Then my publisher asked me to write a story about the merchant marine. After some hesitation, I wrote it.

"This was really a new type of story for me. Previous books had been principally stories of adventure, based on the use of wireless telegraphy. Now I endeavored to show boy readers all that I possibly could, in book space, about the merchant marine. The thing was educational. When I had finished it, the thought occurred to me: 'Why not go on and cover other fields and show readers what life in those fields is like and what workers in those fields can achieve?' In short, I just naturally found myself setting out on a fictional orientation course for boys, which was to take me to realms I didn't even dream of at the time.

"The sea story was followed by one on forestry for which Gifford Pinchot wrote a foreword. Then came a tale about oystering. Next was a book about the Coast Guard, for which the Commandant of the Coast Guard wrote a foreword. Then came stories about the U. S. Secret Service, hydroelectric development, the lighthouse service, and airships. And the airship naturally led me to airplanes.

THE LINDBERGH "BREAK"

"I was writing the story of the creation of the transcontinental lighted airway — one of the greatest romances of all time — and the development of the U. S. air mail service, when Lindbergh flew the ocean. Everybody knows what interest that created in flying. That was a stroke of luck for me. The success of that initial air mail book, 'Piloting the U. S. Air Mail,' settled my fate for years to come. Since then my publisher has been unwilling to let me write anything except flying stories. And out of that situation grew the series which endeavors to picture the use of planes in various fields of activity.

"At the present time I am writing a little book about the Coast Guard, that is to be part of a series being edited at Columbia University, and intended for use in the grade schools. It will be my third Coast Guard story. As soon as that is done, I shall start another flying story, and this one will picture the part flying plays in jungle exploration.

"Evidently these books have accomplished their aim of being educational, for certainly more than half of the twenty-four have been adopted by the school authorities in middle western states, where they do that sort of thing, for supplementary reading in the public schools.

VARIED EXPERIENCES

"Although it is a pretty stiff task to turn out a book of this sort because of the tremendous amount of study involved — for everything in the book must be absolutely accurate and true to life — the work has been wonderfully interesting because it has been such a great education to me. I have been at sea on Coast Guard cutters, lighthouse tenders, passenger liners, and windjammers. I have dredged oysters on an oyster schooner. I have lived in a construction camp and absorbed the romance of a great engineering job. I spent three weeks at Lakehurst, the naval air station, studying dirigibles. I have visited lighthouses and lightships. I have lived in the forest. I have climbed mountains. I have trailed game and done innumerable other vastly interesting things, all in my search for literary material. I have lived and worked with U. S. Secret Service men, fliers, foresters, farmers — I have a book on scientific farming, and I myself own a farm — and I have 'met up' with many men in many other walks of life. Altogether, it has been a wonderful education, a tremendously humanizing experience, and a fascinating means of earning a living. It has been a delight to share it with so many thousands of young readers."

TELLING ON MYSELF

A. A. COBER, '96

An autobiography of a minister and father, written at the insistence of his family, is "Telling on Myself", by the late Dr. Alvin Alonzo Cober. The rather intimate yet generalized story of the farm boy going to college and into a rich professional life in the ministry makes interesting reading. The introduction to the book is written by Dr. E. W. Cober, '99, Principal of the Holmes School, Pittsburgh, Pa. The book owes its existence largely to the efforts of Dr. Cober's daughter, Mrs. L. L. Rockwell, '11, who encouraged her father to write the book and who read the manuscript. It is from the press of The Berlin Publishing Company, Berlin, Pa.

OTHER WORKS

Urged by his family to write an account of the somewhat unusual trends his life has taken, Alvin A. Cober, '96, finally undertook the venture. Scarce had he sketched in the main incidents of his life, however, when he became absorbed in the study of his ancestry and as a result, in 1931 he published the Brant Genealogy, a book of 135 pages. In 1933 he followed that with another volume, the Cober Genealogy, containing 289 pages. It was not until the spring of 1934 that the autobiography, quaintly named TELLING ON MYSELF, was finally worked out.

Although TELLING ON MYSELF was intended as merely a document for family records, it has become much more than that. It begins with Dr. Cober's earliest recollections of life on a Somerset County farm, including legends and folklore of the community. It shows the author as a boy availing himself of the meager educational advantages offered, gradually adapting himself for the teaching profession. But into this quiet preparation came the call to the ministry as amazing as it was unexpected, which changed the entire trend of his life. This experience, his later change of denominations and some of his schooling experiences are told with a moving simplicity, tense with the forces of drama which can effect a young man's life.

Later chapters are concerned with Dr. Cober's work on various fields in the course of which he mentions freely and intimately the names of the people with whom he came in contact in different ways. Interspersed with these human situations are accounts of his trip to the Holy Land in 1904, his venture as a missionary to Puerto Rico in 1906, disastrously brought to a conclusion four years later when he became victim of a dread tropical disease, and his later sojourn in Central America.

The story is told in a simple, unaffected manner, stirring and tense in the dramatic passages, amusingly droll in the lighter parts.

THE PRACTICE OF PUBLIC PRAYER

J. HILLIS MILLER

Dr. J. Hillis Miller, Dean of Students and Assistant Professor of Psychology at Bucknell, has recently received wide recognition in theological circles through the publication by The Columbia University Press of his treatise on public prayer. The book is both an analysis of public prayer and a critique. Reviewers in many publications have commented favorably upon the work as a contribution to both religious and psychological literature.

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick has written the introduction to the book and therein praises his friend Dr. Miller for bringing to public attention "the appalling illustrations of randomness, extemporized mediocrity" — the average public prayers of the ministers of America. Dr. Fosdick further writes that the book "demonstrates the values of the empirical method in studying not only public prayer but also hymnology and other significant parts of the public worship service."

THAT HEART OF YOURS

S. CALVIN SMITH, '01

Dr. Smith, eminent physician and heart specialist of Philadelphia, tells in his new book on the heart how heart troubles can be avoided and heart handicaps overcome. The work is not technical but rather cheerful and companionable and written for the layman. It is the result of many years of questions to a doctor from his patients and shows the way to "help that heart of yours" in the words of the author. The publisher is Lippincott.

WORLD LITERATURE SURVEY

WILLIAM HAROLD COLEMAN

Professor W. H. Coleman of the English faculty at Bucknell has to his credit a scholarly article in the September 1934 number of The English Journal. The article is titled "A World Literature Survey That Functions" and deals with the course as offered at Bucknell. A complete analysis of the reasons behind the substitution of a survey course for the ancient theme writing drudgery is contained in the article as well as an outline of the procedure followed. The interest of educators in this exposition by Professor Coleman has caused numerous reprints of the article to be made.

NORTHEASTERN CLUB SMOKER

N. W. Morgan, '23

A brand new alumni club was erected on the foundations of a defunct unit at Scranton on November 16 when more than a score of men gathered at The Baldwin Hotel at Clarks Summit for a smoker. "Bill" Baldwin, '09, was the genial host of the evening.

Sidney Grabowski, Esq., '15, presided at the business session of the meeting where nearly everyone present was called upon to make a speech. Opinion was unanimous for the formation of an alumni club and the ensuing election of officers resulted in Mr. Sanford Berninger, '22, being named president and Mr. Norman W. Morgan, '23, secretary-treasurer of The Northeastern Pennsylvania Bucknell Alumni Club. President Berninger then appointed an executive committee to consist of Mr. Benjamin T. Harris, '08, Old Forge; Sidney Grabowski, Esq., '15, Scranton; W. E. C. Speare,

'20, Scranton; George W. Bailey, '26, Clarks Summit; and R. J. Truscott, '28, Jermyn.

Entertainment during the evening was furnished by a quartet from The Bucknell Glee Club, accompanied by their Director, Mr. Melvin LeMon of the University faculty. Alumni Secretary Stoughton was a guest as was Mr. Jay F. Bond, '03, of New York City.

Plans for additional meetings of the new club were discussed and a letter drafted to be mailed to all members after the first of the year. The membership numbers more than one hundred and thirty.

SOCCER SEASON SUCCESSFUL

Three victories, two ties and two defeats was the record of the 1934 varsity soccer squad under Coach Joe Reno. The brightest star in the soccer card was the Lafayette game on Homecoming morning when the Bisons outbooted Lafayette 3-2 in a thrilling game. Games were dropped only to Army at West Point and Temple at Philadelphia. Dickinson and Franklin and Marshall were defeated while Stroudsburg Teachers and University of Delaware were tied.

1857

The death of Mrs. Jennie Irwin, oldest living alumna of the Institute, occurred at her home in Bellwood, N. J., a few days after her one hundredth birthday on September 17, 1934. For twenty years following the Civil War, Mrs. Irwin worked as a missionary in the South among the negroes. She was a member of the Logan Valley Baptist Church, Bellwood, N. J.

1878

Rev. William Kay Lord has retired from his position as Director of The Delaware Society for the placing of children in Philadelphia, a post he has held for the past twenty-eight years. Rev. Lord makes his home in Chester, Pa.

1882

President Emeritus Milton G. Evans of Crozer Theological Seminary at Chester, Pa. was signally honored at the time of his retirement in July by the dedication of the entire "Bulletin" of the seminary to his life and work. His address to the graduating class is printed in full along with the tributes of leaders in every field who were speakers at the occasion. President Richards of The Reformed Seminary at Lancaster was the speaker for the seminaries, President Emeritus Emory W. Hunt of Bucknell for the Crozer Board of Trustees, Professor Mathews for the faculty, and Rev. Powell of Philadelphia for the alumni.

Editor William R. McNutt of the "Bulletin" writes editorially of President Evans:

"He has builded a temple, by generous plan, which faces the east of the future; the backward glance is for purposes of maintaining direction, but the march looks toward tomorrow. Here men are prepared, not to serve the days that are gone but the days that are to be; Crozer is as one that is in the world yet ahead of the world, thanks to Milton G. Evans, a man of vision."

Dr. and Mrs. Evans have taken up residence in Lewisburg.

One of the interested alumni spectators at the recent Bucknell-Temple football game in Philadelphia was James M. Paterson of Wilmington, Del., who writes to a friend on the Bucknell faculty as follows:

"My hat is off to our team. I never saw a finer game for sheer power and inspiring confidence. Considering Temple's expectations Thursday's game was signal defeat for her. I understand that Pop Warner, in a state of nervousness, smoked 999 cigarettes during the game. ---A Temple man who sat next to me said 'Good Night'. The way he said it told a big inside story. Yes, my hat is off to the team and coaches."

The Penn-Baptist, publication of The Pennsylvania Baptist Convention, in its November issue carried the following obituary by Rev. Craig S. Thomas, D.D.:

"Pennsylvania Baptists are mourning the loss of one of their honored pastors. After preaching what one of his deacons termed a particularly powerful and moving sermon, Dr. T. Carson Hanna, pastor of the First Church, Bethlehem, closed his morning service on September 30th and while moving toward the rear of the auditorium to greet the people, was stricken with a heart attack, and within half an hour passed into the presence of his Lord.

"Dr. Hanna was a grandson of Adoniram Judson. His brother, Rev. A. C. Hanna, is one of our missionaries in Burma. Beginning his ministry in Connecticut, Dr. Hanna soon after moved to Pennsylvania, serving the churches at Jenkintown, Pottsville, Wayland Memorial (Philadelphia), Sunbury and Bethlehem. For five years prior to his going to Bethlehem he was pastor-evangelist in the Centre Association.

The funeral service was held in the Bethlehem Church. Dr. Carey S. Thomas of the First Church, Altoona, was in charge. Dr. C. A. Soars, Rev. James Taylor, Rev. W. H. Cutler and Rev. S. J. Hughes assisted in the service. The interment was in Sunbury.

"Dr. Hanna is survived by his wife, two daughters, a son, two brothers and two sisters. He was sixty-two years of age. The Christian cause had a no more devoted and faithful defender, nor the Baptist denomination a more consecrated pastor, than Dr. T. Carson Hanna."

Our thanks to the "Penn-Baptist" and editor B. C. Barrett, D.D., '33, for the use of cuts of Rev. Hanna and Rev. Wiant in these columns.

The Reverend Alvin A. Cober, interim pastor at Calvary Baptist Church in Williamsport since last November, died October 11, 1934, at the home of Mrs. H. P. Price, 1832 Apple St., Williamsport.

Funeral services were held from the First Baptist Church of Williamsport, and burial was made in the Lewisburg Cemetery. The Reverend Maurice A. Levy of Williamsport officiated.

Dr. Cober, who was 73 years old, had been a Baptist minister for 55 years, and was awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity by Bucknell University in 1918. He had served pastorates in Elkhart, Indiana, in Dayton, Ohio, and in Jeanette Pa. He was pastor of the Memorial Baptist Church in Williamsport while he was still a student at Bucknell, and returned to the church in 1918 to serve for four more years.

Five years after graduation he had earned the degree of Master of Philosophy, and in 1918 he was granted the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity.

The deceased was the father of Mrs. Vera C. Rockwell, wife of Professor L. L. Rockwell of the language group, who is now at the University of Michigan on a year's leave of absence.

He held two pastorates, of six years each, in the same church at Dayton, Ohio.

Dr. Cober came to the Calvary Baptist Church as interim pastor following the Rev. William P. Haug, and was serving there when he became ill a month ago.

In addition to his work in the Baptist Church in this country, he had been a missionary to Puerto Rico and Salvador, Central America. He has written and had published three books, "The Brant Genealogy," "The Cober Genealogy," and "Telling on Myself," an autobiography which was published during the past summer.

Surviving Dr. Cober are a daughter and three sons: Mrs. L. L. Rockwell, '11, J. Devon Cober of Huntingdon, W. Va., the Reverend R. LaRue Cober pastor of Genesee Baptist Church, Rochester, N. Y., and the Reverend Kenneth L. Cober, '24, pastor of the First Baptist Church at Canandaigua, N. Y.

Two of Dr. Cober's brothers, though not Bucknell graduates themselves, married Bucknellians. The Reverend R. LaRue Cober married Miss Emma Lillian Kunkle, '22, and the Reverend Kenneth L. Cober married Miss Clara Price, class of 1925.

CHARLES W. HARVEY

The death of Charles W. Harvey occurred at his home in West Chester on November 29, 1934, where he had been living retired for the past several years. He was one of the leaders in Y. M. C. A. work throughout the world and was internationally known and respected.

A native of Pennsylvania, Mr. Harvey began Y. M. C. A. work when he was a sophomore at Bucknell University. Upon his graduation he took charge of student activities in Pennsylvania for two years. Later he became general State Secretary of the association. In 1902 he went to China as general secretary of the Shanghai Y. M. C. A. For five years he worked in Tientsin, and in 1908 he became regional secretary for North China. Four years later he was appointed associate general secretary at Shanghai, and from 1914 to 1925 Mr. Harvey served as senior secretary of the International Committee for China.

Illness brought Mr. Harvey back to the United States and, in 1926, he was sent to Jerusalem to prepare for the. During his life he traveled to many International Missionary Council parts of the world and handled many of the building programs of the Y. M. C. A. He was active in the establishment of the association in Siam.

Mr. Harvey also undertook a complete study of the salaries, working conditions and living costs of Y. M. C. A. secretaries throughout the world.

In 1922 he was honored with the degree of Doctor of Divinity by Bucknell.

He was an active member of the Association of Political Science of New York and Philadelphia.

For the past few years, since his retirement, he has made his home in West Chester, taking an active part in the services at The Baptist Church, of which he was a member, and frequently responding to calls for service elsewhere. He was heard with benefit by service clubs as he told of the political situation in the Far East, with the conditions of which he was familiar.

He was frequently called to New York for conferences with regard to the work of the International Y. M. C. A.

He is survived by a widow, a son, Paul L. Harvey of Shanghai, and a daughter, Mrs. H. S. Wood of Downers Grove, Ill.

In answer to insistent demands made by ye editor, Dr. Leo Lawrence Rockwell, lexicographer, and Bucknell faculty member on leave at The University of Michigan, has finally written us something of his work there on the Early Modern English Dictionary with Dr. Charles C. Fries, '09, editor of the publication as his boss. Dr. Rockwell writes most interestingly as follows:

"Well, then for your enlightenment: I am working on the editorial staff of the Early Modern English Dictionary (all of that). This is one of several period dictionaries now being constructed to supplement the great Oxford English Dictionary, which was completed in 1928. Our period extends from the beginning of printing English books in 1475 to the year 1700. We are making as complete and accurate a dictionary of this Tudor-Stuart period as modern scholarly equipment will allow. Charles C. Fries, Bucknell '09, an internationally known scholar in the English field, is editor. He is assisted by two associate editors, both veteran scholars, and four assistant editors, of whom I am one. Of these, one, Dr. Hull, a Harvard Ph.D., is an authority on Celtic: he is just back from Germany, where he has been editing certain letters of the Celtic dictionary being built there: Miss Allen a Middle English specialist, is now in England for the Dictionary; Dr. Markwardt, specialist on pronunciation, is the third, and I am the other: I'm supposed to know something about Germanics. This group composes what Bond would call the experts in the higher brackets: we have weekly staff meetings, at which tea is consumed and scholarly problems discussed at great length, and we lick the stuff into final shape. We work in the sanctum or Holv of Holies.

"The 'stuff' comes to us from a group of seven or eight sub-editors, in the outer office, where they work with the bibliographer, the secretary, and several clerical assistants. The bibliographer gets us from the excellent University library (over a million volumes) whatever we need in the way of books: if not available here, it is brought in on loan. Of course, we have a good private collection in the office, including the important dictionaries published from 1440 on. There is also a corps of some twenty part-time assistants who do the preliminary work.

"Now just what is the 'stuff'? Well, it consists of nearly four and a half million slips, each slip containing a sentence quotation from some work of our period with an underscored word. By comparison of the various sentences in which the word occurs, and by searching all the dictionaries, the meaning is determined. The preliminary sorting is done by the sub-editors: they try to discover all the information available about the word. Then they organize, the slips according to meanings and ship them in to us. We review, reorganize, select quotations to be used in the Dictionary, and prepare for the printer.

"These slips were given the EMED by the Oxford Dictionary or made by over four hundred volunteer readers, mostly in this country, and a good deal of checking must be done to verify them, of course. Every spelling and date must be exact. But by the time they come to us most of the drudgery is done. And it is amazing into what odd by-paths the editing may lead. I started to edit the single verb to lam, meaning to thrash: comparative studies soon gave me a collection of over 125 verbs of beating and thrashing coined in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries! This led into an examination of the whole problem of sound symbolism, and I am now as a by-product hammering out an article on some of my discoveries in regard to the birth, life, and death of such words.

"The work has been going on for five years, and we hope to get the first few pages printed early next year. The complete dictionary will comprise some 8,000 pages."

REV. REINHOLD F. STOLZ

The death of Rev. Reinhold F. Stolz, pastor of the Grace Evangelical Lutheran Church of Philadelphia, occurred at his home on December 1, 1934, after a long illness.

Before he was ordained in 1906 he was active in missions, doing social work in Philadelphia and New York. For several years he was associated with Dr. Russell H. Conwell, founder of Temple University.

During the last 28 years he served outlying parishes in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York. He became pastor of Grace Lutheran Church in 1927 and was visiting chaplain to Hahnemann hospitals.

Survivors are his wife, Mrs. Annetta B. Keatley Stolz, and three sons, Paul Keatley Stolz and John Conwell Stolz, seniors at Hahnemann Medical College, and James Godfrey Stolz.

Chaplain R. W. Shrum has recently been transferred from the Coast Guard Academy at New London, Conn., to active service with the United States fleet, aboard the U. S. S. Saratoga, the famed airplane carrier. Chaplain Shrum writes that he finds his new post thrilling as a "Sky Pilot among many pilots of the sky". Among the aviators of the crack V. F. 6 squadron aboard the Saratoga is another Bucknellian, Lieutenant Edward F. Colestock, son of Professor H. T. Colestock, retired.

On Monday, October 8th, there passed from the earthly fellowship of Pennsylvania Baptists a choice spirit, Dr. Max Conrad Wiant, pastor of the First Church, Harrisburg, and in recent years serving as President of the Ministers' Union of the State Convention, and one of the early and staunch promoters of the Commission on Pastoral Changes.

Dr. Wiant had suffered patiently for many months before his death. He was fifty-four years of age, a graduate of Bucknell University, and of the Colgate-Rochester Divinity School. He was honored with the degree of Doctor of Divinity in 1932 by his Alma Mater. All of Dr. Wiant's pastorates, since his graduation, were in Pennsylvania, and centered in three important cities — Scranton, Reading and Harrisburg.

He was a kindly, sympathetic and consequently beloved pastor. His work was always careful, earnest and constructive. It is not easy to spare such men, and our Pennsylvania Ministerial Fraternity is the poorer for his going. To Mrs. Wiant goes the deep and loving sympathy of our great host of Baptists. We cherish his memory, and thank our God for the life and service so freely and fully given.

NEW "SELECTIVE ADMISSION" PLAN

BUCKNELL is launching a new program of "Selective Admission" for students, and solicits the support of all alumni. The aim for the coming year is a freshman class of 350 selected young men and women, all with alumni recommendations.

In every community are prospective students of high rank who will become interested in Bucknell if the alumni will encourage them. Consequently, the University urges all her sons and daughters to speak to these prospects about selecting Bucknell for their college work, and to write to the Registrar giving information about these students. The University, in turn, will send literature, letters, and where possible a field representative. But it is believed by college officials who have studied enrolment problems that alumni and present students are more successful than any other individuals in interesting young people in attending a college.

Alumni are familiar with Bucknell's excellent facilities in many fields of study. They know of campus life in the classroom and out. Teachers and present students are among the best friends of hundreds of alumni. By encouraging their young acquaintances to enter Bucknell, alumni will thus keep a constant relationship with their Alma Mater, and at the same time help widen the influence of the college.

An organization is being set up to conduct the "Selective Admission" program. Alumni have been divided into regions, with a chairman and a few committee members for each section. Soon a representative from the campus will visit each committee, at which time all additional alumni will be added to the regional organization. The entire group in each region will be asked to meet later, probably in March, when the support of all alumni in each locality will be personally solicited. The Alumni Secretary Al. G. Stoughton, '24, will direct the alumni organization; Prof. James P. Whyte and Mr. Walter S. Wilcox, '04, former Registrar, will cooperate and do a large part of the field work.

STUDENTS WILL HELP

Students now at Bucknell are to become a part of the organization. Their work will be directed by J. Hillis Miller, Dean of Students. Dean Miller is getting into contact with all students who have dropped in the last three years in an effort to get a large percentage of them to return to college. Students in the Bucknell Junior College and other junior colleges will be contacted by President Rainey and Dean Rivenburg, who will encourage sophomores in these colleges to transfer to Bucknell for the next two years of study. President Rainey, with the help of Prof. C. M. Bond and Mr. Forrest Brown, Christian Association Secretary, will solicit the aid of Baptist ministers.

Registrar H. W. Holter, '24, is general counsellor to the organization and Arthur L. Brandon is general director. This arrangement frees Mr. Holter for quick action on applications. Dayton L. Ranck, '16, Treasurer, and Thomas (Si) Morgan, '21, who framed the program, are on the Steering Committee.

SPECIAL SPEAKERS BUREAU

Supplementing the "Selective Admission" plan is a Speakers Bureau under the direction of Prof. Frank G. Davis. Already scores of speeches have been made before P. T. A. groups, men's clubs, churches, schools, and a wide variety of organizations by faculty members, who are co-operating in the entire program for new students. Alumni who wish to secure Bucknell speakers may do so by writing to Professor Davis and explaining the type of talk desired. When requested to do so, these speakers will be glad to talk particularly about Bucknell to individuals, senior classes, or student bodies.

Alumni, when visiting the campus, can help by bringing prospective students to the campus. A letter to Mr. Holter or to Mr. Brandon telling when you plan to arrive is all that is necessary. Arrangements will be made for your entertainment while on the campus, and each student will be given personal information about courses of study, expenses, and other items. Recently a teacher in a prominent New Jersey high school brought four young men to the campus. Three of them entered Bucknell the following fall. That teacher did Bucknell and the young men a genuine service, and since then she has written, "It was the best thing I have done for myself in a long time." Will others do likewise?

BUCKNELL BEQUESTS

BUCKNELL ALUMNI and other friends of the University will receive in the next few weeks a pamphlet entitled, "Where There's a Will, . . ." This piece of literature officially opens the Bequest Program, although organization plans and other details have been under way for several months.

The Bequest Program is one of several features of the work of the Centennial Commission, a group that is planning for the One Hundredth Anniversary of Bucknell in 1946. Among the goals for the next twelve years are a larger student enrolment, a $3,000,000 building program, and a $3,000,000 increase in endowment.

The Bequest Division which will direct the Bequest Program will be a permanent organization, following the successful precedent established at Cornell, Princeton, and other Eastern universities. The Division does not seek pledges or current payments but only gifts effective at the death of the donor, through wills, trusts, or insurance policies. Of course, provision is made for current gifts or gifts in the near future. The general purpose of the Committee, therefore, will be to encourage and stimulate people to write Bucknell into their wills or trust agreements or insurance policies. (Continued on next page)

BUCKNELL BEQUESTS

Because of the private nature of the work, the Bequest Division will not be able to make regular reports. They cannot always tell that it is because of their work that Bucknell is written into a will or other form of bequest. But they can give suggestions and lend aid to people who wish information. College officials believe that eventually such a financial program will constitute the University's greatest source of income.

JOSEPH W. HENDERSON, CHAIRMAN

Mr. Joseph W. Henderson, '08, Counsellor at Law, 2210 Packard Building, Philadelphia, is Trustee Chairman of the Bequest Division. Dr. Charles P. Vaughan, President of the Board of Trustees, is General Chairman of the Centennial Commission, and on the Steering Committee are Judge John Warren Davis, '96, Trenton, N. J.; Arnaud C. Marts, Trustee, of New York, and Dr. Homer P. Rainey, President of the University. All the members of the Board of Trustees are on the Commission and will cooperate on the Bequest Program. The Commission will be enlarged gradually, as 1946 is approached, so as to include many old and new friends of Bucknell.

Organization of the Bequest Division is nearly completed. Mr. Henderson has sent personal letters to large numbers of lawyers, trust officers, and insurance men, all alumni of Bucknell, seeking their aid on the Bequest Program. Many have already accepted membership. Alumni and other Bucknell friends who did not receive these letters but wish to volunteer to serve are urged to write to Mr. Henderson or to Arthur L. Brandon, Assistant to the President at Bucknell, who is helping on the executive and secretarial work of the Program.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION TO FOLLOW

Two or three times during the year the Bequest Division will print bulletins of information for the guidance of the members. Other publicity will help make the work effective and keep the alumni informed. It will not be necessary for the Committee to meet as a whole, because most of the work involved is personal. The Bequest Division will keep the needs and merits of Bucknell before the will-making public, and will seek the cooperation of the alumni, whose assistance will be essential to the success of the Program.

Changes Made in Summer School and Extension Direction

Bucknell has recently made changes in the administration of the Summer Session and Extension Division. Dr. John H. Eisenhower, '05, who has guided both programs for a number of years, has been released so that he may give full time to the direction of the Bucknell Junior College at Wilkes-Barre. Dr. Frank G. Davis, '11, professor of education, has been named Director of the Summer School and Dean R. H. Rivenburg, '97, Director of Extension. Both appointments are effective immediately, President Rainey has announced.

Dr. Davis is familiar with the duties of his new office. He has been the director of Bucknell's highly successful Demonstration School, a leading feature of the Summer School, for a number of years. Before coming to Bucknell he was a leader in high school work in important posts. He holds various important positions in state and national educational ranks and is the writer of books that are widely used in the educational field. His ability as an organizer will be of much value in the development of the Summer School.

High School administrators have long regarded the Bucknell Extension course as one of the best available because the University has always sent outstanding teachers into the various communities. Dean Rivenburg will continue this practice. Though Extension programs have been decreasing in most colleges, it is believed that under Dean Rivenburg's direction, Bucknell's usual extensive schedule will be maintained.

Alumni who are interested in these special branches of the University are invited to write to the director.

MEN'S GLEE CLUB ON NATIONAL RADIO HOOKUPS

The Bucknell University Men's Glee Club is booked for two national net work performances on February 2 and 4 in New York. The organization this year is composed of forty men. They will leave Lewisburg on Friday, February first for their first concert of the tour at Bangor, Penna. At 11:30 Saturday morning, February 2, they will go on the air over the Columbia network from station WABC in New York. That evening they appear at the First Congregational Church in Jersey City.

Again on Monday they ride the air waves from WEAJ at 5:30 in the afternoon from Radio City. The next several days they go to Bloomfield, Newark, Rahway, Westfield, Trenton, Abington, Jenkintown, Camden, Pitman and Atlantic City.

BUCKNELL WEEK-END PARTY AT SHORE

Haddon Hall on the Boardwalk at Atlantic City will be the headquarters for a Bucknell Houseparty on Saturday and Sunday, February 9 and 10. The Glee Club will be the guests of the management. Alumni and friends in New Jersey and throughout the East are invited to take part in the Houseparty. Special rates have been offered by the hotel, $5 to $7, including room and three meals. Haddon Hall is one of the finest of the Shore resort hotels. Reservations may be made through the Alumni Office. It is expected that many alumni and parents will attend the Houseparty. While in Atlantic City the Glee Club will give a concert over WPG at eight o'clock on Saturday evening.

HOSTETTER, '08, DIRECTS LENS RESEARCH

Much of the technical knowledge of the manufacture of glass which went into the recent fashioning at the Corning Glass Works, Corning, N. Y., of the two gigantic lenses which are expected to enable astronomers to study stars and planets incredibly far from the world was supplied by Dr. John C. Hostetter, '08, Director of Research for the Corning Glass Works.

The construction of these lenses entailed the pouring of hundreds of tons of molten glass and presented problems hitherto unsolved by chemists. The feat has been described as one of the most significant scientific achievements of this century.

Shortly after his graduation, Dr. Hostetter taught chemistry at Bucknell for two years. He has been engaged in various important enterprises that time and since 1930 has held his present post at Corning.

Dr. Hostetter will lecture on the campus under the auspices of Alpha Chi Sigma on Monday evening, February 11, to science students. The general public is invited.

ORCHESTRA AND PIANIST GIVE EXCELLENT CONCERT

Bucknell's Artist Course scored another big success when it presented Charles Naegele, brilliant young pianist, in a concert with the Bucknell Symphony Orchestra on Wednesday, January 16. The program recalled last year's popular concert in which Paul Althouse, '12, Metropolitan Opera Star, appeared with the Bucknell Orchestra under Artist Course auspices.

A capacity audience applauded the genius of Mr. Naegele, which, combined with remarkable orchestral work and expert direction by Professor Paul Gies, made the concert a memorable feature of the University entertainment season.

Mr. Naegele first appeared with the Orchestra for the presentation of Robert Schumann's "Phantasie in A Minor." He was heard next in a group of four numbers and so great was the applause that he was forced to respond with four encores before his audience would permit him to stop playing.

The Orchestra was at its best in the performance of the Prelude to Wagner's "The Meistersinger of Nuremberg." The expert direction of Professor Paul Gies, conductor of the orchestra, was evident throughout the concert.

SPRING FESTIVAL

Bucknell's Spring Festival, introduced on the college calendar last year for the first time, will be celebrated this year on May 17, 18, and 19. Practically all of the features which made the week-end such a success last year will be retained, and in addition several new ones will be added.

It is planned to make this year's Festival an occasion to bring to the campus more than 200 high school students who have indicated their interest in entering Bucknell. Robert Kessler, Hunlock's Creek, is chairman of the committee.

TO PRESENT MACBETH

Bucknell University students interested in the drama are extremely busy these days preparing for the Artist Course presentation of Shakespeare's "Macbeth," February 28 and March 1.

In "Macbeth" Bucknell undertakes a form of drama that few colleges have dared attempt, feeling it to be beyond the scope of collegiate interpretation. Bucknell's dramatists, however, were so successful in their production of "Romeo and Juliet" for the Artist Course two years ago that they have received enthusiastic support in this new undertaking.

BISONS WIN ORANGE BOWL GAME IN MIAMI'S HEAT

Bucknell's Bisons, finishing their first season under their new coach, E. E. "Hooks" Mylin, celebrated New Year's Day in a big way by trouncing the University of Miami 26 to 0 in an inter-sectional game in the Florida city.

The invitation to meet Miami in the Orange Bowl game came not long after Bucknell's sensational tie with Temple, leading contenders for Eastern honors this season. Twenty-eight men, including 22 players, coaches Mylin and McAndrews, Graduate Manager B. W. Griffith, Publicity Director A. L. Brandon, Trainer Peachy Kling, and the Student Manager, LeRoy Rohde, were in the party that traveled to Florida in a special air-conditioned car.

The Bucknellians left Lewisburg December 26 and returned on January 4, permitting the players to make the trip without missing more than two days of school.

Alumni Secretary A. G. Stoughton was among the Bucknellians who witnessed the game. The Bucknell party was royally entertained by a group of about 20 alumni who were hosts at a dinner in the swanky Miami-Biltmore Hotel following the game.

JUNIOR PROM, FEBRUARY 22

Isham Jones and his band, one of the leading dance orchestras in the country, has been signed to play for the Bucknell Junior Prom on Friday, February 22, it has been announced by Howard Clark, junior class president and chairman of the Prom committee. Alumni may secure tickets by writing to The Alumni Office.

DR. ROCKWOOD, PROFESSOR EMERITUS OF LATIN, DIES AT OVERBROOK

Dr. Frank E. Rockwood, Bucknell's first Dean, for 32 years a member of the college faculty, and since 1917 Professor Emeritus of the Latin Language and Literature, died at his home in Overbrook on January 2. He was 82 years old.

Dr. Rockwood was known and loved by many Bucknellians. A graduate of Brown University, he joined the Bucknell faculty in 1885 and has maintained his connection with the University ever since that time.

He was widely known for the excellency of his instruction which was marked by accuracy and precision. He was an enthusiastic supporter of college sports and served on Bucknell's first athletic boards, contributing generously of his time, money, and interest. He continued this interest up to the time of his death.

Funeral services were held in Overbrook on January 4, with burial in the Lewisburg cemetery on January 5. The pallbearers were Professors W. C. Barrol, '72, W. G. Owens, '80, B. W. Griffith, '99, F. G. Ballentine, '99, H. A. Shaffer, '13, Dean R. H. Rivenburg, '97, and former Registrar Joseph Wolfe, '89.

PROMINENT ALUMNI DIE

Adam M. Wyant, '94, Representative in Congress from Westmoreland County for 12 years, died January 5, at his home in Greensburg after a lingering illness.

Death came to another prominent Bucknellian early this month when John T. Hyart, '91, former Vice Consul to Cuba and prominent lawyer, died at his home in Jersey Shore on January 9.

Complete obituaries of these honored alumni will appear in a later issue of the Monthly.

BETH LEMON, WIFE OF UNIVERSITY TEACHER, DIES

The entire University mourns the untimely death of Mrs. Beth LeMon, wife of Melvin LeMon, Assistant Professor of Organ at Bucknell, who succumbed to pneumonia in the Geisinger Hospital on Saturday, January 5.

Mrs. LeMon had been unusually helpful and cooperative in all college enterprises and her loss will be keenly felt by students and faculty members alike. At the funeral services in the Baptist Church the Bucknell Men's Glee Club, in accordance with one of Mrs. LeMon's last requests, sang a hymn.

WRITES MONOGRAPH

"Genetics of Zea Maize," a monograph by Dr. William H. Eyster, '14, Professor of Botany at Bucknell, was recently published by Bibliographia Genetica of Leiden, Holland.

This work, which is an evaluation and recording of the results of all experiments performed by various scientists on the genetics of maize, up to the time of publication, is designed for use as a source of information by research men in that field.

BUCKNELLIAN HONORED

The prominence of Bucknellians in banking in Lewisburg and nearby towns was again demonstrated early this month at the election meetings of the boards of directors of the various banks.

William R. Rhorbach, '00, was re-elected director of the First National Bank of Sunbury, along with Charles W. Clement, '98.

The stockholders of the Lewisburg National Bank re-elected all directors who served during the past year, including three Bucknellians: W. C. Walls, '73, Dayton L. Ranck, '16, University Comptroller, and R. L. Matz, Professor of Economics.

Directors for the Union National Bank, Lewisburg, for 1935 include the following Bucknellians: Prof. F. M. Simpson, '95, LeRoy T. Butler, '97, Judge Curtis C. Leshner, '04, Cloyd Steininger, '03, and Prot. W. K. Rhodes, '07.

Directors of the Lewisburg Trust and Safe Deposit Company for the coming year include John M. Gundy, '97, James F. McClure, '13, and Paul G. Stolz, '08.

SECRETARIAL COURSE

A secretarial course, to become a regular part of the college curriculum next term, was announced by President Rainey at the close of the University for the Christmas vacation.

The course will feature advanced work in stenography and typing, secretarial practice, office management, economics, and English. Subjects offered in the first year of the course will be the same as those offered in the first year of the regular Commerce and Finance Course.

WE have just completed some three thousand miles of travel through the eastern states visiting some hundred cities and talking with five times that many alumni in homes, offices, schools, factories, hotels, hospitals, and clubs. It was a unique and pleasant experience to find alumni of every walk of life and in classes ranging from the sixties down to the present so enthusiastic over the future of Alma Mater.

THE radio program was our forte, of course, and we were asking alumni to meet in honor of National Alumni Night, Bucknell's ninetyeth birthday party, just to hear some music and voices from the campus.

WHY just another radio hour should mean so much to these folks of the work-a-day world was a little puzzling at first but gradually we got the idea. The program was from BUCKNELL. — Their Bucknell — and it was directed to them — personally. It was not an advertiser that was trying to sell them soap or soup over the air. It was the voice of Alma Mater that they were going to hear — a voice that really meant something — it had a spirit and a soul — however indefinable. And they felt kinship to Bucknell and knew her spirit and soul. It was thrilling to see that spirit among the sons and daughters of old Bucknell.

IT had been many moons since we had travelled among the alumni on such a tour asking for cooperation that meant sacrifices of time and effort to arrange dinners and parties. The days since '29 were not favorable to organization programs. Today it is different and we are thoroughly optimistic about the future of Bucknell from the alumni viewpoint.

QUESTIONS—questions and then more questions about the old campus, the professors, the townsfolk, and the new programs that are not yet completely understood by the average alumnus. Praises be for those questions! They meant INTEREST and with interest we know ACTIVITY will follow.

AFTER our tour we returned to the office and the last minute fever pitch activity before the program went on the air. How that broadcast became past tense instead of future or present! We have never known a half hour to pass with such lightning swiftness. The next day we asked "Was there a broadcast" or did we dream it? Of course it was great — but those thirty minutes seemed like seconds. The work of weeks gone in a flash!

BUT wait — before we got to the salad course at the Lewisburg dinner the telegrams started to reach us from Alabama, Illinois, Oklahoma, Michigan, Georgia, and all over the nation. It was reality after all!

YOU folks liked it! That was our recompense and now, several weeks afterwards we still thrill at your thrills! Read some of the letters and wires telling of the reception and get the same thrill. It was Bucknell on the air and her children listened and were brought again in memory to her scenes. It will be years before the good will of that one night is fully realized.

WE have attempted to say a polite little "Thank You" editorially to the many who took a part in National Alumni Night but we have saved for this little personal column of ramblings our one best bow. That bow is deep from the waist and low. As we straighten up we extend our hand with the firmest clasp of all to the man who made the broadcast possible. To you, Julius, the grateful thanks and everlasting appreciation of your Alma Mater.

WE speak for all Bucknell as we say to Program Director Julius Frederick Seebach of the Columbia Broadcasting System, Bucknell Academy, Bucknell School of Music, Bachelor of Arts of Bucknell University, and distinguished member of the Class of 1920 — Bucknell Sincerely Thanks You!

"THANKS TO ALL"

BUCKNELL owes a debt of gratitude to many of her faculty, students, alumni, friends, and office employees. This debt cannot be repayed with a mere editorial of appreciation such as this but we are happy to give public recognition in this, our humble manner, to all who contributed to the success of National Alumni Night. To the faculty for their contribution of time and energies in addressing twenty-four alumni meetings we extend the grateful appreciation not only of the Alumni Association as an organization but also the appreciation of the many alumni to whom they spoke. To the entire faculty of The Department of Music a loud chorus of praise for their great work in direction and production of the program. To the students who took part in the broadcast program we also extend our thanks and appreciation for their excellent work along musical lines. A special vote goes to the many alumni who served on committees to promote the many successful dinners and meetings. Last, but far from least to the many tireless office workers on "College Hill" who toiled after regular hours on many evenings we again say "Bucknell thanks you all".

LARGEST SUMMER SCHOOL PLANNED

Early indications point to the largest Summer School enrolment of recent years. The figure is expected to pass the five hundred mark. Special bulletins in the form of announcement folders are now being mailed to all former summer school students and alumni in education work. The bulletins are entitled "Practice Teaching", "Course Offerings", "Graduate Work", "Leisure Time", "Intellectual Treats", "Professional Education". Others are being planned outlining other special work. They are available upon request to Dr. F. G. Davis, '11, Director of the Summer School.

A feature article on the work of the Summer School will appear in the May number of The Bucknell Alumni Monthly.

THE BUCKNELL MUSEUM

The fire which destroyed Old Main completely consumed the Museum of Rocks, Minerals, and Indian Relics which had been collected by Professor Nelson F. Davis during his nearly forty years at Bucknell. The loss of this collection has been greatly felt, for it was a very extensive and valuable one to the students. The actual value has been estimated at more than $50,000.

Since the fire Professor Davis meets his classes in the Botany Building where two rooms have been given over to his new collections. Already more than $5,000 worth of new specimens have been collected for a teaching museum.

Professor Davis believes that a museum is or should be an important feature of a University. Dr.

Gilbert S. Perez, the first graduate of the Biological Course at Bucknell (1907), has always been a loyal supporter of Bucknell and is a great friend of Professor Davis. Dr. Perez is now at the head of the Vocational Department of the Bureau of Education of the Philippine Islands, from which he has been forwarding many articles for the new collection. The group of Philippine relics is still very small, but exceptionally interesting with its kitchen implements, articles of clothing, antique pottery, jewelry, betel-nut boxes, baskets, and numerous other articles.

At present, Dr. Perez is making a collection which has been called the "Pacific Island Collection" and which is being arranged by Dr. Davis.

BEQUEST BOOKLET PUBLISHED

"Where There's a Will", an attractive twenty-four page booklet was recently published by the Bequest Division of the Bucknell Centennial Commission, and mailed to all alumni. Additional copies are available for distribution among friends.

The booklet presents Bucknell's needs and hopes for the future with concrete suggestions as to the use of legacies and bequests. Six illustrations illuminate the text, prepared by Mr. Arthur L. Brandon, Assistant to the President, and Mr. A. C. Marts, Trustee.

The illustrations are of the proposed Library, the proposed reconstructed "Old Main", the present Hunt Hall, Bucknell Hall, Literature Building, and a sketch of one of the artistic doorways of Hunt Hall. The final pages of the text list the names of the preliminary members of the Bequest Division, nearly all prominent members of the legal profession and alumni. Additions to this list will be made annually.

EIGHT REUNIONS PLANNED FOR JUNE EIGHTH — ALUMNI DAY

Eight Bucknell classes are now planning reunions for the annual Commencement feature day — Alumni Day — Saturday, June 8, 1935. Five years ago these same groups all held meetings but inasmuch as Alumni Day was then celebrated on Tuesday attendance was not up to expectations. The change in calendar plans two years ago bringing Alumni Day always on Saturday has resulted in greatly increased reunion attendance.

The Class of 1905 is again expected to lead with record attendance and class spirit. 1910 and 1915 are likewise planning special events for the day. 1920, 1925, and the "baby" reunion class — 1930 — are also reported at work with committees to be announced in our May number of this magazine. Of the earlier classes 1900 and 1895 are expected to plan dinner or luncheon for the members of the class and families. Complete reunion plans and Commencement features will appear in the May number of The Bucknell Alumni Monthly.

National Alumni Night Celebrated

Radio Program From Campus on March 16 Covers The Nation

THIRTY-THREE alumni dinners attended by more than one thousand Bucknellians and friends and held throughout the nation from Chicago to Miami marked the celebration of National Bucknell Alumni Night and the first Founder's Day Celebration on March 16, 1935. It was the ninetieth birthday party for Bucknell and the greatest in all history. Telegrams, letters, and reports from dinners all testify to the excellence of the program and the joy of the sons and daughters of Bucknell in celebrating in honor of Alma Mater.

The radio program, broadcast over the Columbia net work of stations from coast to coast brought together the thousands of alumni and friends who "listened in" on the celebration. The program was presented to a small audience in the living room of Hunt Hall, where the microphones had been installed. Special reception facilities enabled the alumni and friends gathered at dinners throughout the country to enjoy the broadcast.

Exactly at six o'clock P. M. the announcer introduced the program as the Bucknell Glee Club "faded" into the microphones with The Alma Mater. The Symphony Orchestra and Chorus presented the finale from Wagner's "Die Meister". This number was sung by the chorus in German from copies of the original score. President Rainey was then introduced. His address to the alumni and the entire radio audience stressed the need today for cultural and spiritual values in a changing world, and he emphasized the part Bucknell was playing in the development of character and the training of young men and women to take their place in the world.

The musical portion of the program was resumed at the conclusion of Dr. Rainey's short talk, with Miss Ruth Hlavaty playing an old French composition on the harpsichord, followed by a quartette accompanied on several old string instruments of the sixteenth century. The Glee Club concluded the program with the singing of a Bach Chorale and A Bucknell Medley.

SEEBACH, '20, PRAISES PROGRAM

The National Bucknell Alumni Night broadcast was made possible through the generous cooperation of Mr. Julius S. Seebach, '20, Program Director of The Columbia Broadcasting System in New York. In addition to affording the half hour of radio time as a sustaining feature of the Columbia network Mr. Seebach provided program direction, criticism and invaluable aid in all arrangements incident to the preparation of the script and musical numbers. Indicative of the success of the broadcast is the following quotation from a letter from Mr. Seebach:—"My congratulations on and thanks for the very excellent broadcast from Hunt Hall last Saturday night at six o'clock. All of the participants gave an excellent account of themselves, and the program was undoubtedly most creditable, both to the University and the network. I am very happy that it was possible to arrange this program and that the performance so well justified the allocation of the time."

Julius F. Seebach, '20

ALUMNI ORGANIZED

The work of organization of the alumni dinners and parties throughout the country for March 16 was carried on by The Alumni Council office under the direction of the Secretary, Mr. A. G. Stoughton, '24. Local committees were set up in advance and advised of the program. Meeting places were selected and announced by notices from both the local committee and the Alumni office. Last minute contacting work was done by telephone and personal visits on the part of local committee members. Reports from every section indicated an unusually high interest in the parties and record attendance at many of the affairs.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA IN THE LEAD

The largest single celebration took place at the Alcoma Country Club, near Pittsburgh, under the direction of the officers of The Western Pennsylvania Alumni Club and an able committee headed by Mr. William V. Mahaffey, '25. More than one hundred and fifty alumni and friends enjoyed an evening of dancing after the dinner party.

ONE HUNDRED AT WILKES-BARRE

Chairman James P. Harris, Esq., '12, presided at the Luzerne County Bucknell dinner at the Westmoreland Club, Wilkes-Barre. More than one hundred alumni, friends and guests were present. Dean R. H. Rivenburg, '97, was the faculty speaker. A varied program of entertainment by soloists and several other addresses preceded the talk by the Dean. Officers of the Luzerne County Bucknell Club were re-elected.

SOUTH JERSEY PARTY AT CAMDEN

The Plaza Hotel in Camden was the scene of the South Jersey Alumni Club party. One hundred were in attendance. The speaker from the campus was Dean of Women, Amelia Clark. The meeting was well organized as the first general party of the newly organized South Jersey Alumni Club.

SMALL PHILADELPHIA MEETING

The annual business meeting of the Philadelphia Alumni Club attracted only a small crowd of approximately thirty members. Unfortunate circumstances and interference prevented the reception of the broadcast program. The University Club was the scene of the party. Officers elected for the ensuing year were Romain C. Hassrick, Esq., '06, President; Dr. Paul J. Pontius, '88, Vice-President; Mr. Wilmer D. Greulich, '34, Secretary; T. Burns Drum, Esq., '26, Treasurer.

TRENTON COUNTRY CLUB PARTY

CHICAGO ALUMNI ELECT OFFICERS

A small but enthusiastic group of alumni in Chicago gathered to hear the Bucknell broadcast at the Harding Hotel. Officers elected for the ensuing year are both in the same family — husband, Jonathan Wolfe, '07, President; and wife, Josephine Hankins Wolfe, '07, Secretary.

FINE DETROIT PARTY

President Erskine Jarrett, '05, of the Detroit Alumni Club presided at the meeting of the club at Webster Hall to hear the broadcast. Fourteen alumni and friends were present. Difficulties prevented reception of the program from the campus. Despite the disappointment an enjoyable evening with everyone present recounting experiences and days on the campus was enjoyed. Officers elected were Mr. John Gilbert Malone, '27, President; N. Frederick McKinney, '28, Vice-President; Mr. Erskine Jarrett, '05, Secretary and Treasurer. Professor E. Lloyd Rogers, '15, presented the address sent from the campus on "How Alumni May Help".

Sutherland, Professor of Sociology, who brought the message from the university to the gathering. A feature of the party was the presentation to Mr. Carl C. Law, '85, of a plaque in commemoration of his fifty years of service to Alma Mater as an outstanding alumnus. Mr. Law is a former President of the Western Pennsylvania Alumni Association and The General Alumni Association. He was also the first football and baseball captain at Bucknell and an outstanding athlete during his undergraduate days.

April 2, 1935.

To the Alumni:

I AM very grateful to the Alumni for the generous response which they have given to the launching of our Centennial Program. From every quarter has come an enthusiastic response to the objectives of the program, and an expression of willingness to cooperate in the promotion of it.

The radio program of March 16th has done a great deal to rekindle an interest in Bucknell among many of our alumni. Scores of letters and telegrams of appreciation have come from every section of the country. Because of the high quality of the program many Bucknellians found a genuine pride in the work which the University is doing. A number of new Alumni Clubs have been formed, and several that have been inactive for several years have been reorganized.

I sincerely hope that this new interest among the Alumni in the University will continue to grow. There is much that the Alumni can do to help us to realize the objectives of Bucknell for the years that are ahead. In the various parts of the Centennial Program (The New Friends Division, the Bequest Program, and the Selective Admissions Program) there are many opportunities for every Alumnus to have some active part in working for it. Make a new friend for Bucknell. Remember Bucknell in your will no matter how small the sum may be, and encourage your friends to do the same. You may feel that what you are able to do is so small that it would be negligible. That is not the case. The University will prosper from the small bequests of many people. Find some good high school student in your community and interest him in coming to Bucknell by telling him what Bucknell has to offer.

The loyal cooperation of every Alumnus in these and other ways will surely build a finer Bucknell. Bucknell is not an impersonal institution. There is no such thing as an impersonal social force. Bucknell is made up of individuals. She can become no greater than the combined efforts of every member of the Bucknell family will make her. Let us, therefore, develop a strong sense of our spiritual unity, and of our collective opportunities.

Faithfully yours,

James O. Rainey

The Presidents' Radio Address

Dr. Rainey in Five Minute Talk Acquaints Alumni and "The World" with Bucknell's Glorious Past and Hopes for the Future.

Good Evening Ladies and Gentlemen:

On behalf of Bucknell University I wish to extend greetings to the many hundreds of her alumni and friends who are assembled tonight throughout the country for their annual banquets. We are also happy to have a large host of radio guests enjoy this birthday celebration with us through the facilities of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

I have just received a letter from Bucknell's oldest living graduate, Mrs. Jennie Beigle Irwin, of Bellwood, Pennsylvania, who is one hundred years old, a graduate of the Class of 1861. I am sure her message represents the feelings of all Bucknellians tonight. I take pleasure in reading a few extracts from her letter.

"I look back upon my student days at Bucknell University with pleasant memories. The friendships I made there I still cherish. Her sainted President and excellent faculty have left an indelible impression upon my memory. I am delighted to know of the marvelous progress Bucknell has made through the years in the educational life of our beloved country. I am happy to send my greetings and to assure you that I will be with you in spirit."

Thank you Mrs. Irwin. The University is happy to send you a special greeting and wish you many other happy birthdays.

As we celebrate the completion of ninety years of educational service it is a happy experience to recall the history of these years, and to rejoice in the success and progress of the University in every department of its work. During these years Bucknell has been rendering invaluable service to American life in educating and inspiring thousands of young men and women for effective and responsible leadership in almost every vocation and profession in life.

The excellent work done by the University in the past is its promise for the future. It has made a substantial place for itself in the life of our society, and we are looking toward the future with zest and genuine hope. During the last three years the University has been making a thorough and careful study of its problems, and has formulated a well-conceived program for the future. This program is constructed in recognition of a college's responsibility to equip the young men and women of this and future generations to be sensitive to, and to deal masterly with, the issues and needs of their environment.

Bucknell is grappling courageously, and we hope wisely, with the problem of the relationship between general and professional education. Men today are seriously asking why should we not be getting better social, economic, and political leadership from our magnificent democratic educational system, and they think they are finding a partial answer, at least, in the fact that our higher institutions have not been placing enough emphasis upon the need for character and for trained social, economic, and political leadership. A man may become a skilled and talented surgeon, and yet he may not be able to cast an intelligent vote for the direction of the economic or political life of the nation. He may be an able scientific technician, and yet he may not be one whit better prepared to deal with complex social and economic issues. There is an abundance of evidence that this is precisely what has been happening in our emphasis upon extreme specialization. The professional schools themselves now recognize this fact, and their leaders are suggesting a more fundamental and general education before candidates begin their technical training. Our objective is to make a significant contribution to the life of our times, not only by giving our students a fine scientific and technical education but by preparing them to live successfully and to participate intelligently in the solution of current problems. We do this at Bucknell chiefly through our recognition of the principle of the junior and senior college. In the junior college emphasis is placed upon the acquisition of a broad cultural education, and in the senior college students concentrate upon their fields of special interest and aim for mastery.

This program tonight is an excellent example of the liberal college functioning. The University takes genuine pride in the fact that it is giving a significant place in its curriculum to the Arts. We believe, if we are to have a college that prepares its students for complete living, that adequate provision must be made for students to hear, to see, and to participate in all forms of artistic expression. This principle of participation is the basis of instruction in nearly every department of the University. In our professional divisions of Engineering, Commerce and Finance, and the training of teachers we are relating instruction to actual problems in these fields.

The colleges and universities of America are the great bulwarks of American life. They exist not for profit or material ends, but to promote the intellectual, cultural, and spiritual life of the nation. I am sure that all Bucknellians have a just pride in the fact that for nearly a century Bucknell, along with many other similar institutions, has stood quietly but firmly for those values that have a permanent quality in the life of nations. Changes in the secular world have swirled about them. Businesses, whole industries, financial institutions, have waxed and waned in the interim since these colleges were founded, but they have gone imperturbably forward in their service to youth. We face the future with confidence that if our colleges are sensitive and responsive to their tasks, and if they measure up to their opportunities, they shall not lack in generous friends who will provide ample resources for their support.

LETTER FROM OLDEST ALUMNA

At the opening of his address to the alumni, President Rainey extended greetings to Mrs. Jennie Beigle Irwin, '61, of Bellwood, Penna., oldest living alumna. Mrs. Irwin had written to Mr. R. J. Haberstroh, Chairman of the dinner at Altoona, regretting her inability to be present at the party. President Rainey quoted from her letter a copy of which is printed herewith:

Bellwood, Pa.,
 March 16, 1935.

Mr. Robert J. Haberstroh, Chairman,
 3509 Fort Roberdeau Ave.,
 Altoona, Pa.

My dear Mr. Haberstroh and Members of the Alumna of Bucknell University of Lewisburg, Pa.

My dear Friends:

The record will reveal that I am the oldest living member of the great host of Alumna of my Alma Mater, Bucknell University of Lewisburg, Pennsylvania.

I am in my one hundred and first year, and by the grace of my heavenly Father I am in full possession of my faculties and find living a real joy.

I look back upon my student days at Bucknell University with pleasant memories. The friendships I made there I still cherish, Her sainted President and excellent Faculty have left an indelible impression upon my memory.

I am delighted to know of the marvelous progress Bucknell has made through the years in the educational life of our beloved country.

It is with deep regret that infirmity prevents my presence in person at the dinner this evening at the Penn-Alto Hotel in Altoona but I am happy to send my greetings and to assure you all that I will be with you in spirit.

My best wishes are for continuous usefulness of Bucknell.

Faithfully yours,

Mrs. Jennie Beigle Irwin.

SECOND SCHOOL ADDED

The work of the Bucknell Demonstration School, a division of the Summer School under the Department of Education has necessitated the expansion of this department. A second unit in demonstration work is now planned for the coming summer. This unit will be located at Milton and will be under the direction of Mr. E. Collins Cupp, Principal of the Milton High School. It will be a regular division of the Summer School.

"SELECTIVE ADMISSION" PLAN APPEALS TO ALUMNI CLUBS

Favorable reaction in all alumni centers has greeted the launching of Bucknell's new "Selective Admission" plan for enrolling new students. A vital part will be played by alumni clubs in the operation of this venture as local committees will be set up to approve of applicants for admission as well as candidates for the Club Scholarships announced on March 16 at the time of the National Alumni Night dinners.

Bucknell faculty members appearing before some twenty-four alumni dinners on the sixteenth outlined the new education methods in use on the campus, and described the operation of the new curriculum. The plan of the new program is suited to modern education methods and has been approved by accrediting agencies and followed by many leading colleges and universities.

The various offerings of Bucknell to her students have been concisely described by Dean R. H. Rivenburg, '97, in a recent address. Excerpts from this address are herewith given for the purpose of acquainting all alumni with the academic changes that have taken place on the campus:-

In Bucknell's new program a year course is devoted to the History of Western Man or Western Civilization, giving the highlights of history from the time of ancient China and India to the World War and beyond, tracing the stream of human events, progress, knowledge and culture from antiquity to the present day. The purpose of the course is to give a student at least a bird's-eye view of the spread and sweep of Western civilization, leaving it to him to fill in the details by later study.

In the new program a year course in World Literature is designed to give a student at least an introduction to the masterpieces of world literature, from Homer's Iliad and Virgil's Aeneid through Dante's Divine Comedy, Shakespeare, Browning and the brilliant writers of our day, instead of giving a year's course in English Literature or American Literature as colleges usually do. The course in World Literature aims to introduce the student to priceless treasures in the finest things that men and women have thought or written. It is the purpose of this course to awaken or enkindle a taste and love for the best reading that will prove a blessing and inspiration to students as long as they live.

Because of the fundamental value and importance of science in everyday life, it would seem to be impossible to overstate the progress man has made during the past century in understanding his physical environment. In order to give to students not majoring in science a survey of the natural sciences, astronomy, geology, physics, chemistry and biology, that will have rich cultural value and help them "to live a life that is in harmony with the world in which they live", the new program includes a year's survey course in the Natural Sciences and the Biological Sciences.

In the maze and chaos of the economic, political and social conditions of today, and the amazing, tremendously far-reaching changes that are taking place, the full significance of which no one is wise enough to fathom, it is surely important that students have at least an introduction to the principles

The composite photograph of members of the Bucknell Institute Class of 1862 reproduced herewith is the gift of Mrs. Louis D. Razor of Los Angeles. Mrs. Razor was a campus visitor during the Fall. She is the granddaughter of Eugenio Kincaid, the first agent of the Northumberland Baptist Association who raised the first funds for the establishment of the University at Lewisburg.

Mrs. Razor writes of the early life of her grandfather, who was a missionary in Burma during the administration of President Buchanan. On his return to America on a visit Mr. Kincaid brought to the President a message from the King of Burma asking that a treaty be negotiated between the two countries. This message is still in the archives of the State Department at Washington where it was recently discovered by a grandson of Eugenio Kincaid, Mr. Augustus Eugenio Ingram, recently retired editor of the Consular News, the publication of the State Department.

Identification of all of the pictures in the group has not been possible. Those identified by Mrs. Razor and the last Mrs. Sarah Shorkley of Carpinteria, California, are as follows:

2. Anna M. Young
3. Sallie C. Janes
4. Margaret A. Russell (Mrs. Razor's mother)
7. Mary C. Reed
8. Laura M. Miller
9. Kate R. Jones

of economics, government and sociology. This Bucknell's new program is designed to give.

A well educated man or woman should have at least some knowledge of psychology, philosophy, and the world's great religions, which have profoundly influenced and shaped the destiny of mankind for centuries. These, too, are included in the Bucknell curriculum.

With the thirty hour work week already established or imminent for millions of people, the problem of the one hundred thirty-eight hours a week of leisure time assumes tremendous significance. In order to help students have within themselves the resources, the taste, and the desire to use their leisure time wisely and happily, the new program includes a course in the Appreciation of Art and the Appreciation of Music, for, after all, it is what we can appreciate that determines the fineness and richness of our living.

Bucknell's new program is designed to give ample opportunity for students to prepare to earn a living, as most of them will have to do and all should be able to do. Students who wish to enter medicine, law, dentistry, the ministry, and other professions may begin pre-professional work in the Freshman year, and they have the Junior and Senior years almost entirely free to obtain the training they need for professional school. For those who wish to earn their living and begin their life work immediately after graduation from college, Bucknell offers a four year course in Education which thoroughly equips its graduates for high school teaching. A four year course in Commerce and Finance, with half of the work devoted to economics and business subjects, and a new four year Secretarial Course designed to prepare high grade secretaries for important executive and secretarial positions, prepare students to enter directly into business; a new four year Biology Technical Secretarial Course will train secretaries for physicians, hospitals, laboratories, etc.; and the four engineering courses, Chemical, Civil, Electric cal and Mechanical Engineering, give thorough training in engineering and equip their graduates to enter immediately upon the practice of their profession.

HIGH SCHOOL SPEAKERS

Dr. James P. Whyte of the faculty, recently released from teaching duties for the present semester, is Bucknell's ace High School speaker as he carries the message of the new "Selective Admission" plan to prospective students throughout the east. Dr. Whyte is speaking daily in high schools in New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania.

Other faculty members have been representing the university in their respective fields in special lectures on invitation of school authorities on the new service plan to high schools now being operated by the university under the direction of Dr. F. G. Davis, '11. This project was offered in January to school leaders within a one hundred mile radius of the campus. Speakers are furnished gratis on any subject. Among the many schools using this "Speaker's Bureau" since the first of the year are the high schools of Pine Grove, Muncy, Montoursville, Pottsville, Jersey Shore, Bloomsburg, Nanticoke, Williamsport, Berwick, Montgomery, Millersburg, Danville, Northumberland, Scranton, and Millersville. Speakers from the faculty have included Dean J. H. Miller, Dean R. H. Rivenburg, '97, Miss Eliza Martin, '00, Professor R. E. Page, Dr. H. R. Warfel, '20, Professor C. W. Smith, Dr. J. W. Rice, '14, Professor G. A. Irland, '15, Dr. N. F. Davis, '95, Dr. William Eyster, '14, and others.

Lectures have been presented on many subjects and dramatic skits as well as musical numbers have been presented by student groups before schools, meetings of P. T. A. and allied organizations as a part of this new university service to the nearby communities.

PRIZE PAINTING

"Afterthoughts of Heaven," an oil painting by Blanchard Gummo, '25, professor of art, won first prize in the notable exhibition of the Society of Artists, Washington, D. C. The picture, now hanging in the Corcoran Art Gallery, Washington, has attracted much favorable attention.

Against the background of a typical Susquehanna Valley cemetery, which symbolizes past hopes destroyed and present sorrows, an elderly man regretfully thinks of his recently buried wife. The power of the painting lies not in its symbolism only, but also in the masterful portraiture and excellent composition.

Mr. Gummo came to Bucknell in 1931 as an instructor in art. He attended the university in 1921 and 1922, going later to Yale, to graduate in 1926 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. In 1931 he received his B.

S. A. from Yale, and then he came to Bucknell in the Fall of the same year.

Pursley, Mrs. William T. Johnson, and Mrs. B. W. Griffith.

ALUMNAE PLAY

One hundred members and guests attended the fifty-third annual guest meeting of the Bucknell Alumnae Club in Larison Hall recently when the play, "Ways and Means," was presented.

The play, directed by Miss Hannah Bubb, was a take-off on the ways and means committee of a women's club. Those who played the various roles were: Miss Carrie Foresman, Mrs. Grace Slifer Drum, Mrs. Lyde Tingley Sutherland, Mrs. Sara Deck Crossgrove, Mrs. Helen Kerstetter Bechtel, Mrs. Sara Reed Gearhart, and Mrs. Ruth Hoffa Rice. Women outside of the club who also participated in the play were:- Mrs. Neil

REYNOLDS TO COACH KNOX

A former Bucknell football coach next fall will attempt to rescue the much-buffed sons of Old Siwash from the morass of defeat. C. W. P. "Pete" Reynolds, head coach here for several years after the World War, recently was appointed football mentor at Knox College, Galesburg, Illinois, the school whose gallant warriors have dipped their colors 27 successive times in the past three years.

Reynold's Bucknell teams, it is recalled, were noted for their defensive rather than offensive ability. During his tenure, the Bisons were seldom beaten by any sizeable margin. Reynolds himself was regarded as one of the finest and most clean-cut men ever to guide Bucknell's gridiron destinies.

After leaving Bucknell, Reynolds took up the coaching reins at Syracuse, his alma mater, where his teams won 15 out of 20 games. He decided to give up coaching and enter business in Chicago. Since his retirement, however, he has kept a close interest in the game, performing occasional scouting chores for various teams.

SITARSKY GRID CAPTAIN

Johnny Sitarsky, '36, quarterback of the Bucknell football team last fall, was elected captain of the 1935 Bison gridiron outfit by the nineteen men who earned their letters in the varsity sport at a meeting of the team last week.

Sitarsky, of Rutherford, New Jersey, is the only four-letter man in college, being outstanding in track; baseball, and basketball, as well as on the gridiron. He was the captain of the Bucknell freshman team in 1932.

Starred in High School

While at Rutherford, Sitarsky was named for three years on the All-State football teams, and has been called the "greatest back from northern New Jersey." During the summer, he works on ships sailing between New York and the West Indies, and keeps in practice by playing on the ship's baseball team.

Lettermen

The nineteen lettermen given the awards for participating in varsity competition are: Captain-elect Sitarsky, Co-captain Boiston, Co-captain Furiel, George McGaughey, Harry Jenkins, Stuart Smith, Timothy Delaney, Walter Dobie, Edwin Raymaley, Robert Pethick, Jack Filer, Bud Wilkinson, Harry Bergkamp, Ray Green, George Crouse, Joe Reznichak, John Drayton, Joe Rhubright, and Phil Miller. Leroy Rhode, manager of the team was also awarded a letter.

SPRING PRACTICE

A squad of 40 veterans and freshmen answered the call to spring football practice issued by Coach Edward "Hooks" Mylin on March 18. With the mire of Loomis Field holding up practice till the turf becomes firm, Mylin gave the boys an informal talk, and distributed the uniforms, preparatory to beginning active practice as soon as possible.

Mylin faces the task of building up a strong line, but the small group of veterans, and some promising freshmen linemen, make it entirely probable that Mylin will be able to whip a formidable forward wall into shape before the conclusion of spring practice.

Wilkinson and Filer, the regular ends, and Bob Pethick, another experienced man, will adequately take care of the wing posts.

Three Veteran Tackles

At tackle, there are three veteran aspirants for the berths—Pocius, Rosati, and Sturgeon. "Chubby" Dickens, a sophomore tackle who played on the frosh lineup two years ago, has returned to school and is expected to make a strong bid for a tackle position. At the guard position, Mylin has Dobie, Crouse, Green, Rondeau, and Wilson.

Sitarsky
Football Captain for 1935

The center position, left open by the graduation of McGaughey, will prove a problem, but it will not be without a solution. Sal Fazio, who has been out with a knee injury, will not report to spring practice, but he will undoubtedly be out for the fall session. Whether his knee will be in shape for active participation is still a matter of conjecture. Ed Vrabel, frosh wingman, is to be tried out in the position, in an effort to fill the gap.

Backs More Plentiful

The backfield is more plentifully supplied with veteran material. Captain Sitarsky will fill the signal-calling berth and Stu Smith, hard-hitting junior back, will be in the fullback position. Phil Miller, also a fullback who saw much experience last year, will bolster the ball-carrying group.

With Joe Rhubright and Joe Reznichak leaving vacant the halfback posts, Whipney and Raymaley who saw service last fall as ball-carriers, are expected to fight it out with the freshmen for the berths. Bowman, Conti, Hershey, Colson, and Pieffer, halfbacks, are likely to work into positions in the Bison backfield.

PLAYER REVIEWS

VICTORYLESS SEASON

By Sidney Kanengiser, '37

During the past basketball season, the Bucknell quintet displayed some very poor ball, occasionally hitting a high peak of brilliance which surprised even her most pessimistic adherents. Despite her few brief moments of real basketball, the team went through the most disastrous season in the history of the sport. In all, 14 games were recorded on the red side of the ledger, with not a single mark to blot the dividend-paying entries — a record of some sort.

Before the first scheduled game last December in Pittsburgh, many were the words of praise which were being heaped upon our basketballers. They would make up for last season's poor showing. Did not the varsity roster harbor the nucleus of last year's crack frosh team? The Pitt Panthers humbled our Bisons by 52-22 — a poor start indeed.

Next came Georgetown — a fast moving team with a good "rep." Bucknell fared no better, but did manage to keep the score down to 26-15 — too much Hargarden.

With Christmas vacation over, and the return from Miami of a few gridsters, Bucknell's chances against a highly touted Temple Owl looked decidedly bright — for Temple, 56-20. A great deal of one "Reds" Rosan.

Against the favored Villanova "Cats" Bucknell unleashed a furious attack which for a time looked like a Bison victory. The "mainliners" rallied in the last five minutes for a 46-30 victory, however.

The stumbling Bisons journeyed to Washington for a return encounter with the Hoyas. The Thundering Herd's floor game was much improved but the score was not — Georgetown by 37-22.

A burly gang of "Mountaineers" from West Virginia swarmed down upon our hapless Bisons to the tune of 51-21. A red-headed boy named Gocke provided the entertainment for the evening.

A five-day trip in which it encountered West Virginia, Temple, and Army, helped swell the season's losses for the travel weary herd. Despite these losses, the basketekers outplayed the Army gray for all but the last five minutes — score 39-28. If one recalls, the Army beat a highly favored Navy quintet the following week.

Coming down the home stretch, the ineffective weary Bisons bowed to a fighting band of Juniata Indians, 44-34. In a return go with Villanova, the quintet again took it on the chin 44-23.

The season's "high" was reached against a formidable Dickinson five when the Bisons were nosed out in the last few minutes, 30-24—close but no cigar.

Hitting the highway again, the Orange and Blue was given a thorough shellacking in Scranton by an avenging St. Thomas quintet, 71-25.

A post season exhibition game in Williamsport went the way of all Bucknell games when the Autoparts team of the Industrial League took our measure, 37-30.

OWENS TO TOUR

When Professor William G. Owens, '80 journeys around the world this summer in company with Mrs. Owens, he expects to stop off in Shanghai, China, next September to teach a year at the University of Shanghai.

Arrangements have been virtually completed for Professor Owens to teach chemistry at the Chinese university. The Bucknell professor only awaits final word from President Liu, of the Shanghai University.

Perez, '07, Editor and Antiquarian

Director of Vocational Education in Philippines---Active in Many Lines

Twenty-six years ago, Dr. Jose Bantug, now of the bureau of health, as publicity director, met a young medical student from Florida who was selling cigars to classmates and owners of cigar stands around the Chicago campus of the University of Illinois. Dr. Bantug did not have much occasion to get to know him better, but he learned to his surprise and interest, that the young man was supporting himself through college. The Florida young man was selling cigars which he himself made at night in a West Side factory.

The acquaintance between the two did not ripen, then, to intimacy but because the young man exhibited features similar to many Filipino mestizos', Dr. Bantug remembered him well.

When Dr. Bantug returned to the Philippines after obtaining his M.D. degree, he found the Florida young man already here. Today this same young man is at the head of the vocational division of the bureau of education. Upon him rests the responsibility of supplementing the student's academic knowledge with the practical, to prepare him better for his duties as a useful citizen.

OF BRAZILIAN FAMILY

Dr. Gilbert S. Perez came from a wealthy family of plantation owners in Brazil. When the family moved to America, the Perez fortune dwindled away following a business crash. His father, Dr. Constantino Perez, settled in Pensacola, Florida, where as a young man he worked as cigar maker. Pensacola had tobacco plantations then. By working in cigar factories, the elder Perez was able to study medicine.

Dr. Gilbert S. Perez is the eldest son of the Pensacola physician and Regina Du Seau de la Croix (a French Woman). He studied in the schools of Pensacola, and later went to New Orleans. In this city he attended a Jesuit school, where he excelled in literature and showed an early aptitude for writing. Leaving New Orleans, he went to Lewisburg and attended Bucknell University. He graduated with a Bachelor of Science degree (in Biology) from Bucknell in 1907. He returned to Louisiana and later took post-graduate studies in the University of Chicago. Still later, he enrolled in the medical school of the University of Illinois.

ANSWERED "WANT AD"

Handicapped financially, he worked as a cigar maker in a Chicago West Side factory. His father, when a medical student, had done the same thing. However, while attending the University of Illinois he read, one day, that the Philippine Government was in need of public school teachers. The "Want Ad" interested young Perez so much that he took the examination given by the University to select teachers for the Philippines at the end of the school year. When he returned for enrollment the following year, he was informed of his appointment to teach in the Philippines. He left Chicago in August, 1909, and arrived in Manila the following month.

Dr. Gilbert S. Perez, '07

Dr. Perez was first assigned to the Baliwag Elementary School, Baliwag, Bulacan. The following year he was made principal of the San Miguel (Bulacan) Intermediate School. While in that town, he started the first school garden in the country. Now that he is head of the vocational division of the bureau of education, his having started the first school garden appears very significant. Superintendent Borduer, of the city schools, was then the superintendent of schools in the division of Bulacan.

In 1911, Dr. Perez was transferred to Bohol as industrial supervisor. He stayed in that province until 1917. When Camilo Osias, now resident Commissioner and Delegate, was made division superintendent of schools for Tayabas, Dr. Perez was transferred to Tayabas to work with him as industrial supervisor. And when Osias was transferred to the general office of the bureau of education as assistant director, Dr. Perez was appointed division superintendent of schools for Tayabas. He held this position until 1926 when the vocational division of the bureau of education was created. He was made the first superintendent of vocational education. In 1929, the Philippine Government sent him to Denmark to study in the Danish Folk School, and the industrial schools of Denmark and Germany. On his way home he passed through the United States and he persuaded Dr. Frosser, American vocational education specialist to come to the islands for a survey of Philippine public schools.

ABLE WRITER

Dr. Perez, as a writer is well known. His works have been published in the Philippines, the United States and England. He is, in the estimate of Professor Thomas Inglis Moore, one of our truly mature poets. He is the author of "Fellow Teachers", a book containing educational essays; "Conceived in Liberty", a book of essays on vocational education; the "Philippine Mint", published in New York by the American Numismatic Society; the "Culion Leper Coinage", also published by the American Numismatic Society, and others which are still in manuscript form.

He has one of the most valuable collections of antiques and coins in the Philippines. He has, perhaps, one of the most extensive collections of coins in the country, and his library on coins is one of the most complete here. Dr. Perez has presented to the American Numismatic Society 400 of the rarest gold and silver Philippine coins, probably the largest ever gathered together. He has also an extensive collection of stamps, mostly British colonials. Dr. Perez' residence on Hollywood Street, San Juan (temporarily vacant in the absence of his wife and children), is a veritable museum of antiques. He also owns some rare paintings, two of which are by the famous Hildago.

Dr. Perez is married to the former Miss Hazel Stockbridge Hodges of Scranton, Pa., a granddaughter of the founder of the city of Cleveland, Ohio. He has two children: Robert J., 16; and Eleanore May, 13.

Dr. Perez, in recognition of his labors in behalf of vocational education, was awarded the degree of Doctor of Pedagogy by Bucknell University in 1933.

Adventures In Abyssinia

Warren J. Haman, '32, Penetrates African Jungles with Exploring Party to Reach Ethiopia and Interview King Haille Selassie.

Mr. Warren J. Haman, '32, of Pittsburgh, was persuaded to write an account for this magazine of his recent adventures as a member of an exploring party in Africa. Mr. Haman has taken part in several other expeditions to ruins in Central America and other countries. His account of the background of Abyssinia and his tale of a day on the march through the jungles makes thrilling and timely reading. Reproduction in whole or in part of Mr. Haman's article below is expressly forbidden. —The Editor.

The first three months of our journey was purely and simply a pleasure trip though we were able to form a foundation for our later work. We landed in Africa at Alexandria and journeyed to the seldom visited Oasis of Siwa. It was here that the famed Oracle of Jupiter, Amon, told Alexander the Great that he was not a mortal man. The ruins of the temples, the thousands of empty tombs in the Hill of the Dead, the customs and vile practices of the natives, the workings of the ancient olive presses — all these in a garden spot surrounded by sand dunes and desolate waste. After leaving the Lybian Desert, we proceeded to Cairo and boarded the Cook's steamer; and, living on the boat, we spent Christmas and New Year's day in and about the famous winter resort. After the holidays, we slowly steamed up the Nile. The weather was ideal for our study of the temples and tombs. Our visits to the different excavation camps were made most interesting by the young English engineers and archaeologists, and they gave us a working knowledge of methods of excavation. Their resumes of Egyptian history were of the greatest value. And so the foundation for our later work was laid. As you no doubt know, historians have told us that the Egyptians were descendants of the people who came from Mesopotamia and settled in Palestine, and from this point influenced, by absorbing or being absorbed by the surrounding tribes, the civilizations of the westernmost Orientals. So just as Palestine was the central distributing point for the Semetic influence, Egypt was the converging point for influences from Europe, Africa, and the Orient. The purpose of our expedition was to discover and trace all evidence contributing to our theory that the greatest influence on Egypt progressed from Arabia, crossed the Red Sea and the Gulf of Aden at Aden, reached Africa at Djibouti on the French Somali Coast, entered and crossed the great Abyssinian plateau to the headwaters of the Blue Nile, and then following the river to Cairo where the Egyptian civilization reached its peak. Thanks to the Rosetta Stone and the concentration of archaeology on Egypt, we now have a very definite history; but now the hard part of the work is at hand. Any more discoveries in Egypt will no doubt only supplement and confirm existing knowledge. The student must go beyond written records now and must build his case on no less conclusive but more obscure facts. For example — types of pottery, existing customs, types of weapons or musical instruments, legends, and paintings or rock carvings. Work of this nature is extremely difficult and our time was mostly spent collecting specimens and pictures which would later be studied by experts.

ENGLISH INFLUENCE

We made our headquarters in Khartoum, the capital of the Sudan; and here we outfitted for the long ride through the black Sudan, Beni Shanghoul country, and Abyssinia to Addis Ababa, the capital. The trail became very faint immediately upon reaching the Sudan because of the great influence of the English in creating an ordered life for the natives. The English civilization has unbelievably changed these people and yet has left them the same naked, indolent savage nature. They have cheap pots and pans instead of pottery, they have no use for ancient weapons and would commit murder for a revolver, they make their musical instruments from junk heaps, and they draw with crayons stolen from the native schools. But we had their songs, speech, customs, homes, and features to help us. As we left the British influence and reached the Beni Shanghoul, we had great difficulty in distinguishing the natives from the runaway slaves of Abyssinia. Yet faint as the trail became in places, our work was plentiful enough to make the days and weeks pass quickly.

ETHIOPIA

Abyssinia. Ethiopia, that hemmed herself in by ferocious cruelty just as China restricted her boundaries by impregnable walls, has turned back the advance of our white influence with such success that today she is the last remaining black empire. In all Europe we have no royal lines that compare with that of the progressive Ras Tafari Haille Selassie, who is a direct descendant of King Solomon and Ham of the Bible. The result of 20 centuries of good marriages and of governing is a man who is thinking first of his country. He has abolished the ban placed upon foreigners and allowed outside interests to come in and exploit the country's natural resources. Different religious missions have been encouraged and helped by the Emperor, and their medicinal and religious aid has made some headway against the pitiable condition of the Abyssinians. Not many years ago the white race first brought in the diseases that are now devastating the people. Ticks, only lately carried into Abyssinia, by coffee caravans, have spread the germs of relapsing fever and typhus. Dissentery, is one of the most prevalent diseases. A native without a tapeworm has been known to go to church and charge her God to make her a normal woman. All this, together with primitive practices and beliefs, has lowered the birth rate until now some statistics quote a lower rate than that of China. Nevertheless the natives have constitutions that enable them to recover very quickly from the worst afflictions.

BAKSHEESH!

Baksheesh! Baksheesh! This beggarly attitude of natives near the tourist centers has not reached Abyssinia. In fact money has little or no value to the people living far from the markets, and at times we were unable to purchase food except by trade. Money was an ornament, while eggs and chickens were life itself. Travel became a hardship in these places, and we often wished that we had had the foresight to bring along more bottles, mirrors, and soap. These natives lived in filth, yet each person immediately ran to a stream to wash when he received soap. Nature has not furnished them with a "soap weed" such as we have in our southwest, and they are too poor and have no access to a market.

The blood of King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba flows through the veins of these people. In the 14th century hordes of Gallas, black tribes from the south of Lake Victoria, swarmed over the high plateaus conquering and killing until all of the Amharas were subdued. Two hundred years later the superior minds of the Amharas caused an ordered revolt and the ruling power was again placed in the hands of the Kings. Though there has been a King of Kings a number of times, now Ethiopia has been welded into one state under Haille Selassie.

COPTIC CHRISTIANS

The Coptic Christian church established by proselytes sent in King Solomon's time has continued, though crushed and nearly wiped out many times, as the prevailing religion. Mohammedism, with a foothold in the Tigre region, is not threatening Christianity. The strong feeling between the two has caused the one to suppress the other as much as possible. It has been through the Gheez writing of the Coptic church that historians have been able to follow the Abyssinian trail through history. An almost unbroken record of the ruling family has been compiled and now is insured for posterity. The changes have been few, and the natives live today much as their forefathers,—the same religion, dress, speech, government, mode of living, and social standards. We have the Gheez writings (it is never spoken now) for the church. Amharic for the ruling class, and Galla for the workers and the slaves. Each one of these has many dialects.

WOMEN

Women are, as is typical of all Africa, nothing. They are married in one of four ways — by ownership, by hire, by trial, or by the church. Divorce and re-marriage are permitted except when the communion has been taken by both husband and wife. So we are not able to judge these people by our own standards, because immorality becomes unmorality. In case of a separation of man and woman, the sons over seven go with the father and the rest go with the mother. The wife does practically all the work and is the ruler of her home as long as she is the first wife. The wealthy Amharic lead a different life. Theirs is a life of motherhood and ease. Instead of carrying bundles and children in their arms, they ride on an animal just in back of their husband's mule, and slaves do the work. The Amharic class are not negroid in their features. Instead they have a fine physique and carry themselves proudly. Their thin, sensitive lips and fine mentality show their superiority over the negro tribes. And it was with real pleasure when we were entertained by Governor Gallata of Nekempti and later by His Majesty Haille Selassie.

Our caravan was made up of seven riding mules, 25 pack animals, 5 personal servants, 2 camera boys, a cook, an interpreter, the Nagadras (owner of the animals) and 5 of his men for their care. Our personal servants and gun bearers ran before us beating the natives off the trail and making trouble generally. They were on duty 24 hours each day, and they made our camps, fires, gathered wood, waited on the table, washed our clothes, told the world how great we were, guarded us at night, and received $5 American money each and every month. But do not laugh, they were wealthy boys at the end.

WATER AND CIGARETTES

The country is mountainous, having an altitude from two thousand feet to nine thousand feet and the temperature during the dry season goes to as high as 130 degrees in the shade. Such intense heat dries up most of the surface water, and it was not uncommon for us to have to dig for water. Unfortunately all the water holes were so polluted with the filth of natives and wild animals, that we had to filter drop by drop each canteen full. We found that water when scarce is so absolutely necessary to your well being that we guarded our supply of it nearly as much as the supply of American cigarettes. When we were fortunate enough to make camp near running water, a holiday for ourselves was declared. That is, for us, but not for our boys who had to wash all our things and themselves. It was on these holidays that we learned to love the trail. On arriving at such a place, my work began. I must choose a pleasant site so when the pack animals arrive the work can go right on. In the first place our tents and access to the river must be upstream from the natives and animals, and I must go up the river some distance to see if anything dead, man or beast, is polluting the stream. Next I send one boy to locate the nearest village, one to gather wood and start the cook's fire, one to take care of our riding animals, one to clear the ground of sticks and snakes for our tents, and one must watch over the others in case of crocodiles or thieves. And just when I think that I might have time to take a swim, I hear the shouts of the donkeymen in the distance. Then cursing and sweating I have a busy half hour. Whip in hand, for the natives will not pretend to work until made to do so, we unload the caravan; all the time driving the animals back from the river so that they will not wet the equipment. After the unloading the kitchen is established, the tents are raised, and the dining room with its mosquito net covering, tables, and chairs is arranged. Every single item must be checked, and each man must be watched to see that he does not shirk. At this point the camp is becoming a camp. The tents are up, coffee is made, the mules have been taken to the river, and the natives have had their expected scoldings. During dinner the natives build great fires and the dancers of the Chiqa Shum (mayor) from the village follow the beat of the tom toms on and on all through the night. No night-club or theater has ever offered a presentation comparable. The growing wildness of the dance and the never missing, ever changing beat of the drums drives itself into your brain until after the tom-toms are silent you can still feel your body responding to that beat, beat, beat. So ends another day.

PERSONALS

plant breeding for the Burpee Seed Company.

S. Paul Ryder is the author of a recently published monograph at the School of Education in Chicago on "An Experimental Study of Potential Failures in College".

At a November wedding in Reading Miss Mae Long of Muncy became the bride of Raymond G. Yeich.

Miss Jean Little is supervisor of relief work in Tioga County. She may be addressed at Wellsboro, Pa.

Rev. Delaine Story, pastor of the Wayland Memorial Baptist Church in Philadelphia was extended a call in January to the First Baptist Church of Pottstown, Pa.

Twins, Jeanne and John were born in Cleveland, Ohio, on January 9, 1935, to proud parents Randall L. and Evelyn Cooper Davis. The announcement of the arrival of the youngsters was in the form of a blue print brochure heralding the launching of a "twin motored Davis Line" with all pertinent data in the jargon of the engineer. From President Rainey----

To The Alumni:

MAY I take this opportunity to extend a personal invitation to all the alumni to return to the campus for our forthcoming Commencement, June 8-10? There will be much of value awaiting you here. There will be many of your classmates and friends. There will be a good program, and much of genuine value and inspiration. Your presence on the campus will do much to add to the joy of the Commencement season, and will also help to foster a fine Bucknell morale which is so essential to the realization of our ambitions for the growth and independence of Bucknell. Will you not make a personal effort to be present for, at least, a part of the Commencement activities, and to keep in the spirit of our advancing program?

Yours for a happy Commencement,

Homer P. Rainey
President, Bucknell University

From Alumni President Davenport----

TO ALL BUCKNELLIANs:-

The General Alumni Association extends a most cordial invitation to all sons and daughters of Bucknell to return to Commencement, June 8-10, 1935 at Lewisburg. Your Alumni Association and The College have made preparations for one of the finest programs of recent years. We know you will enjoy a visit to the campus at this season and we promise you a program replete with edification and enjoyment.

The Alumni Office, under the direction of our genial Alumni Secretary, Mr. Al G. Stoughton, exists to serve you in every way possible. Command "Al" for a letter to your "boss" a room for your visit, information about all the events on the program, or what have you!

Saturday, June 8, is ALUMNI DAY — OUR DAY — on the program. For the first time in recent years we have scheduled a good baseball game for the afternoon, following the reunion class luncheons and the alumni meeting in the Literature Building. If you arrive early enuf Saturday morning or even Friday evening there are events worthy of your attention Saturday morning. There is not an idle moment on the whole program.

Come Back for Commencement! Your classmates, friends, and fellow alumni will be there to greet you. We know you will have a good time.

Yours for a happy Commencement,

S. M. Davenport, MD., '15,
President, The General Alumni Association

COMMENCEMENT Ahoy! The invitations of Dr. Davenport, Alumni President, and President Rainey, University Chief, are printed in this issue to urge you to come back to the campus this June. How about it? Do you know any lovelier place in June where you are sure of finding more friends or more congenial companions amidst pleasanter surroundings? Accept the challenge and COME TO LEWISBURG IN JUNE!

THE Program begins on Friday evening with a Faculty-Trustee Dinner. Even if you are not among those chosen few who direct your Alma Mater it will be good to be here and see them and greet them a few hours ahead of the multitude who arrive Saturday morning. There will be brothers and sisters here too, Friday evening who will welcome you and make you glad that you came early.

SATURDAY is Alumni Day and the program is designed solely for your enjoyment. Class Reunions, Baseball, Alumni Meeting (Where you will see everyone), Fraternity Symposia, and the Cap and Dagger Play. Surely a fine day's schedule.

ACCOMMODATIONS? How about a room in East or West College "On The Hill"? Yours for the asking! Perhaps accommodations in the new Hotel Lewisburger (the renovated Cameron House)? If you are early enuf we can sign you up for one of the choice ones. Perhaps a private room in one of the homes near the campus? We have many to choose from. Command the Alumni Office!

If you can afford the time we recommend you stay over the weekend for the whole show. An excellent program of music and academic dignity awaits you on Sunday if you attend the Baccalaureate Sermon on Sunday morning, the Symphony Concert in the afternoon, and the Oratorio in the evening.

MONDAY is Commencement Day and a fine son of Bucknell, President Lester Kelly Ade, '21, of The State Teachers College at New Haven, Connecticut, will be the Commencement Speaker. It will be an outdoor ceremony, down on the Women's Campus, followed by the time-hallowed tradition of "Corporation Dinner".

It is a secret, but we understand that several good alumni will receive honorary degrees at this Commencement. Perhaps there will be a classmate of yours receive the accolade from his Alma Mater. Come and see! We should love to tell you who they are but for some obscure reason the dear brothers of the faculty say an emphatic "No" to any advance information on the award of honorary degrees.

ONE meeting that concerns you all is the annual business meeting of your own Alumni Association. It is scheduled for two o'clock Saturday afternoon in the Literature Building. Be there! Your friends will congregate here and we promise you a short and interesting session and then to the ball game in a body. We will nominate a fine

ONE final word before we close this corner for the month. How about your Alumni Fund Gift? Fifty dollars? Yes! If you can afford it. One dollar? Just as welcome if that is all the old pocket book can stand at the moment. We need concrete evidence of your loyalty to old Bucknell whether it is one figure or five! It is the gift — not the size of it that counts. Get your name into your class column! Send it to Lewisburg today!

THE SUMMER SESSION

THE Catalog for the 1935 Summer School was published in May as the final bulletin in a series of ten different publications setting forth the various interesting features of the school. Alumni who desire copies of the catalog should write to the Director of the Summer School.

Among the features of the 1935 Summer School is the increased emphasis on the offerings in the graduate field. A special pamphlet (Bulletin No. 3) sets forth the offerings and the facilities for doing a high grade type of graduate work. Bucknell offers only the master of arts and master of science degrees but the equipment for these degrees has been built up until our work compares favorably with that in any of our better graduate schools. Last year thirty one master's degrees were granted and the probabilities are that that number will be considerably increased this year.

The Demonstration School has grown since its founding in 1925, until this year it has been found necessary to double the capacity by establishing a similar school in Milton. Mr. E. Collins Cupp, '18, principal of the Milton High School will guide the destinies of this school. The faculties of the Demonstration Schools are predominantly Bucknell graduates and it would probably be difficult to find two similar training schools with better teachers.

Recreational facilities at Bucknell are being recommended to prospective students. Edward H. Halicki, '32, former star in the fields of football and baseball will be in charge of all baseball activities during the Summer School. He will direct and organize teams and contests in both regular and "soft" ball.

Bucknell's number one tennis player, F. W. Dunham, '35, of Hornell, N. Y., will perform similar functions with regard to tennis and Emmett J. Gearhart, '36, Reading, Pa. a member of the Bucknell golf team, will provide interesting entertainment for all golfers and those interested in golf. The golf committee has granted a substantial concession with regard to green fees for students and it is possible for beginners to rent clubs for a nominal fee.

A program of lectures by members of the faculty will occupy the thirty minute activities period each Monday, Wednesday and Friday at ten to ten-thirty. Interesting evening lectures have also been arranged.

Probably one of the accomplishments of Bucknell which many of our alumni are not acquainted with, is the achievement of state approval for our training program for superintendents and principals of Pennsylvania. Only four other institutions in the state enjoy this official recognition. Bucknell's credits are accepted also in New York and New Jersey toward administrative certificates. The Summer School offers a well selected group of courses for persons desiring superintendent's commission or principal's certificate.

GRADUATE PROGRAM EXPANDED

With the beginning of the college year 1934-35, the University initiated residence work of both graduate and undergraduate grade at the Junior College in Wilkes-Barre. Large classes in graduate work have been conducted throughout the year. A new ruling provides that the master's degree may be earned by two summer's work on the campus and the equivalent of courses taken at the graduate center in the Junior College. A large number of persons in the field of education particularly have begun work for the master's degree.

WRITE FOR "WHO'S WHO" BLANKS

During the past two weeks hundreds of blanks have been returned by Bucknell alumni in the field of education who desire to appear in the forthcoming "Bucknell Who's Who in Education". Undoubtedly many Bucknell teachers have been missed. All those teachers or school administrators who have not received information blanks will confer a favor by writing Frank G. Davis, '11, of the department of education, who will be glad to send the necessary blanks.

THE YEAR IN DRAMATICS

At the moment of writing this brief note on the activities of the college dramatics organizations, Cap and Dagger and Theta Alpha Phi, the production of The Late Christopher Bean is imminent, the play chosen this year for presentation at the annual spring festival.

Elmer Rice, William Shakespeare, Sidney Howard and Lauren Williams are the dramatists represented in this year's program. The annual "Demmie" play, He, by Alfred Saviar, must not be overlooked as part of a lively "season". Elmer Rice's Counsellor at Law was a success from the word, "Go", the result of excellent direction by Lauren Williams, '35, and complete mastery of the title rôle by Fred Erdman, '36. Shakespeare's Macbeth was undoubtedly the most difficult play Cap and Dagger has ever produced. It became one of the significant achievements of this year's Artist Course programs. All of the rôles were played by students, with Madeline Berg, '35, as Lady Macbeth, carrying off the honors in acting, and Carl Huus, '36, as Macbeth, running a close second. This play was excellently "mounted" with effective sets, costumes, and music provided by members of the University Symphony Orchestra. Since the three performances in February, a special shortened version of the play has been presented in six high schools in central Pennsylvania.

An experienced cast and capable student director will present Sidney Howard's adaptation of René Fanchois Preney Garde à la Peinture, The Late Christopher Bean, before this article is published. This play shows all the signs of ranking with such former productions as Outward Bound and The Queen's Husband.

The most unusual production Cap and Dagger anticipates this year is the commencement play, Whole Cloth Tales, written by Lauren Williams of the class of 1935. Rehearsals are now in progress for this event. Mr. Williams, having already distinguished himself as a director and as an actor of parts, now reaches for the laurels of authorship.

Ten Big Reunions--June 8

Fifty Year Class

At the invitation of the University the Golden Anniversary Class — 1885 — fifty years out of college — will hold their reunion as the guests of Bucknell on Saturday, June 8, 1935. Five of the six living members of the graduating class of fourteen members have accepted the invitation to return to the campus on Alumni Day. Several ladies of the Institute Class of 1885 are also expected to be present, also as guests of the University.

Forty-Five Years Ago

The Class of 1890 with five surviving members is expected to be represented by at least two and possibly three members.

Fortieth Year Reunion

Two members of the Class of 1895, Drs. N. F. Davis and F. M. Simpson, members of the Bucknell faculty will entertain their classmates on June 8. Eight to ten members of the class, with wives, and families are expected to be present.

Thirty-fifth Anniversary

The Hotel Lewisburger has been reserved for the reunion of 1900, where the luncheon will be served at noon on Saturday, June 8. Twenty to thirty members of the class and guests are expected. Class President, Edward Bell and Secretary, John Kuhns have been hard at work writing letters and arousing enthusiasm for the occasion.

Thirty Years Ago

For "pep" and class spirit no reunion in recent years has surpassed the twenty-fifth anniversary celebration staged by 1905 just five years ago. We expect to see and hear from 1905 again this year.

The Quarter Century Class

President, Paul J. Abraham of 1910 has arranged for the Class Luncheon to celebrate twenty five years since graduation at The Hotel Lewisburger. Active interest in the affair is being shown by many members of the class. Thirty to forty including families are expected.

The Twenty Year Class

Chairman, Clair Groover, busy Lewisburg attorney, has appointed a committee of seven members of 1915 to "drum up trade" for the twentieth reunion of the class. The Committee members are: John Hedge of Windber, Edward Pangburn of Philadelphia, William Windsor of Milton, Professor George Irland of the Bucknell Faculty, Miss Emma Dillon of Trenton, Miss Isabelle Bond of Williamsport, and Mrs. Ramona Lenington Davies of White Plains, N. Y. The luncheon will be held at The Lewisburg Inn, corner of Market and Front Sts.

Fifteenth Celebration

One of the largest classes ever to graduate from Bucknell, 1920, the last of the "War Classes" will reunite on June 8. Definite plans are to be announced by mail to the class members.

Tenth Anniversary

President, Ed Davies of 1925, has arranged for the Class Luncheon at The Dining Room, a small but attractive new restaurant two doors from the Hotel Lewisburger on Market Street. Notices have been mailed to all members of the class.

The Baby Reunion

President Henry Wadsworth reports increasing interest in the five year reunion of his class, 1930. Luncheon will be held on the Quadrangle at The College Inn.

SENIOR CLASS

LAUNCHES FUND

The 1935 Alumni Fund will be launched early in June with a "direct by mail" folder to all alumni announcing the project for the fifth consecutive year. During the past four years of voluntary giving on the part of the alumni to this Fund the annual record of gifts has been compiled prior to Commencement. This year, due to extenuating circumstances, the annual record will not be completed until the Fall. Letters from Class Agents are expected to follow the first announcement by about three weeks in order that every alumnus may have a direct personal relationship to the fund through a class representative.

The announcement now being printed details the results of alumni fund giving during the past five years and presents the needs for the current year.

The first gift to the current year's fund came early in May, from the Class of 1935. This gift of $1,000.00 is a direct bequest to the Alumni Loan project, operated by the Fund to aid Seniors toward graduation with small loans. The entire Class Roster receives credit as donors to the Fund. The names will appear in our September number of The Bucknell Alumni Monthly.

BETHWACKMENT OF BOONDOGGLE

C. Willard Smith

Our alumni may sometimes wonder what happens to a professor "on leave of absence". Academic mystery attends the phrase. The college catalogue refuses to explain, for it presents nothing more than an equally obscure constellation of asterisks which the roving eye may pick up again at the foot of the page accompanied by the subtle remark, "On leave of Absence", to prove that the reader is back again where he started.

After having read and enjoyed Dr. Leo L. Rockwell's '07 essay, The Vocabulary of Bethwackment, in the April, 1935, issue of the Michigan Alumnus Quarterly Review, I have nevertheless come to the conclusion that "leave of absence" may mean, specifically, permission to be present. As most of our alumni know, Dr. Rockwell is an insatiable philologist. His absence from duties in Lewisburg this year has permitted him to be present at one of the really momentous events in American, if not international, scholarship: the editing of the Early Modern English Dictionary, under the direction of Professor Charles C. Fries, (Bucknell, '09). It is in Professor Frie's headquarters (for a veritable army of scholars) at the University of Michigan that philological excitement runs high. Dr. Rockwell's essay, The Vocabulary of Bethwackment proves my phrase, "Philological excitement", to be little more than an understatement for downright linguistic revelry. That such a state of mind may exist, even for philologists, has been assured by the recent popular interest in the arrival of little "Boondoggle".

Bethwackment, I have discovered isn't the name of a man, nor of a colonial domain on the Ohio River; it is a generic term expressive of the ancient and honorable craft of bumfiddle, an activity of the human race which Dr. Rockwell has discovered to have been nothing less than a fine art during the sixteenth century. While it is possible for the present generation of men to lam, sock, crack, bump (off), paste, smack, and wallop, the pugnacious enthusiasm of the sixteenth century indulged in such fine distinctions of thumpery as to baste, belam, besoop, bethump, bethwack, bumfeg, bumfiddle, clapperclaw, douse, firk, gag, jut, lam, bump, ribroast, slat, ewaddle, thwack, tick, wherret, whop, yerk, and a score of others.

Dr. Rockwell's essay is a partial report of his editorial activities over the three-letter word lam. The result of such activity is only partly philological; its rich reward is the discovery of the nature of the ancestors who are in our blood.

We present the photographs of two outstanding members of the Class of 1913, the first, Mr. Earl Morgan Richards, Chief Industrial Engineer of the Republic Steel Company at Youngstown, Ohio and Alumni Trustee of Bucknell University, nominated by The Alumni Association in 1934, and the second, Mr. Berkeley V. Hastings, insurance and banking executive of Milton, Pa., the 1935 nominee of The Association for the position of Alumni Trustee. The nomination of Mr. Hastings will come before the annual meeting of The Association on Alumni Day, Saturday, June 8, as the only candidate for the current year.

THE BIG NATIONAL GAMBLE

L. F. Lybarger, Jr., Esq., '28, of Mifflinburg is co-author with his father of "The Big National Gamble", a recently published book from the Bayard Press at Williamsport, Pa. The book is an expose of the financial operation of the United States Government and a suggested remedy for the money ills of the nation and the world. It has been most favorably reviewed in leading publications and has the endorsement of many national liberal leaders. It is a layman's book dealing with a subject too often obscured by technical and financial language beyond the grasp of the man in the street. It is written clearly, concisely, and is easily readable. The book is strictly nonpolitical and is based largely on facts taken from Government statistics.

EMMA BOWEN WILLIAMS

Mrs. Emma Bowen Williams of Peckville, near Scranton, died at the Mid-Valley Hospital at Blakely on October 7, 1934. She was eighty-six years of age. Her death was due to injuries resulting from a fall in July at her home.

Mrs. Williams was born in Blakely township, October 25, 1848, the daughter of Benjamin and Lucina Williams, and a direct descendant of Samuel Calender, a soldier of the Revolutionary War, who settled at Blakely in 1800. Her late husband, Rev. D. J. Williams, was twice pastor of the Blakely Baptist Church, and held many pastorates in other parts of Pennsylvania and New York state.

She received her early education in the Blakely schools and graduated with honors from Bucknell University. Later she taught school at West Scranton, becoming assistant principal. She became a member of the Blakely Baptist Church in 1860 and at the time of her death she had been an active and honored member for nearly seventy-four years.

Edmund Wells of Beaufort, S. C., was the recipient of the degree of Doctor of Divinity from Furman University during the autumnal session of the South Carolina Baptist State Convention. Rev. Wells is the oldest living alumnus of Crozer Seminary, where he graduated in 1872 after leaving Bucknell.

1872

JOHN BALLENTINE

In the death of Dr. John Ballentine, father of Professor Floyd G. Ballentine, '99, Bucknell University has lost another of her grand old men. He passed away on February 14 at his home in Clarion, Pa., where for almost half a century he had been associated as teacher and vice principal with the Clarion State Normal School.

Dr. Ballentine came to this country from Ballymena, Ireland, where he was born in 1848. He was of Scotch-Irish Presbyterian stock. The journey to this country came when he was 16 years old. With him came his brother George Ballentine, and both landed eventually at Lewisburg where they became students at Bucknell, then known as the University at Lewisburg. They had little or no schooling, and began their work in the Bucknell Academy, the preparatory department of the University. Both subsequently earned their way through college, and George was graduated with the Class of 1871, John finishing a year later in the Class of 1872, which furnished so many able teachers and ministers.

It was during Dr. John Ballentine's college days that Bucknell started her first student publication, The College Herald. This began in 1870, and in 1872 John Ballentine was one of two business managers who nursed along the infant paper.

In September following his graduation, John Ballentine took up the teaching task for which he had prepared himself. He became head of a little school at East Smithfield, Pa. Three months later, on Christmas Day, 1872, he was married at North Moreland by his brother George Ballentine, who had in the meantime become a minister. The bride was Miss Hattie B. Gerould, of East Smithfield, who had been a member of the Class of 1874 of the Bucknell Institute, the Bucknell preparatory school for girls.

In October, 1873, Mr. Ballentine became a teacher at the Keystone Academy, at Factoryville, Pa., where he taught mathematics and ancient languages under Principal John H. Harris, '69, who was later to return to his Alma Mater as president and through 30 years of distinguished service lift Bucknell to a high plane among the colleges of Pennsylvania. For nine years Mr. Ballentine labored at Factoryville and during that time he took up theological studies and on August 30, 1877, was ordained as a Baptist minister and took charge of the Benton Baptist Church, for which congregation he had been preaching since he had become a licentiate in 1873. He continued his Benton ministry until 1882, at which time he left the Keystone Academy, in March, to take a position as teacher of Greek in the Colgate Academy at Hamilton, N. Y. This position he held for more than five years, when, in May, 1887, he moved to Clarion, Pa., to become teacher of ancient languages at the Clarion State Normal School.

RETIRED IN 1920

It was with this institution that Dr. Ballentine spent the major part of his days in education. The school had just been opened by the State as a normal school and Dr. Ballentine was one of the men who had much to do with its growth and development. He became vice principal of the institution, although he did not cease to teach. In 1920, when he reached the age limit for service in normal schools, he was retired as Vice Principal Emeritus.

In recognition of his outstanding services as an educator, Bucknell University conferred upon him, in 1892, the honorary degree Ph.D..

Never once did he fail to return to the five-year reunions of his college class. Of that Class of '72, which contained 21 men at graduation, only two are left: Professor Emeritus William C. Bartol, and Mr. John H. Wingert, both of Lewisburg.

Dr. Ballentine was twice married, and is survived by his second wife and four children. They are Mrs. Miriam Haskell, of Clarion, Mrs. Kathryn Johnson, of Sidman, Mr. Harold Ballentine, of Coatesville, and Professor Floyd G. Ballentine, of Lewisburg. Dr. Ballentine was buried at Clarion on Saturday, February 16.

MARY A. McLAUGHLIN

Miss Mary A. McLaughlin, died in December, at her home in Lewisburg after a six months' illness. She was a lifelong resident of Lewisburg, having been born here May 13, 1859. Surviving are two sisters, Cora and Fannie, with whom she lived.

1883

Dr. Spenser B. Meeser, retired pastor and former teacher at Crozer Seminary was the guest of honor at the January 31 luncheon meeting of the Western Pennsylvania Alumni Club at Pittsburgh. Dr. Meeser now resides at 1164 Shady Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

1885

JULIA ATKINS FAW

The friends and classmates of Julia Atkins Faw will be interested to know that her death occurred about one year ago at her home in Marietta, Ga. By some oversight the notice of her death was not published in The Alumni Monthly at the time it was reported.

MARY STONER GRETZINGER

The death of Mrs. Mary Stoner Gretzinger occurred at her home in Lewisburg on December 17, 1934. She was born at Hummelstown, Pa., on April 24, 1867, and was the daughter of William and Margaret Stoner. She attended the public schools at Hummelstown and later enrolled in the Bucknell Institute from which she graduated in 1887. On Feb. 11, 1891, she was married to William Gretzinger who held the position as registrar at Bucknell for twenty years, a position which he held at the time of his death in 1909.

For two years before her marriage Mrs. Gretzinger taught in the public schools of Watsontown. In 1910 she became associated with the university when she taught for a short period of time in the institute, and later she joined the Library Staff. She took an active part in the affairs of the college and the town, being a member of the D. A. R., the Bucknell Campus Club, Bucknell Alumnae Club and was a patroness of Pi Beta Phi sorority.

Surviving are the following children: Mrs. William S. English, '15, of Newark, N. J., and William C. Gretzinger, '27, of Perryville, Md. One grandson and the following brothers and sisters also survive: Mrs. R. L. Melick, of Williamsport; Mrs. H. E. McCosh, of Roanoke, Va., and W. Bruce Stoner, of Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Anna Brown Clipman, the wife of Reverend William H. Clipman, died at her home at 50 Brown Street on February 21.

Mrs. Clipman had been failing in health the last four or five years, but she had no serious illness until February 12 when a heart disorder became evident, and later proved fatal.

The Reverend Clipman is the pastor of the First Presbyterian Church at McAlisterville.

JOHN T. HYATT

John T. Hyatt, former vice-consul to Cuba, and prominent lawyer, died at his home in Jersey Shore, Wednesday evening, January 9, following a year's illness from a heart condition.

He was the son of Dr. Pulaski Hyatt, former consul to Cuba, who is the author of a book, "Cuba: Its Resources and Opportunities."

The deceased served as vice-consul to Cuba from 1895 to 1897. In 1904 he took up residence in Jersey Shore, engaging in the practice of law. He is a past president of the Lycoming Bar Association, and has been admitted to practice in the Superior and Supreme Courts of Pennsylvania and in the United States District and Circuit Courts.

During the World War he was a member of the Pennsylvania State Safety Commission, and chairman of the Jersey Shore Public Safety Committee, being placed in charge of the Four-Minute speakers of that district. He was also in charge of the secret service department of that section.

Funeral services were held Saturday afternoon, January 12. Interment was made in Wildwood Cemetery, at Williamsport.

ADAM M. WYANT

The death of former Congressman Adam M. Wyant of Greensburg occurred at his home on January 6, 1935. He had been ill more than two months with a critical cancer condition.

Adam M. Wyant was 65 years of age, having been born near Kittanning, Armstrong County, September 15, 1869. He received his early education in the public schools of Armstrong County. Later, he attended the Reid Institute in Clarion County and the Mt. Pleasant Institute in Westmoreland. He taught one term of school in his home township before he was 16 years of age. He also attended Bucknell University and later, in 1895, graduated from the University of Chicago. Several years ago Bucknell conferred the degree of doctor of laws on him. Mr. Wyant was a teacher in the Mt. Pleasant Institute at the time he was elected principal of the Greensburg Public Schools. He had been a powerful football player on the Bucknell team as well as with the University of Chicago. At that time teachers played along with students and he was in the lineup at the Mt. Pleasant Institute. The Greensburg Athletic Association supported a great professional football team in those days and the management of that team determined to have Adam Wyant in their lineup. He was not only brought to Greensburg as a football player but was elected principal of the Greensburg public schools in 1896. It was during his incumbency as principal of the local schools that Greensburg became a separate district and then he became the first superintendent that the town schools had. While filling that position he also read law and took post graduate work at what was then the Western University of Pennsylvania.

Shortly after his admission to the bar in 1902, he opened a law office in Monessen, then an infant town. He was an indefatigable worker and soon built up a large law practice in that rapidly growing borough.

He was a member of the Allegheny county bar as well as the several state courts and federal courts. About 1904, he formed a law partnership with the late Congressman Edward E. Robbins. At that time Mr. Robbins was not in congress but had been a member at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war but had resigned to go to the front. He had made several unsuccessful attempts at re-election and succeeded in time to be the county's congressman during the World war. Mr. Robbins was re-elected, but died during his second term. Some time after his death, Mr. Wyant entered into a partnership with Paul J. Abraham, '10, that being the present firm alignment.

High editorial tribute was paid to Mr. Wyant by the press of his county and state at the time of his death. The leading editorial in "The Greensburg Tribune" which praised Mr. Wyant as a true steward of the people was from the pen of Mr. Errol H. Derby, '20, City Editor of the paper.

Rev. Frank I. Sigmund, pastor of the Mills Baptist Church, Pemberton, N. J., celebrated with his church folks during the past year the 170th anniversary of the founding of the church. Rev. Sigmund has been at Mills since 1920.

LOREN M. RENO

With the passing of Loren M. Reno on March 5, 1935, at Victoria, Brazil, Bucknell and the Christian world suffered the loss of one of its noblest sons and most valiant workers. Reverend Reno died at the age of 63 years of lung complications after an illness of seven weeks. He graduated from Bucknell in 1900, and from Crozer Theological Seminary in 1904. Reverend Reno was sent to Brazil by the Southern Baptist Convention. There, in 1904, he founded The Victoria Mission, later the Collegio Americano Baptista, of which he had charge until his death. For thirty years he and his wife, who survives him, labored unremittingly among the natives, establishing churches and schools, both in Victoria and in the Brazilian interior. His three daughters were born in Brazil, and all attended Bucknell, Margarida in the class of '27, Fern and Carrie in the class of '30. Margarida Reno will carry on her fathers work as director of the Mission.

Before his death Reverend Reno realized many of his most cherished plans for the community, a new and beautiful First Baptist Church in Victoria and three other new church buildings in the suburbs — the college he had founded, vigorous and ably directed, well housed, with its courses of study officially recognized by the Government. He had also seen established in the interior many churches and more than eighty schools.

Beloved alike by those of high and low estate from the dignitaries of the state government to the beggars in the streets whom he had befriended, Reverend Reno's loss was keenly felt by Victoria and all of Brazil. It was carnival time in Victoria when death came to him, but the carnival ceased and the people among whom he had spent his fruitful life stopped all else to pay him honor.

Bucknell and his many friends here were shocked and grieved at his untimely passing.

The disappearance of John S. Stephens of Palo Alto, Calif., in September was the cause for much anxiety on the part of his family and no small amount of publicity. Mr. Stephens had been hunting in the mountains and became lost. He wandered for two days along the bed of a stream before finding any habitation and means of reporting that he was "still present".

1902

RAYMOND GREENE

Through the death of Raymond Greene, who died of sudden heart attack at his home in Lewistown, Pa., on Friday, March 15, Bucknell loses an active alumnus and loyal friend.

Mr. Raymond Greene was engaged in the tanning and leather business with his brother, Mr. Edward McVitty Greene, '95, now a trustee of Bucknell. They represent the third generation to carry on an extensive leather industry.

The following one brother and three sisters survive him: Edward M. Greene, '95 of Huntingdon; Miss Nora M. Greene, '94 with whom Mr. Greene had resided at their home, 439 South Main Street, for several years; Mrs. G. K. Wattson, '94 of Mercedes, Tex.; Mrs. Hugh Hamilton of Schenectady, N. Y., also a daughter, Miss Eleanor A. Greene.

CHARLES R. MYERS

Rev. Charles R. Myers died at the St. John's Riverside Hospital, Yonkers, N. Y., at noon, February 28. He has held many educational and religious posts in this area. His last was at the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer in Yonkers.

Born in Lewisburg fifty years ago, Dr. Myers received his education at Bucknell and Susquehanna University. From 1907 to 1909 he served as principal of Pottsgrove High School. Following his ordination to the ministry in 1909, he was pastor of several parishes in central Pennsylvania. In 1924 he became president of Hartwick Seminary at Oneonta, N. Y. He remained there for five years, at the end of which time he came to Yonkers.

He was pastor of the First Lutheran Church of Mt. Carmel, and later at Gordon.

Surviving the clergyman are his wife, Mrs. Edith and their two sons, Frederick and Paul.

1935

DO NOT READ THIS LETTER

If you have given to the Bucknell Alumni Fund since 1930!

S. M. DAVENPORT, M. D.

Kingston, Pa.

Dear Fellow Bucknellian:-

This is, of necessity, a form letter from the President of your Alumni Association but I trust that you will consider it as a personal note.

Your Executive Committee in recent special session approved plans for the immediate launching of the 1935 Alumni Fund to meet an emergency situation caused by the drastic curtailment of our operating budget by the University.

During the past several years we have been subsidized in the operation of our Alumni Fund by the University in order that all alumni gifts might go directly into our Loan Fund. With the elimination of all subsidy for operating expenses, salaries, equipment and supplies, the Association is left almost entirely on its own.

Your Committee and officers feel that our programs are too important and vital to be sacrificed at this time and that all alumni work should not only be continued but expanded where possible.

We need the support of all alumni now as never before and this special letter comes to you as a member of that great body of alumni who have not taken an active part in our affairs in recent years.

Your check will help to bring you The Bucknell Alumni Monthly, foster and support alumni clubs, class reunions, Homecoming, Commencement, The Loan Fund, and the many other varied activities of our office and Association.

You are no longer required to pay alumni dues or subscribe to the magazine. One gift to the Alumni Fund covers all. The amount of the gift is entirely voluntary. We have received checks ranging from $50.00 to $5.00.

May we not add your name to the growing list of your own classmates who have already given evidence of their faith in our Association. Send your check to me or to Lewisburg in the envelope recently mailed you. No check is too small or too large.

Most cordially,

Signed

S. M. Davenport, '16, President

The General Alumni Association of Bucknell Univ.

Editor's Corner

A slight chill in the air on this rainy day in August brings thoughts of the approaching HOMECOMING and the football season incident to the Autumn of the year. The ink is not dry on this issue of your magazine with the story of Commencement before we are thinking and planning for Homecoming. Tempus does flit!

Since Commencement there have been many happenings in alumni business affairs. A letter from President Dav- enport to more than five thousand Bucknellians on the opposite page explains part of the shake up and urges those who of late years have not shared in the support of the Alumni Association to "lend a hand".

Would it be too much to expect every Bucknellian to share in the support of an Association that has done many things for the college since 1859? The record is a proud one. The test now is how proud are the alumni of their own handiwork.

More than three hundred alumni helped to make Commencement one of the outstanding programs of the past several years. In fact the entire program was built and executed by alumni and the Alumni Association. Even the Commencement speaker was an alumnus and, mirabile dictu, all five candidates for honorary degrees were alumni. It was an alumni Com- mencement !

We have often been asked about alumni on the Board of Trustees of the University and the Faculty. Here are the figures:

Total Board Membership 31 Alumni 18
Faculty 90 Alumni 38

Not to mention the various admin- istrative officers of the University who are alumni such as Dean Riven- burg, '97, Junior College Director Eisenhauer, '05, Summer Session Di- rector Davis, '11, Secretary of the Faculty Ballentine, '99, Treasurer Ranck, '16, Museum Curator Davis, '95, Observatory Director Gold, '18, University Physician Fowle, '20, and Registrar Holter, '24.

Now that we are turning this line of chatter into an O. O. McIntyre recital of prominent names we pay tribute to those alumni who are today faculty members and who lead the list as printed in the college catalog. This listing is by seniority of service and eleven of the first twelve names are those of loyal Bucknell alumni who have given years of devotion and service to Alma Mater. A salute to these alumni:

- NELSON DAVIS, '95
- CHARLES LINDEMANN, '98
- FRANK SIMPSON, '95

There are alumni numbered in the thousands who love Bucknell but who have not been articulate about their devotion in recent years. Two avenues are now opened to these sons and daughters of the college "On the Hill" to give evidence of their loyalty. The first and most vital to the welfare of the Alumni Association is The Alumni Fund. Hundreds of checks have come to Lewisburg in answer to our first appeal for support. Thou- sands are needed. The size of the check is not material—it is the spirit behind the gift that makes it valuable. The other means of cooperation with the Association is the Selective Ad- missions program launched with our great nation wide broadcast on March 16, 1935. Interest a prospective stu- dent in selecting Bucknell as Alma Mater. Now is the time to talk with the next generation of college men and women as the high school gradu- ates of your own home town discuss their educational futures. Your advice and influence are far more valuable to these youngsters than you know. They respect you for you have known the experiences of college to which they look forward. Consult with them and tell them of Bucknell.

The two programs of the alumni— The Fund and Admissions—both pay high dividends in satisfaction and re- freshment of the spirit. Your check to your own association's financial salvation—The Bucknell Alumni Fund —will give you in return the feeling of once again "belonging" and doing your part in the great work of educa- tion. As you send a young man or woman to your own Alma Mater your own youth is renewed and your pro- tege becomes forever your debtor and friend.

YOU are challenged to again become a part of YOUR OWN BUCKNELL!

ALUMNI CRISIS

Fund Launched Now to Keep Association Alive as University Withdraws Support

AS a result of a special meeting of the Executive Committee of The General Alumni Association of Bucknell University, Inc., held on July 14, 1935, the current presentation of The Bucknell Alumni Fund for 1935 was authorized.

Since 1930 when the Alumni Fund was first launched to take the place of the former plan of alumni dues and subscriptions to The Bucknell Alumni Monthly the annual presentation to all alumni has taken place in the Spring with the final report for the year being made at Commencement. Because of unusual and critical conditions the present appeal is made during the Summer months of July and August and the calendar year will be followed as a fiscal period.

The need for gifts to The Alumni Fund is urgent at this time because of the discontinuance of an operating budget by the University as of July 1, 1935.

A special appeal to all alumni in the form of a blue folder reviewing the history of the Alumni Fund and the needs for the future was mailed to more than six thousand alumni on July 25, 1935. This will be followed by letters from Alumni Association President Davenport, '16, Treasurer Joseph M. Wolfe, '89, and Alumni Secretary Stoughton, '24.

Clubs and Classes

New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, South Jersey, and Harrisburg alumni clubs are the leaders in sponsoring the Alumni Fund this year as special club projects. Other clubs are expected to follow the leaders in urging their membership to contribute to The Fund. Class agents will further the project as usual by letters to class rosters in an endeavor to win the annual citation to the class with the largest percentage of members as contributors.

Receipts from the present 1935 Fund campaign will be used largely for the support of the work of The Alumni Association in the organization of new alumni clubs, sponsorship of older clubs, class organization, The Bucknell Alumni Monthly, class reunions, Homecoming, Commencement, and the other many and varied activities of the organization.

With the discontinuance of University support The Alumni Association is left almost entirely upon its own to shift for itself. The decision of The Executive Committee was unanimous in that the work of the past years should not be sacrificed or curtailed but that every effort should be made to raise funds at once through the already well established channels of The Alumni Fund.

The drastic and sudden curtailment of subsidy from the University found the Alumni Association entirely without funds so that the Summer campaign was an immediate necessity if the Association was to be kept alive.

Gifts to the Alumni Fund will be acknowledged through these columns with class percentages and club quotas showing the relative standing of all groups.

EDITORIAL

WITH the withdrawal of University support from The General Alumni Association a crisis in alumni affairs was reached in July at the beginning of the fiscal year. The Association was without funds for the operation of its office, Alumni Fund, club or class programs, travel, and salaries.

The Executive Committee in special session was faced with the necessity of launching The Alumni Fund at once in order to preserve the results of the work of past years in every field and the safeguarding of plans for the future of the Association. The special appeal for funds now being made through The Alumni Fund was the only course of action open for The Association.

The editor respectfully calls the attention of his readers to "The Editor's Corner" on page one. Here in an informal manner we are able to talk with the alumni. Naturally, this month we write of finances and ask for your cooperation first by way of your checks and second through the enlistment of new students for the University. Both programs are vital. Rather than write at editorial length on these two subjects, which could easily fill several pages of fine type, we have chosen to make our presentation in what we believe to be the most effective manner—namely through a personal talk with each alumnus. As you read "The Editor's Corner" may you consider that your Secretary is talking with you personally and asking in a friendly manner for your cooperation and support.

AL STOUGHTON HONORED

BY NATIONAL ASSOCIATION

By Harry R. Warfel, '20

Alumni Secretary, 1923-1924

When I turned the keys of the Alumni Office over to Al Stoughton, '24, on the day of his graduation, it was common opinion that his energy and broad smile would carry him forward to the very top of his chosen profession. That our prediction was not merely a friendly wish, is now proved by the announcement that Al has been elected Vice-President of the National American Alumni Council, an association of Alumni Secretaries, Magazine Editors and Fund Directors, a group of some five hundred men and women representing the leading American colleges.

Nor is this the first tribute to Al's ability. He has won several editorial prizes for the best cover, the best spot news story, and all that sort of thing. He makes an old duffer like me wonder just what happened when I was in office. All I can think of is this: there were no prizes in Leo Rockwell's or my day. Maybe we were good enough and didn't need prizes. Anyway, the fact Al gets so many still proves he's better than all the rest, even if his predecessors try to take a little credit for themselves, too. But, fooling aside, orchids for Al, the best of the lot and probably the best loved of them all. (Printed by the Ed. under violent protest).

CLASS OF 1935 NOW ALUMNI

167 Graduate June 12 and Hear New State Superintendent of Public Instruction Deliver Address

THE eighty-fifth annual Commencement of Bucknell University was observed with fitting exercises on June 10, 1935 when bachelors degrees were awarded to one hundred and sixty-seven members of the Class of 1935. Twenty masters degrees were also awarded along with the usual prizes and citations. The outdoor celebration marked the eleventh consecutive open air program.

The recognition of five outstanding alumni in the presentation of honorary degrees and the selection of an alumnus as Commencement Speaker gave a preponderant "alumni angle" to the entire program.

Dr. Lester Kelly Ade, '21, recently appointed Superintendent of Public Instruction for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, returned to his Alma Mater on June 12, less than two weeks after receiving his appointment from Governor George H. Earle to head the state school system of more than two million pupils. The return to Bucknell of Superintendent Ade was for the purpose of delivering the Graduation Address and receiving the accolade of an honorary degree from Bucknell. The appointment of Dr. Ade to his post in the cabinet of the Governor was confirmed unanimously by the State Senate. He succeeds Dr. James N. Rule. Dr. Ade in his first public address after his elevation to the state post dealt with "A Broader Conception of Education".

"Knowledge is good and culture is good, but the highest excellence is the power to think straight and to the point," Dr. Ade told the 187 candidates for degrees in his address.

"The aim of education is to produce a man, a master of himself, one capable of initiating his own acts, responsible for his own acts, and who is able to discern and assimilate the ideas which he accepts so that whatever he says, thinks, or does, really comes from him alone. Education aims to enlarge and refine the mind, induce keen perception, and above all an appetite for knowledge. This calls for action plus reflection," Dr. Ade continued.

He recalled the educational philosophies of the greatest teachers; Aristotle, Plato, Rousseau, and Spencer and he added purely American ideas of the place and function of education in society, to discover that the evaluation of education qualifications revolved around two outstanding tendencies: "a back and forth shift between those who stress the social purposes of education, and an emphasis upon education as preparation for adult life."

"The period of your youth and adolescence has been coincident with the profoundest changes in human thinking in the history of the world.... We are now going toward a philosophy which may rid us of the fetters which have bound our political and social thinking."

Dr. Ade made a plea for liberalism in education in explaining that there is a gap between a human being who is merely alive and one who is really alive which is far wider than the gap between the genus homo and the other primates although it can be bridged much more easily and quickly by one who understands the arts of design and construction.

"A liberal education is not to be confused with mere attendance at school or college, or with the possession of a certificate to that effect, still less with formal instruction of any kind, although it may and usually does make great use of all these."

What Dr. Ade described as the "insulated life" typified by a narrowness of sympathy, narrowness of understanding, and narrowness of conviction, has no other escape except over the bridge made possible by a liberal education. A new education, working for mutual understanding between nations, races, classes, and all natural groupings leads away from this "insulated life" and tends toward a more enlightened and progressive economic and social development.

"The crowning value of university service is in the free and vigorous intellectual atmosphere which it provides. A spirit of tolerance based on reason is in the air. Dogmas are courageously examined, compared, attacked, defended. Of course, it would be quite erroneous to believe that the members of a university are free from prejudice. Such a condition would be impossible, perhaps even undesirable. But if the academic community is in a healthy condition, there should be among its permanent members intelligent men with assorted prejudices and with a tolerant view. Thus the student may have a wide choice of opinions.

In seeking to resolve the function of a university toward its undergraduates, Dr. Ade continued, "A university education should serve to vitalize the personality of the student by bringing him in contact at every stage of his training with the things that matter most in human life, and so sending him forth in 'high condition' both of mind and body, to deal vigorously and skillfully with whatever vicissitudes await him in this unpredictable universe, free and able to form his own decisions, to govern his own reactions and to improve—perhaps even to acquire his own technique.

Award of Degrees

Following Dr. Ade's address the symphony orchestra played the overture "Iphigenia in Aulis" by Gluck.

The most important part of the program to the seniors, awarding of degrees in course, was a highlight of the exercises. Degrees were awarded first to Bachelors of Arts, then to bachelors of Science in the following order: Biology, Commerce and Finance, Education, Chemical Engineering, Civil Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Mechanical Engineering.

Two are Summa Cum Laude

Two students, Thomas Fagley and Mary Wilma Massey were graduated summa cum laude. Gertrude Carey, Harry Wynn, and Irving Silber received magna cum laude honors, while Walton Geiger, Toimi Kyllomen, Grace Moore, Margaret Noll, Leighton Peters, and Leonhardt Scheffler were awarded cum laude mention.

Another selection by the symphony orchestra, "Romance" by Sibelius, was followed by awarding of honorary and professional degrees to Dr. Ade, '21, Professor Owens, '80, Rev. Edward Carroll Condict, '08, Mrs. Margaret Tustin O'Hara, I '83, John Davis, '02, Karl Krug, '22, Charles Rishell, and Clair Halligan, '23, and Freeman Tingley, '22.

The senior prizes, three of which went to Mary Wilma Massey, were awarded amid the applause of spectators. Following the singing of the Alma Mater, the invoking of the benediction, pronounced by President Emeritus, Emory W. Hunt, and the playing of the recessional, the class of '35 became alumni of Bucknell.

ANNUAL DINNER

The time-honored tradition of "Corporation Dinner" was observed at the close of the formal graduation exercises. President Rainey presided to introduce the five members of the faculty who in turn presented again the candidates for honorary degrees as they had earlier introduced them on the Commencement platform. Professor Charles M. Bond presented Dr. E. Carrol Condict, '08; Dean R. H. Rivenburg, '97, presented Dr. Margaret Tustin O'Hara, I '83; Dr. John H. Eisenhauer, '05, presented Dr. John Davis, '02; Professor H. W. Coleman presented Dr. Lester K. Ade, '21; and President Rainey, acting for Professor F. M. Simpson, '95, presented Dr. William G. Owens, '80. Each of the recipients reminisced about undergraduate days and experiences in an informal manner. The President also introduced Hon. J. Warren Davis, '96, Vice-Chairman of the Board of Trustees, and Mr. Berkley V. Hastings, '13, Alumni Trustee candidate of the General Alumni Association.

NEW YORKERS DINE

The Park Central Hotel in New York was the scene of a lively Bucknell Dinner Party and Alumni Club meeting on July 10, 1935. President W. Cline Lowther, '14, presided at the business session in the Tower Club rooms of the hotel following the dinner and floor show. The club plans to resume a regular schedule of luncheons and dinners in the Fall. A committee was appointed to draft resolutions of cooperation with the General Alumni Association in The Alumni Fund program. By special action of the club the Park Central was named as the official Bucknell alumni headquarters for a period of one year. Plans were discussed for an alumni banquet and dance at the time of the Bucknell-New York University football game on November 2 in New York.

SEVEN CLASS REUNIONS

FIVE graduates and one non-graduate of the fifty year Class —1885— ran away with all honors among reunion classes on percentage of living members in attendance. Only two of the surviving graduates were not present for the Golden Anniversary. Those in attendance were Carl C. Law of Pittsburgh, Dr. Samuel Bolton of Philadelphia, Rev. J. C. Currin of Sarasota, Fla., and Hon. Charles Herman of Selinsgrove. Mr. Charles Hunter of Greensburg, a non-graduate of the class, was also in attendance as were Miss Laura Church of Washington, D. C., Miss Anna Van Gundy and Miss Emily Clingan, both of Lewisburg, all graduates of the Institute Class of 1885.

The other classes holding reunions were 1895, 1900, 1910, 1915, 1925, and 1930.

Second Honors to 1895

Next in percentage of living members in attendance was the forty year class — 1895 — with exactly half of the members present at the luncheon held in the Botany Building. The reuners were entertained by classmates N. F. Davis, and F. M. Simpson, members of the Bucknell faculty.

Third Prize to 1910

Twenty-five of the eighty-five living members attended the twenty-fifth reunion of 1910. Class Reporter J. G. Sholl submits the following interesting account of the reunion :

SILVER JUBILEE OF CLASS OF 1910

Not since the Freshman Banquet at the Park Hotel in Williamsport, Pennsylvania, in January, 1907, has the Class of 1910 had such a gathering as was held at the Lewisburger on Saturday, June 8, 1935. Of course, none of "Ma Bushes" charges on this occasion missed the Reading train and were left in Williamsport until the next day, neither was Doc Way and his crowd carried through Lewisburg to Winfield and had to walk back. No, this was a much tamer gathering, the crowd being much more dignified as the result of almost 28 years' experience in the cold world of affairs.

Two judges gave dignity to an otherwise riotous reunion of the Class of 1910 on this occasion. They were Judge Palmer Way, of Wildwood, N. J., and Judge Elmer B. Woods, of Pitman, N. J.

Twenty-five members of the class were back for the reunion, which started with registration at the alumni headquarters in the Literature Building and reached its climax in a dinner at the Lewisburger—the old Cameron House to you old-timers. Nearly 50 classmates and members of their families enjoyed the spread.

Paul J. Abraham, Greensburg, Pa., attorney and president of the Class, was toastmaster at the dinner, which was more or less informal. Classmates warmly welcomed J. Leslie Conover, formerly of Millville, N. J., and now of Erie, Pa., who through error had been listed in the obituary column of the class for fifteen years. He is still very much alive but a little plumper than in the days when he crawled through the transoms on hazing expeditions.

Several members of the class met for the first time since graduation, when they numbered 87 in all. Mildred Cathers, of Flemington, N. J., brought back snatches from the Lindbergh kidnapping trial in her home town and also a class L'Agenda, which was an aid to the reminiscing. Family photographs and snapshots were passed around by other members of the class to show what they are doing to help perpetuate Bucknell in the way of present and prospective students.

President Abraham, with memories still fresh of Bromley Smith's rhetoric and oratory, banned any speech-making but had the members of the class introduce their wives or husbands and members of their families. He also read interesting telegrams and letters from classmates who could not attend, among them one from Ruby Pierson, Milwaukee, Wis., Weaver W. Pangburn, N. Y., William Gatehouse, Cumberland, Md., Chester J. Terrill, Albany, N. Y., Mac Arthur Gorton, San Diego, Calif. William Gatehouse and his wife could not get in from Maryland until the next day.

He also read a list of the members of the class who have passed on since receiving their diplomas 25 years ago. This roll now includes :

C. Park Edmunds, Porter L. Benson, John W. Halliwell, Max C. Wiant, Raymond F. Hain, Amy Park Bernhard, Cora Wright Gibson, George S. Metzger, and Paul Lewis Silvius.

The 1900 Table at Hotel Lewisburger

Prior to the dinner, the Nineteen-teners and their families assembled in front of the hotel and smiled through the rain while their photograph was taken. They voted enthusiastically not to wait 25 more years for another reunion but to come back five years hence and to rally other classmates for the 30th anniversary of the class, and to check up on the further growth and development of Bucknell during that period.

On Sunday morning an impromptu breakfast was held at the Lewisburg Inn which was attended by twelve of the crowd and likewise it was an enjoyable affair.

Those at the 25th reunion included:

Class Members—Winnie Dixon Hardgrove, Mabel Johnson Viehoever, Ethel Watkins, Mildred B. Cathers, Helen Hare Sholl, John Gurney Sholl, Eva E. Weddle, Emily Lane Yoder, Priscilla Hardesty Thompson, Nick Beemer, Paul J. Abraham, Alexander M. Sherwood, Sarah Roup Askew, Homer D. Kresge, J. L. Conover, Clyde W. Cranmer, Sara Ray Way, Palmer M. Way, Elmer B. Woods, Wesley Lee Sprout, D. J. Park, George T. Street, Frank H. Painter, Robert J. Saylor, Florence Stauffer.

In-Laws—Dr. Viehoever, John Gurney Sholl, III, Frances Balliet, daughter of Georgia Weddle Balliet, J. W. Yoder, John Thompson, Mrs. Beemer, Mrs. Abraham, Mrs. Sherwood, Ned L. Askew, Mrs. Kresge, William T. Kresge, Mrs. Conover, Mrs. Cranmer, Mrs. Woods, Mrs. Sprout, Bill Sprout, Carl Sprout, Dorothy Sprout, and Mrs. Saylor.

Century Class

A baker's dozen classmates with families and friends made up the 1900 reunion party at the Hotel Lewisburger. All were guests of an anonymous classmate during their stay at the hotel and at the Class Reunion Luncheon. Classmates John Koons of Scranton and Edward Bell of Johnstown were the organizers of the party and largely responsible for the attendance.

Twentieth Reunion

Attorney Clair Groover of Lewisburg, aided and abetted by an able committee, succeeded in attracting some fifteen members of the Class of 1915 with families and friends to the Luncheon held at the Lewisburg Inn. Family histories were boasted of and children exhibited as proof of the twenty years out of college. Proper resolves were resolved by all to make the twenty-fifth reunion five years hence the banner reunion in Bucknell history.

1925

Last minute acceptances turned the tenth reunion of 1925 into a sizeable party at the Coffee House with thirty-five in attendance. President Edwin Davies reported an enthusiastic and cheerful luncheon with high good humor prevailing.

1930

The genial host of the College Inn, Guy Payne, welcomed many old friends at the Luncheon of the five year reunion held "On the Triangle". Eighteen members of the class were present in addition to wives and husbands.

Owens, '80

Ade, '21

O'Harra, I '83

Davis, '02

UNIQUE, if not unparalleled in Bucknell history, was the award of five honorary degrees to five alumni at the eighty-fifth annual Commencement. In past years there have been non-alumni among each annual group of honorary degree candidates. Classes from 1880 to 1921 were represented by the five candidates. Dr. William Gundy Owens, '80, was the oldest graduate honored and Dr. Lester Kelly Ade, '21, the youngest. Between these two were Dr. Margaret Tustin O'Hara, Institute, '83, Dr. John Davis, '02, and Dr. E. Carrol Condict, '08. The formal citations for the degrees were as follows:

Three members of the Board of Trustees, Dr. Milton Evans, '82, Roy G. Bostwick, Esq., '05, and Robert L. Rooke, '13, were re-elected when the board met at Lewisburg on June 8, 1935. Three additional men, Dr. James H. Franklin, president of Crozer Theological Seminary, Daniel C. Roberts of Wilkes-Barre, and J. H. Macklin of Philadelphia were elected members of the board to serve for five years.

Dr. Charles Parker Vaughn of Philadelphia was re-elected president of the board. All other officers were re-elected.

The members of the Board were closeted in session for three hours, most of which time was taken up with a discussion as to the advisability of rebuilding Old Main in the immediate future. No definite action was taken, however.

FINE ALUMNI DAY

Alumni Day on Saturday, June 8, 1935, was marked by the fine reunions at luncheon and above the average attendance at fraternity banquets during the evening. The only break in the planned program was the cancellation of the varsity baseball game in the afternoon when rain kept the opposing Dickinson team at home. During the afternoon open house at Alumni Headquarters contributed to the entertainment of visitors who thronged the building meeting old friends and attending the general session of the Alumni Association.

The Cap and Dagger play, "Whole Cloth Tales," by Lauren Williams, '35, played to a capacity house at the High School auditorium despite a steady downpour of rain during the entire evening.

FOUR OLDEST REGISTRANTS

Signers of the alumni register at Commencement Headquarters in The Literature Building on June 8, 9, and 10, numbered more than two hundred. Among the signers were four of the oldest graduates of the University. Mr. John B. Quigley, '62, of Lock Haven, sole survivor of his class was the oldest alumnus present at Commencement. He was a guest of his fraternity, Phi Kappa Psi, of which he was the forty-ninth initiate into the Bucknell chapter. He was initiated in 1858.

Mr. John Wingert, '72, and Mr. William C. Walls, '73, both of Lewisburg were the next oldest registrants. Rev. George T. Street, '77, of Ridley Park was the fourth oldest Commencement guest.

DR. RAINEY DELIVERS SPEECH

Dr. Homer P. Rainey, President of the University, delivered the valedictory address at the commencement exercises of the Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia yesterday noon.

This is one of the series of addresses made by Dr. Rainey during the last month, which included an address before the Colgate-Rochester Divinity School and others.

Silver Anniversary Class—1910— at The Lewisburger

BACCALAUREATE SERMON

USING as his text Romans XII: 2, "And be not conformed to this world But be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is the good and acceptable and perfect will of God," President Rainey, delivering the Baccalaureate sermon before a congregation of graduates, alumni, and guests in the Baptist Church, Sunday morning, June 11, 1935, vigorously pointed out the dangers and pitfall of stagnation into which the members of the graduating class are likely to fall.

Dr. Rainey exhorted the members of the class to refresh their inner selves at intervals after graduation much as they now renew their physical selves. Religious faith and the arts, the president said, are two sure means by which one can transform his mind and thus gain strength to bring about changes in the society in which he lives.

Colorful Procession

It is the individual, the speaker contended that has power to mold society, and relief of present-day ills will be brought about not by a change in the social or political structure but by individuals who will set up their own standards of values instead of conforming to society's.

The sermon was delivered before a colorful congregation. Trustees, faculty, and candidates for degrees were attired in hoods, caps, and gowns, and were seated in groups, the faculty on the platform.

Man vs. Environment

Opening his sermon with the statement that man is in eternal conflict with his environment, Dr. Rainey went on to expound on the difficulty of an individual's being contrary to the crowd. But, he added, "There come times often in the career of every man of affairs when, to gain any superior value in life, he must leave the crowd and stand alone for an ideal or a principle."

To follow the crowd means stagnation, continued the speaker, and that is a "repudiation of all that education means, for the essence of education is the search for values, for the things that make a difference, for the appreciation of human worth."

Defines Culture's Objective

Defining the great objective of a liberal culture as making the student "forsake the values represented by the mass efforts of mankind and strive to create standards of value by which he will determine his own conduct," Bucknell's president advised the seniors that unless their education had developed within them individual standards of value their education had fallen short of its greatest possibilities.

Judging from the manner in which you seniors have governed yourselves at Bucknell, the president told the class of '35, the senior class will make little or no change in society after graduation, for you have done nothing significant while undergraduates. "As a matter of fact," he went on, "The chances are very great that you will follow the path of most other college alumni and will stagnate intellectually soon after graduation."

Religious Faith Essential

The speaker gave as the reason for the disappearance of democracy in many countries the fact that there is a basic inability in man to govern himself. "A free citizen, capable of self-government, must possess a strong reserve of spiritual power that is the result of many virtues," said Dr. Rainey, and explained that this power is attained only as a result of continual transformation, much as a battery must be recharged from time to time in order to renew its effectiveness.

Religious faith was cited by Dr. Rainey as the prime requisite to a renewal of one's mind. "Faith is the substance of things hoped for and the evidence of things not seen." It is the quality of life which enables us to possess the values of the eternal world. "The things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are unseen are eternal." Faith enables one to transcend the world in which one lives, and to see the invisible. By faith it is possible to possess the very substance of the things we hope for. Thus values are created that otherwise would not exist. Faith, therefore, becomes a vital, creative force in one's life. This creative faculty of faith relieves one of the necessity of conformity. If one can only imitate there is nothing one can do but conform, but if one possesses a creative faculty one can choose his own world in which to live. "Faith is the evidence of things not seen." It enables one to apprehend conclusions before all the evidence is in. By seeing things afar off one is not conformed to this world."

Arts and Re-creation

A second antidote for mental decadence, inferior only to faith, is contact with the arts, Dr. Rainey stated. "The great values to be derived from participation in any of the arts," he said, "is in the recreation of experience. The re-creation of experience is one of the soundest and most fundamental of all educational principles. It always takes the form of some type of artistic expression. It is in this process of re-creation of experience that the principle of expression becomes operative and is of such tremendous value. It is in the field of the various arts that this opportunity for the re-creation of experience finds its fullest expression. The arts constitute the successful expression of all the experience of man, one finds his medium in one or more of the various forms of art. I venture to say that virtually every experience known to man can find expression in one or another of the art forms. The arts are, therefore, the great repository for the experience of man. They are a treasure-house of the spiritual resources of the race. They are the end of living, and are, therefore, the ultimate objective of all liberal education."

1925 at The Coffee House

Ending his sermon with the keynote a better society will evolve from better individuals rather than better systems, President Rainey expressed the hope that the education of the seniors at Bucknell has given each senior the ability to renew his own life "by the process of continuous renewal from the great storehouses of the spiritual resources of mankind."

ALUMNAE MEETING

The eightieth annual business meeting of Bucknell Alumnae was held Saturday morning, June 8, 1935, in Larison living room, with Miss Anna Van Gundy, Inst., '85, president of the association presiding.

The association treasurer reported that in accordance with the Association's agreement with the Bucknell Board of Trustees, $435, interest on the Association's fund, had been expended this spring in reconditioning and recovering with Zimmerman frieze the two suites of furniture in Larison Hall living room, and in the purchase of six additional chairs and one new lamp.

Professor Eliza Martin reported that the Students' Loan Fund for women had this year aided six girls and awarded the two Larison scholarships.

On motion the Association empowered the outgoing president and secretary to ask President Rainey and Dean Clark if the oil portrait of Miss Harriet E. Spratt might hang again on the wall of Larison Hall living room. This portrait, the gift of the alumnae to Bucknell, had been removed from the wall of the old parlors a few years ago when these rooms had been converted into dormitories.

The honor guests at the luncheon which followed the business meeting were three members of the Institute Class of 1875, Mrs. Laura Brass Riddell, Mrs. Sara Aurand Ritter and Miss Emma Eeg, pupils of Miss Spratt who was principal of the Institute from 1869 to 1878. Therefore, these ladies were especially gratified to see that Dean Clark had restored the portrait before the luncheon.

New officers elected were as follows: Mrs. Mary Bartol Theiss, president; Miss Mary Brown, vice-president; Miss Carrie D. Foresman, secretary; Mrs. Grace Slifer Drum, corresponding secretary; Miss Mary A. Thornton, treasurer, and Mrs. Emma Billbeyer Matlack and Mrs. Eveline Stanton Gundy, additional members of the board of management.

Eighty-six alumnae attended the luncheon in the dining hall. Mrs. Laura Brass Riddell of Muncy, spoke for the Institute Class of 1875. Miss Laura Church of Washington, D. C., for the Institute Class of 1885. Mrs. Laura Fague Truckenmiller of Watertown, for the Institute Class of 1895 and Mrs. Edith Kelly Fetherston, of New York. Mrs. Fetherston spoke for the Class of 1930.

Mrs. Homer P. Rainey spoke for the administration, thanking the Association for their continued gifts to Larison Hall. Mrs. Joseph W. Henderson spoke for the Philadelphia Club, and Miss Eliza Martin, for the Lewisburg Club.

Various class toasts brought out the facts that Mrs. Alice Atkins Leach, Inst. '85 was a granddaughter of Dr. W. H. Ludwig, first chairman of the University Board of Trustees. Also that the late Frances Baker, Inst. '95, was a successful war nurse, particularly in aviation camps, where one of her distinguished aviator patients was James Norman Hall.

DEAN MILLER ACCEPTS

PRESIDENCY KEUKA COLLEGE

Selection of Dr. J. Hillis Miller, Dean of Students at Bucknell University, as President of Keuka College, Keuka Park, N. Y., was announced in July by Dr. John W. West, Elmira, Chairman of the Board of Trustees. Dean Miller will take over his new duties September 1.

Dr. Miller came to Bucknell in 1930 as dean of freshmen and assistant professor of psychology. When President Homer P. Rainey came to Bucknell in 1931 he organized the University's program and changed Dr. Miller's position to Dean of Students. In this capacity he had direction over student activities, some of the measurements, and part of the housing. He set up a system, with the aid of faculty and students committees, that has attracted national attention among the colleges, and last year several colleges modeled their programs after that at Bucknell.

President-Elect Miller is a graduate of the University of Richmond. He earned the doctor of philosophy degree at Columbia University. He has taught at William and Mary College, Virginia. While studying at the Union Theological Seminary, New York City, he was student assistant to Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, at the Riverside Church.

During the summers Dean Miller has been pastor of a Community Church at Big Moose, N. Y., an exclusive Adirondack section.

Dr. West wrote to President Rainey that Dean Miller had been selected from 50 candidates. Miller is the second Bucknell faculty member to be chosen for a college presidency in a year. Last summer Byron S. Hollinshead was made the chief executive of Scranton-Keystone Junior College.

HOME COMING, OCTOBER 26

Alumni and athletic officials have chosen October 26 as the annual Alumni Homecoming date for 1935. Washington and Jefferson College will be the football opponents that afternoon. Chief reasons for selecting the W. and J. game are that the weather is more likely to be more favorable for automobile trips than in late November and because of the long football rivalry between the Bisons and the Presidents.

SELECTIVE ADMISSIONS

THE Bucknell "Selective Admissions Program," announced last January and launched nationally on March 16 at a large number of alumni meetings, has been going ahead at full steam. Already more than 200 freshmen have been admitted for September, and before this is printed the number will be in excess of the 236 that were enrolled when college opened last fall.

Approximately forty sophomores at the Bucknell Junior College in Wilkes-Barre will transfer to Lewisburg for their last two years of college work, making in all the largest number of new students on the Lewisburg campus in three years. These figures can be increased by active work on the part of the alumni and present students in influencing their friends to attend Bucknell.

— WIDENED CURRICULA —

The University has widened its curricula this year so as to provide additional professional outlets for graduates. Added are courses in secretarial science and business teacher training and a course for laboratory technicians. The biology and commerce and finance faculties have combined in offering a course that equips young people to serve as secretary and technician to the physician, the ortho-dentist, the director of public health agencies, and others of like kind. The Registrar will be glad to send detailed information concerning these new courses to anyone who will make request.

Bucknell offers the Bachelor of Arts degree in a wide field of Liberal Arts subjects. This course is advised for the student seeking cultural training, or for the student who wishes to procure a general education before specializing in a profession. Professional studies are offered in Engineering (Chemical, Civil, Electrical, or Mechanical), Business and Secretarial, Teaching, and Pre-Professional courses are given in Law, Medicine, Dentistry, and a wide field of Liberal subjects.

NEW PROGRAM SUCCESSFUL

A very large percentage of freshmen making application for admission have stated on their blanks that the new curriculum at Bucknell is what has attracted them to the college. This curriculum, started two years ago, differs from the usual one in that the first two years are used for broad cultural training and the beginning of professional work while the last two years are freed for concentration in the student's chosen field. Two years' results show the value of this program. In the recent objective examinations, the 1935 median was several points higher than that of 1933 on the same questions.

With the widened curricula and the success of the new program as "talking points" added to Bucknell's splendid record of the past, the beautiful campus, the democratic student body, with its vigorous and worthwhile activities, alumni are justified in urging the best students in our secondary schools to apply for admission here. "Selective Admissions" means that Bucknellians are helping select the best students for their alma mater. Have you sent the name of a good prospect to Mr. H. W. Holter, the Registrar? Have you talked to this prospect about attending Bucknell? Have you taken this prospect to Lewisburg to see the campus? (If you do, he'll enroll. . . . rarely does one visit the campus and not "sign up.")

Cooperating with the alumni in the program are the faculty and administration, and the present students. The students have organized an undergraduate division with a special Committee of One Hundred, and this group has been divided into geographical regions covering Pennsylvania, New York, and New Jersey. Their work has been very successful. Much more can be accomplished in the next thirty days. Will you do your best to start a student toward Bucknell?

May Queen and Court at Spring Festival

Bucknell's "Lucky 13" in Festival Court

The photographs reproduced herewith prove the oft repeated statement that Bucknell co-eds are truly beautiful. The "Lucky Thirteen" girls above were chosen by popular vote of the women students as the court attendants for the May Queen at the time of the Spring festival in May. One of the thirteen, Miss Madeline Mac Makin, received the highest number of votes which gave her the honor of representing her class as Queen of the Festival. Another picture of the Queen and Her Court is presented on the opposite page. The picture was taken on the day of the Festival and is even further proof of the first statement made in this short tribute to the co-eds.

BEQUEST PROGRAM MOVING

The Bequest Division of the Bucknell Centennial Commission, which was started a few months ago under the chairmanship of Joseph W. Henderson, '08, Philadelphia, has met with pleasing success, according to the first announcement made by Mr. Henderson.

In the three months since a Committee of nearly 250 Bucknell lawyers, bank representatives, and insurance men was selected, at least eleven friends of the University have written Bucknell into their wills for an amount in excess of $100,000. Probably other wills have been written about which information is not available. Naturally Mr. Henderson cannot reveal details concerning these bequests to Bucknell.

Mr. Henderson also pointed out that the Bequest program is only a part of the Bucknell financial program, and that any alumnus who wishes to make outright gifts to the University is encouraged to do so. The Bequest Division does feel, however, that in the distant future the University's greatest endowment income will come from bequests through wills.

The Committee is made up of all the members of the Board of Trustees and approximately 200 lawyers, insurance men, and bankers. Other people who are willing to serve on this Committee are invited to do so and are asked to write to Mr. Henderson at 2210 Packard Building, Philadelphia. Any Committee member will be glad to give gratis to your own lawyer any information or help requested in the matter of devising gifts or bequests, trusts, or insurance policies to Bucknell.

Names of Committee members were published in a pamphlet, "WHERE THERE'S A WILL...." and mailed to all alumni. The pamphlet outlines Bucknell's financial needs for the next few years, looking toward the One Hundredth Anniversary in 1946. Several bequest forms are also printed. Additional copies of the pamphlet are available and will be mailed to anyone upon request to Arthur L. Brandon, Assistant to the President, Lewisburg.

BAPTIST GROUPS ON CAMPUS

The Pennsylvania Baptist Young People's Convention which met on the campus June 28 to 30, attracted some six hundred delegates, Albert M. Cooley, '28, of Williamsport, convention registrar, announced. In the bi-annual convention here two years ago more than 900 delegates attended.

The three-day program began Friday afternoon when President Homer P. Rainey of Bucknell gave the opening talk. Among the featured speakers were the convention director, Dr. F. W. Tomlinson, Philadelphia; Dr. Maurice A. Levy of the Northern Baptist Convention; Dr. Burton C. Barrett, Baptist State Secretary; the Rev. Archibald G. Adams, the Rev. James B. Ostergren, the Rev. Clarence W. Cranford, and Warden Henry C. Hill of the Northeastern Federal Penitentiary.

Baptist pastors of Pennsylvania opened their annual conference on the campus on Monday, June 24, and continued until the opening of the Young People's meeting. A third Baptist meeting at Bucknell this summer was that of the Women's Missionary Houseparty, July 22 to 25.

LARGEST SUMMER SCHOOL

Twenty-five Percent Increase in Enrollment over Preceding Year.
Students from Ten States.

UNDER the capable administration of Dr. F. G. Davis, '11, the 1935 Bucknell Summer Session attracted approximately twenty-five per cent. more enrolment than the preceding year. The peak enrolment for the present session was four hundred and twenty-five students, the largest figure since 1932. During the past twelve consecutive years of the existence of The Bucknell Summer Session the largest single year was 1931 when 447 students were enrolled. In only three previous sessions has the enrolment figure exceeded the four hundred mark.

Forty-six Pennsylvania counties and ten states are represented by students. Demonstration Schools at both Lewisburg and Milton form a large part of the work of the session with more than sixty student teachers enrolled for class room supervision and directed teaching.

A series of inspirational lectures by noted travellers, authors, journalists, and prominent faculty and administration members of the College is one of the features of the session.

Many Bucknell alumni are numbered among the principals, superintendents, teachers, and others taking special and regular work.

Some thirty degrees will be awarded at the Summer School Convocation on Friday, August 16. The Commencement speaker will be Dr. Albert D. Upton, pastor of the Plymouth Congregational Church of Scranton. Dr. Upton is a graduate of Cambridge University, and pastor of one of the largest churches of its denomination in this state. The diplomas will be presented to the graduates by Dean R. H. Rivenburg, '97. Dr. Emory W. Hunt, President Emeritus, will also take part in the ceremonies.

OFFICE WORKERS SCHOOL

A special seminar course offered by the Affiliated Schools for Office Workers was conducted on the campus during the first four weeks of the regular session. Classes were held in Harris Hall under the direction of Miss Jean Carter with thirty students in attendance. The seminar attracted several national leaders who addressed general sessions of both the seminar and summer school groups. Teachers on the staff of the School included Dr. Eleanor Hancock of Goucher, Tom Tippett, formerly of the Brookwood Labor College, Dr. Orlie Pell of Hollins, Mr. William Fincke of the Manumit School, and Miss Ruth Shallcross of the New York State Department of Labor.

WEEK-END COURSES ANNOUNCED

At the close of Summer School, Dean R. H. Rivenburg, '97, in charge of the Extension Division of the University, announced special week-end courses in education to be given during the coming academic year. Courses will be offered on Fridays and Saturdays of the first semester in Visual Education, Psychology of Secondary School Subjects, Modern Trends in Directing Learning, and other allied educational subjects. Second semester courses planned include Mental Hygiene and Secondary School Curriculum.

"Y" LEADERS

Bucknell University led fifty colleges in attendance at the annual summer conference of the Middle Atlantic States Christian Association at Eagles Mere, Pa. Bucknell has 23 students registered for the full course and ten additional guests have attended some of the sessions. Forrest Brown, Bucknell Christian Association secretary, and Miss Ann Graybill, '33, led two of the conference's study groups.

OCTOBER CONFERENCE

Friday and Saturday, October 18 and 19, have been set as the definite dates for the annual Bucknell Education Conference. Many national and state leaders in various fields will appear on the program. General sessions and group meetings are planned. The conference will open at two o'clock on Friday afternoon with the first general meeting. It will close with the final general session on Saturday morning at eleven. The dinner meeting Friday evening will feature a program of varied entertainment. Additional plans and program will appear in September in this magazine.

HARRISBURG ALUMNI CLUB ACTIVE

Harrisburg Club President
Joseph Nissley, Esq., '31

Visitors from the campus to a luncheon meeting of The Harrisburg Alumni Club late in May, included three Bucknell Alumni Secretaries; the incumbent, his predecessor, Dr. Harry R. Warfel, '20, and his predecessor, Dr. Leo L. Rockwell, '07. At a later meeting in June, Dr. George B. Lawson of the faculty was the guest of honor and speaker of the evening. More than thirty alumni and friends were present at this dinner meeting. The club is now under the leadership of Joseph Nissley, Esq., '31, young Dauphin County barrister.

ASSOCIATION REELECTS

At the annual meeting of The General Alumni Association on Saturday, June 8, 1935 in The Literature Building all officers of the Association were reelected and Mrs. Gertrude Stannert Kester, '03, of Akron, O., was reelected to the Executive Committee for a four year term.

Reports were heard from the various class reunion luncheons and committees. The Secretary, Al G. Stoughton, '24, reported briefly of his activities during the year in behalf of the Association and the University. He placed special emphasis upon the fine work of alumni club committees throughout the country in the organization of dinners on the night of March 16, 1935, when the radio broadcast was sent to the nation from the campus. Because of the broadcast Mr. Stoughton reported that thirty new alumni clubs had been formed and that during the coming year these would be knit into more compact organizations and additional clubs established in centers where twenty-five or more alumni were resident. The Secretary reported his election to the Vice Presidency of The American Alumni Council, national organization of alumni workers.

Figures were presented on The Alumni Loan Fund through which more than sixty eight seniors had been enabled to become alumni during the past four years. The Secretary concluded his report with brief references to alumni cooperation and future plans for The Bucknell Alumni Monthly and special committees needed for Homecoming and The Alumni Fund during the coming year.

The official minutes of the meeting are herewith presented:

The meeting was called to order by the President, Dr. S. M. Davenport, '16.

The minutes of the preceding meeting were read by the secretary and regularly approved.

The report of the Alumni Trustee Nomination Committee was presented by Mr. Errol H. Derby, '20, in the absence of the chairman, Mr. W. N. Baker, '11. The report was accepted and Mr. Berkeley V. Hastings, '13, of Milton, declared unanimously nominated for the position of Alumni Trustee.

The report of the Program and Nominations Committee was presented by Mr. G. Grant Painter, '17, chairman, with the recommendation of the committee that all officers be reelected for the ensuing year. Upon regular motion the report was accepted and the present officers declared elected. Mrs. Gertrude Stannert Kester whose term of four years as a member of the Executive Committee expired was declared regularly nominated and elected for another four year term.

The Necrology Report was read by the Secretary and upon the addition of several names from the floor regularly accepted.

The Secretary reported briefly of his work during the past year.

Upon regular motion a resolution of appreciation for the fifty-five years of service to Bucknell of Professor and Mrs. William Gundy Owens was adopted.

Reports were heard from the following class reunions: 1885-1895-1910-1915-1930.

An invitation was extended to Dr. L. R. Parks of the faculty of State College (husband of Mabel Boyer Parks, '15) to visit the General Association meeting again.

Major James Madison Hare, '85, suggested the use of Commencement Badges displaying the name and class of the wearer.

Upon regular motion a rising vote of thanks was extended to the Secretary, Mr. A. G. Stoughton, '24, for his services to the General Association and the University. A similar motion and rising vote of thanks was given in honor of the treasurer, Mr. Joseph M. Wolfe, '89.

The chair introduced Mr. Julius F. Seebach, Jr., '20, former Program Director of the Columbia Broadcasting System who made possible the Bucknell Night radio program on March 16, 1935.

Dr. Mabel Grier Leshner, '01, Vice-President, reported favorable sentiment on the part of the Alumnae Association toward a joint program of the two associations.

The chair appointed a Committee to confer with a similar committee of the Alumnae Association. The two committees:

ALUMNI

Mr. G. Grant Painter, '17, Chairman
Dr. Carl Millward, '06, Milton
Clair Groover, Esq., '15, Lewisburg

ALUMNAE

Mrs. Elizabeth Stanton Gundy, '90, Lewisburg
Mrs. Elizabeth Bates Hoffman, '94, Lewisburg

Upon regular motion the meeting adjourned.

Signed,

A. G. Stoughton,
Secretary.

IN EDUCATION WORK

The Bucknell Department of Education, under the direction of Dr. F. G. Davis, '11, plans to publish during the year a directory of alumni in education. It will be known as a Bucknell "Who's Who" in school work. Information blanks were mailed earlier to all known graduates in the field of education. A prompt return of the questionnaire is requested by Dr. Davis. If mislaid another will be sent on request.

THE FIRST COMMENCEMENT

A Study in Contrast to Commencement of 1935--By Dr. Mary Bartol Theiss, '94

Larison Hall from an early wood block in The Alumni Association Collection

Mrs. Philip L. Linn, Inst., and her son Merrill W. Linn, Esq., of Lewisburg have inherited what is probably the most extensive collection of newspapers in Union County, that deal with the territory of Union County. The collection was begun by James F. Linn, Esq., a Lewisburg attorney, and a surveyor who in 1850 laid out the University extension to Lewisburg, a gentleman who served from 1848 to 1866 as a member of the Board of Curators of the University. Mr. James Fleming Linn had two sons, J. Merrill Linn, a graduate of the class of 1851, Bucknell's first class, and John Blair Linn, a graduate of Marshall College, '47, both of whom continued their father's interest in local history, and his collection of newspapers. Mr. John Blair Linn edited the second series of Pennsylvania Archives, in connection with Dr. Wm. H. Egle, and was the compiler of the Annals of Buffalo Valley. It is this collection which formed the backbone of his studies for the Annals, outside of legal documents and interviews with old settlers, that has descended to Mrs. Philip B. Linn and her son Merrill W. Linn.

Through their courtesy I recently had the opportunity of going through their extensive files of newspapers, where I found the first contemporary recorded account of Bucknell's first Commencement of 1851, which has come to my attention.

The story is printed in The Union Weekly Whig's issue of Thursday, August 28, 1851. This newspaper was printed in Lewisburg in 1851 by R. I. Nesbit and Company. The account given, in the following issue Mr. Nesbit naively says "we copied from the Chronicle, but in some way we forgot to credit them." The Chronicle was published also in Lewisburg and edited at that time by Oliver Norton Worden, who was also a member of the University's Board of Curators from 1850 to 1877, serving as this body's Scribe from 1851 to 1862. He probably wrote the story as later he frequently omits an issue, in order to attend the Commencements of the University. This particular issue of the Chronicle is missing from the Linn collection.

University at Lewisburg, Commencement, &c.

Absence from home, cut us off from all the recent exercises at the University except the proceedings of Wednesday, and on the previous evening.

On Tuesday evening, the Baptist meeting-house (then on west side of S. 3d St., between Pine Tree Alley and home of Mrs. Martha W. Kalp) was crowded to its utmost capacity by citizens and strangers, including a large proportion of ladies, who listened for several hours with deep interest to the exercises of the Senior Academic, Freshman and Sophomore Collegiate classes, in Composition and Declamation. The performances were highly creditable to the parties concerned, and spoke well of the proficiency and skill of the pupils and their preceptor. The compositions of the young ladies won a decided commendation. A poem furnished for the occasion by a youth of fifteen will be found on our first page and is one of numerous illustrations which could readily be furnished of the unusual proportion of talent to be found in the ranks of the students at this Institution. Some of the music furnished by the choir (led by Robert Lowry, '54, later a famous hymn writer) was of a high order of excellence; but other portions were not of a popular character, and required a degree of effort for their execution that could not but excite occasional apprehensions for the performers, in the minds of the audience.

The First Annual Commencement was an occasion of much more than ordinary interest and importance, both on account of the intrinsic merit of the performances, and because it was the first ingathering of the fruits of a noble enterprise. The day was cool and pleasant, and people thronged to the Hill long before the appointed hour. When the Procession arrived and was seated, the Hall (the entire top floor of Stephen W. Taylor Hall, then called the "Academic Building") as well as the ante-chamber was densely crowded in every nook and corner, and hundreds went away, unable to get a foothold within hearing distance.

The audience exhibited the utmost patience and decorum during a session of more than four hours — enlivened at intervals by choice music from the choir and the Danville Band. The only mal appropos incidents we noted were occasional interludes from the throats of young infants, which had found their way thither by mistake, we suppose; and we regret to add, audible ebullitions of spleen from children of a larger growth on the platform, whose sense of gentlemanly propriety was not strong enough, it seemed, to control the impulses of jealous bigotry.

The room was most beautifully and tastefully decorated, and after prayer by Rev. Dr. Malcom, the Senior Collegiate class led off with their graduating orations, and exhibited a maturity of thought and style, and felicity of allusion and illustration, that would have brought down plaudits from the audience, if it had not been a violation of good taste, and the proprieties of the occasion; and indeed was only arrested by an intimation to that effect from the Acting President. The following are the names, &c., of the First Graduating Class of the University at Lewisburg:

Salutatory Oration—James Merrill Linn, Lewisburg
Blessings of Accident—Washington Barnhurst, Philada.

Basis of the Government—Reeder M'Candless Fish, Beaver County

Reformers—George Osman Ide, Philada.

Achievements of Mind—John Morris Lyons, Chester County

The Light of Authorship, Unquenchable—Henry Pomerene, Pittsburgh

Valedictory Oration—John Harvard Castle, (later first Pres. of University of Toronto) Philada.

Most of this little band, together with many of the undergraduates, commenced their course at this institution in its earliest infancy, when buildings, library and apparatus, were all wanting, and persevered through all discouragements and difficulties, until now (in a period of time when other colleges could exhibit no higher grade than a Freshman class,) they go forth, ripe scholars — according to the testimony of Chancellor LINCOLN and Mr. BUCHANAN (James Buchanan, later President of the U. S., was a member of the Board of Curators)—an honor to themselves, and to their Alma Mater, and to the faithful instructors, to whose perseverance and skillful pilotage they owe so much. We trust we may hear of future honors won by this pioneer class, in the pulpit, at the bar, in the chair of instruction, or in whatever vocation they enter.

After a few but impressive remarks to the graduating class by Prof. Taylor, he conferred (in Latin) the degrees of A.B. in course on the graduating class, and also the Honorary degree of D.D. on Rev. Horatio G. Jones, of Roxboro, Pa.

Prof. BLISS (father of Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, U. S. A.) next proceeded to deliver his Inaugural Address. His subject was the benefits and importance of the study of the dead languages as part of a liberal education. On account of the lateness of the hour, he gave his hearers fragments only of the address; but these abundantly evinced its classic finish and beauty of style, and the profound scholarship and brilliant talents of its author. We hope it will find its way into print, for permanent use and perusal at leisure.

The Acting President, Dr. TAYLOR, then took formal leave of the Institution, its Officers and Students, referring in brief but fitting terms to the origin of the University; the trials, embarrassments, and privations attending its progress; and its present success, and assured prosperity. THOMAS WATTS-SON, ESQ., President of the Board of Trustees, responded in a few brief but happily expressed remarks, cordially thanking Dr. Taylor for his arduous and useful labors, wishing him the utmost prosperity, and concluding by installing President MALCOM as President of the University.

Dr. Malcom, after noticing that he formerly entered upon the work of Instruction, on account of the loss of his voice, and consequent inability to preach — expressed his regret at now giving up his pastoral duties while his voice was sound and fitted for the discharge of the duties of the pulpit; but stated that he had yielded to the unanimous desire and advice of his brethren, and trusted that the hand of God was in the matter. A benediction by Rev. Dr. Idey closed the ceremonies of the day; and the immense throng dispersed, evidently well pleased with the proceedings.

As Prof. TAYLOR has now left us to enter upon higher professional duties elsewhere (as President of Madison University, Hamilton, N. Y.) it is the merest justice to remark that during his five years' residence in our midst, he has always commanded the highest respect and esteem of this entire community; and even in the same breath with which they extend a frank and cordial welcome to President Malcom, they can not but express a feeling of regret at the departure of his predecessor.

This Institution is now fairly launched upon the flood-tide of prosperity. There is yet much to be done, but it has outlived its most threatening dangers and planted a firm foothold that can not readily be shaken by any probable stroke of adverse fortune. Its periods of doubt and gloom have been succeeded by a serene and cloudless sky. Springing forward with renewed energy and hope, on the part of its patrons; a fresh and effective organization; an able and accomplished Faculty, capable of doing all for the student that outward advantages can accomplish; and an admirable location, both as regards its geographical position in the State, and the immediate site for the College buildings, in a climate of rare salubrity, and in the midst of some of the most varied, picturesque, and beautiful scenery on the continent: the measure of its usefulness and propriety is evidently destined to be of a widespread and enduring character.

Rev. Edmund Wells is now making his home in Pottstown at 1011 High St., where he has moved from Beaufort, S. C. Rev. Wells sends a check with his recent letter to indicate that the "Class of '69 desires to keep up its traditional interest in the Alumni Association".

The death of Mrs. Helen Ely Hopping, Institute, occurred on March 7, 1935 at Red Bank, N. J. She was born at Hightstown, N. J., on October 6, 1851 and in 1880 married James P. Hopping. She was the daughter of Joseph S. and Achsah R. Ely. She was the oldest living graduate of the Institute.

The death of Rev. Calvin A. Hare of Burlington, N. J. occurred at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Helen Hare Sholl, '10, in Pitman, N. J., on April 5, 1935. Rev. Hare was a member of the faculty of Bucknell from 1902 to 1913. As a Baptist pastor he had served many charges in Pennsylvania and New Jersey. His last pastorate from which he resigned in 1930 was at Metuchen, N. J. He is survived by his second wife, Mrs. Mary Hall Hare, and his daughter, also two brothers, David of Kansas City, Mo., and Major James Madison Hare of Pocono Lake, Pa.

1880

The opening event of Bucknell's eighty-fifth annual Commencement Week program was marked by a formal dinner which was held Friday night, June 7, 1935, in the Women's Dining Hall. The dinner was in honor of Professor William Gundy Owens, who had finished 50 years of teaching at Bucknell, and is now on a trip around the world with Mrs. Owens.

As a part of the ceremony the trustees of the University presented Professor Owens with an engrossed resolution which reads:

The Board of Trustees of Bucknell University, in view of the retirement of Professor William Gundy Owens from its Faculty, record their gratitude to him in recognition of his service to the University during an unprecedented number of years. He entered the Preparatory Department as a student September 9, 1874, and the College Department, September 7, 1876, graduating June 23, 1880.

He began his work as instructor in the then existing Academy of University at Lewisburg, March 18, 1880, and April 12, 1885 began teaching Physics in the University. June 2, 1885 he was appointed Adjunct Professor of Natural Science. In June 1887, he was elected Professor of Physics and Chemistry. For this unparalleled record of continuous years in connection with our University, for his blameless life as a student and teacher, for his skill in instruction, for his fidelity in every task assumed, for his constant loyalty to his Alma Mater, the Board of Trustees present this token of affection and congratulation, and rejoice with him that in retirement he has the satisfaction of work well done and the love and gratitude of all who met him in lecture-room and on the campus.

The staff of the Women's College presented Mrs. Owens with a farewell gift.

Popular among students, the 53-year-old professor realized in part what the undergraduates thought of him when he read the dedicatory paragraphs of the annual, which stated:

'True, Loyal Friend'

Educated at Bloomsburg State Teachers College and Bucknell University, his rise through the teaching ranks was rapid. For a year he taught at Mansfield State Teachers College and also worked during the summer for the National Tube Co.

Rose Through Ranks

When that department was merged with the department of chemical engineering two years ago he was appointed professor of chemistry of materials.

Dr. John Winter Rice, Bucknell faculty member and pathologist, recently figured in the trial of Dr. H. E. Zimmerly of Lancaster, a surgeon charged with performing illegal operations. Dr. Rice was called into the case by Lancaster authorities as an expert witness on the identification of fragments of bone found on the Zimmerly estate and thought to have been those of the body of a young girl whose disappearance is charged to Dr. Zimmerly. The following account is from The Commencement News:

It was Dr. Rice, working in his laboratories at Bucknell, who identified pieces of bone found on the Zimmerly estate after Mrs. Lawson's disappearance, as having come from the broken skeleton of a woman more than 20 years of age and weighing between 110 and 120 pounds.

Questioned afterward as to how he accomplished the identification, which tallies with Mrs. Lawson's characteristics, Dr. Rice said it was simply a matter of comparison and elimination. He was able, after two hours study, to classify all of the 60 fragments of osseous material handed to him by the State Police.

Identified Bones

At a glance, Dr. Rice said, one is able to tell whether or not the bones are from a human being or an animal. Having, in this case, promptly classified them as from a human, he proceeded to determine the sex.

The adult male was eliminated because the bones were smooth and slight of structure. These characteristics of the female bones also prevail in the young man under 24 years of age. At that year, however, the epiphyseal lines disappear from the bones of the male and female. These lines were missing from the fragments which he examined; they were smooth and slight, therefore, Dr. Rice concluded, they were from a female more than 24 years of age.

Subsequent examination by Dr. Rice of additional fragments of bone, some matted hairs, and a lard can full of a substance resembling disintegrated human flesh has been completed, but his report is being withheld until he appears before the grand jury.

It was Dr. Rice's widespread reputation as an osteologist and pathologist as well as his friendship with H. J. Wagner, ballistics expert of the Pennsylvania State Police, that brought him into the case. Last fall, Mr. Wagner took a special course in anatomical structure under Dr. Rice at Bucknell.

FACULTY ARTICLES

Dr. Leo L. Rockwell, '07, is the author of an article appearing in the April issue of The Modern Language Journal. Dr. H. W. Robbins had an article in the April issue of The Educational Record.

WARFEL, '20, ON EMERSON

Associate Professor Harry R. Warfel, '20, is the author of an article entitled "Margaret Fuller and Ralph Waldo Emerson," which appears in the June issue of PMLA, quarterly publication of the Modern Language Association of America. The author considers this one of his most important literary efforts.

The article recounts that period in the well-known American woman's life in which she first became acquainted with Emerson and of the subsequent years in which that friendship ripened. Margaret, the article relates, was 26 when she became acquainted with the great thinker. Emerson was, to her, as a priest "to whom she might go to gain release from emotional pressure."

Margaret came to Emerson completely formed intellectually, but in spite of that his influences upon her was great. Their common interest in Goethe drew them closer together.

The young literary genius continued her friendship with Emerson, but at the same time undertook other literary enterprises including editing the Tatler. When she was drowned at the age of 40, America lost one of its most brilliant women of the time, says the author.

The friendship between the two was never unusually intimate, yet it crystallized in mutual understanding and in a certain love one for the other.

Editor's Corner

GUEST conductors of columns seem to be quite the vogue lately so we turn you over after many years of jealously guarding this nook to one of our correspondents who witnessed a new sight at the opening football game and writes us as follows about it:

It may somewhat soften my animadversion upon the subject of coed cheer leaders and my criticisms of you for your responsibility for that particular collegiate abnormality, if I speak also upon the subject of coed drum-majors, for which you, of course, must also assume the usual responsibility of an alumni secretary.

I suppose, as I grow mentally tempered by accumulating tradition, I have failed to realize that, with the gradual passing of the legitimate musical shows and with the gradual increase in night football, there should be a tendency to merge and amalgamate the features of the football field with those of the stage.

I make no strictures upon the Princesses of Ruratania or of Rotogravura, or of whatsoever princessapality she may natively have adorned. At a distance and under the flood lights she gives an impression of pulchritude, she performs with a grace and a snap, and with a verve and a sense of the dramatic, with a ne plus ultra and a knee action, that leaves nothing more to be required from the princess herself. She struts her stuff with a gratifying and enthusiastic effectiveness. Further, she has a lissomeness of figure that well removes her from the heavy fields of the burlesque stage, and qualifies her for the more refined musical presentations. But, how about improving the stage, the supporting cast and the subordinate action? Why not, as a final pre-curtain flourish and fol de rol, have foot lights and spot lights flash on, bring on from the wings a row of coed show girls and a row of coed pony chorus, have one of the older and more rickety and crotchety professors come on in a Confederate uniform, and another in a Union blue, have the band play the Alma Mater with plenty of blare and largo, and as a last Cohanesque touch have someone, Coach Haskins preferred, unfurl and wave the American flag back of the drum-majors, while the water-boys on each side wave the banners of Bucknell and of the visiting team.

Someone younger than I, and with more vivid imagination, can, no doubt, use this suggestion as a springboard from which to develop something really startling and commanding.

The institution should make further and better use of its dramatic department. Even minor suggestions for better stage management should not have to come from us oldsters, who no longer function so well in the realms of fancy, fantasy and flourish.

And, that I may remain incognito, irresponsible and even incommunicado, I sign the name of one of the 1905'ers, who outshone all in that ancient time in capacity for pleasant and inspiring nonsense.

Yours for the greater relief from seriousness, and for the better relish of a little nonsense now and then.

An Aroused Consciousness

THE largest Freshman Class in history did not just happen to drop into Lewisburg to go to college. They were inspired to come to Bucknell by Bucknellians. A debt of gratitude from the University is due to the Alumni Association, the alumni clubs, and the great alumni body of Bucknellians everywhere who made possible by their efforts this greatest of all entering classes. Examples by the score have been cited to us of youngsters who learned of Bucknell through our great nation-wide broadcast in March and then talked with alumni about becoming Bucknellians. Legacies too are here this year in greater numbers than ever before. Only a partial list of sons and daughters of graduates shows thirty-eight Freshmen with either or both parents alumni. It is encouraging to the future growth of an already great educational institution when large numbers of her students are of the second and even third generation. These new Bucknellians are steeped in the traditions of Bucknell and bring not only their own loyalty to Alma Mater but that of the generation that preceded them. Bucknell takes on a new meaning to parents who once were in the classrooms where their children are today. Their interests are aroused and again they will take an active part in the affairs of their Alma Mater.

Because of the impetus of an aroused alumni consciousness we confidently look forward to one of the most inspiring years of alumni association activities.

Through The Alumni Fund alumni are once again becoming a part of Bucknell, interested in her progress and aiding her toward newer and brighter heights.

Resignations

PRESIDENT RAINEY, Assistant Professor Brandon, and Associate Professor Warfel, '20, resigned their Bucknell posts in September to enter other fields. All have made substantial contributions to Bucknell's progress. Their absence from their accustomed places in the Bucknell picture will be keenly felt.

To Dr. Harry Redcay Warfel, distinguished member of the strong class of 1920, former Alumni Secretary and Editor of this magazine, and Associate Professor of English, we wish the best of luck and happiness in his new position at a sister institution. He has not left Bucknell—that is impossible—he has merely severed his official connections with the faculty. Good luck, Harry!

To Dr. Rainey and Mr. Brandon, Bucknellians by adoption, the alumni also wish success. They have been signally honored by being chosen for such high posts in the educational world. Bucknell will share in their advancement.

How Much?

WE are asked in many letters from alumni "How much shall I give to The Alumni Fund?" The answer must be a personal one as there is no set figure on alumni loyalty. Intangibles are not reckoned by dollar signs and the Alumni Fund is built upon the basis of loyalty. A dollar from one is oft times the equivalent of fifty from another. No alumnus is expected to give more than he or she can afford but all can afford something as an expression of loyalty and faith in Alma Mater. The amounts of gifts are never made public in order that all may enjoy equal rights and privileges.

Some alumni have chosen to give one dollar a year for every year since their graduation as their annual gift to the Fund. Others have given on the basis of one day's salary, and still others have budgeted their annual gift to Bucknell on the same basis as their club, lodge, or church.

Gifts for the current year have ranged from one dollar to one hundred. More than three hundred checks have been received in the past two months to a total of more than $1500.00 which figures out to an average gift of approximately five dollars.

The important thing is not the size of the gift but the gift itself.

Orel Samuel Groner

IN the death of Orel Samuel Groner, Professor of Chemistry, Bucknell loses an adopted son who labored long and well in the cause of education. Professor Groner was a task master of the old school who expected none but the best from his students. In working for him they learned to respect and admire him. Many have kept in constant touch with him in later years after leaving his classroom. He had a host of friends among the alumni of the college. His fame will become legendary with the passing of time as a man with so strong a personality marks himself indelibly upon those with whom he comes in contact.

Ten Club Awards

Ten selected Freshmen, members of the Class of 1939, are wards of as many Bucknell Alumni Clubs, as a result of the award of club scholarships offered to the various clubs by the University on National Alumni Night in March. The ten holders of club certificates are:

Wm. S. Baldwin Jr., Scranton; June Brugler, Lewistown; George Lane, New York; Henry Martin, Hazleton; Marcia Morrison, Rochester, N. Y.; Ralston Shupe, Pittsburgh; Robert Stevenson, South Jersey; Clarence Weaver, Sunbury; Ada Mae Wein, Williamsport.

DR. RAINEY RESIGNS

THE resignation of President Rainey as head of Bucknell took effect on the first of October, when he took up his new duties in Washington. He will direct the operation of a five year survey of American Youth problems under the sponsorship of The American Council on Education. A special grant of $800,000 was given to the Council for this survey by the Rockefeller Foundation.

Dr. Rainey came to Bucknell in August, 1931, from Franklin College, Indiana. In his administration at Bucknell the curriculum has been revamped, and the College has set up lower and upper divisions, the first two and the last two years of college work, respectively. A junior college has been established at Wilkes-Barre, and this unit is contributing more than fifty upper class students to the Lewisburg campus this year.

In a material way, the literature building was constructed and much of the funds for the reconstruction of Old Main, destroyed by fire in 1932, have been raised. A Bequest Division was established this year, and already approximately $175,000 has been written into wills and insurance policies. A complete architectural program for the future building on the campus has been planned.

In his new position, Dr. Rainey will direct an extensive inquiry into the conditions affecting American youth and make plans where needed for improvement of these conditions. He was first offered the position two months ago, but was reluctant to consider it. At that time he informed the president of the trustees of the proposal, and was told that the board would release him for such an important post in the nation's educational program.

In assuming his new post, Dr. Rainey said that "to take account of the needs of all young people, whether reached by existing social agencies or not, who are approximately 12 years of age and upward" was a task of vast and almost baffling proportions.

At his suggestion the commission approved the making of a comprehensive study of the whole problem, including a survey of all that is now being done for young people and an evaluation of the contributions which are being made by existing agencies.

It was felt that the commission should develop a program in the light of known facts, designed to fill in whatever gaps might be revealed in the general scheme of the care and education of youth.

"Despite the numerous excellent characteristics of the American educational system," Dr. Rainey said, "recent changes have given rise to new problems. It shall be our duty to make plans to meet them, and we invite the cooperation of individuals and groups."

The New York Times reported the meeting of The American Council on Education at which Dr. Rainey was chosen for his new post in part as follows:

With the approval of President Roosevelt, a new five-year program for the care and education of young people was begun today at the opening session here of the newly created Youth Commission, sponsored by the American Council on Education and financed by a grant of $800,000 from the General Education Board, a Rockefeller Foundation.

Meeting at the call of George F. Zook, President of the Council, eleven of the fourteen men and women named by him last week as members of the new commission elected as temporary chairman Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, and as director to carry on the active work of the program, beginning Oct. 1, Dr. Homer Price Rainey, President of Bucknell University, who resigned that post to devote his whole time to the new undertaking.

"I am pleased to learn of the Commission of the American Council on Education, which is to conduct a five-year study of the problems of American youth," President Roosevelt wrote in a welcoming letter to Dr. Zook. "Please extend my best wishes with my confident expectation that your commission and the National Youth Administration may be mutually helpful in their efforts for American youth."

BRANDON ALSO RESIGNS

Arthur L. Brandon, Assistant to the President, and Director of Public Relations accompanies Dr. Rainey to Washington as executive assistant. Mr. Brandon came to Bucknell in 1929 as a faculty member in the English Department and Director of Publicity when that department had grown to such proportions that it outgrew its original place in the Alumni office. In 1934 he was appointed Assistant to the President and during the past year has played an active part in the Selective Admissions and the Bequest programs. He has also taken an active part in the national association of College News Bureaus.

Who's Who In Education

Several hundred Who's Who in Education blanks have been returned and the materials are being assembled for the forthcoming volume. Many Bucknell educators, however, have failed to return their blanks filled out. It will be unfortunate if this volume does not contain the name of every Bucknellian in the field of education. If we have missed you, please write for a blank at once. If you have lost the blank we sent you, ask for another. We shall be glad to furnish it. Send all communications to F. G. Davis, '11, Department of Education.

Homecoming

EARLY indications point to one of the greatest Homecoming crowds on record in Lewisburg on October 26 when the Orange and Blue eleven meets the Presidents of Washington and Jefferson in Memorial Stadium. Advance sale of pasteboards by the Athletic Council is far in excess of any in recent years. An excellent program by the Alumni Association for the entertainment of visitors in addition to the game and a rejuvenated alumni interest in the college and the team are largely responsible for the early reservations for tickets and "places in the sun".

Thomas Wood, Esq., '05, of Muncy and Williamsport, has been named General Chairman by the Alumni Council and will direct, through his sub-chairmen the entire program of the day beginning with the Golf Tournaments in the morning and closing with the Alumni Ball at night. The sub-chairmen who have been appointed by General Chairman Wood are:

Golf—Malcolm E. Musser, '18
Dance—Herbert C. Grice, '18

Each sub-chairman will be assisted by a committee of two other members appointed by them.

"Mal" Musser of the Golf Committee plans two tournaments, one for the men and one for women. Increased interest among alumnae golfers prompted the committee to plan this special nine-hole match for the former co-eds. The men's match will also be a nine-hole contest played Saturday morning to permit Friday afternoon practice rounds for those who arrive early. Prizes will be offered and a small tournament fee is charged to cover the cost of the prizes.

Second Annual Dinner

The success of the Alumni Dinner (informal and NOT a banquet) held last year after the Homecoming Game was so marked that it is repeated again this year by popular demand. The demand is for a common meeting ground for all alumni where members of various fraternities may meet one another and enjoy dinner together. General Chairman Thomas Wood has announced that an effective "Gag Rule" will be imposed at the dinner with "No Speeches" as the order of the day. A special time clock device will be installed to sound an alarm at the end of three minutes as a "finis" to three commentators who will be called upon by the Chairman. It is thus impossible for there to be more than nine minutes of distraction from the business of eating and fellowship. The price of the dinner has been set at seventy-five cents per plate. No advance reservations will be acknowledged but tickets will be held at the door until six o'clock sharp when the dinner is to begin. Four hundred plates have been ordered, as the capacity of the Dining Hall.

The Alumni Ball

After the Dinner the Alumni Ball will begin as the closing event of the program. The orchestra will play from nine until twelve at The Dining Hall with an admission charge of seventy-five cents per person.

Alumni Headquarters

Alumni Headquarters will be maintained in The Literature Building, pictured herewith, where all alumni may meet Friday afternoon or evening, or Saturday before or after the game. The building contains ample rest room facilities, and a large

Team Wins Openers

Two games under the lights in Memorial Stadium have become history as this is written to launch the 1935 gridiron season at Bucknell. Strong teams from Pennsylvania Military College and Ursinus College have been met and subdued by scores of 7-0 and 20-0 by a Bison machine that is slowly gaining in strength and effectiveness despite their lack of man power. The entire varsity squad numbers but twenty-four men and of this lot only fifteen are letter men from previous seasons. Intensive work on the part of coaches Mylin and McAndrews have whipped the small squad into fighting shape despite early season injuries and the lack of reserves.

P. M. C. Game

The narrow margin of a single score in the P. M. C. opening game spelled victory for the Bisons as Stewart Smith, Junior halfback, crashed over for the six pointer in the second half after a sustained march down the field and the educated toe of Walter Dobie kicked the point after touchdown. The score does not indicate the superiority of Bucknell over the visitors. The first downs were impressively in Bucknell's favor, 11 to 2 and total yardage gained 295 to 85.

Ursinus Game

Faster interference, better blocking, harder charging, and more polished play in every department marked the second game of the year as Ursinus felt the bitter sting of a 20-0 defeat at the hands of Captain John Sitarsky and his Bison warriors. Stewart Smith was again outstanding with a newcomer to the varsity in the person of Bill Pfeiffer, Sophomore back from Montgomery, flashing into the limelight with a seventy-yard run around end for a touchdown.

Coed Drum Major

For the first time in Bucknell history coeds have been permitted to join the band. There are now eight of the fair "Semites" as members of this musical organization under Director Melvin LeMon. The same organization also boasts of another innovation with a Freshman girl drum major, Bernice Henry of Vandergrift. The band this year has reached its full quota of fifty pieces and has met with enthusiastic applause at both the night games this season.

Price Budget

Here are the top figures for those who must plan on the old family budget for Homecoming:

	Single	Double
The Game	2.28	4.56
The Dinner	.75	1.50
The Alumni Ball	.75	1.50
	3.78	7.56

A five dollar bill will see you through the program with cigarettes and peanuts at the game and if you bring the "best gal" a ten spot will be ample.

To Mr. Edwin J. Davies, '25, of Nanticoke, president of his class, goes the thanks of the Alumni Association for a collection of pictures of students, groups, etc., of ten years ago. Bucknelliana is always welcomed and treasured by The Alumni Association.

Professor Groner Dies

The University community was shocked on Monday, September 9, 1935, by the news of the sudden death of Professor Orel S. Groner of the Department of Chemistry. Death was attributed to a heart condition brought about by an attack of whooping cough.

Before coming to Bucknell in 1923, Professor Groner had taught at Transylvania College in Kentucky, Ottawa University in Kansas, and at Grand Island College in Nebraska. He graduated from Michigan State College and the University of Michigan, and held a master's degree from the University of Chicago. He was regarded as one of the foremost teachers of chemistry in the country, and for many years his students have established enviable records, particularly in medical colleges.

He was born in Michigan on August 11, 1871, a son of William and Margaret Groner, and during the World War served in the Student's Army Training Corps. He held membership in the American Chemical Society, American Association for Advancement of Science, American Association of University Professors, Alpha Chi Mu social fraternity at Bucknell and Alpha Chi Sigma National Professional Chemical Fraternity. He was a member of the Baptist church.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Alice Georgia Groner, whom he married in 1897, and a daughter, Miss Miriam Groner, '31, who recently was elected head of the science department of Louisburg College in North Carolina. Two brothers, Leonard Groner, of Seattle, Wash., and William Groner, of Michigan, and a sister, Mrs. Agnes Pingel, of Michigan, also survive.

Warfel, '20 Resigns

Dr. Harry R. Warfel, '20, Associate Professor of English at Bucknell and former Alumni Secretary (1923-24) resigned his position at Bucknell in September to accept a professorship in the English Department at the University of Maryland at College Park, Md. Dr. Warfel recently completed his graduate work at Yale and was awarded his doctorate there. He is engaged in writing the life of Noah Webster at the present time. His researches in this field have won him national attention.

'35 Trophy Presented

The Class of 1935 Semester Scholarship Trophy, recently created by the past graduating class was awarded for the first time at the annual Convocation by Alumni Secretary, Stoughton, '24, acting for the donors. Mr. Stoughton was introduced by President Rainey following the award of regular university prizes. A representative of Delta Delta Delta received the cup in recognition of the ranking of the fraternity at the top of the list for the second semester of 1934-35.

Fund Receives Fine Support

MORE than three hundred loyal alumni responded to the emergency appeal of The Bucknell Alumni Fund during the months of August and September, following the drastic withdrawal of college budget support from The Alumni Association. This figure is encouraging as indicative of early returns but far from what the final figure will be at the close of the present calendar year. The three hundred early gifts represent a cash value in excess of fifteen hundred dollars.

Class agents from a number of groups have already written special letters to former contributors urging their continued loyalty to the class and the Fund. Other class agents will communicate with their classmates during October. Special efforts will also be made by various alumni clubs, following the lead of Pittsburgh and New York officers who have stimulated many gifts from these two strong Bucknell centers.

Letters of commendation of the work of the Alumni Association and the Fund have been received by alumni officers from many alumni. A postcard from Germany and a letter from South America were among the many encouraging communications received. Indicative of an aroused alumni consciousness is the constant stream of letters attached to checks received daily by the alumni office. In previous years checks and bills came almost entirely without comment but this year in view of the emergency the greater percentage of returns are accompanied with letters of strong testimony to the value of the Fund and the best wishes of the donors for the success of the work.

Two more "direct by mail" appeals will be made in the present emergency in order to remind alumni of the urgent need for continuation of alumni activities and the necessity for funds during the present calendar year. It is confidently expected by alumni officers that more than one thousand loyal Bucknellians will be on their class rolls as contributors before January.

Largest Freshman Class

THE largest Freshman Class in the history of Bucknell University was enrolled at the opening of the eighty-ninth year of the College on September eighteen, nineteen hundred and thirty-five. Late registrations advanced the Class of 1939 to a total of three hundred and seventy-six.

The total student body is approximately more than two hundred larger than the preceding year with the figure of one thousand and eighty-two. Of this total figure fifty-three students are from the Junior College at Wilkes-Barre and forty-four are advanced standing people from other institutions.

Convocation on September twenty marked the official opening of the college when the faculty marched in full regalia from Bucknell Hall to the Baptist Church to hear an address by President Rainey to the student body and themselves. Dr. Rainey announced his resignation from the presidency of the University and reviewed the work of the past four years under his leadership. He expressed deep regret at leaving Bucknell and spoke of his new work as Director of The American Youth Commission.

Education Conference

A conference on education, probably not surpassed in its offerings in the past ten years, will be held on October 18 and 19 at Bucknell. Headliners for this meeting are George S. Counts of Columbia University; Philip W. L. Cox of New York University; Robert Hoppock of the National Occupational Conference; Arthur D. Wright, national secretary of Kappa Phi Kappa and former professor of Education at Dartmouth College; Robert M. Steele, '08, President of California State Teachers College; Frank P. Maguire, Dean of Men at East Stroudsburg State Teachers College; and Dean George F. Dunkleberger of Susquehanna University.

The Friday evening banquet will present Professor Stanislaus Koroco, H.I.C., who promises to rival in popularity the incomparable Wilson MacDonald of Canada, who entertained the group the past two years. The banquet will be provided by Mrs. Clara Sale, Bucknell dietitian, and promises to be even larger than those of the past three years.

Two general sessions will be held on Friday afternoon and evening at two and eight-thirty o'clock. At four o'clock Friday group meetings will be held by the Susquehanna Valley Secondary Principals' Association, the Parent-Teacher Associations, the Teacher Training group, and the Adult Education group engineered by Charles M. Emerick, '20, Bucknell alumnus in charge of all the emergency education in Pennsylvania.

Saturday morning groups are as follows: Elementary Education, Charles Hilbish, '09, County Superintendent of Northumberland County schools, Chairman; English teachers, Claire M. Conway, '05, head of the English Department in the Nanticoke High School, Chairman; Mathematics teachers, Joseph R. Grady, department of mathematics, Conference on Education, Plains Township High School, chairman; Guidance, S. Golembiewski, Principal of the Dickson City High School, chairman; Foreign Language teachers, Marguerite I. Quigley, '20, head of the department of modern languages, Williamsport High School, chairman; Science teachers, E. M. Gress, '07, State Botanist, Chairman; and Social Science teachers, H. C. Houser, '15, Supervising Principal of schools, Mifflintown, Pa., Chairman.

New York Party Nov. 2

Another great alumni rally for the alumni of the metropolitan New York area is now being planned by the officers of the New York and Northern New Jersey Clubs. President W. Cline Lowther, '14, of the New York Alumni Club has called a caucus meeting for October 16 to perfect the plans for the party which will be held at the Park Central Hotel on Saturday night, November 2. The caucus will be a stag affair held at the Park Central. More than five hundred cards announcing the caucus, the party and special plans for Homecoming have been mailed by the club to alumni in the area.

Tentative arrangements for the November first affair call for a dinner dance in a reserved room of the hotel.

Editor's Corner

SEVERAL promised offerings for this column have failed to show up in the editorial sanctum. We are forced to go to press without what we had hoped would be genuine pearls of wit and wisdom anent the band master and cheer leader questions. We must, for the sake of the record, report that many readers missed one of the hidden gems in this corner last month as they read the signature to the column and ignored the preceding paragraph wherein the writer stated that he was signing the name of another to his epistle.

The anonymous (?) writer picked a grand nom de plume in "Happy Cooper" as the real "Happy" will testify. He was here at Homecoming and collared us with fire in his eye. He had received four letters and two wires and thought that maybe he was going crazy as he knew not whereof his correspondents were writing. Somehow the mailman slipped up and the barrage of communications landed on "Happy" before he received his copy of the magazine and saw that someone had signed his name to a letter. Was our face magenta?

Homecoming was a great day from every standpoint. The team won, the weather was perfect, the dinner an eminent success, and the dance thoroughly enjoyed. The Alumni Association scored again in the opinion of many alumni who have commented in person and in writing to us for our sponsorship of the entire program. Only through complete cooperation of committees and the able work of chairmen could the day have been so ably managed and more than four hundred alumni entertained.

Some seven thousand football fans witnessed the victory over W. & J., a smaller crowd than usual, but a real "quality" crowd with many more alumni in sections "C" and "D" than in past years. The Alumni Dinner attracted more than three hundred and the dance a like number.

Three college presidents graced the Alumni Dinner, all responding briefly to introductions by Toastmaster Thos. Wood, Esq., '05. They were former President Rainey, Acting President Marts, and President Ralph Cooper Hutchinson of Washington and Jefferson.

Alumni President Dr. Samuel M. Davenport, '16, of Kingston, made a plea for support of the work of The Alumni Association through The Alumni Fund. Ye Editor also spoke briefly.

The Alumni Office reports good progress for the year with more than 350 donors to The Alumni Fund to November first. The gifts of these loyal alumni have enabled the Association to continue all activities to date. Two more months remain before the close of the fiscal year on December 30. A spirited contest between classes and local clubs in December is expected to produce at least 500 fund gifts.

Should alumni support their Association? The answer is found in the great strength of associations everywhere supported by alumni gifts running into many figures. The Bucknell Alumni Association has struggled for years with the loyal support of only a small percentage of the entire alumni body.

The challenge of the University Trustees to all alumni to support their own Association must be answered.

If you are among the thousands who receive this magazine and who have not made gifts to The Association won't you pause a moment to consider the value of the work of your own organization?

Your consideration, we know, will prompt the mailing of a check to Lewisburg today. Your Alumni Association deserves your support and needs your gift.

A quick turn of unexpected events catapulted me into the position of Acting President of Bucknell late in October and I am now commuting between New York and Lewisburg—with side trips to our Junior College at Wilkes-Barre—in an endeavor to serve the institution you and I love, and at the same time to continue my own business duties in New York. I realize already that the word "Acting" really means action and plenty of it. Incidentally, when my term expires on the 30th of next June, I shall start looking for a certain Trustee who talked me into this.

Of course, it would be quite impossible for me even to attempt to serve in this manner were it not for Dean Rivenburg's loyal consent to take over all the academic duties of the Presidency in addition to his usual heavy duties as Dean, and if there were not an equally fine spirit of devotion and cooperation amongst the entire faculty and administration.

I shall give my time and energy to such administrative duties as the following: to help the Board find the right man for Bucknell's permanent president; to do everything in my power to rebuild Old Main, in order that the pitiful wreck of that once beautiful building on the crest of the Hill may be restored to beauty and to the vital service of youth; to be of any help to Registrar Holter which he may desire in his program of attracting another record freshman class to Bucknell in September, 1936; to be active in seeking out new friends for Bucknell and in keeping old friendships alive; to be of service to the Bequest Division in their efforts to attract a constant flow of bequests, large and small, and voluntary gifts toward our endowment and toward certain new buildings sorely needed; to help our Junior College establish itself on sound organizational foundations. These are a few of several administrative duties that will have my attention.

I make no promise as to how much can be accomplished in any of these several directions during the next eight months; I promise only to do my utmost, and I want you to make the same promise to Bucknell.

We are grateful to Dr. Rainey for giving Bucknell such a grand start this fall on what gives assurance of being one of the most satisfying years in the ninety-year history of the University, and our best wishes go with him in his enviable new job in Washington.

The heart and hand of Alma Mater reach out to her alumni and former students across space and across the years with never-ending affection. Keep true to the ideals and aims and dreams of your student days! The great truths you learned here still prevail, even though passing disillusionments may sometimes shake your trust in them. Genuine happiness is to be found only on the upper highways of life, on the intellectual, cultural and spiritual highways to which Bucknell, with constancy of purpose, points her sons and daughters.

Yours cordially,

ARNAUD C. MARTS,

Acting President.

A. C. Marts, Acting President

MR. ARNAUD C. MARTS of New York was introduced to Bucknellians at the Homecoming Alumni Dinner on October 26, 1935 as the new Acting President of the University. He was named to the post by the Board of Trustees in special session on the preceding day. Mr. Marts has been a Trustee of the University since 1932. His association with Bucknell dates back to the 1924 Stadium Campaign when his firm raised the money for the structure. Later he directed an endowment campaign and through these two strong contacts with alumni has a wide acquaintance among Bucknellians.

Mr. Marts is President of Marts and Lundy, specialists in money raising for philanthropic institutions. He is a native of New York state and a graduate of Oberlin College in the Class of 1910 where he received Phi Beta Kappa honors. After graduating he entered the employ of the Standard Life Insurance Company of Pittsburgh and was elected vice-president and director of that corporation in 1917.

Organized Finances

At the outbreak of the World War he was called to Washington to assist in organizing finances for several war service agencies. After the Armistice he set up an office in New York and continued to serve as financial counsellor to educational, religious, and philanthropic agencies. As president of Marts and Lundy, Inc., he has succeeded in raising over $190,000,000 for philanthropic institutions.

In 1920 he married Miss Ethel Daggett of New Jersey, a graduate of Smith College who is noted for her activity in women's club work.

Bucknell's new head has been named to the boards of several national, religious, educational, and humanitarian societies. At Bucknell he has been prominent in the work of the Bequest Committee. He is president of the New York chapter of the Oberlin Alumni Association and belongs to the Sons of the American Revolution, to the Advertising Club, National Arts Club, Town Hall Club, the Broadway Congregational Church of New York City.

Succeeds Dr. Rainey

Mr. Marts succeeds Dr. Homer P. Rainey who resigned as president of Bucknell at the beginning of October to become Director of the American Youth Commission.

Ex-President Rainey announced the election of Mr. Marts to his new post to the 400 alumni attending the alumni banquet. In accepting the acting presidency, Mr. Marts stated, "It will be my aim to keep the standards of the University in that high place that those who have made them have maintained them. I do not expect to perform miracles. I plan not to make changes, but rather to lend my support in carrying out the excellent program already outlined for Bucknell."

Mr. Marts' work at Bucknell will not require his full time. He plans to devote part of every week to University affairs but at the same time he will continue his work as President of Marts and Lundy, Inc., in which capacity he acts as financial counsellor to educational, religious, and philanthropic institutions.

In his work he has had wide contact with educational institutions and their problems. He is greatly interested in the problems facing universities and colleges although he is primarily an administrator, not an educator.

Addresses Students

Rebuilding Old Main is an integral part of the five-point program which Mr. Marts, will attempt to carry out during his eight-month tenure of office, he told students and faculty members assembled at a special convocation on November 7.

"It should be rebuilt," he declared, "not only for the sake of appearances, but also for the service it should be rendering to the youth of the land."

Names Other Objectives

Other objectives which Mr. Marts said he will strive to attain are the following:

1. Finding the right man for the Bucknell presidency.
2. Securing another large quota of selected freshmen next year.
3. Attempting to see if funds for Administrator

An unassuming and sincere speaker, the new acting president explained that he will serve as president only in an administrative capacity.

To Dean Rivenburg will fall the supervision of all academic matters, he announced. "Dean Rivenburg will be the real leader of the students and faculty," he added.

Explaining the reason for his acceptance of the Bucknell presidency, in spite of pressing business obligations, Mr. Marts said, "It is the youth of America, the promise of a better world, that attracts me."

As he impressed upon his hearers the necessity of rebuilding Old Main, the New York business man pictured the present condition as the "sad ruins of what was once a beautiful piece of architecture." When he announced his intention of working toward Old Main's reconstruction, he was interrupted by a salvo of applause from the audience.

ALUMNA TRUSTEE

THE election of Dr. Mary Moore Wolfe to the Bucknell Board of Trustees, at the recent Homecoming meeting of that body, not only brings additional honors to an already-distinguished Bucknell graduate, but gives to the University the benefit of her great experience in executive and administrative offices. The selection of Dr. Wolfe for this position seems singularly appropriate, for not only is she a Bucknell graduate and a native of Lewisburg, but also her forebears were the men who actually brought about the erection of the University. Their descendants through the generations have continued to be interested in and connected with Bucknell, and this newly erected relationship but serves to continue and strengthen an old tie.

THE BUCKNELL BOOMERANG

The small folder issued as a supplement to this issue of your alumni magazine affords another opportunity to join the ranks of loyal Bucknellians who are contributing to the support of the work of the Alumni Association.

Many more alumni gifts are needed before the end of the year — less than one month away, if alumni organization activities are to continue. Have you sent your gift to the 1935 Fund? You will be glad to see your name with those of classmates in our January number when we list all of the 1935 contributors to The Alumni Fund.

Zoom the Boomerang right back at us. Your Association needs and merits your support. Do it today. Your officers and directors will be strengthened by your vote of confidence and carry on in 1936 with renewed vigor and zeal for Alma Mater.

COMMERCIAL CURRICULUM APPROVED

Official approval by the State Department of Education came to Bucknell's new course in Commercial Education during October. The course is a four-year curriculum leading to the degree of Bachelor of Science in Commerce and Finance. Miss Mildred Sears of Seattle, Washington, has been added to the Commerce and Finance Department faculty to handle the work of the new commercial subjects involved in the new curriculum. These subjects include shorthand, typing, secretarial practice, office methods, corporation accounting and the allied liberal arts subjects. The official approval granted the curriculum by the Pennsylvania State Council on Education carries with it similar recognition in New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, Ohio and West Virginia.

BALTIMORE ALUMNI DINNER

After the Bucknell-Western Maryland game in Baltimore on October 19, sixteen Bucknellians gathered at The Lord Baltimore Hotel for dinner and reunion. Graduate Manager Griffith, '99, and Alumni Secretary Stoughton, '24, were representatives of The University in attendance.

ADE, '21, PRAISES GLEE CLUB

High praise has been given the Bucknell Glee Club by Lester K. Ade, '21, state superintendent of public instruction, in a letter to Dr. Paul Stolz, head of the music department.

The gleemen sang recently at a testimonial dinner given for Dr. Ade by the educators of Pennsylvania.

The text of Dr. Ade's letter of commendation follows:

I want to express my sincere appreciation to you and to members of the Glee Club who made such an outstanding contribution at the testimonial dinner which school folks of the State so kindly held recently in my honor at the Syria Mosque in Harrisburg.

The program was well selected and really marvelously rendered. It warmed my heart and brought back vivid memories of Bucknell and the noble things for which she stands.

I noticed particularly that the audience of more than six hundred waited in pleasant expectancy for each number, and their pleasure and satisfaction was fully reflected in the splendid reception awarded your outstanding group.

To me this part of the program of tribute was the best of all. It was a moment which, thoroughly enjoyed, brought a deserved feeling of pride in our Alma Mater, reflected, I am sure, in the entire gathering of Pennsylvania school leaders.

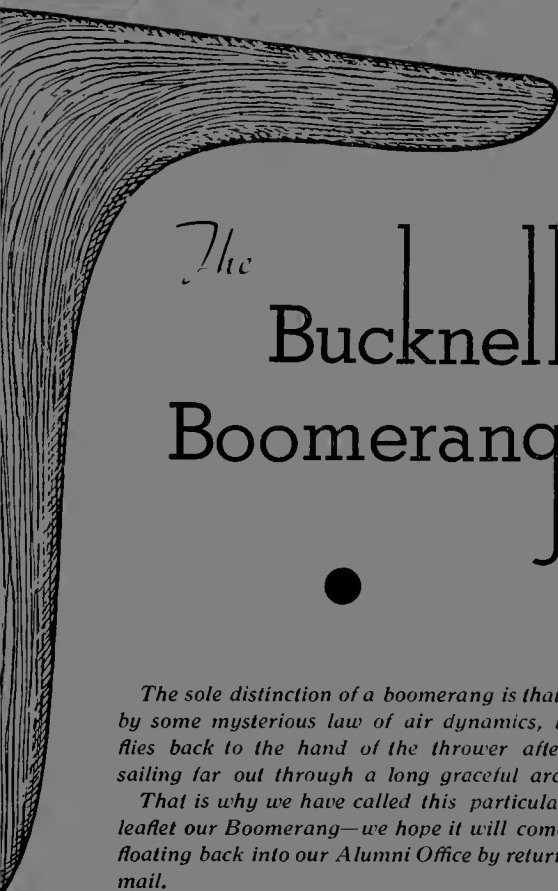

With kind regard and sincere appreciation, I am
Sincerely yours,
Lester K. Ade.

SCRANTON CLUB ENTERTAINS FROSH

Secretary Norman W. Morgan, '23, and President Sanford Berninger, '22, of the Scranton Alumni Club were the organizers of a fine alumni party on November 16 when Bucknell Day was celebrated at Keystone Junior College at La Plume. The visit of the Bucknell Freshman team to Keystone was the occasion for the party. After the game (Frosh 32-Keystone 12) the teams were entertained at dinner at the school by some thirty alumni. President Berninger acted as toastmaster and introduced President Byron Hollinshead of Keystone, Graduate Manager B. W. Griffith, Coach Mose Quinn, and Alumni Secretary Stoughton, all from Bucknell. Mr. Benjamin Harris, '08, of Old Forge was the song leader. Other speakers included Assistant Coach Azar of Keystone. Following dinner a dance was given in the Keystone Gymnasium.

CHURCH SUMMER ASSEMBLY

On a recent visit to the campus by the Dean and Trustees of the Congregational-Christian Summer Assembly announcement was made that Bucknell had been chosen as the site for the annual meeting of the Assembly. The session represents more than one hundred and fifty churches in Pennsylvania.

The Bucknell
Boomerang

The sole distinction of a boomerang is that, by some mysterious law of air dynamics, it flies back to the hand of the thrower after sailing far out through a long graceful arc.

That is why we have called this particular leaflet our Boomerang—we hope it will come floating back into our Alumni Office by return mail.

And we hope that,
as it floats into our office, it will bear a check or gift to the 1935 Alumni Fund, which you will have pinned on it.

But wait—do you have a clear-cut picture of what the Alumni Fund is?

Primarily,
it is for the purpose of maintaining an Alumni Office on The Hill. In future years when the Alumni Fund may be large enough, these gifts can be used also for scholarships and for general University purposes, but for the present the Alumni Fund is for the purpose of:

- Editing, publishing and sending to you gratis each month the Alumni Monthly;
- Keeping Alumni addresses up-to-date;
- Arranging the annual homecoming and reunions at Lewisburg;
- Servicing the various Alumni Clubs;
- Keeping friendly contacts alive between Alma Mater and the Alumni.

It costs only $7,000 a year to do this, and of this budget the University pays $2,500. The balance must come by the voluntary gifts of the Alumni.

The Alumni Office

is the warm handclasp between the University and her sons and daughters, wherever they may be.

Alma Mater

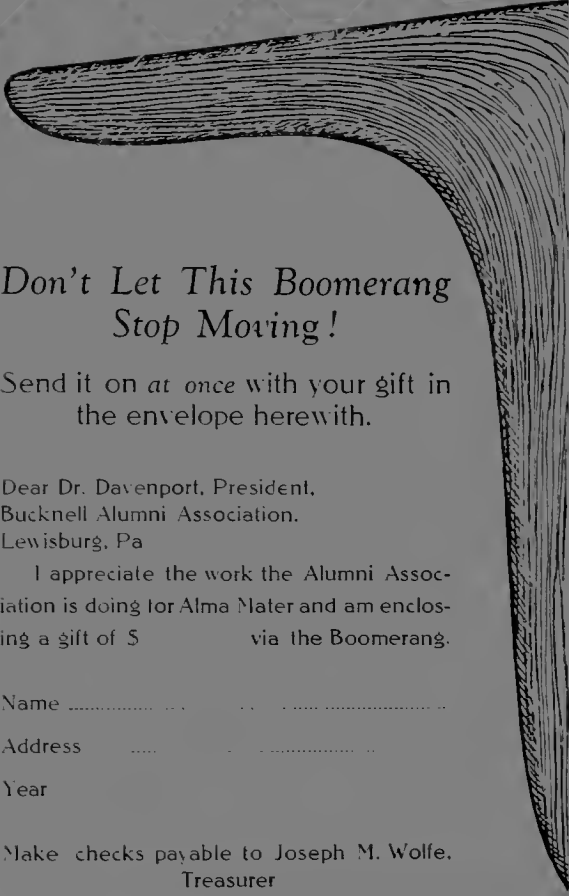

shows her desire for this friendship with you by appropriating funds out of her meagre treasury to the Alumni office.

Won't you show your friendship also by pinning a gift to this Boomerang and zooming it to us at once in the self-addressed envelope?

SOUTH JERSEY CLUB MEETS

The Woodbury Country Club was the scene on Friday, October 18 of one of the largest Bucknell alumni parties in recent years when the Alumni Club of Southern New Jersey gathered for their first meeting of the year to hear former President Homer P. Rainey.

Kenneth W. Slifer, '25, President of the organization, presided and introduced the speaker, Dr. Rainey told of his new work in Washington with the National Youth Commission and his regrets at leaving Bucknell. He predicted that the University will prosper in the coming years and urged the support of alumni on University programs.

Refreshments were served by a committee of alumnae to round out a most pleasant Bucknell evening.

By unanimous vote of the meeting the name of Mrs. Helen Hare Sholl, '10, was proposed as alumni trustee candidate from the club to the General Alumni Association for ballot in June 1936. Mr. Clyde Ellzey, '27, Treasurer of the club reported on the finances of the organization. Al G. Stoughton, '24, Alumni Secretary, responded to an introduction by President Slifer and urged all alumni to support the alumni fund and also extended an invitation for all to return to Homecoming.

BUCKNELLIAN AT YALE

A number of Bucknellians pursuing graduate study at Yale University were entertained at a buffet supper by John S. Burlew, '30 and Grace (Schaum) Burlew, '30, at their home, 725 Orange Street, New Haven on Wednesday evening, October 30th. Dr. Burlew is investigating the heat capacities of liquids as a Sterling Fellow in the Chemistry Department of Yale.

The guests were: William H. Genne, '31, B.D. (Yale) '34, who is completing the work for his master's degree; F. Arthur Guldin, '32, who expects to receive his B.D. degree next spring; William Druckenmiller, '35, a first-year medical student; F. Allen Farrington, '35, a student in the Law School; Walton B. Geiger, '35, a graduate student in chemistry; and Clarence B. Howells, '35, a student in the Divinity School.

During the evening Mr. John N. Feaster, '30 and Mrs. Feaster, who were visiting in New Haven, called for a short while. Mr. Feaster is pastor of the South Congregational Church of Kennebunkport, Maine.

Two other Bucknellians who were unable to be present at the supper were David J. Davis, '32, a Divinity School student, and Irving Glickfield, '35, a first-year law student.

"WHO'S WHO" IN EDUCATION

A large number of "Who's Who" blanks and requests for blanks have come in since the announcement in the preceding issue of the Alumni Monthly. We expect that this volume will be off the press by the end of the school year and the editing is already in process. Every Bucknellian in the field of education, no matter what branch of the field, will be listed. If you have a "Who's Who" blank, fill it out and send it in. If you do not have one, be sure to write to F. G. Davis '11, immediately, for one of these blanks. We want this volume to be as nearly complete as possible.

Three Elected Trustees

Dr. Mary Moore Wolfe, '96

AT the special meeting of The Board of Trustees at Homecoming three new members were elected. They are the two former presidents, Dr. E. W. Hunt, and Dr. Homer P. Rainey and an outstanding alumna, Dr. Mary Wolfe, '96.

After her graduation from Bucknell in 1896, Miss Wolfe in 1899 received her degree in medicine from the University of Michigan. A woman of unusual physical vigor, of unusual mentality, will power, and industry, she soon proved that she also had real executive force.

At 25, Dr. Wolfe was appointed an assistant physician in the Woman's Department of the Norristown State Hospital in Pennsylvania. In two years she had been made chief physician. This position, which gave her her first wide experience with mental diseases, she resigned late in 1910 to open a private sanitarium.

This work Dr. Wolfe continued until 1914, when she was elected to the newly-created position of Superintendent of the Laurelton State Village, an institution for mentally defective girls and women, which as yet existed only on paper. It was Dr. Wolfe's task to erect the buildings, create a staff, plan the work of the institution, and administer everything. All this she did, and after 20 years of work, during which time she has built up a notable organization, she is still serving the state as head of the institution.

In 1906, while Dr. Wolfe was chief physician at Norristown, she was one of 10 alienists requested by a Congressional investigation committee to inspect the Government hospital for the insane at Washington, D. C., and to testify as to its general condition and the efficiency of its administration. In 1907 the Federal Government sent her to Amsterdam, Holland, as one of five delegates representing the United States, to attend an International Congress on Nervous and Mental Diseases. In 1933 she was elected vice-president of the American Association on Mental Deficiency, and in June, 1934, she was elected president of that organization.

Member Of Many Groups

Dr. Wolfe is a member of Pi Beta Phi fraternity. She has been identified with the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Women's Christian Temperance Union, the Pennsylvania Council of Republican Women, the Business and Professional Women of Pennsylvania, and has been president of the General Alumnae Association of Bucknell University. In addition to receiving her A.B. degree here in 1896, Dr. Wolfe gained a Bucknell A.M. in 1900. In 1933 Bucknell conferred upon Dr. Wolfe the degree of Sc.D., this being the second time in 87 years that an honorary doctorate has been conferred upon a woman by Bucknell. Dr. Wolfe is also a member of the Woman's Legislative Council of Pennsylvania. All these interests are outward and visible signs of Dr. Wolfe's continued belief in the practice and the value of social service.

Probably her interest in public service is an inherited trait, for Dr. Wolfe comes from a family that has been distinguished for its interest in the public welfare. Her father, the Honorable Charles S. Wolfe, was a member of the state legislature in the '70's and the '80's.

Grandfather Founded College

Three of Dr. Wolfe's grandfathers were among the 10 founders of Bucknell University. One great uncle, a physician, was chairman of the original board of trustees. Another great uncle, also a trustee, in 1845 made the tedious trip from central Pennsylvania to Providence, R. I., to consult President Francis Wayland, of Brown University, as to the best ways of developing a Baptist college in Lewisburg.

MISS EISLEY HEADS PUBLICITY WORK

Miss Trennie Eisley, '31, of Lewisburg, former assistant to Arthur L. Brandon, was named by President Rainey as University Editor in charge of publicity at the time of the resignation of Mr. Brandon. Miss Eisley has been an instructor in the English Department for several years and was the first woman editor of The Bucknellian during her senior year in college. As an assistant she has had the able services of Mr. Walter W. Ruch, '34, also a former Bucknellian editor. Mr. Ruch is in charge of all sports publicity. He also owns and operates The Lewisburg News Service, a reportorial organization supplying metropolitan daily papers with news of the University and surrounding territory.

PERMANENT NEW YORK HEADQUARTERS

By formal action of The Bucknell Club of New York, The Park Central Hotel was named Bucknell Headquarters for the organization. The first use was made of this hotel at the time of the N. Y. U. game when the team, band, officials, and New York Club Dinner were all housed there.

As an aid to alumni visitors to New York and as well to New Yorkers the hotel acts as custodian of an alumni directory of the greater New York area. A visit to the hotel or a telephone call will procure names and addresses of alumni resident within fifty miles of the city. The file is open for alumni inspection at any time at the office of the Assistant to the General Manager, Mr. Neal Lang.

Football Season To Date

By Walter W. Ruch, '34

With the season almost finished, Bucknell's football team looks back upon a record void of major thrills, spotted with great disappointments, and marked by listless performances in sharp contrast with the fighting gridmen of 1934.

To date, two traditional opponents have been defeated, with the Bisons on bended knee to the third. Washington and Jefferson, one of the oldest rivals, was beaten in the Homecoming game, 6 to 0, and Western Maryland, one of the newer set of enemies, dropped a game to Bucknell, 3 to 0, at Baltimore.

Harry Stuhldreher's Villanova Wildcats, one of his strongest teams, had a comparatively easy time of it in defeating Bucknell, 25 to 0.

So much for traditional grid rivalries. In other games, Bucknell opened its season by defeating Pennsylvania Military College, 7 to 0, and followed through a week later with a 20 to 0 triumph over Ursinus. Both were nocturnal games.

New York University had no trouble in taking the Thundering Herd into camp, 14 to 0, in a game at Yankee Stadium, and the following week the hapless Bisons fell an easy victim to Detroit University in the Herd's first trip west of Pennsylvania in a decade, 53 to 0.

The Detroit defeat was the worst since 1916, the year when Georgetown gave the Bisons their worst defeat in history, 78 to 0, and Washington and Lee, two weeks earlier, smothered Bucknell 55 to 7.

Bucknell still faces Penn State, its most bitter grid rival, and Temple University, a younger but almost equally sharp contestant. Victory over either would spell a successful season, and wins over both would spell a phenomenon.

The Nittany Lions, in the outstanding home game on the tough 1935 card, come to Memorial Stadium on Saturday, November 23, for the third successive game of the long series. The clash this year will be the twenty-third since the teams met first in 1887, when State smothered the Bisons, 54 to 0.

Bucknell has won the last five games of the series, played in 1927, 1928, 1929, 1930, and 1934, but State holds the upper hand in the string of games, 13 to 9. Not once has a Bucknell-State game been stalemated.

This year the game will be featured by the final home appearance of nine Bisons, heading whom is Captain John Sitarsky, the quarterback. Others who will wear the Orange and Blue for the last time in Memorial Stadium are: Victor Lauerman, center; Edwin Raymaley, halfback; Robert Pethick, end-center; William Wilkinson, end; William Moir, tackle; Philip Miller, fullback; John Wilson, guard; and Walter Dobie, guard.

One of the biggest surprises on The Hill this fall, however, isn't concerned with the varsity. It's the Freshman team, coached by Mose Quinn and showing more promise than any yearling aggregation in five years. It should contribute at least 20 much needed players to the varsity squad next year. To date the Frosh have scored decisive victories over Keystone Academy and Penn State Frosh and lost only to Temple Frosh by a single "fluke" touchdown. Their final game is with Wyoming Seminary at Kingston on Thanksgiving Day.

 HOMECOMING

MORE than four hundred alumni returned to the campus for Homecoming on October 26, 1935. The big game attraction in Memorial Stadium brought seven thousand more fans to see the Bisons defeat Washington and Jefferson, 6-0, in the last quarter with a well earned touchdown as a result of a steady march down the field. Stuart Smith, junior halfback ace, did most of the work and carried the ball finally into touchdownland for the only score.

Golf

Prior to the game an alumni golf tournament Friday afternoon and Saturday morning claimed the attention of a crowd of visitors. Winners in the two days play included James C. Craig, '20, of Philadelphia, S. L. Seemann, '17, of Pittsburgh, Dr. James Cornely, '26, of Morrisdale, and Mrs. John A. Koons, of Scranton, wife of John A. Koons, '00.

Dinner

In fitting celebration of the football victory more than three hundred alumni and friends gathered at the second annual Homecoming Dinner at Women's College, following the game. Toastmaster Thomas Wood, Esq., '05, introduced the three honored college presidents as guests of the alumni: President Ralph C. Hutchinson of Washington and Jefferson, former President Homer P. Rainey and Acting President A. C. Marts of Bucknell. Others who responded with brief remarks included President S. M. Davenport, '16, of the General Alumni Association, Alumni Secretary Al G. Stoughton, '24, and Malcolm E. Musser, '18, who presented the golf prizes.

 TENTH ANNUAL CONFERENCE ON EDUCATION

Approximately two thousand people attended the various sections of the Bucknell Conference on Education, October 18 and 19. The usual schedule of general sessions on Friday afternoon and evening and Saturday morning at eleven o'clock, was carried out.

The headliners for the Conference were Dr. George S. Counts of Columbia University, who spoke on "Education in Industrial Society" and "The Future of American Democracy," and Dr. Philip W. L. Cox of New York University, who spoke at the general session on "Adolescent Youth and His World," and "Environment as Curriculum," and also to the high school principals on "Teachers' Personalities as Aspects of the High School Curriculum." Speakers at the Saturday morning general session were Dr. Robert Hoppock of the National Occupational Conference, and Dr. Arthur D. Wright, national secretary of Kappa Phi Kappa. Dr. Hoppock spoke on "The Dissatisfied Teacher" and Dr. Wright on "The Secondary School Teacher."

About fifty persons appeared on the various programs, fifteen of these being Bucknell graduates. The Bucknellians who appeared are as follows:

R. H. Rivenburg '97, E. E. Marvin '25, Charles M. Emerick '20, Robert M. Steele '08, F. G. Davis '11, Claire M. Conway '05, Jane R. Beakley '28, Marguerite I. Quigley '20, Leo L. SEASON'S GREETINGS

CHRISTMAS greetings and all the good wishes of the season to Bucknellians everywhere from The General Alumni Association! This special number of your magazine carries not only these greetings but also special news of the second annual Bucknell On The Air Program. This year we celebrate the completion of ninety years of service to the youth of America as on the night of February 5, 1936, we broadcast a radio program from New York to the world and especially to Bucknellians. On the same date exactly ninety years ago Governor Francis Shunk of Pennsylvania signed the charter which created the University at Lewisburg which was later to become Bucknell.

ALUMNI DINNERS

PLANS are in process for the celebration of Charter Day and Bucknell On The Air in more than one hundred alumni centers. In 1935 more than forty alumni gatherings were held to hear the broadcast from the campus. This year the number is expected to exceed one hundred. Large established alumni clubs in the great eastern cities plan extensive programs for their parties. Scores of smaller parties will be announced in the January number of this magazine as they are organized from coast to coast. It is the hope of the General Alumni Association officers that where there are even two loyal alumni living in the same city they will get together on the night of Charter Day to hear together the radio program that will link some seven thousand sons and daughters of Alma Mater together on the night of February 5.

SELECTIVE ADMISSION

AS Bucknellians celebrate Charter Day and the completion of ninety years of honorable history, alumni will be reminded that even more fruitful years lie ahead. Only through alumni cooperation and interest can Bucknell continue to grow and prosper. The largest freshman class in history, now on the campus, must be surpassed in numbers and quality by the class of 1940 which enters Bucknell this September. The program of "Selective Admission" will be brought to the attention of Bucknellians that they may know of the needs of the college for students of high academic, moral, and spiritual trainings. It is the hope of the faculty that only those students who rank well in their high school or preparatory school classes may be recommended by alumni on the program of "Selective Admission".

THE ALUMNI FUND

BEFORE the end of the year 1935 more than five hundred Bucknellians will enroll as members of The Alumni Fund. As this is written ten days before Christmas the list exceeds four hundred. Those who have not yet returned "The Boomerang" are urged to include the Alumni Association in their Christmas Card list with a gift to place their names with those of classmates who have been the loyal supporters of the Association during the past year.

A LETTER FROM THE REGISTRAR

To All Alumni:

A survey of the present Freshman Class indicates clearly that our program of "Selective Admission" prompted many Bucknellians to recommend students to Alma Mater. More sons and daughters of alumni than in any previous class are now on the campus. One alumnus more than two hundred miles from the campus sent four students during the past year. Others have interested promising youngsters in Bucknell and even brought them to the campus for visits during the year.

Bucknell needs the endorsement of her own alumni to her future alumni. It is not too early even now to recommend Bucknell to the leaders in High School senior classes. Our program of "Selective Admission" really means all that the name implies. We prefer students recommended by alumni and urge upon you to select the outstanding young men and women of your acquaintance as prospective Bucknellians.

This office acts as counsellor on educational problems. We shall be happy to consult with parents of prospective students on their problems. A request for information will bring a prompt reply and helpful service.

Bucknell acknowledges with gratitude the loyal cooperation of many alumni not only during the past year but for many years. Our hope is that more alumni will join with us in our program of selecting only the finest and best for our future alumni.

Sincerely,

H. W. HOLTER, '24, Registrar.

The Books Close

ON DECEMBER 31 ON THE ALUMNI FUND OF 1935

More than four hundred loyal Bucknellians have sent their gifts for the current year.

Your Alumni Association Officers hope for at least another one hundred names to be added to the Class Lists that appear in our January report.

If you have delayed in sending your check to the Fund, why not send it TODAY as a Xmas or New Year's Gift.

The Alumni Fund helps to send you this magazine and keeps alive everywhere that Bucknell spirit of which we are all proud.

Join your classmates and read your name with theirs in January in this ---your magazine.

ON February 5th, 1846, the Hon. Francis Shunk, the Governor of Pennsylvania signed the Charter of our Bucknell University. This coming February 5th will be the 90th anniversary of that historic event and we are planning to celebrate the occasion by a coast-to-coast broadcast that evening.

The National Broadcasting Company has given Bucknell a half hour on a national radio hook-up for the Charter Day exercises at an hour which will enable Bucknell clubs and groups in all sections of the nation to participate. The broadcast will be from 10:00 to 10:30 P.M., Eastern Time; which is 9:00 to 9:30 P.M., Central Time; 8:00 to 8:30 P.M., Mountain Time; and 7:00 to 7:30 P.M., Pacific Time. The program will consist of 18 minutes of music by our glee club and by other Bucknell musicians and 12 minutes of greetings and announcements. Professor LeMon will arrange and direct the musical portion of the program. The Speakers will be men prominent in the educational and public life of the nation. I shall announce the details of the program in January.

You are invited and urged to "reune" on the evening of February 5th in every city and town where a score or more of Bucknellians can be gathered together for a dinner or other type of meeting. A member of the faculty will be sent out to each such group within reasonable distance which may request a speaker. In those communities where there may be only a few Bucknellians, perhaps one of you will invite the others to sit about your fireside and to listen together to Alma Mater's birthday party. One alumnus, who expects to be in a hotel a thousand miles from home on the night of February 5th, has told me he will have a radio in his room that night in order that he, may join in unseen, though no less real, fellowship of that half hour.

I am writing to the officers of our Alumni clubs and to other active leaders in our alumni centers to request them to take the initiative at once in making arrangements for these Charter Day reunions. We will publish in the January Alumni Monthly a list of all the reunions about which we shall have been notified, giving the place, the hour, the cost of the dinner and the name of the Bucknellian in charge. Alumni Secretary, A. G. Stoughton, will visit any cities within reasonable distance, where his help in arranging Charter Day dinners may be requested.

I have asked Registrar Holter to make suggestions as to how the Charter Day Broadcast may be used by Bucknellians to interest choice young people of their communities in coming to Bucknell. His suggestions are given herein on another page. Please read them carefully and give him the cooperation he requests.

As to Old Main,—it must be restored and ready for use by September, 1936! It will cost approximately $375,000 to rebuild and refurnish the entire structure. Our books are now open for gifts and subscriptions for that purpose. Mr. Charles P. Vaughan, the devoted and generous chairman of our Board of Trustees, has made the first subscription, in the amount of $50,000. Another trustee, Senator Andrew J. Sordoni, has subscribed $15,000. Mr. Robert L. Rooke, a trustee and an alumnus of the class of 1913 has subscribed $10,000; and $10,000 was also subscribed by a trustee recently deceased, the late Mr. Henderson Supplee. Mr. E. T. Weir of Pittsburgh, neither a trustee nor an alumnus, has given us $7,500 and twelve trustees have subscribed an additional $11,000, bringing Old Main's fund up to $101,500. Of this amount, 85% has been subscribed by non-alumni. This is an undertaking which will undoubtedly appeal with unusual sentimental force to the alumni. Dormitory rooms may be memorialized by subscriptions of $1,000 each and it is hoped that many alumni will wish to restore the very rooms which they themselves once occupied. It is the present policy of the Board of Trustees not to start building operations until the entire $375,000 is in hand or in sight. This policy is a protection against the costly error of starting something we can't finish.

The Board of Trustees held their semi-annual meeting in Philadelphia on December 14th. Following the Board meeting, the trustees, administrative officers, the new Faculty Advisory Council, and the officers of the Alumni Association and the Athletic Council, met for luncheon and a general discussion of Bucknell matters. Twelve new committees of the Board were created for the purpose of harnessing the genuine interest and devotion of this splendid body of men and women to greater service to Bucknell. Following are the new committees and their chairmen: Junior College, Albert McClintock; Endowment and Scholarship, Edward M. Greene; Development and Construction, Senator A. J. Sordoni; Athletic Student Health and Physical Education, Dr. Harvey Smith; Alumni Relations, Roy G. Bostwick; Relations with Churches, Dr. M. G. Evans; Investments, Robert L. Rooke; Centennial in 1946, Judge Thomas J. Baldrige; Bequests, Joseph W. Henderson; Landscaping, David Burpee; Pennsylvania Folk Festival, Oliver J. Decker; Pensions, John B. Stetson.

At this meeting, the trustees elected Dean Rivenburg to the newly created post of Vice-President of the University. This was done in recognition of the additional duties which the Dean has assumed so efficiently and so loyally in connection with my acting presidency. Vice-President Rivenburg will continue to be the Dean and will also discharge the academic duties of the presidency, while I discharge the administrative duties of that office. Every friend of Bucknell will be gratified to learn of this new title and recognition which has come to Dr. Rivenburg.

If you are near a radio on Thursday noon, January 16th, tune in on the N.B.C. from 1:15 to 2:00 P.M. and hear Dr. Rainey address the Advertising Club of New York on the subject, "An Educational Program for American Youth". Mr. H. B. LeQuatte, the President of the Club is the parent of a Bucknell student, so Bucknell will be well represented on that nation-wide broadcast.

I shall report again to you in the January Monthly any news of the campus that I think will be of general interest. Meanwhile, greetings to you all from Alma Mater,

Cordially yours,

Editor's Corner

AS a partial report of our activities before, during and since the holidays we refer you to the list of alumni parties which appears on the inside back cover of this issue. Will you be taking part in one of these? If not, why not organize one of your own around your own radio set inviting neighbors and friends to listen to Alma Mater on the air. We know you will be proud of Bucknell again. Do a little boasting! — or should we say boosting for boasting is not supposed to be quite au fait! Anyway talk about Bucknell to your friends!

We presume we were talked about for not printing the football scores of the final games of the season. Our November issue went to press before the games were played and the December folder was only our Christmas card to you all and no proper vehicle for carrying salt to rub into the wounds inflicted on one well known Lion and a poor old Owl. We have, however, now gotten around to printing the story of the State and Temple games. They are on another page in this issue.

Dean R. H. Rivenburg, recently named to the newly created office of Vice-President of the University writes in this issue about the academic program. The changes that have been made are in the fields of administration and form definite steps toward solidification of strong academic gains made in recent years.

Late reports from the basketball front give the 1936 basketeers playing in Orange and Blue jerseys the name of "Extra Period Bisons". In the first four games extra periods were needed to settle the argument. The scores are still all on the credit side of the ledger as the "Extra Period Bisons" used the time to break the tie and emerge victorious. Coach "Mal" Musser '18, is still wondering what happened from last season.

A contemporary editor prints in his alumni magazine some interesting statistics copied from the trade journal "Printer's Ink" on mailing lists. A study of an average list of one thousand names revealed the following interesting information: In three years 410 have changed addresses from one to four times, 261 have moved to parts unknown, seven have died, one has gone to jail. This Ed. in his dual capacity as alumni secretary is nurse maid to an alumni address list of more than seven thousand names of Bucknellians. Our present "Lost" group is less than 4% of the total file yet we hear complaints often of some one who does not receive the magazine!

More power to the complainants! Every complaint gets one more address to bring our percentage of error down to that never to be realized zero point. Do you know anyone not in our files? Send the name and address right in. We thank you!

Many interesting alumni notes have been withheld from this issue in order to present a special "Personals" section in our February number which will appear at the end of the month. Have you moved, been married, divorced, died, or had a baby? Maybe you have a new job, lost the old one or been appointed, elected, honored, or defeated? Anything of concern to you is of interest to your fellow Bucknellians. Send it in!

The Glee Club tours the East in February. If they are in your town go to hear them. They are the best singing outfit we have ever heard under the Bucknell banner. Recommend them to your friends and go to hear them for your own enjoyment and to feel that sense of pride in Alma Mater. You will hear them on the Charter Day Program.

Until Charter Day, February five at ten thirty, then, talk and plan Bucknell. — And a Happy New Year.

DEAR FRIENDS OF BUCKNELL:-

Plans for the celebration of Bucknell's 90th Anniversary on Charter Day, February 5th, are being made in scores of cities. The program will be broadcast by the National Broadcasting Company on a coast-to-coast hook-up from 10:30 to 11:00 P. M., Eastern Standard Time. The Bucknell Glee Club will sing and two gentlemen of national prominence will speak briefly — Hon. Bainbridge Colby, former Secretary of State in President Wilson's Cabinet, and Dr. Robert L. Kelly, Secretary of the Association of American Colleges.

Members of our faculty will speak at numerous Charter Day dinners that evening prior to the broadcast. In communities where there are not enough Bucknellians to warrant a large party, alumni are planning to meet in small groups en famille.

Since the last issue of the Monthly, when we announced a total of $101,500 in subscriptions toward rebuilding Old Main, we have been made happy by the receipt of another gift of $10,000 toward the fund. This came from Mr. Daniel C. Roberts of Wilkes-Barre, a fine friend of Bucknell, not an alumnus, who was elected to our Board of Trustees last year. We are deeply grateful to Mr. Roberts for his unsolicited generosity.

The cost of rebuilding and refurbishing Old Main will be about $375,000, divided as follows: $160,000 to rebuild and equip the Central Section; $105,000 to rebuild and equip the East Wing; and $105,000 to rebuild and equip the West Wing. Somehow the way must be found this Spring and Summer to put this fine old building, rich in tradition, back into its vital service of youth. The books are open for gifts and subscriptions toward this supremely important enterprise.

It is time now for Bucknellians to begin to think earnestly and to act zealously about the Freshman Class which will enter Bucknell next September. Last September we received the largest Freshman Class in the history of the University. Next September, it is important that we should admit a Freshman Class equally large. Through the cooperation of all—alumni, administration, faculty, students, and friends—this can be achieved.

Some happy day in the future when Bucknell's endowment may become large enough to yield a generous proportion of our annual income, we will be able to regard the size of the student body with little concern. But for the present, the size of our student body is of vital concern, for student fees must provide 90% of our operating income.

Won't you, therefore, be on the alert to recommend Bucknell to choice young people of your community? Many of them are now weighing the possibilities of going to college next September. Encourage those who are qualified by educational preparation, by character and by spirit to become Bucknellians, to apply for admission here. If you will send their names and addresses to Registrar H. W. Holter, he will send them a View Book, a Catalogue and other material. If you will send their names in immediately, Mr. Holter will also send them invitations to listen in on our Charter Day Broadcast program.

I should like to call your attention to some of the creative and scholarly work that is being done by members of our faculty. Space does not permit this month, but I shall hope that it will in a later issue of the Monthly. True to Bucknell tradition, we have a faculty worthy of their high responsibilities of shaping the minds and hearts and personalities of our youth.

Word comes to us constantly here at Lewisburg of Bucknellians in all parts of the nation who are living lives of distinction and usefulness. We are proud whenever we hear of a Bucknell man or woman who has achieved a place of honor and responsibility. We are proud, also, whenever we hear of a Bucknell man or woman who is playing the game of life without great rewards, but is playing it fairly and with zest. Our hearts go out to you all — may Bucknell be a constant inspiration to you.

Cordially yours,

ARNAUD C. MARTS,

Acting President.

CHARTER DAY--FEB. FIVE

"Bucknell on The Air" 10:30 P. M.--E. S. T. From New York
Dinner With Prominent Speakers.

NINETY years of service to American youth will be celebrated by Bucknell on the night of February five when more than seven thousand alumni with friends and the vast radio audience will hear a birthday program broadcast from New York. More than a half a hundred Bucknell alumni clubs are celebrating the occasion with parties and countless small family groups are now planning to "tune in" on Alma Mater's ninetieth birthday anniversary.

The occasion is historical in its significance as it marks the exact date on which Governor Francis Shunk of Pennsylvania signed the charter which brought into existence the old University at Lewisburg, later to become Bucknell in recognition of a philanthropic benefactor.

President Arnaud C. Marts has arranged the broadcast program with the cooperation of officials of the National Broadcasting Company. By the invitation of the President, The Honorable Bainbridge Colby, former Secretary of State under President Woodrow Wilson will offer congratulations to Bucknell on her ninety years of achievement and speak briefly of her part in American education as one of the leading small liberal arts colleges. The former Secretary of State is an alumnus of Colby College in Maine and at present a member of the Board of Trustees of that institution. The second speaker on the radio program will be Dr. Robert L. Kelly, Secretary of The Association of American Colleges and Universities who will speak for the other educational institutions of the nation as he extends birthday greetings and felicitations.

The toastmaster at the New York Charter Day Dinner, from which point the broadcast will originate, will be Dr. Stanley Powell Davies, '12, prominent sociologist and executive of the State Charities Aid Association of New York. Dr. Davies is a nationally known authority in his field and was at one time a professor of sociology at Bucknell. The General Chairman of the New York Dinner will be Mr. W. Cline Lowther, '15, President of the New York Alumni Club. He has been assisted by the following Committees in arrangements for the affair:

Executive Committee, Julius F. Seebach, Jr., '20, Chairman, Rush Harrison Kress, '00, Robert L. Rooke, '13, Wm. E. Roberts, Esq., '04, Stanley P. Davies, '12; Dinner Committee, Edgar A. Snyder, '11, Chairman, Thomas J. Mangan, '21, Franklin S. Townsend, '21, Harvey D. Crawford, '18; New Jersey Cooperating Committee, Dr. John S. Cregar, '27, Chairman, Charles D. Loveland, '11, Walter J. Bower, '18.

ALUMNI PARTIES

Early indications from alumni centers point to record attendances at all of the scheduled parties. Among the first ten affairs in size will be Philadelphia, Southern New Jersey at Woodbury, Pittsburgh, Wilkes-Barre, Williamsport, Harrisburg, and Lewisburg.

Toastmaster for N. Y. Charter Day Dinner

CAMPUS CELEBRATION

A giant birthday cake bearing ninety candles will be the feature of the local campus celebration when alumni of Central Pennsylvania, students and faculty gather at the Dining Hall at Women's College on Charter Day. The cake, designed by Professor Blanchard Gummo, '25, and created by Professor George M. Kunkle, '19, will be carried into the Dining Hall by a group of co-eds and the candles lighted by them.

The complete list of alumni parties appears on the inside back cover of this issue. The list of radio stations which have been offered the Charter Day Program by the station of origin, WEAJ, appear on the inside front cover.

FACULTY SPEAKERS

At many of the alumni gatherings within a day's travel of the campus faculty members will appear as speakers, bringing the latest news of Bucknell to her sons and daughters. The excellent cooperation of the Faculty on the broadcast of 1935 and their fine reception by alumni last year assures the success of their appearances again this season.

1935 Football Climax--Season Review

Walter W. Ruch, '34

RAIN fell by the bucketsfull on Philadelphia, but not enough to dampen the enthusiasm of the Bison rooters or to cause Herb Bowman, a Sophomore thrown into a spot in which seasoned veterans might have failed, to miscue on the kick that settled, in the final moment of play, the outcome of the Bucknell-Temple game.

With water streaming down over his face, mixing below with the mud-spattered uniform, Bowman, the very essence of calm, — sharp contrast, indeed, with the 12,000 hysterical fans who braved pneumonia to see the game — drove a mighty punt far downfield into Temple territory.

If there was doubt before this performance that the Bison would triumph over the Owl, it was dispelled in toto as the ball, soggy and slimy, twisted and writhed its way 70 yards through the air. It bounded out of bounds at the Owl 20 yard marker.

A few feeble thrusts by the Temple eleven and the game had ended. Bucknell, rising to heights attained by few teams in the nation, overcame Pop Warner's heavily favored Owls, 7 to 6. It was fitting that as the game drew to a close, Bucknell's season finale should feature a prelude to next fall.

In Bowman, whose punting was nothing short of spectacular throughout his first varsity season, some notion of the type of player who will be available for Coach Edward Mylin may be gained.

Sharing honors with him that day was Stuart Smith, the great ball carrying back, who snared a pass from Phil Miller, then twisted his way for 20 yards and the only Bucknell touchdown.

The glory of the Seniors was upheld by the grizzled Walter Dobie, with one arm strapped to his side, who dropkicked the conversion which proved to be the margin of victory, melodramatically to close his college grid career. He entered the game, kicked the point, and left.

Not alone in the triumph over Temple is proof to be found that that Detroit debacle is a forgettable mistake. Rested by its open week-end following the clash with the Titans, the Thundering Herd met the Nittany Lions, time-honored opponents from Penn State, in Memorial Stadium.

Details of what happened would be superfluous in this article. Suffice it to say that the Bisons, in a display of courage and gameness nothing short of miraculous, nabbed a safety in the first quarter, then doggedly protected that slim margin throughout the remainder of the game. The lone threat by the Lions came in the final quarter, with less than five minutes to play.

Meeting the challenge, the Bisons dug in on the 15-yard mark, threw the Lions for short losses on two attempts, then awaited the attempted field goal thought surely to be forthcoming when Bob Higgins sent in his expert placement kicker.

In didn't come. Instead, the Lions tried a pass into the flat, and, incidentally, into the waiting arms of Bob Pethick, Bucknell center, who ran the ball back a dozen yards. The Bisons threw a few plays at the Lions as the game ended.

Thus did Bucknell produce the phenomenon these columns suggested it would be should they come from the Detroit game to achieve victories over State and Temple within five days of one another. Praises of the team and of its resourceful coach, "Hooks" Mylin, still are being sung on the campus, as surely they must be among the ranks of the Alumni.

It should not be inferred from earlier remarks concerning Bowman and Smith that a wealth of material is at hand for 1936. To the contrary, a squad of less than 30 players probably will be on hand, assigning Mylin again one of the most difficult coaching jobs in the country.

Although the complete schedule has not been announced, it is known that Villanova will be the Homecoming opponent on October 31, and Ursinus the opening game rival on Friday night, September 25.

The 1935 season a la Thumbnail: Bucknell 7, P. M. C. 0; Bucknell 20, Ursinus, 0; Bucknell 0, Villanova 25; Bucknell 3, Western Maryland 0; Bucknell 6, W. & J. 0; Bucknell 0, N. Y. U. 14; Bucknell 0, Detroit 53; Bucknell 2, Penn State 0; Bucknell 7, Temple 6.

NEW EDUCATIONAL SERVICE BUREAU

The creation of The Educational Service Bureau at Bucknell has caused the merger of the former Placement Bureau, Speaker's Division, Extension Department and Summer School. Dr. F. G. Davis, '11, will head the new Service Bureau in order to correlate the work of the four former separate units.

It is expected that an alumni advisory committee of educators will be appointed to confer with University administrators to help mold the policy and plans of the new Service Bureau. The major work of the Bureau will consist of rendering service to Bucknell graduates in the field of education as well as to educational organizations, high schools, and communities. The work of the Bureau will be an enlargement of the work and service of the previous smaller divisions.

COLLEGE GLEE CLUB TRAVELS

Fifty men of the University, one of the largest and finest musical groups of recent years, under the leadership of Director Melvin LeMon, will leave the campus early in February for an extended Eastern tour. Concerts to be given by the organization include five radio appearances over stations WEA, WABC, WOR, WPG, and KYW. The club also appears as the musical part of the Broadcast Program on Charter Day, February 5, at The Hotel New Yorker, New York City. Cities where concerts will be given include Wayne, Abington, Jenkintown, Reading, Haverford, and Yeadon, all in Pennsylvania; Collingswood, Paterson, Bloomfield, Rutherford, Passaic, and Atlantic City, in New Jersey.

A Statement From The Dean

SINCE there has been very widespread interest on the part of Alumni and friends of the University and many college administrators and professors throughout the United States in the Bucknell Plan that was adopted by the Faculty about three years ago, I welcome the opportunity afforded by the Alumni Monthly to make a report on the progress of the University under the New Plan, modified somewhat after experience and a thorough trial to better meet the Bucknell conditions. As President Marts said, "In my judgment, Bucknell has gone farther and made more progress with the New Plan in three years than most institutions which adopt a new plan of education do in many years", the Alumni may be interested in a Report of Progress.

THE TWO DIVISION PLAN

During the first year of the administration of President Homer P. Rainey, which began in 1931, the University was surveyed by ten Faculty Committees, whose work formed the basis of a survey by Dr. Charles H. Judd, Director of the School of Education of the University of Chicago, and Dr. Melvin E. Haggerty, Dean of the School of Education of the University of Minnesota, who recommended that the University be organized into a Lower Division, including the Freshman and Sophomore years, and an Upper Division, with five Groups instead of the former twenty-seven Departments. The recommendations of Doctors Judd and Haggerty were adopted by the Faculty, and the curriculum of the Lower Division was made to include all of the prescribed work for the Bachelor of Arts degree, with the exception of a reading knowledge examination in foreign language which could be taken any time before graduation. Also, the Lower Division work in the Bachelor of Science in Biology, Commerce and Finance, and Education courses was made almost identical with that in the Bachelor of Arts course; and survey courses, so far as possible, were included in the Lower Division work of the Engineering curricula. Survey courses were established in the History of Western Civilization, in which fifteen professors collaborate, World Literature, given by all members of the English staff, Physical and Biological Science, Principles of Government, and Social Institutions. All of these, along with courses in Principles of Economics, Psychology, Philosophy, Appreciation of Art, Appreciation of Music, Personal Hygiene, and History of Religion were made requirements in the Lower Division, on which a comprehensive examination was to be taken for admission to the Upper Division. The Upper Division, except in Engineering, was left entirely free for concentration in the field of the student's major interest and for pre-professional work.

Dean R. H. Rivenburg, '97
New Vice-President of Bucknell

NEED FOR FLEXIBILITY

After thorough trial and somewhat extended experience it was found that the new curricula, with all of the required work in the Bachelor of Arts course, except the foreign language reading examination, and nearly all in the Bachelor of Science in Biology, Commerce and Finance, and Education courses placed in the Lower Division, were inelastic, inflexible and unsatisfactory to students and professors, because they did not provide sufficient opportunity for students to begin in the Lower Division work in which they expected to major in the Upper Division, or to begin pre-professional work in which many students were supremely interested.

CURRICULA REVISED

When the new plan or program of education was adopted at Bucknell under President Rainey's leadership, it was frankly recognized and understood by the President and the members of the Faculty that changes, modifications, and improvements in the plan would need to be made as thorough trial and experience should prove necessary and desirable. In consequence, during the last year of President Rainey's administration, all of the Bucknell curricula were revised, especial care being taken to conserve the valuable features of the revision

FOR A YOUNG FRIEND

The enclosed supplement is an invitation to listen to Bucknell on The Air on February 5. Hand it to a neighbor or young friend who will be interested in some day going to college. It is Bucknell's invitation extended through you to non-Bucknellians to share in our birthday celebration. More copies are available on request.

made at the recommendation of Doctors Judd and Haggerty. In the new curricula given in the 1934-35 Bucknell catalogue the survey courses in History of Western Civilization, World Literature, Physical Science and Biological Science, and Social Institutions, and the courses in Principles of Government, Principles of Economics, Psychology, Philosophy, Appreciation of Art, Appreciation of Music, Personal Hygiene, and History of Religions are required in the Bachelor of Arts course; they are largely required in the Bachelor of Science in Biology, Commerce and Finance, and Education courses, but some of the required work may be taken in the Lower or Upper Division, thus providing for more elasticity and flexibility in the curricula. Also, a four-year Secretarial Course leading to the degree Bachelor of Science in Commerce and Finance, and a four-year course in Commercial Teacher Training, were authorized during the college year 1934-35.

VALUES CONSERVED

In the revision of the curricula last year an earnest effort was made to conserve to the highest possible degree the values of the new program and at the same time to avoid the rigidity of the first curricula adopted under the New Plan, relieve the burden of work felt by the Freshmen, and make it possible for students to begin their major or pre-professional work in the Freshman year. Five or six meetings of the Committee of the Faculty appointed to revise the curricula, two meetings of the University Council, and numerous conferences with the various Groups were devoted to the revision in the effort to shape curricula which all members of the Faculty can believe in, defend, and enthusiastically support. All of the five Groups and every member of the Faculty were consulted in the effort to make the revised curricula such that every professor and every Group might feel that the present curricula are the finest Bucknell has ever offered to its students. That the object was accomplished is indicated by the fact that the revised curricula appealed to Bucknell students and prospective students alike, and seem to be giving a high degree of satisfaction this year.

LIBERAL FEATURES RETAINED

In the revision of the curricula the objectives of the Lower Division were not lost sight of, namely, to provide as much as possible of a liberal education for all students, together with an adequate background for more advanced work, mastery of tool subjects, and preparation for specialization and pre-professional work.

As stated on page 31 of the 1934-35 Bucknell catalogue:

"The curricula of all courses leading to degrees, except those in Engineering, are largely the same for the Lower Division, and are designed to give through survey and other courses the foundation of a broad, cultural education. However, electives in each semester of the Freshman and Sophomore years allow the student to begin work at once in the field which he may wish to select as his major subject in the Upper Division.

"The work of the student in the Upper Division will consist largely of concentration, under the direction of his group adviser, in the Group which he selects, the main objective being mastery of a particular field. In the biology course, concentration is adapted for students who may desire to study medicine, for students who intend to enter public health work, and for students who plan to teach Biology or to enter graduate school. In the Commerce and Finance course the work may be arranged to afford training for the general field of business, for more advanced study in a graduate school of business administration, or for secretarial positions. In the Education course concentration will be directed toward teaching or school administration."

FIVE GROUPS

As previously indicated, three years ago the Faculty adopted the recommendations of Doctors Judd and Haggerty, and the work of the University was reorganized into five Groups instead of the former twenty-seven Departments, and a University Council was formed, consisting of the President, the Dean of the College, the Dean of Students, the Registrar, the Director of the Summer Session, and the Chairmen of the five Groups, who were administrative officers. As in the case of the curricula, it was recognized at the time the new program was adopted that this organization of the Faculty could be, and might need to be, changed if experience should prove that some other organization might be more efficient and desirable. As the plan of having only five Groups with their Chairmen administrative officers did not prove acceptable to the Faculty, a Faculty Committee of Five, elected in October 1934, after about a year during which time possible changes and improvements in Faculty organization were very carefully considered, and after many meetings and conferences with groups and individual professors, made its report at the November meeting of the Faculty. Two weeks later the entire report was adopted by the Faculty.

This year there was no revision of any curriculum. The reorganization adopted by the Faculty is based upon modifications of the organization in effect for the last two and a half years, and contains the following: In place of the University Council of ten members an Administrative Council was established, consisting of, (1), the President of the University, the Dean, the Treasurer, and the Registrar, and for certain purposes the Librarian, the Dean of Women, the Director of the Junior College, and the Director of the Summer Session, and (2), the members of the department, departments, group or groups concerned.

NEW "INTEREST GROUPS"

Instead of five large Groups, (for example, the Natural Science Group, which included Astronomy, Biology, Chemistry, Geology, Mathematics, Physics, and Physical Education) twelve "interest groups" were formed, as follows: Biological Sciences; Commerce and Finance, and Economics; Education; Engineering; English, Journalism, and Public Speaking; Foreign Languages; Social Sciences (History, Political Science, Sociology, and Economics); Mathematics and Astronomy; Music; Philosophy, Psychology, Religion, and Art; Physical Education; Physical Sciences. The Departments, which experience had shown it was difficult to get along without, and which are nearly universal in American colleges and universities, were recognized, with the exception of small departments which offer less than a major of work.

A Faculty Advisory Committee consisting of one member from each of the twelve Groups was formed, which has no administrative duties.

The revised curricula, and the added Secretarial and Commercial Teacher Training curricula which went into effect this year, seem to be giving a high degree of satisfaction, and the Bucknell Faculty believes these curricula are the finest the University has ever been able to offer its students. In the same way the Faculty are happy over the reorganization effected November 20th, which is based upon the former organization but contains modifications which the Faculty felt meet the Bucknell needs better.

The revision of the curricula originally adopted under President Rainey's progressive leadership, to which he gave his help and sanction last year, and the revision of the Faculty internal organization, both based upon experience, have resulted in finer curricula and a happier Faculty. Bucknell is looking and going forward.

NEW BOOK ON PROBLEMS

In his new book, "Frank Answers to Youth Questions," F. B. McAllister, '11, of the First Baptist Temple of Youngstown, Ohio, has given just that. They are truly the questions of youth and not merely the questions adults attribute to youth and imagine them to be facing, for representative young people were called to present the questions of a large group dealing with certain very real problems. The chapter heads themselves show how vital and timely these are: "Alleged Lowered Standards of Youth," "Youth and Alcoholism," "High School Moral Problems," "Problems of the Modern Business Girl," "What May a Girl Expect of Her Escort?" "Perplexities of the Unemployed Young Man," "Problems of the Postponed Wedding," "Difficulties of the Newly-Weds," "Modern Social Aspects of Young Married People," "Bewilderments of a Young Mother." They are searching questions upon whose answers depend the fate of youth and of the social structure-questions so often asked, yet so seldom given candid consideration.

Typical of his insight is Mr. McAllister's answer to "Do you think that necking lowers the moral standard?" He states that promiscuous necking cheapens one, but that with the "one and only," though it is "the surest way to a desperate case of love and disconcertion," it is permissible.

Bringing to his task a sympathetic understanding of youth and youth's attitude in this new era, along with the experience and perspective of Christian conviction and of an adult leader of youth, Mr. McAllister has made of his book a practical and inspirational help to modern young people.

NEW THEISS BOOK

"The Flying Explorer" comes as the latest of Lewis E. Theiss' book for boys. As the account of the experiences of "Ginger" Hale, a young mail pilot, in his capacity as chief pilot for a scientific expedition to the Amazon basin, it is designed to hold the interest of young readers. The fact that it is a true story in its essentials adds the glamour of reality to the native attractiveness of an adventure story. The way in which he overcame the aeronautical difficulties peculiar to the district and his quick and accurate judgment in trying situations made of the young flier a real but unassuming hero.

By his careful descriptions of the strange plants and animals of the Amazon basin and by the introduction to some of the native tribes, Mr. Theiss presents a vivid picture of the setting of the tale. "The Flying Explorer" will undoubtedly find as ready a welcome at the hands of imaginative boyhood as have its predecessors.

PRESENT THEOLOGICAL TENDENCIES

The Editorial Committee of the Religious Book Club has selected as their January choice the new book by Professor Edwin E. Aubrey, '19, titled "Present Theological Tendencies." The committee headed by Dr. S. Parkes Cadman and Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick say of Dr. Aubrey's book: "Because of its clear-cut and highly informing picture of the dominant tendencies in current theological thinking, including the influences arising out of European thought, too little understood in this country, the Committee has selected as its primary choice 'Present Theological Tendencies.'"

NEW PRESIDENT ENTERTAINS

By LEWIS E. THEISS, '02

In the 90 years of Bucknell's history, there has probably never been a meeting more notable or more filled with hopeful augury for the future than was the dinner given on Saturday, December 14, at the Bellevue Stratford in Philadelphia, by President Arnaud C. Marts to members of trustee, administrative, and faculty forces of Bucknell.

In attendance were 20 members of the Board of Trustees, several members of the administration, the dozen faculty members who compose the newly-created Faculty Advisory Committee, publicity representatives of the University, and representatives of the physical education and athletics staff. In all, approximately 50 diners assembled at the dinner.

President Marts, in a delightfully informal talk, reviewed the situation at Bucknell and announced the doings of the trustees at their forenoon meeting.

Great interest was created by the statement that the trustees were determined to press vigorously the project to rebuild Old Main and that already $101,000 of the $375,000 needed to accomplish that project had been subscribed. All this money came from members of the Board of Trustees, the major gifts being as follows: Dr. Charles P. Vaughan, chairman of the board, $50,000; Senator Andrew J. Sordoni, $15,000; estate of the late Henderson Supplee, $10,000; Robert L. Rooke, $10,000; E. T. Weir, $7,500; Roy G. Bostwick, Esq., $2,500; and the remaining $6,000 being in smaller contributions.

"The trustees," said President Marts, "are determined to do all or nothing. We shall not begin the work of reconstruction until we have the entire sum needed in hand. In the next few months we shall make a vigorous effort to raise that sum."

JUNIOR COLLEGE HEAD RESIGNS

Dr. John E. Eisenhauer, '05, director of the Bucknell University Junior College at Wilkes-Barre since it was established in 1933, has resigned his position effective February 1, Acting President Arnaud C. Marts announced in December.

Dr. Eisenhauer will become principal of the High School at Reading, Pa., where he had previously served for five years in the same capacity. The Bucknell man was unanimously elected principal at an open meeting of the Reading School Board.

To Name Successor Soon

"Immediate action is being taken to appoint his successor," said Mr. Marts. "Such an appointment will be made in time for the new Director to assume his duties on February 1, so that there will be no interruption of the work at the Junior College."

At the meeting of Bucknell trustees in December a Junior College committee was appointed, headed by Senator Andrew J. Sordoni, of Wilkes-Barre.

The first meeting of the committee, called for early next month, will discuss the problem of selecting a successor for Dr. Eisenhauer.

It is contemplated that at an early date the Junior College Committee will create an advisory council upon which 50 or more representative citizens of Wilkes-Barre and surrounding communities will be asked to serve.

Taught Here

Before taking up his duties as Junior College head, Dr. Eisenhauer was associate professor of education and Director of Summer Session and Extension work at Bucknell.

TRUSTEE THOMPSON DIES

William H. Thompson, trustee of Bucknell and beneficiary to the University to the amount of more than $20,000, died early on the morning of November 27, at his home in Hightstown, N. J., at the age of 61. Death was caused by an internal hemorrhage.

Mr. Thompson had been an outstanding citizen of Hightstown for years, as well as an active supporter of Bucknell. For 10 years, from 1923 until 1933, he was mayor of the town. He was a member of the Board of Corporators of Peddie, vice-president of the Citizens Building and Loan Association, and member of the Board of Trade. He also had served as president of the Hightstown Trust Company.

Several years ago Mr. Thompson established the University Loan Fund at Bucknell to aid needy students.

During the past three years, the deceased trustee had been in all health.

In 1902, he married Miss Ada Keeler, of Hightstown, who survives him. In addition, he leaves two daughters, Mrs. Thomas B. Hahn, '27, of Detroit, and Mrs. William H. Parker of Wynnewood, Pa.; and one son, William H. Thompson, Jr., of Trenton.

$10,000 FOR OLD MAIN

Another gift of $10,000 toward the rebuilding of Old Main was announced by President A. C. Marts at the regular January meeting of the faculty. The donor is Mr. Daniel C. Roberts, of Wilkes-Barre, one of the new member of the Bucknell Board of Trustees. This gift is in addition to the sum of $101,000 which was announced by President Marts at the Philadelphia dinner he gave to trustees and faculty members in December.

A legacy of $11,000 additional will come to Bucknell as soon as the estate of Miss Cora Warg is settled. She died recently, leaving that sum to the college for scholarships to be maintained in memory of herself and her cousin, the late "Jack" Kress, a son of Rush H. Kress, '00, who for many years was a member of the Bucknell Board of Trustees.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Bucknell University Bulletin, Volume XXXV, Number 1, will be the annual Catalogue for 1935-1936. This number, issued in January, 1936, will be mailed free to those requesting it. A card addressed to the Registrar's Office will receive prompt attention. Other Bulletins available are the Bulletin of General Information, Engineering Bulletin, and Book of Views.

In applying for any of the above, alumni are requested to use their class numerals.

MINICK BEQUEST

Receipt by Bucknell University of a bequest of approximately $400 from the estate of the late Jacob H. Minick, '91, of Orststown, Franklin County, Pennsylvania, has been announced by Arnaud C. Marts, Acting President of the University.

Income from the bequest is to be given each year to the Bucknell student, who, owing to some physical disability, may be obliged to use crutches during his entire college course. It may be used by the student for the purchase of college text books or for other necessary college expenses.

Mr. Minick, partially lame from childhood, was forced to use crutches while he was enrolled at Bucknell, so his contribution was evidently inspired by a fine personal feeling. Despite his handicap, he received the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy from Bucknell in 1891, and in 1902 was awarded his Master's degree in Philosophy. He died in 1930.

1935 FUND REPORT

The report of the 1935 Alumni Fund is not yet ready for publication. Names of all donors will appear in a special booklet containing the report which will be mailed in February to all givers.

MEMORIAL L'AGENDA

L'Agenda, Bucknell's yearbook, which will be published in May, is not being sponsored by any class and will be known as Memorial L'Agenda.

Last spring the Board of Publication decided that L'Agenda, previously edited and sponsored by the Junior Class be changed to a senior annual. Since this book would cover the year 1935-36, the ninetytieth anniversary year of Bucknell's founding, the editors felt that a memorial edition could easily commemorate achievements of the University in every field of endeavor during the past ninety years. Such an edition would serve as a fine chronicle of University history as well as a stepping stone by which the change to a senior book could be effected.

Memorial L'Agenda which is in the process of creation, is divided into four divisions: first, University; second, Activities; third, Societies; fourth, Athletics. The first part of each division deals with history, the latter with the current year.

The annual in employing both the formal and occult balance presents the latest in layouts. In all its technicalities, it is attempting to keep pace with the modern motif. Photography which is the essence of a yearbook, is liberally employed in its various forms, a popular one being the photomontage.

In the history section of the first book, the general history of Bucknell is recorded. It is in this section that we find a personalized history of past presidents, and outstanding administrators and faculty members.

Book two, dealing with the activities history, presents student life through the years — in dress, customs, traditions, and rules. Activities such as publications, dramatics, music, and others are traced in their evolutionary stages.

A general history of fraternities and sororities and how they developed through the years to the present day is the keynote of the third book. In this section, the growth of exclusive and secret societies are given ample consideration.

In the Athletic division, the early development of sports at Bucknell are treated. This section contains records of outstanding contests in football, baseball, and track. The glory of the University's athletic past is reviewed and stories of famous personalities such as "Christy" Mathewson will again refresh memories.

NOTE: (The editors of the book feel that this issue will be of interest to the alumni. Therefore they are making arrangements whereby the Memorial L'Agenda will be available to the alumni for three dollars per copy.)

Herbert F. Stilwell died in his eightieth year in November. At the time of his death he was pastor Emeritus of the First Baptist Church, Cleveland, O., which he had served '03-'16. Following this pastorate he had for ten years served as general superintendent of evangelism under the A.B.H.M.S.

Bucknell lost one of its eminent alumni in the death on February 28 of Justin L. Van Gundy, head of the classical department of Monmouth College, Monmouth, Ill., for the last twenty-one years. Pneumonia preceded by an operation for appendicitis was the cause of death.

Dr. Van Gundy was born in Lewisburg in 1861. In 1887 he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts from Bucknell, and in 1897 the degree of Master of arts from Johns Hopkins. In 1902, accompanied by his family, he went to Germany and spent three years in graduate work at the University of Berlin and the University of Jena, receiving the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from the latter university. From 1906 to 1914 he was head of the classical department of Carthage College at Carthage, Ill., and from 1914 he was in charge of the same department at Monmouth College.

A real lover of the classics, Dr. Van Gundy made a noteworthy contribution to the bi-millennial celebration of the birth of Horace by the publication, just before his death, of a translation in verse of the Odes of Horace with the metrical forms used by that poet.

Dr. Van Gundy was a brother of Miss Anna E. Van Gundy, Inst. '85, of Lewisburg, and of Morris C. Van Gundy, Class of '98, of Houston, Tex.

Dr. Paul J. Pontius, one of the leading eye specialists of Philadelphia, was recently elected president of the Medical Club of Philadelphia at its annual meeting at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.

1889

Professor Ann M. Gilchrist Strong, acting as Dean of the Home Science Department of the Otago University at Dunedin, New Zealand, was honored by King George of England in January with the order of the British Empire (O.B.E.) in recognition of her services to the Dominion. Her first position was that of professor of home economics and dean of women at the University of Tennessee. The important positions of director of household arts at the University of Cincinnati and later at Boroda, India, followed. Mrs. Strong is at present director of the Home Science Extension

PRESIDENT'S

OUR notable Charter Day Celebration on February 5th served to emphasize the national reputation which Bucknell enjoys. The broadcast was listened to with interest by a wide circle of the general public as well as by our own Bucknellians in literally every section of the nation.

The geographical distribution of our student body adds emphasis to the fact that Bucknell has long since ceased to be "just a local college". Our present student body comes from 16 different states. The largest number, of course, come from Pennsylvania — 692. 213 come from New Jersey; 136 from New York; and the other states represented are Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Ohio, Rhode Island, and West Virginia.

Many of our youth come past the gateways of scores of other fine colleges, drawn to "The Hill" by a special interest, or by a tradition, or by a friendly personal contact.

Of 1,068 colleges in America, Bucknell ranks exactly 100th in age. We begin to feel like an "older sister" to most other colleges. Of 65 colleges in Pennsylvania, Bucknell ranks 8th in size. There are only five colleges and universities in Pennsylvania which are permitted to grant Principals' Certificates and Superintendents' Commissions. Bucknell is one of the five; the others in this select company are The University of Pennsylvania, University of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania State College and Temple University. The personnel officer of a great industrial concern has recently told us that his company has kept in their employ from 1920-1936 a larger percentage of graduates of Bucknell than of any other college. This period covered two industrial depressions when many men were dropped.

Bucknell is an unique academic community. In a beautiful and simple environment, set apart from many distractions of modern life, a scholarly faculty teaches students who want to be taught, in a spirit of friendliness between students and faculty and between students and students. Through the years Bucknell has created and maintained this tradition. If you know of any choice young people who would fit into this Bucknell tradition who are planning to enter college next fall, send their names to Registrar Holter;—or better yet, put them into your car and drive them here to Lewisburg for a visit.

Since my last announcement we have received five voluntary gifts toward the restoration of "Old Main", one for $1,000; two for $500 each; and two for $100 each. We now have subscriptions totalling $114,000 toward the $375,000 required to rebuild and equip the building. Some way, the restoration must be made in time for the opening of college next September! Voluntary gifts are invited and urged.

Old Main is the very heart of the College. For three and a half years it has stood in ruins as a result of the fire in 1932. The money which was collected from the fire insurance was less than 40% of the cost of replacing the building because of its very great age. It was utterly impossible at that time to raise funds by gifts to restore the building, so the insurance money was used to build the new Literature Building, a lovely addition to our Campus, which provided class room space to take the place of that destroyed. Meanwhile the University has struggled along sturdily without the dormitory and office space and auditorium which had been destroyed in the fire. Increased enrollments make it imperative to replace this space by next September.

Reconstructed Old Main will provide unlimited opportunities for memorials. East or West Wing could be a memorial of lovely sentiment and value. Either wing may be built at a cost of $85,000. Class rooms or offices or social rooms may be designated as memorials ranging in cost of reconstruction from $25,000 to $10,000 to $5,000 to $2,500.

Each dormitory room in East or West Wing may be made a memorial, at a reconstruction cost of $1,000, to some lad who once lived and worked and played in it, perhaps some one "loved long since and lost awhile".

Old Main was designed by the architect who designed a portion of our national capitol. It was an altogether lovely example of architectural beauty. When it was built, it was said to be the second largest college building in the United States. When it is restored it will be along the same exterior lines and will once again stand as a notable piece of college architecture. It will be again, as it has been in the past, the one building to which the hearts and memories of all Bucknellians return with feeling and affection. May it be there next September in service to the youth of the land, is our hope and our prayer.

The second semester is off to a racing start; the Junior Prom, the annual dinner of Phi Beta Kappa, Interfaith Brotherhood Day, a visitation from the National Committee on Engineering Progress; basketball victories and defeats; presentation of the opera "The Bartered Bride" with the aid of guest artists from the Curtis Institute of Music, all these events have come along in quick succession. And through the days and nights a thousand and more youths are searching, digging, thinking out the ways of life. It is an inspiring institution, is your Alma Mater, and I am sure its inspiration reaches out to each of you to encourage you along the pathway to the finer values of life.

Cordially yours,

ARNAUD C. MARTS, Acting President.

Ninetieth Birthday Celebrated

Charter Day Radio Program "Tells The World" About Bucknell's Historic Past

Charter Day Dinner — Hotel New Yorker

THE ninetieth birthday of Bucknell University was appropriately celebrated on Wednesday, February 5, 1936 with a mammoth dinner party at the Hotel New Yorker in New York City and more than fifty similar gatherings of alumni and friends throughout the world. The proceedings of the New York party were broadcast over radio to the entire world through the facilities of the National Broadcasting Company and affiliated stations.

NOTABLE SPEAKERS

Acting President Arnaud C. Marts of Bucknell presided at the New York dinner and introduced The Honorable Bainbridge Colby, former Secretary of State of the United States, and Dr. Robert L. Kelly, Executive Secretary of the Association of American Colleges, both of whom extended greetings to Bucknell and Bucknellians. The University Glee Club of fifty male voices was the guest of the New York Alumni Club at the dinner and sang during the evening and on the radio program.

ALUMNI PARTIES

The date marked the ninetieth anniversary of the signing of Bucknell's charter by Governor Francis Shunk of Pennsylvania.

Reports received from thirty-one alumni centers holding dinners and parties throughout the nation indicated keen interest on the part of sons and daughters of Alma Mater in the recognition of Bucknell's ninety years of service to education. The larger alumni parties were held in Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Los Angeles, Buffalo, Rochester, Trenton, Washington, and Woodbury, N. J.

Pennsylvania gatherings were held in Altoona, Danville, Harrisburg, Mount Carmel, Reading, Sayre, Scranton, Wellsboro, Wilkes-Barre, Williamsport, and York.

Outside the borders of the Keystone State were other celebrations in Akron, Ohio; Baltimore, Maryland; Birmingham, Alabama; Detroit, Michigan; Milwaukee, Wisconsin; and Minneapolis, Minnesota.

In New York State gatherings were pronounced successes at Elmira, Jamestown, Buffalo and Rochester. In New Jersey Woodbury and Trenton alumni gathered with fellow Bucknellians from all parts of their respective sections of the state.

Testimony to college loyalty was evident in the manner in which chairmen and committees in the various cities organized and conducted the many celebrations.

Faculty speakers from the campus appeared on many programs by invitation of the various alumni clubs. The following groups entertained the faculty member whose name appears opposite the club:

Altoona, Pa.—W. H. Eyster, '14

More than two hundred alumni, faculty and friends attended the campus celebration of Charter Day held in the Dining Room at the Women's College. The affair was conducted in night club fashion with the various entertainment acts featured as floor show numbers and introduced by the Master of Ceremonies, A. G. Stoughton, '24, Alumni Secretary. Dancing to the music of "The Bucknellians," Student orchestra, was enjoyed between courses of the dinner. The high spot of the entire program was the lighting of a seven foot birthday cake modeled to represent "Old Main" by a group of co-eds dressed in white evening gowns. The cake was created and designed through the combined efforts of Professors Blanchard Gummo, '25, and George Kunkle, '19, assisted by Charles Blumberg, '36. The cake held ninety candles. Lantern slides by Dr. Nelson F. Davis, '95, of historical scenes and modern Bucknell motion pictures by Registrar H. W. Holter, '24, were shown as a part of the program of varied entertainment prior to the reception of the radio program from New York. The broadcast was received in the Dining Hall over a large model receiver loaned for the occasion by Mr. Randall E. Stover, '18.

BROADCAST GREETINGS OF DR. ROBERT KELLY SECRETARY, ASSOCIATION OF AMERICAN COLLEGES

THE colleges and universities of the United States, through the Association of American Colleges, extend good wishes to Bucknell upon her ninetieth birthday.

The process of education, at its highest estate, is a partnership in learning between one teacher and one student. Instantly we think of the dialogues between Plato and Socrates, of the conversation between Jesus and the woman at the well.

A small college of the ideal type, if it does not possess such personalities as these, at least somewhat multiplies this procedure. It has a few of the best teachers and the most earnest students it can secure. It has a definite and restricted program. Like the Apostle Paul it says, "This one thing I do." It does not "strut about in the boots of a university."

It considers the vitality of youth its most precious possession.

It bases its work upon the ideals and aspirations of youth.

It has as its background the progress of the human race.

It values youth in terms of their personal growth and their social resourcefulness.

It develops respect for law—it does not breed criminals.

It promotes home-building—it does not fill the divorce courts.

It cultivates disciplined freedom. "This small compact social unit makes for warm friendships and frank man-to-man discussions."

The graduate schools of leading universities are furnishing data on the performance and progress of their present students. Their reports show that the success of students in their graduate studies does not depend on the age of the college from which they come, the amount of the college endowments, the extent of their physical equipment, the number of their agencies and departments, the size of their libraries or the degree of their national prestige. The students who receive high rating come from colleges which deliberately emphasize the main purpose of a college education. They are students with good ability who not only know how, but who have the disposition to dig in and work out their own salvation.

The oldest American college has just announced its new educational program as a Plan in Terms of Men. It has always been the ideal of the American college to produce men of intellectual and social integrity. We believe this is Bucknell's program.

"THE COLLEGE'S CONTRIBUTION TO AMERICAN LIFE"

REMARKS OF HON. BAINBRIDGE COLBY ON BUCKNELL BROADCAST, FEB. 5, 1936

I have always felt that the true aim of the college is to teach a man to think,—to think accurately and to think a subject through.

In other words, to use with effectiveness his intellectual power and to handle, with the familiar skill of the trained workman, the tools of the mind.

Information, factual knowledge, is of course desirable, and indeed essential in life, but before we begin to stock up on facts or the knowledge which pertains to some special field of useful and marketable labor, it is important that we should be masters of our intellectual tool-kit, if we are to be rated as competent brain workers.

I recall reading some time ago the defense of the English universities against the charge made in Parliament that they were behind the times and not supplying the type of education which the nation stood in need of.

The vindication of the universities was in very competent hands. The purpose of collegiate training, from the English standpoint, was very convincingly made.

The Oxford Spokesman, in the course of his defense, set forth somewhat scornfully the curricula of Yale and Princeton, expressing his opinion that it was impossible to take the human intellect, to say nothing of the adolescent brain of man, over a field of such extent and diversity, in the space of four years, with any result except mental prostration.

He contrasted the Oxford method, by which a student is confined to a comparatively restricted field of subjects, strictly germane to the degree for which he is a candidate.

His collateral reading, which is extensive enough, is shaped with reference to his course of prescribed study.

The aim of the university is that on the completion of his course he will have learned what respectable mastery in his restricted field consists of; he will be able to discuss his subject upon a fairly equal footing with acknowledged masters in that field; in other words, he will have been taught by his university how to use his mind, how to think, and also he will have acquired a standard of sound workmanship and know what constitutes good work and what, indifferent or slovenly work.

There will be many unexplored fields of knowledge awaiting him, but he will have mastered the science of intellectual exploration and can possess himself of what he needs.

It seems to me that this constitutes the true aim of the college; and that the American college has succeeded in the past to the extent that it has accepted this as its true objective and has pursued it faithfully.

The most valuable contribution of the college to American life is this type of thinking man,—the man who sees the principle of a thing, who wades through and brushes aside the irrelevancies which becloud an issue, and worships truth for its own sake.

In public or civic life such a man is unswayed by the vile love of popularity. He is above the cheap lust of office, regarding public station or public employment as a call to duty,—an opportunity for the exercise of those intellectual and moral fidelities which are a mark of his nature, and the fruit of his training.

Success won at the sacrifice of these fidelities is a delusion; to the college-trained man it is a cheap and repulsive delusion.

In a time of crisis in the nation's life, such as the present moment, where shall we turn for balance, for a sense of just proportion, true perspective,—unless to the man trained to think and to look upon events with clear and level gaze?

How can we find solutions for our problems, or emerge happily from our difficulties unless we have men who are above the political servility and crass ignorance which seem so much a part of present day politics, and at this moment so gravely endanger the public interest?

To the colleges the country looks for this essential ingredient and steadying factor in our common life; and as they meet this expectation and supply the vigor and sanity of straight thinking to American life, they will make their proper and invaluable contribution to it.

Such men have come from the American colleges in the past and well and truly served their country in its hour of need. They have been the pioneers of liberty and the builders of our freedom. The educated man has proved a constructive and at the same time a conservative force in the state, a bulwark against shallow counsels and vain proposals.

We want men who stand erect and can stand firm; who speak the truth and are without fear; who love their country's institutions and will defend them.

DR. STEWART ON WILD LIFE COMMISSION

Professor N. H. Stewart recently attended the North American Wild Life Conference held in Washington, D. C., and reported that it represented one of the most important steps ever taken toward the restoration of American wild life environment.

One of the two Pennsylvania college professors on the Pennsylvania delegation, Dr. Stewart was selected by Governor Earle on the basis of his active work on the problem of diseases in deer.

More than two thousand leaders in the field of wild life conservation were called to Washington from all parts of the United States, Canada, and Mexico, by a special invitation of President Roosevelt.

PHI BETA KAPPA SPEAKER

Dr. William A. Shimer, of New York City, secretary of the united chapters of Phi Beta Kappa recently addressed the Lewisburg members of that organization on "The Influence of Knowledge upon Education", following a dinner at the Women's College. President Arnaud C. Marts acted as toastmaster.

Mr. Shimer is editor of The American Scholar, quarterly publication of Phi Beta Kappa. His visit was especially significant, inasmuch as Bucknell has again petitioned for the establishment of a chapter here.

PROFESSOR INVENTS GAME

A new game "Take-Your-Profit" has been invented by Dr. William T. MacCreadie, Professor of Mathematics at Bucknell. A patent has been applied for and two copyrights secured.

The game consists of buying and selling shares of stock in the same manner as on the stock market. It is educational and requires skill as well as chance.

"The game 'Take-Your-Profit' may be played by one to four persons. A fifth person may act as banker, but this is not necessary since any one of the four players may serve."

"The object of the game is to make $7,500 by buying and selling shares according to the position of the carrier on the board. Each throw of the dice moves the carrier up or down increasing or decreasing the value of the stock, the numbers on the spaces representing the price per share of stock."

CHARLES P. VAUGHAN DIES

BUCKNELL UNIVERSITY will hold a memorial service early in April for the late Dr. Charles P. Vaughan of Philadelphia, President of the Bucknell Board of Trustees and former Acting President of the University, whose death occurred on Friday, March 20, 1936, in Philadelphia.

Arnaud C. Marts, Bucknell Acting President, and Dayton L. Ranck, '16, Bucknell Comptroller, attended the funeral services for Dr. Vaughan in Philadelphia. The body was taken to Salem, Massachusetts, where interment was made.

President of the Bucknell Board of Trustees since December 19, 1931, Dr. Vaughan had long been interested in the affairs of the University, to which he was a generous contributor. In the period between the resignation of Dr. Emory W. Hunt and the election of Dr. Homer P. Rainey, he held the position of Acting President of Bucknell, serving in that capacity from June, 1931, until August of the same year.

In recognition of his devotion to Bucknell, the class of 1929 dedicated its yearbook, L'AGENDA, to him, with this notation, "To Charles Parker Vaughan, whose generosity, dependability, and executive efficiency have been a profoundly important force behind current efforts directed toward Bucknell progress and expansion, this thirty-eighth volume of L'AGENDA is dedicated."

Born in Portland, Maine, February 17, 1867, Charles P. Vaughan received his education in the public schools of Peabody and later at Phillips Academy, Andover, where he remained until 1887, when he left school to help his father in business. The latter invented a machine for leather working, and upon his death Charles Vaughan and his brothers developed the business into the largest leather working machinery industry in existence.

In 1898 Mr. Vaughan married Fannie Winthrop Thomas of Peabody. While at Frankfurt, Germany, he was appointed Deputy Consul General by the late Dr. David Jayne Hill, '74, Assistant Secretary of State and one-time President of Bucknell.

Although he maintained a residence in Philadelphia, he made frequent trips abroad in the interests of the leather business. He was particularly interested in civic affairs and served for many years as a director of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce. For three years, the time limit of the organization, he was president of the Chamber of Commerce. He was also an officer of the Manufacturers' Club and the Union League, both of Philadelphia.

In 1920 Dr. Vaughan became a Trustee of Bucknell University. He gave generously of both his money and time in the interests of the institution he loved. His gifts to the Stadium and Endowment funds assured these campaigns of success. In permanent recognition of his generous interest, the Board of Trustees designated the Chair of Economics as the Charles P. Vaughan Professorship.

Bucknell students, faculty members, and trustees will unite in paying tribute to their beloved leader at a special memorial service in Lewisburg at a date to be announced.

TO BEAUTIFY CAMPUS

Extensive plans will soon be completed for the landscaping of the entire Bucknell campus of the future, which work will be started early this spring.

A Committee on Landscaping has been appointed recently by President Marts, comprising; David Burpee, Trustee; Dr. Mary Wolfe, Trustee; Judge Albert Johnson, Trustee; Professors Eyster, N. F. Davis, and Burpee; Mr. Dayton Ranck, Treasurer; and President Marts, ex-officio.

At an early date, Professor W. H. Eyster will journey to Cleveland, O., to discuss and outline the entire plans with Mr. D. A. Gray, '14, widely-known landscape architect.

Among the first projects to be discussed by the committee, will be the landscaping of the grounds in front of and surrounding Larison Hall.

Professor Eyster plans to prepare various lots of perennial flower seeds which will be available for planting as outlined by the committee. These will be so selected and arranged as to insure flowering at Commencement and at the beginning of the fall semester, as well as throughout the summer session.

A federal agency, founded for the purpose of landscaping numerous of America's more-travelled highways, has recently informed Bucknell of its desire to cooperate with the university in landscaping the highway running past the stadium from the top of the hill above the stadium to near the entrance of the Northeastern Penitentiary. As described to the university, a wide expanse on each side of the road will be carefully planted with trees and shrubs native to this section of Pennsylvania.

Another project to be submitted for the approval of the landscaping committee includes arrangement near the Botany Building of a special nursery, where trees and shrubs obtainable from the State may be cared for until suitable for planting.

BOARD TO DISCUSS 'OLD MAIN' RECONSTRUCTION

The Board of Trustees will meet on the campus Saturday, April 4, to discuss plans for the rebuilding of Old Main and to consider suggestions of the Faculty Advisory Committee in regard to the interior construction of the center portion.

It is expected that the entire board will be present, including Mr. David Burpee, who is now in California.

Various minor matters will also be discussed at this meeting, at which time it is expected that a summary of progress in the campaign to raise funds for the reconstruction of Old Main will be made. Any routine matters which may arise between this week's meeting and that of next month will be taken care of as at the usual meetings.

Described as the most successful big dance ever held at Bucknell, the annual Junior Promenade, featuring the music of Glen Gray and his Casa Loma orchestra, attracted 336 couples to the Women's College Dining Hall last month.

PRESIDENT JOINS SAK

In an atmosphere fraught with ceremony and mysticism, President Arnaud C. Marts and Paul Hightower, his secretary, were initiated into honorary membership in the Sigma Alpha Kappa kitchen fraternity, last Thursday night at a banquet in the Larison sun porch.

Despite the sombreness of the occasion the keen-witted humor of Bucknell's president kept the organization in an uproar throughout the proceedings. An outstanding incident of the banquet was Mr. Marts' presentation of an immense box of candy in the shape of a heart signifying the bond which united him to the kitchen fraternity.

Following the feast, both initiates were adorned with aprons and made to pass through the dining hall filled with girls into the dish room.

There Mr. Marts was set to the task of drying dishes while Mr. Hightower was invited to pull trucks in the dining room and gather the dirty dishes.

S.A.K. is said to have been founded at Bucknell with the initial letters meaning "Sons of the American Kitchen". All of the members work in the Dining Hall or kitchen at the Women's College.

THE FLOOD OF '36

RAGING flood waters of the Susquehanna River broke all known records as Lewisburg and the lower campus were inundated on the morning of March 19, 1936. It was the second flood within a week as the earlier one on March 12 had caused considerable damage along the river banks and lower Front and Water Streets of town. The water rose to more than two feet above the famous flood level of 1889, previously an all time high water mark for the West Branch of the river. The central section of Lewisburg from Front to Sixth Street was temporarily an island as back water flooded completely around the town when Buffalo Creek to the north washed over its banks and flowed down North Sixth Street to cross Market and flood the entire Women's College Campus to a depth of several feet. Back waters of Bull Run normally flowing quietly past the S. A. E. and Kappa Sigma Houses and under University Avenue rose to meet the waters of Buffalo Creek and isolate the town. The only avenue of travel from College Hill to town was via The Reading Railroad tracks. At the peak of the flood the ties of the railroad were awash with only the rails above water.

College classes were suspended for the one day, Thursday, March 19. The homes of many professors were flooded to several feet above the first floor. All homes on Brown Street were under several feet of water and the occupants taken out in boats to spend several nights in the homes of more fortunate friends and relatives. University Avenue was likewise inundated as was the southernmost block of Front Street. Faculty homes most seriously damaged by the water and the residuary mud and debris after the waters had receded were those of Professors B. W. Griffith, Jas. P. Whyte, Wm. T. Johnson, N. H. Stewart, L. L. Rockwell, John Plant, J. O. Oliphant, G. W. Gregory, R. L. Sutherland, F. G. Davis, A. I. Frantz, G. B. Lawson, H. W. Robbins, G. A. Irland, M. L. Drum, N. F. Davis, G. M. Kunkle, C. A. Lindemann, Eliza J. Martin, Mrs. Clara G. Sale, and D. Stillman. Fraternity houses damaged were Delta Sigma, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Kappa Sigma, and Phi Gamma Delta.

Many refugees were cared for at The Samuel Lewis Ziegler Infirmary on College Hill, while several score of the temporarily homeless slept in Tustin Gymnasium and the Literature Building.

Power and light for Lewisburg were supplied for two days by the Bucknell power plant working at peak capacity. The entire Susquehanna valley from above Renovo to Harrisburg were without power or light.

The absence of the usual telephone and telegraph communication lines was partially compensated for by the constant operation for two days and nights of the College short wave radio transmitter 8LEY operated during the flood as 2COF by students George Wakefield, '37, and Joseph Bosze, '39. Messages by the hundreds were relayed to parents and the press by these valiant young operators. Similar service was rendered by the two broadcasting stations in Williamsport and Sunbury, WRAK and WKOK, respectively.

Scores of canoes and row boats made their appearance on the flood waters throughout the town and on the campus. One unforgettable sight was the avenue of boat traffic through the Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Kappa Sigma Houses. At both chapter houses many boats were seen to enter the front doors and immediately emerge from the back or side windows.

All during the height of the flood great crowds lined the two river bridges watching the debris in the form of cabins, houses, logs, frame buildings, etc. crash into the upper railroad bridge and emerge as matchwood as the swift current would carry the broken wood under the structure. Although the water did not go over the bridges it reached to within several inches of the floors and covered the pier heads.

LATIN ODES

The Odes of Quintus Horatius Flaccus. Translated into English Verse in Horatian Meters by Justin Loomis Van Gundy, Ph.D., 172 pp. The Department of Classics, Monmouth College, Monmouth, Ill. $1.25. Reviewed by Walter S. Harley, '87.

All lovers of Horace, and that means all in the literary world who know him, will feel deeply their indebtedness to Dr. Van Gundy (B. U., '87) for his translation of the Odes, recently published. When the poet wrote:

I shall not wholly die; no, a great part of me
Will evade Death's domain; I shall increase with the years,

And be praised more and more;

the truth of his prediction was destined to be fully realized. Well might the immortal Horace have included in this forecast his fellow Roman, Vergil, for in 1930 was celebrated the two-thousandth anniversary of the birth of Vergil, as that of Horace was celebrated last year. What names in all history have had such honor! So the result of Dr. Van Gundy's work is most timely,—a bimillennium memorial.

As stated in the Preface, "My foremost purpose has been to give a simple interpretation of the thought and spirit of the original poems. My second purpose has been to make a metrical translation in which I attempt to use the same verse forms which Horace himself borrowed from the Greek lyric." There have been many translations of this favorite of all poets, but this rendering is unique in its use of the thirteen different schemes of meter in which the poems were originally cast. We can appreciate the difficulty of the task that Dr. Van Gundy set for himself. It is well done, as the following familiar passages will show:

Behold Soracte, clad deep in snow and ice,
Agleaming. See, the laboring trees can scarce Sustain their heavy load; see how the Rivers are choked from Winter's freezing.
I. 9.

O daughter, lovelier e'en than your lovely mother,
Destroy by any method you please my harsh Invectives; be it in the fire or,
If you prefer, in the Adriatic. I. 16.

You shall drink plain Sabine, and that from no large
Bowls, wine which I personally stowed away and Sealed in Grecian jars on the day the theater
Rang in your honor. I. 20.

Fuscus, hear me, a man who is pure and upright
Needs no Moorish darts, nor a bow's protection,
Nor a quiver loaded with poisoned arrows;
No, not the pious. I. 22.

You will live more fitly, Licinius, by not Always steering seawards nor, while you wisely
Fear the storms, by hugging too constantly the Dangerous coast-line. II. 10.

Alas, Postumus, Postumus, the fleeting years
Are gliding swiftly by, and our piety works
No stay to wrinkles and impending
Age, nay, nor unto Death's dread summons.
II. 14.

By a sad coincidence the writing of the above notice was followed by the news of the death of Dr. Van Gundy on February 28th. Thus "The Odes of Horace" is a memorial not only to the poet but to his translator, whose last years had been spent with enthusiasm and delight in this most successful work.

WALTER S. HARLEY, '87.

I KNEW THEM IN PRISON

Written by Dr. Mary Belle Harris, '94, one of Bucknell's outstanding women graduates and daughter of the late Dr. John Howard Harris, '69, the recently published book by the above title is destined to become a best seller. It is published by The Viking Press and is done in an attractive format and most readable type.

The experiences of Dr. Harris on Welfare Island, N. Y., The State Home for Girls at Trenton, N. J., and the building of the new Federal Industrial Institution for Women at Alderson, W. Va., make vital and human interest reading as she narrates in conversational manner.

There is nothing sordid or gruesome about the book. It is definitely not of the "thriller or horror" class of prison stories. Nor is it of the saccharine type of "sob sister" stuff. It is a thoroughly human account of the experiences of a most capable and understanding woman in her dealings with her sisters who have become enmeshed in the toils of the law. The excitement of the early chapters when Dr. Harris first entered penal work at the Woman's Prison of Welfare Island are oftentimes humorously told. The later chapters dealing with the planning and construction of the first Federal Prison for Women are full of new and varied experiences and present an entirely different picture of what a jail is commonly supposed to be. The broad sympathies, human understanding, and native common sense of Mary Harris are everywhere evident in her writing.

The book has been widely reviewed and highly praised not as for the penologist or psychologist alone but for the average good citizen that he may come to understand a small part of a little known world.

OLDEST ALUMNA

MARGARET BEAVER CASSIDY, '63

The Bucknell Alumni Club of Western Pennsylvania on the occasion of Charter Day sent flowers to one of their members, the oldest living alumna of the Bucknell Seminary, Mrs. Margaret Beaver Cassidy, '63, who was ill at her home in Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Cassidy came to Lewisburg at the age of four with her parents and attended the "Female Seminary" where she was graduated in 1863 at the age of seventeen as valedictorian of her class. The Beaver home was on the present McClure property on University Avenue. After graduation from the "Seminary" Margaret Beaver went to a private school at Pittsfield, Mass., and then returned to Lewisburg where she was married to William H. Cassidy. At the present time Mrs. Cassidy lives in Pittsburgh at 622 St. James Street, where her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Taylor, reside with her. Mrs. Taylor was born in Lewisburg and lived here during her early youth. The Beaver Memorial Methodist Church in Lewisburg was erected from funds largely donated by Mrs. Cassidy's father, uncles, and grandfather in the late nineteenth century.

Mrs. Cassidy, until recently, was prominent in social and charity circles in Pittsburgh. Her present illness has confined her to her home as a semi-invalid. Her work in philanthropic enterprises is carried on by her children and grandchildren, all of whom are prominent members of various charitable and religious organizations.

The wedding of Miss Margaret Noll, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Noll of New Providence, and Raymond Hunt, son of Rev. and Mrs. William H. Hunt of Lee Park, took place recently with the bridegroom's father officiating. The couple will reside in Irvington. Mr. Hunt is employed in the office of the Prudential Life Insurance Co., at Newark.

TOSSERS WIN 13 of 17

The Bucknell basketball team concluded its most successful season in five years when the smooth working Bisons snowed the Muhlenberg Mules under, in Tustin Gym early in March, with an avalanche of baskets to win 48-28.

Winning all home games and losing but four away from home contests to West Point, Dickinson, Penn State, and Western Maryland, the Mussermen closed in a blaze of glory, defeating Juniata, Western Maryland, and Muhlenberg in the final week. The seasons results were as follows:

Editor's Corner

"AL" Stoughton's decision to give up his job as Alumni Secretary after nearly 12 years in that position will be received with regret by hundreds of Bucknell alumni with whom he has come into pleasant contact. Although he has already gone to New York to take up his duties as Director of Public Relations for that city's 14 Y. M. C. A.'s, he will come back to the campus for Commencement and will be at Alumni Headquarters in the Literature Building as usual to greet returning alumni. Why not call upon him there and wish him success in his new venture?

In the meantime, we're pinch-hitting for "Al" in editing this issue of the Alumni Monthly on fairly short notice because we want Bucknell alumni to know of the advance preparations which indicate that this will be the biggest Commencement Bucknell has ever known.

An unusual speaker and a galaxy of distinguished guests will feature the eighty-sixth annual Commencement exercises. Rogers Williams Straus of New York City will make the Commencement address, and Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, will head the list of prominent guests. Mr. Baker, by the way, will speak informally at Commencement and also at the Corporation Dinner.

YOUR Commencement invitations from President Marts and from Alumni President Davenport are printed elsewhere in this issue. Bucknell really wants you back on the campus for Commencement. Won't you come?

OUR campus is to have its face lifted, figuratively speaking, of course. A. Donald Gray, '14, well-known landscape architect, visited Bucknell recently at the invitation of a trustee-faculty committee on landscaping and after studying the problem, donated his plans for beautifying the grounds. Attention will be concentrated at first upon the buildings at the Women's College, where planting of shrubbery, etc., will get under way after Commencement. David Burpee, Chairman of the Trustees Committee on Landscaping, has already supplied the college with a truck load of shrubs that will be utilized as the landscaping process continues.

THE decision of our Acting President, Arnaud C. Marts, to continue for six months longer than he had originally planned as Bucknell's head has been received with enthusiasm by students, faculty, trustees, and alumni. When he took over the acting presidency late in October, Mr. Marts agreed to serve until the end of the college year, but because of the death of Mr. Vaughan, chairman of the Board of Trustees, and because of the flood which retarded somewhat the Old Main drive, he has been prevailed upon to continue in his present capacity throughout the first semester next fall.

THE song, "The Days at Brave Old Main", which you find in this issue, was written especially for the Old Main drive by Doctor William C. Bartol, '72, professor emeritus of mathematics and astronomy and University historian. Although a part of the song was first written by Doctor Bartol nearly 50 years ago for his class reunion, the major portion was completed only recently and contributed to the University by its author. Dr. Paul G. Stolz arranged the music. Dr. Bartol has presented Bucknell with 500 copies of the song to be distributed among alumni.

BUCKNELL seems to have taken on new life this spring as the campus resounds with fresh outbursts of activity on almost every side. Plans for the restoration of Old Main, for the enrolment of another record-breaking class next fall, and for the Pennsylvania Folk Festival this summer, have everyone from the President to the lowliest Freshman on the run. You won't recognize Alma Mater!

We'll see you at Commencement.

Dear Bucknellians:

ALMA Mater invites you, with all her heart, to come back to Lewisburg for the 86th Commencement Exercises, which will be held from Saturday to Monday, inclusive, June 6 to 8. A program of the several events is printed elsewhere in this issue; study it and begin to make plans for your return. There are several happy occasions during the year which tempt Bucknellians back to the college on "The Hill", but none so rich in meaning and memory as Commencement.

It will add to your enjoyment of life to return to the scene of your youthful ideals and aspirations and it will add immeasurably to the occasion to have you here. So, for your sake and ours, come back to the 86th Commencement of your beloved Alma Mater.

Much of interest to you all is happening on the campus. I am writing this in the midst of our Annual Spring Festival and Mother's Day. Three hundred and fifty mothers of Bucknell students are on the campus today and many fathers, enjoying a colorful program comprised of the May Pole ceremony, music, athletics, dramatics, church services and a Mother's Dinner.

Last week we had nearly as busy and as happy a time when an hundred alumni, trustees and friends spent a day on the campus to consider plans for the reconstruction of Old Main. It was their unanimous and enthusiastic opinion that a general appeal should be made at once to all who love Bucknell for gifts and subscriptions to rebuild Old Main this summer. Members of the faculty and Board of Trustees and alumni feel that we have looked at the fire-swept ruins of that lovely old building quite long enough and are resolved to make their own gifts and to ask other Bucknellians now to make sacrifices, if necessary, in order to provide the funds for cleaning away the unsightly debris and restoring beloved Old Main to its former beauty and service. $375,000 will be required to do this in full; $130,000 is already subscribed and we believe you and other Bucknellians will respond generously and promptly to this undertaking.

You will be happy to know that the applications of students for admission to next September's freshman class are coming in at an unprecedented rate. Today, as I write, we have the paid applications of 166, as compared with 146 one year ago today, and 46 two years ago today. Last September we admitted the largest freshman class in the 90-year history of Bucknell; it now seems that next September's freshman class may again break the record. We are grateful to you alumni who are serving your Alma Mater so zealously in this connection by urging choice young people of your acquaintance to consider Bucknell as their college.

Bucknell's campus is said by many who are acquainted with numerous other college campuses to be the second most beautiful college campus in America — in its natural appearance. The foliage is just now unfolding and coming to its full beauty. By Commencement time, the trees and flowers will be at their finest. Come back to "The Hill" again in June and renew your strength at Alma Mater's fountain of youth.

Cordially yours,
ARNAUD C. MARTS.

Trustees and Alumni Photographed in the Shadows of Old Main as They Met Recently to Plan for Rebuilding the Structure

OLD MAIN TO BE RESTORED

OLD Main is to be restored! Bucknellians everywhere will welcome the news that the college's most important building, dear to the heart of every alumnus, will shortly resume its proper place as the center of student life. Reconstruction is to begin at once as a result of action taken by the Board of Trustees in a special meeting held in Lewisburg on Saturday, May 3.

Called to consider the vital problem of providing much-needed dormitory, office, and social rooms to accommodate the rapidly-increasing student body, the trustees authorized their committee on development and construction, headed by Senator Andrew J. Sordoni of Kingston, to begin rebuilding at once, and to proceed as rapidly as necessary funds are made available.

The trustees then met in joint session as luncheon guests of Acting President Marts to discuss plans for raising the money needed to restore the structure. As a result of their discussions, an alumni drive for funds has been launched under the direction of Judge J. Warren Davis, vice-chairman of the Board of Trustees.

It has been estimated that $375,000 will be needed to rebuild and refurnish the building. Of this amount $125,000 had been pledged by trustees and friends of Bucknell as the drive opened. An intensive campaign to raise the remaining $250,000 will be continued throughout May and June.

The Old Main drive opened officially in New York City on May 7, when more than 75 prominent alumni from that city and northern New Jersey attended a dinner-meeting at the Hotel New Yorker to receive last-minute instructions from their chairmen. The quota for the New York and northern New Jersey area has been set at $75,000.

May 18 has been set as the date for the opening of the drive in Philadelphia, South Jersey, Delaware, and Central Jersey. In Lewisburg, Harrisburg, Reading, Williamsport, Scranton, Wilkes-Barre, Elmira, and other important centers the drive will get under way by May 22. June 2 has been scheduled as the starting date in Altoona, Pittsburgh, and other western Pennsylvania cities.

Bucknell alumni in Washington, Baltimore, Albany, Troy, Utica, Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo, as well as in Ohio, West Virginia, the New England states, and in the West and the South will also be asked to participate as the drive continues through June.

Twenty-three well-known alumni have agreed to serve as regional chairmen in the drive. They are: Joseph W. Henderson, '08, Roy G. Bostwick, '05, Dr. Harvey F. Smith, '94, Oliver J. Decker, '99, Dr. Carl Millward, '06, Romain C. Hassrick, '18, James P. Harris, '12, John C. Hostetter, '08, Dr. John H. Eisenhauer, '05, Arthur W. Fulton, '16, Judge J. W. McCracken, '02, Preston Dawson, '24, O. V. W. Hawkins, '13, Edgar A. Snyder, '11, Kenneth W. Slifer, '26, Raymond Apgar, '14, Andrew E. Sable, '11, Dr. William A. Leshner, '12, Earl M. Richards, '13, Leslie W. Stout, '13, and Edward M. Greene, '95.

They will be assisted by an equal number of loyal Bucknellians who will serve as associate chairmen. They in turn will be assisted by over a hundred other alumni who will compose the corps of workers to whom will fall the task of directly contacting all of the University's alumni.

Every Bucknell alumnus will be given an opportunity to serve as he is called upon to assist in the restoration.

In the more recent classes in which presidents and secretaries have been selected, the class president has been urged to arrange for his group's reunion. The Alumni Office will, of course, be glad to cooperate with these presidents, or with a chairman whom they may care to designate, in making the local arrangements for a luncheon meeting, if that is desired.

Roger Williams Straus

Commencement Speaker

Three hundred years after Roger Williams fought for religious liberty by establishing the colony of Rhode Island and the first Baptist church in America, Roger Williams Straus, namesake of the famous leader, will speak at Bucknell University's 86th annual Commencement on June 8, discussing the Roger Williams tradition of intellectual and religious freedom in the modern world.

Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, will appear on the Commencement platform with Mr. Straus and will speak informally at the graduation exercises and also at the Corporation Dinner.

Mr. Straus and Mr. Baker are co-chairmen of the National Conference of Jews and Christians which sponsors in our day the struggle for religious tolerance to which Roger Williams gave his energies 300 years ago.

The speaker was graduated from Princeton University in the Class of 1913. He is Vice-President of the American Smelting and Refining Co., and active in many other corporations affiliated with the Guggenheim interests. Mrs. Straus was formerly Gladys Guggenheim.

Now on a business trip into Southwestern United States and Mexico, Mr. Straus will return to New York shortly before June 8 to assure his appearance at Bucknell's Commencement.

Vaughan Memorial Services

MORE than 300 students, faculty members, and trustees paid tribute to the late Charles Parker Vaughan, one-time Acting President of Bucknell and chairman of the Board of Trustees from 1931 until his death on March 20, at special services in the Methodist Episcopal Church in Lewisburg on May 3.

Eulogizing Dr. Vaughan as "a true Christian gentleman", Dr. Milton G. Evans, Bucknell trustee and president-emeritus of Crozer Theological Seminary, delivered the memorial address.

At the same services the late William H. Thompson of Hightstown, N. J., Bucknell trustee since 1927, was also honored. Dean R. H. Rivenburg read a memorial resolution from the faculty on Dr. Vaughan's death and Acting President Marts presented memorials from the trustees on the deaths of both Dr. Vaughan and Mr. Thompson. A choir composed of mainly college students provided special music.

DR. EVANS MAKES ADDRESS

"It is well that our University should turn aside from ordinary routine and think of those who have passed from sight but remain in memory and affection", declared Dr. Evans as he began his memorial address. "Professor Groner's genius in research and in teaching no longer stimulates students in his lecture room. His wise counsel, unflagging industry, joy in his vocation, no longer inspire his fellow professors. His Christian life, in church, in class room, on campus, and on the street, no longer furnishes an example in the flesh. We can not but think of him today, as we are nearing the close of our academic year.

"HIS CAREER A CHALLENGE"

The speaker then referred to the passing of William H. Thompson, whose contribution, he declared, "will be a benediction to students through coming generations." He outlined the principal events in the life of this loyal trustee whose entire life was closely bound with that of the city in which he lived and which he served as mayor for ten consecutive years. He commented upon the generosity which prompted Mr. Thompson to contribute a generous sum to Bucknell for the establishment of a permanent fund to assist students in financial need, and which led him, after he had joined the Bucknell Board of Trustees, to give another generous gift so that the University might have a golf course. "Without doubt the stimulating motive of his philanthropic enterprises was his religious faith which found immediate expression through active membership in the Universalist Church", said Dr. Evans.

The speaker then proceeded to review briefly the outstanding incidents in the life of Dr. Vaughan, whose career he described as "a challenge to every American youth".

He told of Dr. Vaughan's brief schooling at Phillips-Andover Academy, of his association with his father and later with his brother in the leather working industry, and of his success in making his firm the largest leather manufacturing industry in the world.

"He was always a gentleman, in his factory as in the Union League; in the office as in the church," said Dr. Evans. "He was the type of employer who made it impossible for an employee to envy, to dislike or to rebel. He often spent as much time with his employees in the factory, inspecting their work, encouraging, pointing out possible improvements, as in the office. If more of our employers of labor had the qualities of mind and heart of Charles P. Vaughan, we would need no artificial social mechanisms for righting economic inequalities."

"But he was not content to have his vocation absorb all his energies," he continued. "He gave life and strength and money to every patriotic, philanthropic, and educational enterprise that commended itself to his judgment.

ELECTED BUCKNELL TRUSTEE

"It was characteristic of a man of such social sympathies and altruistic ideals, that he listened with sympathy to the suggestion that he become a trustee of Bucknell. He hesitated because he did not think himself qualified for the task. He modestly remarked to me that he often wished he had had educational advantages and that he valued the honor of being asked to become associated with those giving themselves to education of youth.

He was elected a member of our Board in 1920. At once he assumed responsibility. He gave generously to our stadium and to our endowment, and, shortly before his death, pledged a generous sum for the restoration of Old Main. Acquaintanceship with his acquisition of education through reading, travel, social contact, and his achievements in the business and financial world, commended him to our Faculty, and on their recommendation, he was honored fittingly with the degree of Doctor of Science. During the interim between the resignation of President Hunt and the election of President Rainey, he served as Acting-President of the University. Also in 1931 he became the seventh chairman in the history of the Bucknell Board of Trustees.

Our University cannot help cherishing the memory of one who has enriched it through what he himself was. For in the last analysis the worth of a man is the worth of his ideals and his willingness to labor to give ideals a loved habitation and a home. Such a home Charles P. Vaughan has built at Bucknell."

Campus News Briefs

READING CLUB ELECTS

The Bucknell Alumni Club of Reading, in an account received too late for the last issue of the Alumni Monthly, reported an extremely successful Charter Day dinner held at the Wyomissing Club in Reading on the occasion of Bucknell's ninetieth anniversary. Dr. John H. Eisenhauer, '05, who recently took up his residence again in Reading, was the speaker.

The Club has elected the following officers: President, Dr. David S. Grim, '97; Vice-President, Miss Angeline R. Kissinger, '22; and Secretary, Mrs. George Ennis.

WILLIAMSPORT DINNER

Members of the Bucknell Alumni Club of Williamsport enjoyed one of their most successful social functions in recent years in the form of a dinner-dance at the Elks Club in Williamsport on Friday evening, May 8.

An unusually large number of alumni responded to the invitation to participate in this Bucknell function. The younger alumni in particular were very much in evidence.

Acting Presidents Marts was the guest of honor. Introduced by Oliver J. Decker, Williamsport attorney and secretary of the Board of Trustees, Mr. Marts gave an interesting and extensive report of activities at Bucknell as a feature of the after-dinner program.

Paul E. Fink, '29, is the club's new president. The secretary is Robert D. Smink, '26.

ROCKWELL AND QUINN LEAVING

Bucknell will be without the services next fall of two of her alumni who have been prominently connected with the University, one as a teacher and the other as a coach, for Dr. Leo L. Rockwell, '07, professor of Germanic Languages, and Mose Quinn, '29, freshman football coach, have resigned their positions to go to other schools.

Dr. Rockwell will head the Department of Languages at Colgate University, where he will direct a corps of 25 instructors, and Mr. Quinn will assist Carl Snavelly in the coaching of the Cornell football team.

Dr. Rockwell has been absent from the campus during the present semester on a leave of absence during which he has been engaged in work on the Early Modern English Dictionary, now in the process of compilation at the University of Michigan. He plans to teach this summer in the Linguistic Institute at the University of Michigan, and will go to Colgate in the fall.

Mr. Quinn has already begun his work at Cornell, where he assisted with the spring training program. He will return to Lewisburg for the summer months, but will go back to Ithaca to stay when the football season opens in the fall. His appointment gives Snavelly, former Bison tutor, a staff of six assistants at Cornell.

TRACK

Bucknell's four-man relay team scored the most brilliant triumph Bison trackmen have registered in recent years when the quartet of Daniel Friedman, Holly Carpenter, Edwin Stebbins, and William Wilkinson carried off two first places at the famous Penn Relays in Philadelphia April 24 and 25.

Running in the Middle Atlantic Collegiate Athletic Association relay race, the Bisons outdistanced the field, Rutgers and Lehigh finishing second and third. As anchorman, Wilkinson ran himself groggy, but breasted the tape five yards ahead of the Rutgers runner.

The following day Coach Plant's men took first place in their class of the Penn Relays competition.

RELIGIOUS CONVOCATION

A four-day religious convocation featuring three internationally-known speakers was held on the campus from April 23 to 26. An innovation on the University calendar, the conclave brought Toyohiko Kagawa, famous Japanese Christian, to Bucknell as the principal speaker.

Dr. Harold C. Phillips, prominent Cleveland minister, and Dr. Ralph Harlow, head of the department of religion and social ethics at Smith College, also appeared on the convocation program.

WILKES-BARRE DINNER

ACTING President Arnaud C. Marts and Dr. Eugene S. Farley, newly-appointed director of the Bucknell Junior College at Wilkes-Barre, were honored April 30 at a banquet sponsored by the Wilkes-Barre members of the Bucknell Board of Trustees. The dinner was held at the Westmoreland Country Club near Wilkes-Barre, with 65 guests present.

Judge McLean acted as toastmaster. Dean Wilbur H. Fleck, of Wyoming Seminary, Kingston, extended greetings to President Marts and Dr. Farley on behalf of the Wyoming Valley. Mr. Marts and Dr. Farley responded with brief addresses.

Bucknell Sponsors Folk Festival

S PONSORED by the Bucknell Alumni Club of Philadelphia, the first of five regional folk festivals to determine the participants in the Pennsylvania Folk Festival at Bucknell this summer was held in Philadelphia May 2, 4, and 5.

Mrs. Joseph Welles Henderson, '10, was chairman of the regional festival committee. Romain C. Hassrick, '06, is president of the sponsoring organization. Treasurer for the three-day festival was T. Burns Drum, '26.

Held in Irvine Hall, the University of Pennsylvania, the Philadelphia festival attracted large audiences for all three evening presentations. Monday evening was set aside as Bucknell Night, with Acting President Arnaud C. Marts, several trustees, and many alumni in attendance.

The highlight of the Philadelphia festival was the singing of Negro spirituals by a choir composed of students of the Cheyney State Teachers College. This group will be brought to Lewisburg for the midsummer Festival.

The statewide Carnival of Pennsylvania's native folklore will take place in the Memorial Stadium from July 30 to August 2, with hundreds of performers flocking to the campus from every section of the commonwealth. Colonel Henry W. Shoemaker, prominent Altoona publisher and folklorist, is chairman of the active committee making plans for the event.

In addition to the Philadelphia festival four other regional festivals have been scheduled as follows: Altoona, May 13; Wilkes-Barre, May 25; Pittsburgh, May 30; and Allentown, June 26 and 27.

Bucknell has undertaken the Pennsylvania Folk Festival in an attempt to perpetuate the state's native folklore before it vanishes entirely. Folklore experts view the present era as a critical period in the history of the state's folklore; if it is not preserved now, they believe that it can never be recaptured.

With Bucknell taking the lead in the movement to preserve the state's folklore, the Pennsylvania Folk Festival has received the backing of the state's most prominent citizens. Former Governor John

S. Fisher has accepted the position of honorary chairman of the Festival. Oliver J. Decker, Williamsport attorney, heads the trustees committee.

Many alumni who have been unable to return to Bucknell for several years because of the pressure of business affairs during the months when the college is in session are planning to attend the Folk Festival this summer, combining a significant cultural experience with a renewal of their ties with Alma Mater.

STOUGHTON RESIGNS

A LFRED G. Stoughton, Alumni Secretary at Bucknell since 1924, resigned his position, effective May 1, to become Director of Public Relations for the 14 Y. M. C. A.'s of New York

Mrs. J. W. Henderson '10 and Romain C. Hassrick '06 were largely responsible for the success of the Philadelphia Folk Festival held early this month. Mrs. Henderson served as General Chairman of the affair and Mr. Hassrick, as President of the Bucknell Alumni Club of Philadelphia, sponsors of the Festival, headed the men's committee.

City. Mr. Stoughton left the campus on May 3 to assume his new duties, but will return to Bucknell for the Commencement festivities and will be at Alumni Headquarters as usual to greet returning alumni. Election of his successor will be made by the Alumni Association at its annual meeting here on June 6.

In leaving Bucknell Mr. Stoughton ends a period of nearly 12 years of service for his Alma Mater during which he attained outstanding success in his field. Under his editorship the Alumni Monthly received numerous awards in national competition. That his associates recognized his ability is evidenced by the frequency with which he was elected to positions of prominence in regional and national organizations of alumni secretaries. His most recent office was that of vice-president of the American Alumni Council, an organization of alumni secretaries from colleges throughout the country.

THE SUMMER SCHOOL

A LL indications point toward the largest and most interesting Summer School in Bucknell history. The program of offerings provides training for college students, elementary and high school teachers, guidance workers, and principals and superintendents. Bucknell is approved by the Pennsylvania Department of Public Instruction for the training of all the persons listed.

MESSAGE FROM ALUMNI PRESIDENT DAVENPORT

To ALL Bucknellians:

The General Alumni Association extends a most cordial invitation to all sons and daughters of Bucknell to return to Commencement, June 6-8, 1936, at Lewisburg. Your Alumni Association and The College have made preparations for one of the finest programs of recent years. We know you will enjoy a visit to the campus at this season. Come and meet President Marts and then realize why Bucknell is taking on new life.

The Alumni Office will be, for this week-end, under the direction of our former Alumni Secretary, Mr. A. G. Stoughton. "Al" left Lewisburg this spring to accept a lucrative position with the New York Y. M. C. A.'s. As much as we hated to see him go, we did not feel that we should stand in his way. Command the Alumni Office now, for any information you desire regarding the Commencement activities. We have spare rooms and boarding facilities for all who wish them.

Saturday, June 6 is ALUMNI DAY — OUR DAY — on the program. Reunions, class luncheons, and other activities on the campus have been planned so that there will not be an idle moment. A very important meeting of the Alumni Association will be held in the Literature Building Auditorium on June 6 at 3:00 P.M. A nominating committee of which Past President G. Grant Painter is chairman, will nominate a new President of the General Alumni Association, and also suggest ways and means of maintaining the Alumni Office, with a new General Secretary.

Come back for Commencement: Your classmates, friends and fellow alumni will be there to greet you. We know you will have a good time.

Yours for a happy Commencement,

S. M. Davenport, M.D., '16,

JULY, 1936

Dear Bucknellians:

We are planning a very colorful Folk Festival in our Memorial Stadium during the last week-end of this month, July 30th through August 2nd, and we most cordially invite you to attend it. It is being sponsored by Committees of men and women throughout the state who are the outstanding authorities in the Commonwealth on the history, culture and traditions which have gone into the make-up of Pennsylvania. There will be a varied program of songs, folk and square dances, ballads, and folk lore presented by teams representative of all the major elements of Pennsylvania's diversified population.

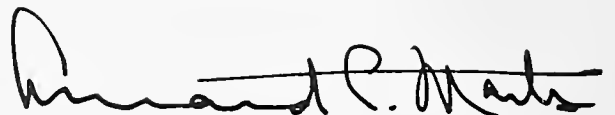

The Festival is attracting wide attention as the leading event of its kind in the East this Summer, and if the weather favors us, thousands of spectators will probably throng into our Stadium, "greatest out-door meeting place in Pennsylvania between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh", to witness these simple and wholesome art expressions. Come and enjoy it, and help your Alma Mater render this significant patriotic and cultural service.

The West Wing of Old Main is being rapidly rebuilt and the contractors assure us that it will be ready for occupancy when the College opens in September. West Wing will be devoted to almost the identical uses which it served before the fire of 1932. That is, the three upper floors will be used for dormitories for men, and the first floor will be used for College offices. Forty-eight men will be accommodated in the dormitories, and on the first floor, the Dean, the Treasurer and the Registrar will have their offices.

Subscriptions to the Old Main Fund continue to come in and it is quite likely that, shortly after the completion of the West Wing, we will be able to let the contract for the rehabilitation of East Wing. We shall go ahead just as vigorously as our funds will permit. We are grateful indeed, to the loyal Bucknellians who are working hard on the Old Main Committees in the various areas, and grateful to the hundreds of Bucknellians who have already responded with their gifts and subscriptions.

The Summer Session opened last week with a record number in attendance, and the advance registration of students for next September indicates that we will probably have a most satisfactory enrollment for the coming College year.

Yours for Bucknell!

Acting President.

Editor's Corner

WE are just as surprised to be editing this issue of the ALUMNI MONTHLY, if you can be generous and call it editing, as you are to find us doing it. Since the Alumni Association did not elect a new Secretary at its meeting at Commencement, and since it was felt that Bucknellians deserved to be informed of the Commencement proceedings and other campus news, it was decided that this June-July issue be published without benefit of an Alumni Secretary. We suddenly found ourselves elected to the post of editor for this issue, but the joke was on the University officials who didn't know that we weren't even running for the job. On second thought, the joke's probably on us. In any case, here's the issue.

THE Alumni Association, in action taken at its annual meeting, authorized the joint trustee-faculty committee on the selection of an Alumni Secretary to continue with its search for the right man for the job, and to announce his appointment by August 20. We can't offer a single clue as to his possible identity, but watch your daily papers for an announcement!

ACTING President is the only appropriate term for Bucknell's present executive head, whose limitless energy and keen interest in every Bucknellian and every project connected with the University has made an indelible impression upon alumni and students alike. Graduates returning for Commencement were enthusiastic in their praise of his leadership and unanimous in their desire that he consent to remain at Bucknell permanently.

YOU may have heard rumors that there's to be Pennsylvania Folk Festival at Bucknell this summer. We hasten to add that the rumors are true, but you can verify this for yourself by coming back to Lewisburg on July 30, 31, August 1, or 2, when approximately 800 men and women from all parts of the state will invade this quiet town to put on in the Bucknell Stadium one of the most extensive exhibitions of Pennsylvania's folklore ever attempted.

A number of important personages whose names we are not yet free to reveal have indicated that they will attend the opening performance on Thursday evening, July 30. We suggest that you come early, since the Stadium cannot very well accommodate more than 20,000.

PRESIDENT Marts' Baccalaureate address on "The Greatest Agency in American Life" has attracted so much attention and so many requests for copies have been received that it became necessary to have several thousand copies printed. If you want one, write to the Bucknell News Service and we will try to comply with your request.

BUCKNELL'S conferring of honorary degrees upon Roger Williams Straus and Newton D. Baker for their work as co-chairmen of the National Conference of Jews and Christians has aroused nationwide interest. "Religion in the News", a presentation of the National Broadcasting Company prepared by Walter W. Van Kirk, gave several minutes to a discussion of this newsworthy event and offered this comment: "Religion in the News salutes Bucknell for this demonstration of genuine Americanism, the more so at a time when the notorious Black Legion has been seeking to poison the mind of the nation with its diabolical doctrines of race hatred and religious bigotry."

AND still they come! We refer, of course, to the freshmen who are applying for admission to Bucknell. When sending in the name of your prospect remember that B. U. prefers men this year, since its accommodations for women are already filled.

Yours for Pennsylvania Folklore and more publicity for Bucknell.

Pennsylvania Folk Festival Attracts Nation-wide Interest

By Hugh Morrow, Jr.

Waltzing in a polka

BUCKNELL'S Memorial Stadium will be the scene of the greatest tournament of traditional lore and minstrelsy ever known to Eastern United States, when the Pennsylvania Folk Festival is held here July 30 to August 2. More than 20,000 persons from all sections of Pennsylvania, and from several other neighboring states, are expected to witness this gala gathering of men and women who will represent Pennsylvania's various sections, occupations, and races.

Directed by George G. Korson, under whose leadership the first folk festival ever held in Pennsylvania was staged last year at Allentown, the festival has been attracting state-wide attention to Bucknell University, and because of the part played by Pennsylvania as a "mother state" to so many other states during the westward push of the early settlers, this living picturization of the true folk learning of the native Pennsylvania people is attracting attention outside the Commonwealth's boundaries as well. The folk lore of Pennsylvania, perhaps the richest of any state in the union, has been proven of vast significance to the folk lore of many bordering states and some farther westward, since it was through Pennsylvanians that many of these states originated.

Five regional festivals have already been held in all sections of Pennsylvania in preparation for the state-wide fete at Bucknell, and the best performers from these regional tournaments are now being selected for appearance here. Festivals were held at Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Allentown, Wilkes-Barre, and Altoona, and have unearthed much of value to the program for the gathering at Bucknell, Mr. Korson says.

Mr. Korson calls the Pennsylvania Folk Festival "part of the national movement to preserve the native lore of this country". Although most of the men and women who could divulge much on native Pennsylvania are dead, diligent search among their old papers and recollections of their children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren have proved invaluable in the search for material. "The culture of a nation is first seen in its folklore", Mr. Korson explains, adding that "from these original and sometimes primitive ballads, tales, and superstitions are developed the literature, music, and plastic arts of a people."

Many Bucknell alumni are included among the State's most prominent historians, folklorists, and scholars who are serving on the committees planning for the event. The Hon. John S. Fisher, of Pittsburgh, formerly a governor of Pennsylvania, is chairman of the honorary committee; Colonel Henry W. Shoemaker, of McElhattan, prominent Altoona publisher and often considered Pennsylvania's official historian, because of the large number of books on state history he has written, heads the active committee, and W. Walter Wilson, of Milton, Pa., is the chairman of the administration committee.

The festival will be free of all commercialism, any proceeds above expenses to be placed in a fund for building a museum of Pennsylvania folklore.

Members of an old time Pennsylvania German Singing School, Straustown

Colonel Henry W. Shoemaker has already offered part of his famous collection of antiques as a nucleus for the proposed museum. A nominal admission fee of twenty-five cents for adults and ten cents for children will be charged to cover expenses, and parking will be free.

Saturday evening, August 1, will probably be the outstanding part of the program, for state-wide contests for jig dancers, street criers, figure callers, county auctioneers, tellers of "tall tales", ballad singers, yarn spinners, and many others will be held, followed by a competition for the square dancing championship of Pennsylvania. Participants in this latter form of rural terpsichore will be the mixed teams which won in the five regional programs. Russian folk songs by St. Michael's Russian Choir of Mt. Carmel will provide a pleasant interlude between contests.

Racial folk lore is to be the feature Thursday evening, July 30, when the Festival opens. A large raised stage will be erected in the center of the Stadium, and among the groups to appear on it will be: Ukrainian dancers from Wilkes-Barre; Gypsies from the Pittsburgh district; Negro spiritual singers from Philadelphia; Cornplanter Indians from the only reservation in the State; Pennsylvania Germans from the south and eastern part, and French singers from Frenchville in Clearfield County.

Three ceremonial dances, the Indian Prayer Song, Medicine Dance, and War Dance, presented by the Cornplanter Indians under the direction of Chief Strong Fox, will open this program. They will be followed by the Sunbury High School Girls' Glee Club singing the folk songs of the Pennsylvania races. The Ukrainian dancers from the anthracite region will come next with their colorful dances. One hundred voices will make up the choir singing negro spirituals. The gypsy music and dances and the French folk songs will precede the Pennsylvania German presentation of ballads and games that close the first night's program.

Occupational folklore will occupy the principal spots on the program for Friday evening, July 31, when the participants will include the Indians in their famous Cornplanting rites, the Conestoga wagoners in their traditional songs, the Bloomsburg Consistory Glee Club in railroad songs of Pennsylvania, the Pennsylvania Germans, Pennsylvania canalmen, the coal miners, in ballads, and clogs, and jigs, the chanteyman of the Jib-boom Club Chantey Singers of New London, Conn., singing the sea chanteys of Old Philadelphia.

On both Friday and Saturday afternoons there will be varied programs featuring, among others, Mrs. Hannah Sayre, 74-year-old ballad singer of western Pennsylvania, Pioneer Pennsylvania lumberjacks, river raftsmen, and bituminous coal miners, Mrs. Mary Hite-Bowman Morgan singing Stephen Foster songs, river raftsmen, anthracite miners' ballads, Pennsylvania Germans in songs, games, and dances, Indian dances, and the Sunbury Concordia Singing Society and the Williamsport Turn-Verein singing High German folk songs.

The Festival will close with a great song fest Sunday afternoon, August 2, at 6 o'clock, when there will be group singing and music by several famous choirs, including the Shawnee Choral Society, a famous Welsh organization of 80 voices. Several hymns written by Professor Robert Lowry, '54, one of Bucknell's outstanding alumni, will be included on this program.

A massed choir of 100 voices will sing Pennsylvania hymns during the Sunday afternoon program, and favorite selections of "Ole Bull," famous violinist, will be played by Dr. Will George Butler, of Mansfield State Teachers College.

Then, as a climax to the program of choral music, the entire throng will join in group singing.

More and more, as plans shape up for the state-wide fete, it becomes apparent that Bucknell University's Memorial Stadium will be the scene of the greatest outdoor spectacle in the East this Summer.

In all, nearly 800 men and women from all parts of the state are coming to Bucknell to take part as performers in this unusual event.

An exhibit of native folk arts and crafts, including a pioneer kitchen and other attractive collections of antiques, all of them over 100 years old, will be held in connection with the Festival. An Indian village will provide added interest for visitors.

All of the performances are scheduled for Memorial Stadium, where amplifiers will carry the programs to all parts of the stadium.

Large numbers of alumni having signified their intention of attending the Festival, the possibility of a mid-summer Alumni Day appears not too remote. In any event, many of Bucknell's graduates will return to witness their alma mater's latest cultural contribution.

179 Seniors Get Degrees As Noted Leaders Speak

BUCKNELL'S newest additions to her alumni ranks, the 179 men and women who comprised the class of 1936, showed that they are of the material of which Bucknellians are made when they sat through a drizzling rain for two hours to hear a stirring address by Roger Williams Straus, New York industrialist, and a brief but inspiring talk by Newton D. Baker, one-time Secretary of War, at the University's eighty-sixth annual Commencement on Monday morning, June 8.

Coming as the climax of one of the most unusual and most successful years in Bucknell's history, the rain threatened for a time to abruptly terminate the College's twelfth consecutive open air program, but could not dampen the enthusiasm of her loyal seniors.

Awarding of honorary degrees to Mr. Straus and Mr. Baker, co-chairmen of the National Conference of Jews and Christians, for their promotion of religious liberty provided the theme for the entire Commencement ceremony. In making the awards as part of the University's commemoration of the three hundredth anniversary of the exile of Roger Williams from Massachusetts to found an experiment in religious liberty in Rhode Island, Arnaud C. Marts, Acting President, said that Bucknell regarded itself as "one of the results of the Roger Williams exile, one of the institutions which sprang from his struggle."

He added that Mr. Straus and Mr. Baker were "carrying on in our day the battle for religious freedom and tolerance to which Roger Williams in his day gave his impassioned leadership". Mr. Straus received the degree of Doctor of the Humanities and Mr. Baker the degree of Doctor of Civil Laws.

In his Commencement address Mr. Straus made a strong plea for both religious and academic freedom as a tradition of Bucknell since its founding ninety years ago "was to a large extent inspired by a group of men who inherited the ideals exemplified by Roger Williams."

"Bucknell received its material as well as spiritual beginnings from the Baptist group", he declared. "It breathed the spirit of religious liberty, its doors were open to all and true academic freedom without domination of any religious, financial, racial group permeated its halls.... These principles laid down by the founders have never been seriously challenged. Year after year Bucknell's doors have been open to all who had the quality of mind and character to make use of their opportunities."

"We must keep open the fields of knowledge and its expression must be unshackled," he urged. "This we call academic freedom. It is a corollary of freedom of conscience. If a man is not permitted to express his views on man's relationship and place in the universe, which is the essence of religion, then there can be no such thing as academic freedom.

"At the present time the question of academic freedom revolves more often about economic theories than about theology, but the privilege having been established, it is not difficult to recognize the attempt to curtail it.

"Restriction of academic freedom in the interest of an economic theory is as indefensible, as vicious, and as such an invasion of human rights as is such restriction on racial and religious grounds."

The traditions of individual responsibility, academic freedom, and religious liberty which go to make up the dignity of the individual were cited by Mr. Straus as the basic principles which make up the Bucknell tradition.

"Let us at all times remember that all of us are individuals and must be judged individually", he emphasized. "There is a tendency today to think in terms of groups and to classify people as such, thus losing sight of the fact that man's advance in the process of civilization is due to the dignification of the individual. The attempt to force the individual back into the group is the basis of the Totalitarian State. I believe that the never ending battle between the forces of darkness and enlightenment during the next 25 years will revolve upon this issue: The form of government we call democracy championing the conception of individual rights; dictatorship, of the individual or of a special group, demanding the submission of all into a controlled mass of robot like nonentities. In any case, the solution to our problems, correction of evils and the perfect state will not be found by my generation nor yours, but gradual progress can be gained if the problems are faced in the light of Bucknell's tradition-search for the truth without fear or prejudice, and its application in the light of a feeling of respect for the rights of the individual man and woman.

HEADLINERS AT COMMENCEMENT

"My plea, then, is this: that members of the class of 1936 be loyal to the spirit that distinguishes Bucknell's teachings and traditions, for these are truly religious, nobly American, and never needed more than in the present world crisis."

Speaking informally, Mr. Baker told the graduates that the Declaration of Independence guarantees us life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. "Life and liberty are facts, but happiness is still a pursuit", he said. "Education is for happiness and happiness comes chiefly through service. I hope, therefore, that your college education has given you the opportunity and the capacity to serve the generation of which you are a part."

DEGREES CONFERRED ON 210 MEN AND WOMEN

As in former years, the conferring of degrees was a highlight of the Commencement program. This year, 210 men and women were degree recipients. They were distributed as follows: Bachelor of Arts, 99; Bachelor of Science, 80; Master's degrees, 20; Professional degrees, 5; and Honorary degrees, 6.

The Bachelor of Science degrees were divided as follows: Biology, 21; Commerce and Finance, 16; Education, 16; Chemical Engineering, 4; Civil Engineering, 8; Electrical Engineering, 9; Mechanical Engineering, 6.

Jerome Kantor of Newark was awarded the Burpee Fellowship in Genetics providing free tuition for one year and $500 in cash.

PROFESSIONAL DEGREES GO TO 5 ALUMNI

Five alumni were awarded professional degrees at Bucknell's eighty-sixth Commencement in recognition of their achievements in engineering. Professional degrees differ from honorary degrees in that the recipient must meet certain requirements set by the University in regards to proficiency in engineering, and must submit a thesis as a part of his qualifying work.

Albert E. Conklin '26, chief chemist of the C. A. Reed Company at Williamsport, received the degree of Chemical Engineer. Mr. Conklin has been an active research worker in the field of paper manufacturing. He has held positions with the DuPont Rayon Company, the Champion Fiber Company, the Dennison Manufacturing Company, and other leading concerns.

Paul H. Crago '30, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was awarded the degree of Civil Engineer. He is assistant secretary-treasurer of Hughes and Company, New York City.

Frank T. Christian '29, director of the engineering laboratories for the Eclipse Machine Company of Elmira, N. Y., received the degree of Mechanical Engineer. Mr. Christian was instrumental in developing the automatic starter for the automobile and has eight patents to his credit.

Raymond E. Sprenkle '17, and Frank L. Frost '25, both of Cleveland, Ohio, were awarded the degrees of Mechanical Engineer and Chemical Engineer, respectively. Mr. Sprenkle is mechanical engineer for the Bailey Motor Company and Mr. Frost is assistant to the manager of the technical division of the Grasselli Chemical Company.

Six Honorary Degrees

SIX distinguished men, three of them Bucknell alumni, received honorary degrees at Commencement. Bucknellians honored by their alma mater included two classmates: John C. Hostetter, director of development and research at the Corning Glass Works, Corning, N. Y., and Robert McCurdy Steele, president of the California State Teachers College. Both were graduated from Bucknell in the class of 1908. The third alumnus to receive an honorary degree was John H. Waite '11, head of the department of clinical ophthalmology at Harvard Medical School.

Roger Williams Straus and Newton D. Baker, the Commencement speakers, and Rittenhouse Neisser, director of extension at Crozer Theological Seminary, were the other three who had honorary degrees conferred upon them.

The citations which accompanied the presentations, and the degrees conferred, were as follows:

ROGER WILLIAMS STRAUS, L.H.D.

Educated at the Lawrenceville Preparatory School and Princeton where he was graduated in 1913 with the degree of Bachelor of Literature. Shortly after his graduation came the World War in which he served with distinction as Intelligence Officer with the Commanding General's staff in Siberia. In spite of the demands made upon him by his numerous and important business connections, Mr. Straus has devoted much time and energy to the fostering of a fuller understanding among the major religious groups of this country. In the summer of 1935 he was one of the conference leaders at the Institute of Human Relations held at Williams College. The love of religious freedom he inherits from his eminent father, the late Oscar Straus, former Ambassador to Turkey, whose biography of Roger Williams ranks as the foremost of the many biographical studies of the celebrated Baptist. Last year during the Roger Williams Tercentenary Mr. Straus delivered several notable memorial addresses.

Bucknell University runs true to its tradition of cultural and religious liberty in honoring one who genuinely and instinctively reflects in his life and work the spirit of the times. In thus helping to keep open the channels of the human mind and spirit, Mr. Straus is doing his share towards ushering in a new and better day, and this University places upon his efforts the seal of its approval by recommending him for the honorary degree of DOCTOR OF THE HUMANITIES.

NEWTON DIEHL BAKER, D.C.L.

Decorated with the Distinguished Service Medal for accomplishments in times of war; awarded the medal for "distinguished service to humanity" for achievements in times of peace — a politician who became a statesman; a statesman who became a servant of humanity. Secretary of War under President Wilson, who envisioned the brotherhood of man, you have devoted your great talents to the improvement of human relations. By your courage, your vision, and your initiative you have built new highways to peace and human understanding.

We welcome you to the fellowship of this University dedicated by its founders to the perpetuation of those principles of which your life is an illustrious example. In recognition of the measure and quality of your service to your country and to the world in war and in peace; in recognition of your sympathetic understanding of human problems; in recognition of your constructive contributions to civic betterment, religious freedom, and international good-will, the faculty and trustees of Bucknell University have recommended you for the degree, honoris causa, of DOCTOR OF CIVIL LAW.

JOHN HERBERT WAITE, Sc.D.

Graduated from Bucknell in 1911 with the degree of B.Sc., and in 1916 received the degree of M.D. from the Harvard Medical School. Dr. Waite served as State Director of the Rockefeller Foundation from 1916-1920. Beginning as a Teaching Fellow in Ophthalmology at Harvard in 1922, he now holds the Professorship of Clinical Ophthalmology and is head of the department, and in addition to his teaching duties is Ophthalmic Chief of Staff of the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary and Ophthalmic Consultant of nine of the leading hospitals of Greater Boston. During the World War, Dr. Waite carried on extensive researches in tropical medicine, working in the Far East and in Australia under the auspices of the Rockefeller Foundation.

A prolific contributor to scholarly publications in the field of Ophthalmic literature, he has through his researches here and abroad added in a measurable degree to the happiness of human life, and has

Baccalaureate Address

SPEAKING on the subject, "The Greatest Agency in American Life", Acting President Marts delivered the Baccalaureate sermon to the seniors and their parents Sunday morning in the Baptist Church. Although a brief thunderstorm threatened to cancel the traditional academic procession, the weather man was kind and permitted this colorful ceremony to proceed as usual.

Before the services Melvin LeMon played a half hour recital on the church's reconditioned organ upon which work had been rushed in order that it might be ready for Commencement. Dr. Milton G. Evans led in prayer and Dr. Emory W. Hunt pronounced the benediction.

Mrs. William V. Mahaffey sang a soprano solo and the Baptist Choir sang "The Heavens are Telling", by Haydn. The Rev. James B. Ostergren, pastor of the church, delivered the invocation.

"Religion is the energizing force which lifts men out of lethargy and selfish comfort and hurls them into the arena of impassioned service to humanity", began President Marts.

Deprecating modern tendencies to minimize the importance of religion, he said: "Criticism of the church, belittling of the church, has gone too far for our own happiness. We have looked down upon it, pushed it into the background, spoken slightly of it in our sophistication, jeered at it, and have paid a bitter, cruel price for our folly."

The Bucknell president enumerated the contributions the church has made to present-day life, pointing out that it has backed movements for world peace, social security, and adult education. In addition, it has founded and maintained great humanitarian institutions for the education of the deaf and dumb, care of the blind, and building of character, he added.

Virtually all formal education in America is a by-product of the Christian church, Mr. Marts said, commenting, "Now, the leaders of the schools sometimes look down upon the church as an inferior, weaker organization. They need not; the schools are but the children of the church.

"Men are not sufficiently inspired by the love of country, or the love of science, or the love of beauty, or the love of knowledge, or by any of the unselfish loves except the love of Christ to undertake the appalling burden of founding and maintaining a college.

"The church is far from perfect — it is too human to be perfect. But with all its imperfections it is mankind at its very best," the speaker said.

In his final advice to Bucknell's senior class, the acting president said: "There are injustices to be wiped out; there is ignorance to be dispelled; there are evils and immoralities to be challenged; there is suffering and ill health to be alleviated; there is unselfishness to be enthroned. Throw yourselves into this great game of serving and bettering America and the world, with energy, good humor, and enthusiasm."

Corporation Dinner

A GLOWING tribute to the late Tasker H. Bliss, '73, Bucknell's outstanding military leader who served as Chief of Staff of the United States Army, from his immediate superior, the Honorable Newton D. Baker, who called him "perhaps the foremost soldier of all time", was the highlight of the Corporation Dinner in the College Dining Hall, bringing to an official close the three-day Commencement program.

Speaking informally to the guests gathered for this annual event, Mr. Baker described in brilliant fashion the qualities which made General Bliss generally recognized as one of America's most unusual military officers. He cited his remarkable knowledge of military affairs, diplomacy, and international law, and remarked at length upon his flair for languages and upon his versatility, which made him "one of the outstanding soldiers of all time."

He continued his discussion by asking, "What becomes of our college graduates?" He suggested that they suffer from a lack of discipline, and added that in addition to formal learning they ought also to learn the meaning of discipline. "We owe it to our generation to inculcate a higher idea of the disciplinary obligations of the college man", he said.

Speaking next as a former Secretary of War, Mr. Baker told his listeners that war cannot happen unless men and women really want it to happen. "If we can contribute to the creation of a psychology of peace, then we can really use our education constructively", he declared.

Guests at the dinner included the men who received honorary degrees, trustees, alumni, faculty members, and a number of the graduating class. President Marts presided and called upon each of the honorary degree recipients in turn for a brief talk. With the exception of Dr. Waite, who was unable to remain for the dinner, each of these responded in turn.

Mr. Marts also presented Ira D. Mallery, '86, of the 50-year class. Two other members of this class attended Commencement but did not stay for the dinner.

William C. Walls, '73, president of the Lewisburg National Bank, was introduced to the group as Bucknell's oldest living alumnus in attendance at the exercises. Mr. Walls, who is a member of the Board of Trustees, has not missed a Bucknell Commencement since his graduation 63 years ago.

Other trustees at the dinner were introduced by Mr. Marts as follows: Dr. Mary B. Harris, Alderson, W. Va.; David Burpee, Philadelphia; Dr. Harvey G. Smith, Harrisburg; John B. Stetson, Philadelphia and Berkeley V. Hastings, Milton.

Also Dr. Mary Wolfe, Laurelton; Dr. Milton G. Evans and Judge Albert W. Johnson, Lewisburg; and Oliver J. Decker, Williamsport.

Dr. J. Hillis Miller, former dean of students at Bucknell and now president of Keuka College, and Dr. Carl N. Millward, Milton, newly elected president of the Alumni Association, were also presented.

Reviewing The Class Reunions

Members of 1896 Gather for Their Fortieth class broke up into small groups to discuss the changes which had taken place since their graduation five years ago.

JOHNSON HOST TO 1896

Judge and Mrs. Albert W. Johnson entertained the alumni in the former's class of 1896 who returned for the Commencement festivities and the fortieth anniversary of their graduation. The entertainment took the form of a buffet luncheon at the Johnson home on University Avenue.

1916 COMPTROLLER'S GUESTS

Dayton L. Ranck '16, University Comptroller, and Mrs. Ranck had as their luncheon guests the returning alumni from the 1916 class. This group was well represented at their twentieth reunion, as the reunion photo indicates.

NINETEEN THIRTY-SIX was a good year for reunions, if the number of Bucknell alumni returning to the campus at Commencement time may be accepted as a criterion, for the records show that more of the University's graduates visited their Alma Mater this June than in any previous June in recent years.

Many of them came back to Lewisburg to see their sons and daughters graduate, or to meet their classmates at class reunions or fraternity symposia. Because of the informality that accompanies the Bucknell Commencement season, it is difficult to keep any sort of accurate check upon just who returned. Several hundred alumni registered at the headquarters in the Literature Building, but many more, on the campus for only a few hours, did not have time for this formality.

THREE LUNCHEONS

Three classes scheduled luncheon meetings for Saturday noon. The class of 1931 met at the Hotel Lewisburger, with nearly fifty alumni in attendance. The class president, Edward Smalstig, presided at the brief business meeting after the meal, but no important action was taken by this group. Trennie E. Eisley, reunion chairman, spoke briefly on student enrollment and the plans for rebuilding Old Main, but there were no set speeches. After being photographed several times, the members of the youngest reunion

THREE AT LITERATURE BUILDING

At least three classes held reunion meetings but followed no set program for a luncheon or dinner. The class of 1911 met Saturday afternoon in the Literature Building, as did the classes of 1921 and 1926.

The fiftieth year class, that of 1886, was represented at the Commencement exercises by three members: Elmer R. Keiser, Philadelphia; George F. Keefer, Sunbury; and Ira D. Mallery, Freeport, N. Y.

OFF THE RECORD

To Professor Frank M. Simpson, '95, well-known Bucknell faculty member, goes the distinction of being the first alumnus to register at Alumni Headquarters in the Literature Building when the Commencement season opened Friday, June 5. And to J. F. Winkleblech, '14, of Trevorton, goes the distinction of being the last registrant. During the period from Friday to Sunday 234 alumni called at the Alumni Desk to sign the yearbook.

The honor of being the oldest graduate to register for the alumni records must be divided this year. Miss Emma Beaver, Lewisburg, and Joseph E. Perry, Brookline, Mass., both members of the class of 1878, can claim that distinction jointly.

The youngest alumnus at Commencement, according to the official records, was Miss Diane C. Slifer, daughter of Caryl Dutton Slifer, '27, and Kenneth W. Slifer, '26, of Woodbury, N. J. whose parents indicated her year of graduation as 1954. Miss Slifer not yet having arrived at the age when she can sign her own name.

If a prize had been awarded to the alumnus coming from the greatest distance, competition would have been strong between E. Carroll Condict, '08, of Burma, India, and Dorothy Lent Hooper, '21, of Alhambra, Cal.

STOUGHTON AT REUNIONS

Alfred G. Stoughton, '24, former Alumni Secretary, was once more a familiar figure at the class reunions. "Al" came from New York and his job as Public Relations Secretary for that city's Y. M. C. A.'s to greet the returning graduates as usual. Although he was on the campus for only a short period, Saturday and Sunday, to be exact, he managed to see many of the Bucknellians who showed their interest in Alma Mater by their presence Commencement week-end.

Commencement Festivities

TRUSTEE - FACULTY DINNER

THE second annual Trustee-Faculty Dinner held Friday evening, June 5, in the College Dining Hall with 138 guests present marked the official opening of the Bucknell Commencement season.

Dr. Emory W. Hunt, President Emeritus, who had returned to the campus early in June after nearly a year's absence during which he traveled extensively abroad with prolonged visits in India and China, was the guest of honor.

Arnaud C. Marts, Acting President, presided and introduced the following prominent men and women who attended the affair: Dr. Homer P. Rainey, former president of the University and now a member of the Board of Trustees; Dr. Eugene S. Farley, newly-elected director of the Bucknell Junior College at Wilkes-Barre; Dr. Mary B. Harris, superintendent of the Federal Institution for Women at Alderson, W. Va., and daughter of a former B. U. president; Miss Helen Hunt, dean of women at Judson College, Burma, India; and Ira D. Mallery, '86, who was on the campus for the fiftieth anniversary of his class.

Remarking that there were present a former president, a president emeritus, the daughters of two former presidents, and an acting president, Mr. Marts pointed out that the only figure lacking was a president of Bucknell.

Dr. Hunt spoke briefly of the changes at Bucknell during his absence and expressed his pleasure at returning once more to Lewisburg and the College.

President Marts announced the resignation of Dr. S. C. Ogburn, professor of Chemical Engineering, who has accepted a position as director of research for the General Chemical Company of New York, one of the largest chemical manufacturers in the country.

In closing, President Marts called upon Dr. Frank Padelford, member of the Board of Trustees and an officer of the Northern Baptist Convention, who responded briefly.

Following the dinner, which was informal, the trustees scattered to attend their various committee meetings in preparation for their June meeting on the following day.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES

One new member was elected to the Board of Trustees and five old members were re-elected at the annual Commencement meeting of that body held Saturday morning, June 6, in the President's house.

Dr. L. C. Rummage, well-known Nanticoke physician, is the new Board member. Trustees re-elected for four-year terms are: Judge J. Warren Davis, Trenton, N. J.; David Burpee and John B. Stetson, both of Philadelphia; Earl A. Morton of Pittsburgh; and Gilbert S. McClintock, Wilkes-Barre.

The Board held its annual election, re-naming each of its officers as follows: Vice-Chairman, Judge J. Warren Davis; Secretary, Oliver J. Decker, Williamsport; and Treasurer, Dayton L. Ranck, Lewisburg.

It was announced that $184,000 has been pledged thus far in the drive for funds to rebuild Old Main. New York alumni have exceeded their quota of $75,000 and alumni in the Philadelphia and New Jersey areas are pushing their drives towards completion.

The contract for the reconstruction of the west wing of Old Main was awarded to the Andrew J. Sordoni Construction Company of Kingston, which also has the contract for clearing up the ruins.

CONCERTS

Commencement week-end entertainment centered, as in former years, on the musical and dramatic programs which are annual features planned for the enjoyment of alumni and other guests.

An audience which included many visitors to the campus heard the Symphony Orchestra and Men's Glee Club offer a joint concert on Sunday afternoon on the women's campus. Paul Gies, Associate Professor of Music, conducted the orchestra and Melvin LeMon, Assistant Music Professor, directed the glee club.

Soloists appearing in the program were Mrs. Harold Easley, soprano, and Miss Inez Robison, '28, contralto, both of Lewisburg. Works of Sibelius, Haydn, and Brahms were featured.

The University Chorus, assisted by four guest soloists, sang an oratorio, "Manzoni Requiem", by Giuseppe Verdi, for an audience that crowded the capacity of the Baptist Church Sunday evening.

Mrs. William V. Mahaffey, '25, Pittsburgh, mezzo-soprano and daughter of Dr. Emory W. Hunt, was one of the soloists. Others were Olive Marshall, soprano, Frank Oglesby, tenor, and Edward Rhein, bass, all of Philadelphia.

The annual recital of the music students was held Saturday afternoon in the Baptist Church. Selections played on the newly-reconditioned organ were of unusual interest. Vocal numbers and a violin ensemble were other features.

As its contribution to the Commencement program, Cap and Dagger dramatic society produced "The Wind and the Rain" by Merton Hodge, Saturday evening in the Lewisburg High School.

Students who took leading roles in the play, an English comedy, were George Both, Scarsdale, N. Y., Bernice Henry, Vandergrift, Edna Hutchinson, Wilmington, Del., Jay Snyder, Star Junction, and Elizabeth Talley of Williamsport. Elizabeth Dinsmore of East Orange, N. J., directed the play.

RECEPTION

A Commencement social event of importance to Bucknellians was the President's annual reception on Sunday afternoon at the President's house.

In addition to Acting President and Mrs. Marts, the receiving line included Dean R. H. Rivenburg, Dr. Emory W. Hunt, and Dr. and Mrs. Homer P. Rainey.

Miss Amelia E. Clark, dean of women, and Mrs. R. H. Rivenburg presided at the refreshment table. They were assisted in serving by Mrs. Eugene S. Farley of Wilkes-Barre, Mrs. Malcolm E. Musser, Mrs. M. L. Drum, Mrs. Paul Stolz, all of Lewisburg, and by Mrs. A. T. McArthur of Whitehouse, N. J., sister of Mrs. Marts.

Summer Session Largest Ever

WITH enrollment totalling 472, the largest Summer Session in the history of Bucknell is now being held under the capable direction of Dr. Frank G. Davis '11. This represents an increase over last year of 45 per cent, or about ten per cent, and eclipses the previous high of 447, established in 1931. When one considers that the 1935 enrollment was 25 per cent better than that of 1934, the steady increase becomes even more significant. 25 per cent, and eclipses the previous high of 447, established in 1931. When one considers that the 1935 enrollment was 25 per cent better than that of 1934, the steady increase becomes even more significant.

In addition, the Demonstration Schools at Lewisburg and Milton are attracting large groups of boys and girls, with about 204 enrolled at the former place, 245 the latter. E. Collins Cupp '19, is in charge of the Milton Demonstration School, and Prof. George R. Robinson directs the program at Lewisburg.

One of the outstanding features of this year's Summer Session, and, incidentally, an innovation in American education, is a course in Propaganda, for which 12 widely-known publicists are acting as guest lecturers. Dr. Harwood L. Childs, formerly of the Bucknell faculty, and now Associate Professor of Politics at Princeton University, is in charge of the course.

Another high spot in the session is the Pennsylvania Block Program Demonstration School being held in Bucknell Hall. The Misses Alva and Eva Hornberger, whom the State Department of Public Instruction considers outstanding exponents of this new school teaching technique, are conducting classes for about 45 pupils.

Six semester hours of special courses necessary for teachers wishing to obtain a Teacher's Guidance Certificate are being offered in the Summer program as well.

Fourteen new names appear on the faculty roll, including six members of the regular session who did not teach last Summer. Among the newcomers are Dr. Joseph Miller, director of guidance in the Wilkes-Barre schools; Dr. Childs; Mrs. J. Orin Oliphant, who is instructing classes in geography; and Eugene D. Carstater, of the University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn., who is teaching several education courses. Dr. Morris Wolfe, of Girard College, is substituting for Dr. D. Montfort Melchior, of the same college, during Dr. Melchior's illness, teaching two courses in history and one in education. Prof. Clyde E. Burgee has taken over two courses in economics originally assigned Prof. R. L. Matz, in addition to a course originally scheduled before Prof. Matz asked him to assume the added duties for the Summer. Prof. Donald G. Stillman, a recent addition to the faculty for the regular term, is teaching his first Summer Session courses, both in English.

Commencement has been scheduled for August 7, but to date the speaker has not been chosen. About 18 Bachelors' degrees will be awarded, while the number of graduate degrees cannot at the moment be determined definitely.

Tabulations on the Summer Session enrollment had not been completed when the Alumni Monthly went to press. Last Summer, 46 Pennsylvania counties, and nine other states were represented, as well as 62 colleges. There were 139 graduate students last year, and in view of the increased enrollment, this number is expected to be found much larger when the tabulation is completed.

"FRESHMAN PROSPECTS GOOD", SAYS HOLTER

"Prospects for this fall's freshman class are as good as they were for last year's class, when 378 students, a record-breaking number, were enrolled for the first year's work", Registrar H. W. Holter announced as he checked applications for admission.

"Because the rebuilt west wing of Old Main, which will be ready for occupancy in September, will have rooms for 51 boys, we will be able to accommodate a larger number of men students than heretofore", he pointed out, urging alumni to submit the names of prospective students whom they wish to recommend for Bucknell.

"We are particularly interested in receiving names of prospective freshmen from alumni, since our graduates know the type of students whom we want at Bucknell", he added.

All of the available rooms for women students in the dormitories had been filled by May 1, according to Mr. Holter. Women students who have applied since that date have been placed on the waiting list to receive rooms in case any of the students already accepted change their plans or drop out of college.

"If you have a son or daughter whom you are planning to send to Bucknell in 1937, it is not too early to place his or her name on the list of applicants for admission", advised the Registrar.

FIVE SUMMER CONFERENCES

Bucknell University is scheduled to serve as host this summer to five different church groups.

More than 100 ministers were on the campus in June for the annual two-day sessions of the Pennsylvania Baptist Pastors' Association. The Rev. L. J. Velte '10, of Chester presided in his capacity as president of the Association.

The Pennsylvania Baptist Young People's Convention at the end of June attracted 125 young people. Numerous Bucknell Alumni took part in the Convention programs.

When the Pennsylvania Baptist Women held their house party here July 6 to 9, the registration showed more than 220 women visitors. Mrs. R. H. Rivenburg, wife of Bucknell's Dean, was chairman of the local committee arranging for the affair.

The World Wide Guild meets on the campus on July 11 and 12, to be followed on July 19 by the Congregational Christian Summer Assembly, which will be in session for one week.

Construction Gets Under Way

Old Main

THE ruins of Old Main will soon be but a memory as workmen rush to complete the West Wing, so that it may be ready for occupancy by the opening of college in September. Rebuilding of East Wing and of the central section will follow as soon as the necessary funds are made available.

The drive for money to rebuild this important structure which to many Bucknellians represents the heart of the University has met with notable success in the areas contacted to date.

Alumni in New York City and in the northern New Jersey area have reached their quota of $75,000, according to reports received here. Of this amount, one-half has already been paid in to the University. Steady progress is reported in the Philadelphia and central and southern New Jersey areas, where the quota has been set at $100,000.

The Lewisburg area, including four counties, is attempting to raise $41,225 as its goal. More than $20,000 has already been subscribed in this district, with many alumni still to be contacted.

Alumni in the Harrisburg territory, which will include seven counties, will open their drive on July 13, to be followed shortly by the alumni in Altoona, Reading, and other important centers.

The contract for rebuilding West Wing was let by the Trustees at Commencement time and work is being pushed rapidly. The plan to be followed in rebuilding Old Main will be the same as that employed when the building was erected, that is, West Wing first, followed by East Wing, and then the central section.

As in the original building, West Wing when completed will provide dormitory rooms on the three upper floors and offices for the Dean, the Registrar, and the Treasurer on the first floor. Most of the dormitory rooms will be double ones, and will consist of sleeping and study rooms combined. While not elaborate, they will be attractively decorated and will offer very pleasant rooming quarters for 51 students.

It was found necessary to remove all of the wooden floors, ceilings, and partitions in the old structure. Steel beams and cement will be used instead in the rebuilding.

Floor plans for West Wing may be viewed at the Registrar's Office in West College.

OLD MAIN MEMORIALS

Many Bucknellians have responded to the suggestion that gifts to the Old Main fund be used to create Memorial Rooms in Old Main as it is reconstructed. Among such memorials which have already been designated are the following:

A dormitory room as a Memorial to the late Christy Mathewson '02, the gift of Harland A. Trax '01.

A dormitory room as a Memorial to the late Robert M. Darlington '03, the gift of Leroy T. Butler '97 and Richard Darlington.

Dormitory Room No. 99, West Wing, as a Memorial to the late Mrs. Mary C. Evans Griffith, Insti-

The Christian Association Room, the gift of Mr. Roy G. Bostwick '05.

The Treasurer's Office, as a Memorial to the late Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Hopper, the gift of their children, Mr. H. Boardman Hopper, Miss Laura Hopper, Miss Mary Louise Hopper, and Miss Margaret Hopper.

A dormitory room as a Memorial to Dr. Stephen W. Taylor, Acting President, who started the erection of Old Main in 1849, the gift of Arnaud C. Marts, Acting President in 1936.

A dormitory room as a Memorial to Dr. Howard Malcolm, President, who carried on the building of Old Main from 1851-57, the gift of Arnaud C. Marts, Acting President in 1936.

A dormitory room in honor of Mrs. Sarah M. Pangburn, the gift of her son, Dr. E. W. Pangburn '15.

Many other Memorial gifts are being made, but the donors have not yet indicated the nature of the Memorials which they prefer. Further announcements of these Memorials will be made later.

A full list of Memorial possibilities in Old Main may be found in the booklet "An Unfinished Story in Five Chapters", or will be furnished upon request to The Old Main Office, Lewisburg, Penna.

HONORARY DEGREES

combined imagination and scientific skill. His is a field of highly specialized science. For his distinguished achievements in scholarship and teaching his Alma Mater acknowledges her indebtedness and recommends him for the honorary degree of DOCTOR OF SCIENCE.

JOHN C. HOSTETTER, Sc.D.

A native of Williamsport, Pennsylvania, he received his higher education at Bucknell where he was graduated in 1908 with the degree of Bachelor of Science to be followed in 1909 by the degree of Master of Science and in 1930 by that of Chemical Engineer. After serving his Alma Mater from 1908-1910 as instructor in chemistry, he became Assistant Chemist of the United States Bureau of Standards. From 1912-1919 he was physical chemist at the Geophysical Laboratory of the Carnegie Institute. The following year, 1920, Mr. Hostetter began his association with the Corning Glass Works, filling one important position after another. At present, he is the Director of Development and Research for that company.

Author of many papers on scientific investigation, holder of several patents, his contributions to the advance of American science have been numerous and noteworthy. As an authority on the production and uses of glass, he has achieved world eminence as attested by his membership on the Advisory Committee of the British Society of Glass Technology. To his knowledge of his craft, to his faculty for intensive application, and to his ability for cooperative effort must be ascribed in large measure the successful production of the mighty two hundred inch glass telescope recently delivered by the Corning Glass Works to the Mt. Palomar Observatory in California. In personal tribute to him and in grateful acknowledgment of his services to the cause of science, his Alma Mater recommends him for the honorary degree of DOCTOR OF SCIENCE.

RITTENHOUSE NEISSER, D.D.

Bachelor of Divinity, Crozer Theological Seminary in the class of 1914 and Master of Theology, 1915, has long been identified with Baptist interests in Pennsylvania. For more than twenty years a busy and successful Philadelphia pastor, he has filled many posts of denominational responsibility. His interest in religious education is evidenced by his service as Secretary of the Education Board of the Pennsylvania Baptist Convention, which office he held from 1915-1921. Since 1920 he has been a member of the faculty of Crozer Theological Seminary. He is author of the book, Our Slavic Neighbors, and has been a frequent contributor to theological quarterlies. His constructive leadership, his missionary zeal, and his cultural attainments make him an outstanding representative of "the things of the spirit rather than of the spirit of things." In testimony of the regard and appreciation which Bucknell University holds for such qualities, Mr. Neisser has been recommended for the honorary degree of DOCTOR OF DIVINITY.

ROBERT McCURDY STEELE, LL.D.

A graduate of Bucknell in the class of 1908, he pursued graduate studies at Columbia University, where he was awarded his A.M. in 1924 and his Ph.D. in 1926. Since 1900 Dr. Steele has been associated with the Pennsylvania school system in various capacities — as Director of Teacher Training at the Slippery Rock Teachers' College from 1920-1926; as President of the Clarion State Teachers' College from 1926-1928; and since 1928 as President of the California State Teachers' College. During the World War he was Superintendent of Instruction, United States Army Schools.

Under his direction the college of which he is the head has come to be recognized as one of the leading institutions for the training of teachers, and as Chairman of the Curriculum Committee of Pennsylvania State Teachers' Colleges, he has helped higher education to become a finer instrument for the development of citizens and specialists fitted to cope with the problems of a rapidly changing world. In his career as an educator Dr. Steele has displayed to a rare degree the qualities of imaginative thinking and projective efficiency. In recognition of his interest in and his contribution to the great profession of teaching, his Alma Mater today recommends him for the honorary degree of DOCTOR OF LAWS.

Faculty Members In The News

Dr. S. C. Ogburn Jr. Resigns To Accept Chemistry Post

Dr. S. C. Ogburn Jr., head of the department of Chemical Engineering at Bucknell since 1926, who resigned his position in June, will take up his duties as director of research for the General Chemical Company in New York City on July 20.

Dr. Ogburn represented Bucknell at the annual conference of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education at Madison, Wisconsin, from June 23 to 26. He presided as chairman of two sessions at the conclave and presented two papers on "Bucknell's Program of Summer School Instruction in Chemical Engineering" and "Recommended Laboratory Procedure in Chemical Engineering Process Development."

During Dr. Ogburn's stay at Bucknell he built up the departmental library from 50 to 2,000 books, established an Industrial Museum representing complete processes of 135 industries, equipped the chemical engineering laboratories, and taught many courses. He also wrote his own laboratory manuals.

Announce Appointments of Three New Faculty Members

Appointment of three new faculty members to the Bucknell teaching staff has been announced for the coming year.

Dr. Walter H. Sauvain, principal of the Daniel Butler School at Belmont, Mass., will become assistant professor of education. He is a graduate of the University of North Dakota, and has studied at the University of Chicago and at Columbia, receiving both his Master's and his Doctor's degrees at the latter institution.

William McRae of Port Jefferson, L. I., will become instructor in piano, replacing Miss Ruth Hlavaty. Mr. McRae is a graduate of the Oberlin College Conservatory of Music, and is a member of Phi Beta Kappa. He has had extensive musical experience and is at present an instructor in piano at Port Jefferson.

Arthur Hillman of the University of Chicago will assist in the department of sociology during the first semester while Dr. Sutherland is away. Professor Hillman is a graduate of the University of Washington, from which institution he also received his Master's degree. In addition to having three years of teaching experience at the University of Washington, Professor Hillman has engaged in extensive research projects in Washington and at the University of Chicago, where he is now a research assistant to Dr. Wirth.

Dr. Sutherland To Conduct Forums For U. S. Office of Education

Dr. Robert L. Sutherland, chairman of the Social Science group at Bucknell, has been honored by an invitation to participate in an experiment in adult education, sponsored by the United States Office of Education, Department of the Interior.

During the five-month period beginning September 1, the Office of Education is sponsoring Public Affairs Forums in 10 cities located in different regions of the country. Dr. Sutherland has been asked to assist in the program which has been organized for Portland, Oregon. He will be in charge of the Forum meetings which deal with social problems. He will return to continue his work at Bucknell the second semester.

Dr. Gates Accepts Teaching Post at Cornell University

Dr. Paul W. Gates, associate professor of history at Bucknell, has resigned his position to accept a teaching appointment in American history at Cornell University. He will take the place of Dr. Arthur B. Whitaker, who is going to the University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Gates came to Bucknell as assistant professor of history in 1930 after receiving his Doctor of Philosophy degree at Harvard University, where he was awarded the David A. Wells prize in economics for his graduate thesis. In 1933 he was granted a year's leave of absence by Bucknell to carry on a special study at the Brookings Institute in Washington, D. C. He was also on leave of absence for the half of the college year in 1934, when he made a special survey for the AAA at Washington, D. C.

Professor LeMon and George Korson Publish Book of Miners Ballads

"The Miner Sings", a book of American folk ballads collected and transcribed by Melvin LeMon, assistant professor of organ, and George Korson, director of the Pennsylvania Folk Festival at Bucknell, was published recently by J. Fisher and Brother, New York music publishers.

The book contains 10 songs transcribed and arranged by Professor LeMon with an introduction and editorial notes supplied by Mr. Korson. The songs selected for publication were chosen from a collection of 70 representing a year's effort on the part of their compilers.

Dr. Coleman, Lions' Candidate For International Director

At the State Convention of Lions clubs held at Scranton on June 1-2, Professor William H. Coleman of Bucknell University was doubly honored. Not only was Dr. Coleman re-elected to the State Governing Board for another term, but his candidacy for the office of International Director was unanimously and enthusiastically endorsed by the delegates representing the 5,000 Lions and 132 clubs of Pennsylvania.

In the event that Professor Coleman is elected at the International Convention at Providence, R. I., in July, he will serve for a two-year term as a member of the International Board. Since there are only twelve members comprising this board which handles the destinies of Lions International, the honor is a signal one, and it will bring the name of Bucknell University to the favorable attention of a constituency which includes United States, Canada, Mexico, Cuba, and China.

The Lewisburg Lions Club has been very active in promoting the candidacy of Professor Coleman through its special committee made up of Dayton L. Ranck '16, LeRoy T. Butler '97, and Walter H. Holter '24. This committee circularized by letter all the clubs in Pennsylvania, and at Scranton the State Convention voted to send a letter to all clubs in Lions International advocating the selection of Lion Coleman as the representative of the State on the International Board.

Miss Lois Stevenson,

English Instructor, weds

Charles Kalp, '29, in N. Y.

Miss Lois A. Stevenson, instructor in English at Bucknell, and Charles W. Kalp '29, Lewisburg attorney, were married in the Little Church Around the Corner in New York City in May.

The bride is the daughter of Professor G. N. Stevenson of Shurtleff College, Alton, Ill. Mr. Kalp is a well known member of the Union County bar and is active in Democratic politics, having been the nominee of that party for district attorney last year.

Mr. and Mrs. Kalp have taken an apartment in Lewisburg.

Dr. T. E. Newland of the department of Education at Bucknell has been invited to serve on the summer session faculty of the University of North Carolina. He will teach a course in Educational Psychology, a field in which he has specialized. The North Carolina summer sessions open July 20.

A. L. Brandon Gets

Honorary Degree From

Oklahoma Baptist University

Arthur L. Brandon, executive assistant for the American Youth Commission at Washington, D. C. and formerly Director of Public Relations at Bucknell, was awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws by Oklahoma Baptist University, Shawnee, Okla., at that college's Commencement on May 25.

Mr. Brandon, who was at one time professor of English at Shawnee, was also the Commencement speaker for the University. He and Mrs. Brandon returned from Oklahoma in time to see the former's sister, Miss Virginia Brandon, receive her Bachelor of Arts degree from Bucknell.

New Book by Dr. Theiss

Adopted in Illinois Schools

"The Flying Explorer", a story of the African Jungle written by Dr. Lewis E. Theiss, author of more than 25 books for boys and professor of journalism at Bucknell, has recently been adopted by the Illinois Rural Schools for collateral reading in country schools.

Miss Ruth Hlavaty Marries

St. Lawrence Univ. Professor

Miss Ruth Hlavaty, instructor in piano at Bucknell, and Frederick P. Parker of the department of sociology at St. Lawrence University, Canton, N. Y. were united in marriage Monday afternoon, June 8, in the living room of Hunt Hall.

Dr. R. H. Edwards, of Ithaca, N. Y., step-father of the groom, officiated at the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by Dr. Paul G. Stolz, head of the department of music at Bucknell. She was gowned in ivory chiffon, fashioned with a floating cape and carried lilies of the valley, forget-me-nots and white rose buds.

Miss Martha Hlavaty, her sister, served as maid of honor. She wore a gown of peach mousseline de soie and carried tea roses and delphinium.

David Edward Parker, brother of the groom, Ithaca, N. Y., served as the groom's attendant.

After the wedding a reception for more than 125 guests was held at Hunt Hall. The couple will reside at Canton, N. Y.

Prof. Melvin W. LeMon

Weds Jane Orwig '35

In Church Ceremony

Melvin W. LeMon of the Bucknell music faculty and Miss Jane E. Orwig '35, of Mifflinburg, were married in the First Baptist Church at Lewisburg on Saturday morning, June 19. The Rev. James B. Ostegren, pastor of the church performed the ceremony assisted by the Rev. A. R. Turner of York, an uncle of the bride.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, had her cousin, Miss Elizabeth Jean Sterling of Mifflinburg, as flower girl. Dr. Paul Stolz served as best man for the groom.

Since graduating from Bucknell, the bride has been employed in the commercial department of the Curtis Publishing Company in Philadelphia.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Oren Sterling, of Mifflinburg. After a brief wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. LeMon left for Rochester, N. Y., where the former is taking a five weeks' summer course in music at the University of Rochester.

Two New Coaches

For Football Teams

Two additions to the Bucknell coaching staff for next year have been announced by Dr. B. W. Griffith, graduate manager of athletics.

P. W. "Red" Griffith, line coach at Gettysburg College, will succeed Marty McAndrews as assistant to Head Coach "Hooks" Mylin in the capacity of line coach, and John J. Sitarsky, captain of last year's varsity football team at Bucknell, will become freshman coach, filling the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mose Quinn.

McAndrews resigned recently to become freshman coach at Penn State, his alma mater, and Quinn, likewise, resigned to accept a post as freshman coach at Cornell University.

Griffith earned his nickname of "Red" while playing varsity football at Penn State from 1916 to 1920. He comes to Bucknell after three years as line coach under Howard Bream at Gettysburg.

He has an excellent coaching record, having 15 years of experience with mid-western and eastern football. After graduating from Penn State in 1920, where he played center and guard on the varsity, he was appointed athletic director and head coach of Marietta College at Marietta, Ohio, where he remained until 1926. He spent 1927-28 at Penn State in the capacity of line coach under Hugo Bezdek, leaving there in 1929 to assume the head coaching reins at Dickinson College at Carlisle.

In 1932 Griffith received his Master of Arts degree from Columbia University and in the following fall signed with Gettysburg. His summer home is at Marietta, Ohio, where he is engaged in the automobile business. He is married and has two children.

Born December 1, 1840, the deceased was the last of a family of nine children, all of whom lived an average of more than 80 years. He received his early education in the Pottstown schools and studied at the Hill School before enlisting for service in the Civil War. He was injured in action at the battles of Fredericksburg and Gettysburg, but returned for another year at the Hill School before enrolling at Bucknell.

He was graduated from Bucknell in 1869 and from Crozer Theological Seminary in 1872. His first pastorate was at the North Chester Baptist Church, and for a time he also taught Hebrew at Crozer. He later served churches at Canton and Sharon, Pa., and at Mount Carroll, Ill. At Benedict College in South Carolina he taught for one year, later becoming mission pastor of a church at Charleston, S. C. He had been retired since 1911.

Funeral services were held at Pottstown with burial at Beaufort, S. C.

After graduating from Bucknell he became one of the first advertising copy writers for the International Correspondence Schools, but soon turned to teaching, a field in which he was eminently successful.

The SCRANTON TIMES, after reviewing his varied career, said of him: "Personally, Prof. Wagner was an affable man. Students recognized he knew his subjects and found in him a teacher who was willing to help and who understood their problems. Fellow teachers held him in high regard. All who knew him loved him as a gentleman and a scholar."

The SCRANTON REPUBLICAN likewise paid high tribute to his ability, concluding its editorial with these words: "He was, above all, a gentle, kindly man who believed that one should seek friends who are quiet, wise, and good, and his life was a record of strength, beauty, and the higher vision."

Said the SCRANTONIAN: "His ability was recognized everywhere and his uniform courtesy and unassuming kindly manners caused him to be esteemed by all. John U. Wagner, educator, gentleman, and man of high ideals, has surely left footprints on the sands of time."

Noah Webster: Schoolmaster to America

By Harry R. Warfel

New York: The Macmillan Company, 1936.

Reviewed by Dr. J. Orin Oliphant for THE BUCKNELLIAN AND THE ALUMNI MONTHLY.

Professor Warfel's biography of Noah Webster is a contribution to the literature dealing with the long struggle for American independence. The famous Declaration of July 4, 1776, did not make the rebellious English colonies in North America completely independent; nor did the treaty of 1783 achieve that result. For fully 50 years after the War of American Independence the cultural tug of Great Britain was strongly felt in America. Cultural independence lagged far behind political independence. Americans continued to look oversea for inspiration and guidance; British books and British periodicals were widely read in America, and in religious and humanitarian movements, speaking generally, Americans imitated their British brethren. As late as the opening of the decade of the 1830's, America was still in no slight degree a cultural "province" of Great Britain. The goal of complete American independence had not yet been attained.

Students of American social and intellectual history, however, have observed in the early period of our national history many American protests against subservience to British influences, and have traced in outline the emergence of a national consciousness. They have pointed out evidences of an awakening national consciousness in the field of literature, in the fields of law and politics, in the reactions of Americans to the comments of British travelers on American society and American institutions, and in the trend of organization for furtherance of religious, intellectual, and benevolent enterprises. Especially in the increasing application of the principle of organization, in the early years of the nineteenth century, have they seen the effects of a rising national consciousness as local or regional societies gave way to national societies, and as the word "American" appeared with increasing frequency in the names of such societies. In all such developments there was a challenge—a bid for American independence in a wider sense.

Across the first half-century of our national history stretched the active life of Noah Webster, a Connecticut Yankee, born on October 16, 1758. The career of this man in relation to the awakening of a national consciousness in America is the theme of Professor Warfel's book. Webster was an ardent advocate of American nationalism. Although Professor Warfel has aptly entitled his book "Noah Webster: Schoolmaster to America", he might just as appropriately have called it "Noah Webster: Promoter of Nationalism in America". The conclusion he reaches is that Webster did much to arouse a sense of nationalism among his countrymen.

Thanks to Professor Warfel's researches and to his facile pen, a man who was but slightly known to some as the author of an outmoded "blue-backed" spelling-book and as the compiler of a dictionary (though also known to a few as a reformer of spelling and as an "Americanizer" of the English language) now appears in his proper role as a teacher of all America. The word teacher, of course, is here used in its widest sense. Webster's teaching, in some respects, was not unlike that of an evangelist or home missionary. He worked at a time when many of his fellow countrymen were laboring to spread the gospel of Christ and he made use of some of the means of propaganda they used. He exhorted from lecture platforms, he wrote tracts, and, at one time or another, he edited newspapers and a magazine called (significantly enough) "The American Magazine". Even his textbooks served to disseminate the gospel of Americanism according to Noah Webster.

In Professor Warfel's book Noah Webster is portrayed as an interesting and many-sided character. During his long life he was schoolmaster, lawyer, lecturer, pamphleteer, textbook writer, and lexicographer. Being ambitious, having a fair share of personal vanity, and being endowed with originality which led him to propose some radical reforms in the English language, he attracted attention to himself and, at the same time, invited attack. Controversy played a considerable role in his life. The record shows that he could give as well as take punches. He did not lack either courage, or determination. He was a Yankee boy who got on in the world.

The crowning achievement of Webster's long and useful life was his "American Dictionary of the English Language", which appeared in two volumes in 1828. It was the product of many years of laborious study; it was a monument to early American scholarship; it was destined to make the name of Webster a household word in America. "Today", as Professor Warfel has correctly written, "Webster and dictionary are synonymous terms in our language."

Professor Warfel has written a book that will attract the notice of students of American history as well as the attention of students of American literature. He has made a scholarly contribution to the subject of the awakening of a national consciousness in America. He has given Americans amuch needed life of an early and conscientious student of the language they speak. He has shown that Noah Webster is something more than a minor figure in American history.

Editor—CHARLES MCD. MORRIS, '31

"THE Alumni Secretary suffereth long and is kind; the alumni secretary envieth not; the alumni secretary vaunteth not himself, is not puffed up, doth not behave himself unseemly; seeketh not his own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. The alumni secretary never faileth; but whether there be university trustees, they shall fail; but whether there be presidents, they shall cease; whether there be college professors, they shall vanish away. But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away. And now abideth college presidents, college professors, and alumni secretaries, but the greatest of these is the alumni secretary — if he doeth his job".

—From the 1917 Handbook of Alumni Work.

ALTHOUGH the season of key-noters is past (and completely forgotten?) the above, quoted from one of the better known oracles of our ancient and honorable profession, strikes a chord well-saturated with the wisdom of the prophets and of definite high pitch. It is, therefore, with a sincere feeling of responsibility to Bucknell and to Bucknellians mixed with the natural pride in being so honored by the Alumni Association that we take pen in hand and bring forth our first official act.

IN his twelve years of service to his fellows, Al Stoughton has established and built for the University a permanent bulwark which is both a model and an inspiration. We are thus anxious to continue and to further fortify. To do this the co-operation of every alumnus and alumna is solicited.

WE are going to have some serious times and some frivolous times, as it were. And right here commences our first serious encounter. It will be our earnest desire to swell the personals to even greater proportions and to make them as representative as possible of all classes (straw votes being the order of the day; most surveys show that the 'personals' section is the to-be-turned-to-first-after-the-pictures-page). It will be our further stress to publish articles on all phases of alumni endeavor, reprints and digests of articles by alumni and faculty in print elsewhere, general articles by ye editor on alumni hobbies, children, vacations, views and opinions, etc., in other words, feature articles about all alumni in all phases of their post-college world.

FOR this purpose a supplementary page and self-addressed envelope (freight pre-paid) are enclosed. Just bubble over with news about yourself, your family, and other alumni — concentrate on the personal reference. Please turn to the Supplement.

YOUR Alma Mater's 91st year has commenced under gratifying circumstances. The Freshman Class is the largest in history, and the Dean and Registrar report that quality in preparation has by no means been lowered in order to achieve this quantitative result. On the contrary, the freshmen who have been admitted rank unusually high in their scholastic work.

The total enrollment is also record size. The largest previous enrollment on the campus was 1185 students in the fall of 1930. Thus far this September we have enrolled 1191 students. We are operating at just about top capacity.

I wish all of you who have known and loved beautiful Old Main might come and see the splendid progress that is being made in the restoration of this group of buildings. The contractors are putting the finishing touches on the West Wing and within a few days it will be in use again. The first floor will be occupied by the offices of the Dean, Treasurer, Registrar and Recorder. The second, third and fourth floors will be a men's dormitory, as of old. Fifty-one young men will live in this Wing.

The outer appearance of West Wing has been altered almost not at all. The inside of the old structure, however, was entirely destroyed by the fire and has been almost completely rebuilt. It is now, within, a thoroughly modern, fire-proof dormitory; without, it is the same lovely ivy-covered West Wing, venerable with age and tradition.

A few of our Trustees, whose names are given in an account elsewhere in this issue, have made specific gifts of $80,000 which will enable us to let the contract at once for the restoration of East Wing. This will be rebuilt along plans quite similar to those of West Wing. While that work goes on, the general Old Main Campaign will proceed vigorously in the hope that the many gifts from Bucknell's sons and daughters will reach a total which will make it possible to let the contract for the rebuilding of the Central Section, also, during the present college year.

To our newest alumni — the Class of 1936 — I send special greetings. We miss you here this fall. I hope all of you are getting well started in the work for which you prepared here. Best of luck to each of you!

Saturday, October 31st, is annual Home-Coming Day. The General Alumni Association is making plans for a splendid program on that day. To their invitation, I add my word of cordial urging to come back on that day to see a fine game of football, to renew old friendships, and to draw new inspirations from the memories of youthful hopes and plans and dreams.

With best wishes,

Yours sincerely,

Acting President.

HOME COMING PLANS

Inspection of West Wing Featured. Golf Free to Alumni

ELABORATE plans have been formulated to make October 31 a red letter Homecoming Day when the Thundering Herd meets the proverbially vicious Wild Cats from down Villanova way. A preliminary pow-wow was called into action on Thursday evening, September 17, in the Dining Room of Larison Hall by Dr. Carl Millward, President of the General Alumni Association. This General Homecoming Committee was composed of Dean Rivenburg, Mr. Holter, Mr. Ranck, and Mal Musser from the College, Dr. Millward and Mr. Morris from the Alumni Association, Mrs. Crowding from the Alumnae Association, Mr. Fryling from the Sunbury Club, Paul Fink, Williamsport Club, Harry Owens, Hazleton Club, and Tom Wood, Grant Painter, Mrs. Lester P. Fowle, Hub Grice.

All the features which have proved so interesting in the past are being continued in full force with the added magnitude of several innovations which should prove equally attractive.

REGISTRATION AT MUSIC SCHOOL

A novel registration device is being arranged for Alumni Headquarters at the Music School whereby returning Alumni will be tagged to facilitate immediate identification both of self and of class, and whereby each one will be able by looking at a Master Registration Board to learn who has returned from his class and other classes — a Homecoming Reunion without regard to the usual Commencement Five Year Plan of Reuning.

In addition, between-the-halves entertainment, continuing the already proven zest of a drum-major of the female species, will be further livened by a special performance of Freshmen actors who will play light parts in a stirring drama of the gridiron. This will be arranged by a so-called Stadium Committee, chairmanned by Harry Owens.

INSPECTION OF WEST WING

A special invitation is extended to all Alumni and their friends to view the finished product of Rebuilt West Wing from 10:00 until 12:30, Homecoming morning, October 31. At that time there will be special exhibits designed to give the complete story of the new Old Main and guides will be on hand to answer questions and assist in every way to give Alumni a first-hand view of the new dormitory and administrative offices.

ALUMNI GOLF TOURNAMENT

"Mal" Musser has again consented to lend the weight of his experience to the Golf Tournament and has chosen Professor James P. Whyte, a recognized authority on this Scottish rite, to assist him in making it an affair of National Tourney proportions; Mrs. D. D. Colvin of Milton, and J. Fred. McMurray of Williamsport complete the committee. As before, tournaments for men and former co-eds will be kept distinct, and no greens fee will be required of Alumni. The prizes will be of the high calibre of former years and special recognition will be accorded those individuals turning in the greatest number of 'bobs' (on green in par) and 'jingles' (one putt green). Thus, six prizes in all will be awarded, three for the men and three for the women, for nine hole medal score, bobs, and jingles.

All Alumni, regardless of class, degree or residence are eligible for competition. No qualifying round will be necessary and awards will be based upon nine consecutive holes, played either Friday afternoon or Saturday morning. Mail registration for the tournament will be accepted. The tournament is strictly for Alumni and Faculty, although the course will be open to friends, students, parents, and visitors with tournament players having precedence on the tee. The Club House will be golfers headquarters for two days, October 30 and 31; ample dressing rooms will be open without charge.

DINNER AND DANCE

"Hub" Grice has selected Mrs. Fowle and "Bill" Sutherland to lend a hand in procuring the services of an outside orchestra to make the dance a memorable one. Through the cooperation of Mrs. Clara Sale, Dietitian, and Acting Dean Stoltz, and through the generosity of the Semites who are obliged to journey to Hunt Hall and accept a paper plate service, we are again fortunate in having the Women's Dining Hall set aside for the Fourth Annual Homecoming Dinner. Dr. Millward who will act as toastmaster is restricting the time allotted to the after-dinner festivities and will warn the participants to come to the point. Acting President Marts who will be the main speaker will be followed by several other University and Alumni figures who will respond briefly, and last but not least, the presentation of the Golf Awards to some eager hearts. Dinner music will be furnished by William McRae, Instructor in Piano, and by the Bucknell Glee Club under the direction of Professor Melvin LeMon.

Reservations for both the dinner and dance are necessary as our limited facilities demand an advance sale of tickets. Four hundred twenty-five can be accommodated; any more only with special arrangements known beforehand. Tickets are on sale only at the Alumni Office and are limited to Alumni, Faculty, Friends, and Trustees. Students who wish to accompany their parents or friends to dinner will be issued special tickets.

KINDLY FILL OUT THE DINNER AND DANCE RESERVATION CARDS INCLUDED ON ANOTHER PAGE AND RETURN IN THE ENCLOSED STAMPED ENVELOPE ALONG WITH YOUR FOOTBALL RESERVATIONS AND QUESTIONNAIRE.

AND DON'T FORGET: INSPECTION OF WEST WING, 10:00 - 12:30 A.M.

CONVOCAATION ADDRESS

By DR. FRANK KINGDON, President, University of Newark

EDUCATION AND DEMOCRACY

DEMOCRACY is an attempt to build a society on the principle that institutions are made for men and not men for institutions. Its primary assertion is that it is the person that matters. Nazism and Fascism subordinate men to the institution of nationalism, theocracy to the institution of the church, autocracy to the divine right of the king. The citizen of a democracy on the other hand is a person able to make and unmake governments. Even the state is his to regulate at his will.

In practice democracy is a continual balancing of social control with individual freedom. Its institutions are essential as giving continuity to its development but they are continually subject to revision. There is no absolute authority centered in an institution except that through which the representative will of the people operates. The British Parliament, for example, is unfettered and the British Commonwealth of Nations of 1936 is something quite different from what men foresaw as the British Empire in 1836. Our own Constitution can be amended and in fact has shown itself quickly responsive to changes in public opinion even to the point of reversing itself as was the case in the Prohibition Amendment. By contrast with other organizations of society we may define democracy as an arena for the free play of social forces. This is interestingly illustrated in the present Presidential campaign by the fact that the Communist candidate for President, advocating a complete change in our governmental and economic institutions, is allowed freedom to speak over the radio.

Human freedom, however, has two tendencies of opposite effect. It operates explosively to set men apart by developing their differences. Yet, at the same time, in human experience there is a striking tendency toward unity. Men like to belong to groups in which they can invest their loyalty and through which they can find security. This drive for identification with some unified group seems to be so much a part of human development that it expresses itself in almost every area of human interest. The ethical insight of the Jewish people, for example, led them to the conception both of a unified universe and of their own unity as a group. The intellectual excursions of the Greek mind came to their climax in the unifying idea of Plato's Absolute. In more practical affairs, wherever men have come together, they have formed tribes or states or nations in terms of which they unite their efforts and their destinies. Thus the paradox of freedom is that it moves both toward the production of diversity and of unity.

Democracy attempts to synthesize these divergent tendencies through the making of freedom itself the underlying bond of union. It says that men shall be held together by the love of liberty. This is a comparatively new and untried venture and so it is likely to be obscured by other considerations. There are times when men want governmental efficiency of a certain type more than they want freedom and so they develop a Fascist state. Or freedom being somewhat nebulous, men try to define the basis of their unity in more tangible terms such as the principles of property ownership, or standards of living, or national patriotism. Thus the primary passion for freedom, out of which democracy grew, slips into the background of men's minds and the human adventure is befogged by secondary considerations. It still remains to be shown that men can build a coherent society of free men on the basis of freedom alone.

If it can be done, continental North America offers the best setting for it. Europe has developed through cultural divisions crystallized into national loyalties that are mutually antagonistic. Here we are attempting a unity through the continuance of variety. We have cultural pluralism within one nation. The test of the free spirit is whether these various cultures can mingle and enrich each other through mutual appreciation.

As has been pointed out by those who are interested in preserving the values of experience that rest in the minority groups in America, the old figure of the melting pot is a dangerous one. If all kinds of metal are thrown together and submitted to heat, the result is a shapeless and probably undistinguished alloy. The better simile is that of the symphonic orchestra in which groups of men playing various instruments find their own efforts lifted to fuller expression as they mingle together to produce an effect that none of them could produce alone. Free expression for each under the discipline of the whole is the way in which the most magnificent harmony can be achieved.

FOOTBALL PROGNOSTICATIONS

By Hugh Morrow, Jr., '37

OPENING their season last Friday night against Ursinus, Bucknell University's grid-iron warriors launched their fifty-fourth football season under the floodlights of Memorial Stadium. The opener was the first of three night contests, for the Thundering Herd will tackle Lebanon Valley October 2 at Lewisburg, and the University of Miami October 9 in a third night game. After that, Homecoming Day on October 31 will be the only other opportunity for Bucknell Alumni to see their Alma Mater's eleven on home soil, for all the other contests will be played away from home.

Georgetown University will be the Bison's opponent in the first afternoon game of the season, to be played October 17 at Washington, D. C., followed by Washington and Jefferson at Washington, Pa., on October 24. After the Homecoming Day contest, Bucknell will again make the long trip to Detroit, Mich., to tackle the University of Detroit, in hopes of avenging last year's 53-0 trouncing.

Although a humiliating defeat, last year's beating at the hands of Detroit at least showed Bucknell the advantage of the "breathing spell" in a tough schedule, for after a week's layoff, the Bisons came back to defeat Penn State at Lewisburg and Temple at Philadelphia, changing a mediocre season into a successful one. This year they will again have a "breathing spell", before tackling those two traditional rivals. Bucknell will play at Penn State November 21, and at Philadelphia November 26, Thanksgiving Day.

His team facing the same number of games as last season, and teams of approximately the same calibre, one of the big questions in Coach Edward E. "Hooks" Mylin's mind is whether or not he will be able to better last year's record of six victories and three defeats. One of the three teams which defeated Bucknell last year — New York University — is not on the schedule this season. It's a different sort of an outfit with which Coach Mylin has to work this year. Last year he was usually hard put to find enough men to make up a team. This year, unless injuries keep on at the rate established prior to the opening of the season, he will have enough men, but not enough experienced men to suit him.

For one thing, Mylin says, he lacks a quarterback with varsity experience, although the opener naturally gave the new Bison signal caller his varsity baptism. Mylin says he has never seen a good sophomore team, but he has plenty of excellent prospects among the second-year men, several of whom should certainly be heard from during this season.

Hooks Mylin, Head Coach
Red Griffiths, Line Coach

Bucknell's team still misses George McGaughey, whose sterling worth as a center was hard to match anywhere in the East. Last year Coach Mylin shifted Bob Pethick over from end to occupy the pivot post, but this year there is no Pethick, and sophomore Leon Berk, and senior Sal Fazio look like the brightest prospects for this berth. Fazio played into some hard luck in his sophomore year, when he was injured early in the season, and didn't really get back into the game until late last season. This year his trick knee has been a considerable bother, and may prove the handicap which will make it impossible for him ever to realize the promise he showed during his first year on the varsity squad. Injury also claimed another likely prospect this year. He is Bob Hershey, who was out of school a whole year while nursing a bad knee, and was again forced to withdraw when the old injury troubled him.

The season's tough enough, but the men are here to lick it, if injuries allow, and the newcomers develop rapidly enough.

Bucknell has a new line coach this season. He is P. W. "Red" Griffiths, who has transferred from Gettysburg College to replace Marty McAndrews, now Freshman mentor at Penn State. McAndrews came to Bucknell with Mylin two seasons ago, and was exceedingly popular with his men. Griffiths, though a much quieter man than his predecessor, has proved equally favored among the boys, and appears scheduled for a successful career here.

Johnny Sitarsky, last year's quarterback and captain, has also joined the coaching staff, succeeding Mose Quinn, who is now assisting Carl Snavelly at Cornell.

OCTOBER 31, 1936

LOCAL NOTE

WELCOME 1940

NOW that the 399 Freshmen, the largest class in Bucknell's ninety-one year history, have been welcomed, soaked, and convoked, the more serious problems of our educational system are in full sway. Acting President Marts gave welcoming counsel from which youngsters and oldsters alike may well profit: "No one can educate a man but himself . . . In these four years bear in mind that your business is to grow in mind, body, personality, and character."

OLD MAIN

As we go to press, gifts amounting to $80,000, made by seven Bucknell Trustees, including one for $40,000 from Daniel C. Roberts, Wilkes-Barre, bring the amount raised in the Old Main Campaign to the gratifying total of $280,000. Mr. Roberts' contribution will pay one-half the cost of reconstructing the East Wing of the structure, the eastern section of which will be named the Daniel C. Roberts' Dormitory in tribute to its donor. Six other Trustees who gave a total of $40,000 to pay the remaining cost are Senator Andrew J. Sardoni, Wilkes-Barre; Roy G. Bostwick, '05, prominent Pittsburgh attorney; Joseph W. Henderson, '08, well-known member of the Philadelphia bar; Dr. L. C. Rummage, Nanticoke; John F. Macklin, Philadelphia; and one other who preferred to remain anonymous.

Trustee, D. C. Roberts

Mr. Roberts is a retired partner of the F. W. Woolworth Co. He became associated with Mr. Woolworth and with Fred M. Kirby in the early days of chain store business and later was made a partner in the Woolworth chain when it was merged with the Kirby interests. Mr. Roberts divides his time between his homes at Harvey's Lake and Wilkes-Barre in the summer and New York and Florida in the winter. He is widely known for his philanthropies and has made many notable contributions to educational and religious enterprises, including the First Baptist Church of Wilkes-Barre. He recently gave a valuable piece of property to the latter organization for a club headquarters. He also provided funds for a fire house and fire apparatus at Harvey's Lake. Mr. Roberts was made a member of the Bucknell Board of Trustees in 1935.

The Campaign is now being organized in Reading, Pottsville, Allentown, Wilkes-Barre, and Scranton and will be organized very soon in Altoona, Huntingdon, Ohio, Western New York, and Washington, D. C.

Resume of the financial progress:

New York	$75,000
Philadelphia (app.)	85,000
Southern New York	1,000
Harrisburg	5,000
Lewisburg & Milton (app.)	24,000

LIONS ELECT

Dr. William H. Coleman, outstanding member of the Lewisburg Lions Club and member of the Department of English staff was honored significantly by the International Convention of Lions held at Providence, R. I., late in July, when he was elected to the post of International Director of the organization. Dr. Coleman was nominated for the post by Dr. Glenn Stewart, Assistant Dean of the Michigan State Normal School, and former District Governor of the Lions. He had previously been endorsed by the state-wide Lions organization in Pennsylvania and his name had been suggested to the nominating committee of the National Convention. Following his election on Friday morning, July 25, Dr. Coleman participated in the first executive meeting of the board held for organization purposes. Attending the convention with Dr. Coleman were LeRoy T. Butler, '97 and H. W. Holter, '24.

HARVARD TERCENTENARY

Bucknell was ably represented at the Harvard Tercentenary celebration by Dr. J. Herbert Waite, '11, Head of the Department of Clinical Ophthalmology at Harvard Medical School. The procession, which played a notable role in the festivities, was arranged according to the age of the institution. Number one in the procession was the delegate from Al-Azhar University at Cairo, founded in 970 A. D. Bucknell came in the 190th position, along with Buffalo, Beloit, and Mt. Union, all founded in 1846. As there were 498 institutions throughout the world represented, Bucknell is comparatively aged!

TRUSTEE RUMMAGE

Biographical note: Dr. L. C. Rummage, whose election to the Board of Trustees was announced in the last issue of the Monthly, was born in Sweet Valley, Luzerne County. After he was graduated from the Medico-Chirurgical College in 1913 and had served his internship in the Scranton State Hospital and in the Philadelphia General Hospital, he practiced medicine in Ramsey, Michigan until July, 1918, when he enlisted in the Medical Corps of the United States Army. After two years' service he was discharged with the rank of First Lieutenant. Returning to the United States, he took a post-graduate course in the University of Pennsylvania, receiving his degree in 1921 as a specialist in eye, ear, nose and throat affections. Dr. Rummage has served as staff assistant at the Wills Eye Hospital in Philadelphia, and for the past fifteen years has practiced in Nanticoke, where he is very favorably known for his skill and charitable work among the more unfortunate of the community.

Dr. Rummage is very active in the social, professional and fraternal life of Nanticoke. He is a member of the American Medical Association, the Luzerne and Pennsylvania Medical Associations, and is active in all the branches of the Masonic Order, Knights of Pythias, and the Elks. He is on the Board of Directors of the First National Bank of Nanticoke, the city's largest banking institution, and is also a member of the Nanticoke City School Board.

SUMMER SESSION

The 1936 Summer School was by a considerable number the largest in its history, 482 students being enrolled, an increase of about 12% over the attendance a year ago. A feature that attracted considerable attention was the course in "Propaganda", conducted by Dr. Harwood L. Childs of Princeton University, formerly of the Bucknell faculty, and a large corps of nationally known experts in this field. Such names as Edward L. Bernays, George Gallup, Lawrence Westbrook, Elisha Hanson, Chester H. Gray, Terry Ramsaye, Bernard Lichtenberg, and Byrnes MacDonald, give one a backward look at a genuine intellectual treat. Other features of moment were the two secondary demonstration schools, the elementary demonstration school illustrating the Block Program in the rural school, the training courses for principals and superintendents, courses in guidance leading to the Pennsylvania Guidance certificate, and the laboratory course in visual education, which is now required for all Pennsylvania teachers applying for the permanent certificate.

The Commencement address was delivered by Dr. Edgar J. Fischer, Assistant Director of the Institute of International Education. Of the 46 degrees conferred by Acting President Marts, 30 were Master's degrees, bringing the total of advanced degrees granted by Bucknell this year up to 50.

EXTENSION SERVICE

A considerably expanded program of extension courses is being advertised by Director Davis. In addition to the centers in which extension courses have been offered for some time, it is proposed that Sunbury, Harrisburg, Minersville, Towanda, Hazleton, and Shenandoah be included as fruitful areas. A program of courses to be presented on the campus Friday evenings and Saturday mornings for the entire year has been printed and is being distributed widely. The new plan originated by Dean Riverburg some two years ago, whereby a student may come to the campus Friday evening and by taking one course then and two courses Saturday morning may obtain the equivalent of one summer session of residence credit, promises to attract a considerable number of students. Wilkes-Barre, Williamsport, and Mount Carmel remain the chief off-Campus centers.

SECRETARY NAMED

Selection of the new Alumni Secretary was duly made by the Joint Trustee-Faculty Committee late in August. Charles Mc.D. Morris, '31 was named at that time to succeed Al Stoughton and took office shortly before the commencement of Freshman Week. Mr. Morris, while an undergraduate, served in various journalistic and fraternal capacities, and since receiving the M.A. in Education from Bucknell in 1932 has been a member of the New York University Faculty as Graduate Assistant in Psychology, a position affiliated with the Admissions Office of that institution. He is a member of the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity.

WEST WING REBUILT

Diary of N. F. DAVIS, '95 Given in Evidence

West Wing, 1936

THE rebuilt West Wing of Old Main, unoccupied since it was destroyed by fire in 1932, has been opened to its new occupants, who have been lodged in Lewisburg since the opening of College. Beginning Saturday, September 19, the third and fourth floors were resounding to the characteristic noise-making of the student tenants who took advantage of Registrar Holter's pronouncement that moving-in might take place on that date. A few days later the second floor was ready, while the first floor, which will be devoted to the administrative offices of the Dean, Registrar, Recorder, and Treasurer, will not be completed until later in the term.

The reconstructed interior of the West Wing, which will house 51 persons carries out a plan of two-room suites, arranged in two sections, which are in turn divided by doorways and a turn in the passageway. Four suites, providing accommodations for a total of eight students, are contained in each section. Private lavatories are provided in all suites, with a shower bath for each section. Three deluxe suites, located at the corner of the building, have private baths. Blue, green, rust, and cream are the colors used in decorating the suites, with different hues for each section. Radiators and woodwork are painted in harmony with the prevailing color combinations. Flooring in the suites is brown asphalt tile, while the walls are white. A closet is situated between the two rooms of the suite, and a large built-in wardrobe is part of the furnishings.

With work on the West Wing nearing an end and operations on the East Wing already begun, crews have also started to clear out debris in Old Main's central section, which will be the last portion to be rebuilt. Although brick walls still standing in the central section are being razed, the four towering square columns will be retained and incorporated into the new building. As part of the work, the road which runs across the men's quadrangle will be re-located, eliminating the curve where it skirts the Old Main ruins.

Additional reconstruction note: The former home of Professor William G. Owens has been converted into an honor house with accommodations for 14 senior girls. This property situated on the corner of Sixth and Loomis Streets, directly across from Hunt Hall, was purchased by the University this Summer. Miss Mildred Sears, Instructor in Secretarial Science, has been named as hostess for the girls selected to occupy the house. Other improvements made during the vacation period include the re-decorating of the living rooms in Larison Hall, the remodeling and re-decorating of dormitory rooms in the same building, the installation of new shower baths on each floor in East College, and extensive alterations in the Chemistry Building.

While it is conjecture of the wildest type to imagine what thoughts and experiences are confronting this year's Old Main privileged residents, we are fortunate in having Professor Nelson F. Davis to paint a similar picture of the status quo in 1895, although it may seem a bit Early American to behold in retrospect:

NOTES FROM THE DIARY OF A '95ER

Arrived in Lewisburg, Pa., September 8th, 1891. Found Mr. William C. Gretzinger, the Registrar in his office in Old Main. He escorted me to my rooms on the Third Floor, East Wing. My roommate has not arrived. Two of us are to occupy a common study (12 x 15 feet) on the north side of the hall. Across the hall are the dormitories (6 X 12 feet) one for each of us.

Mr. Gretzinger gave me a key to the study and we entered — no furniture of any kind in the room, one window. I was told where in Lewisburg I could buy some furniture, etc. In the dormitory was a very narrow iron bed with woven springs. The study was heated by hot air from a furnace in the cellar — no heat in the dormitory. My trunk has not arrived — made a list of things I must buy to fit up my room — bought a second-hand table for $.50 and a chair for $.25, a wash-bowl and pitcher for $1.00, a pail for $.20 in which to carry drinking

This premise of freedom defines the place of education in our scheme of things. Where the group lives by a rigid institutional pattern, education is necessarily devoted to the perpetuation of the dogma of that institution. So you have the perfectly logical subservience of the institutions of learning of Germany to the dictatorship of the Third Reich. Grant the primary claims of the present German state and it is logical to expect that education shall be no more than an instrument it uses to perpetuate itself. It seems abhorrent to us because our concept of democracy is the antithesis of the totalitarian idea.

The point where democracy and education meet with us is in the emphasis of education upon enabling every human being to bring out and express to the full all the talents that are in him. Education exists not primarily to maintain the state or to perpetuate its own institutions but to emancipate men's minds and to make those minds appreciative of other emancipated minds. Individual intellectual integrity and social understanding are the ends of education to which its organization and curriculum are instrumental.

What, then, as students facing the meaning of your college life are you setting out to do? First of all, you are trying to get some facts. This effort will give you established data about your world. It will develop your own intellectual activity. It will put into your possession the facts of particular interest to your own ends, and it will give you some of the necessary perspectives to see life steadily and to see it whole. Beyond this fact-gathering aspect of learning, however, there are other desirable goals that must lend meaning to what you are doing. One of these is to find your own places in the total setting of experience, that is, in the midst of the facts to discover yourselves, to know with some certainty what your own aptitudes and ambitions may rightly be. Another important expectation is that you may discover valid standards by which to assay events thus lifting yourselves out of the ranks of those who live merely by prejudice or passion and of those who drift in the midst of days they make no effort to understand. Another achievement that should come out of your present experience is to develop habits of mind that will keep you continually improving in expertness of judgment on social matters. Knowledge is a process bound up with life itself so that the maximum experience of the individual depends upon a certain plasticity of mind that never ceases the effort of learning.

Education must set its face against all forms of tyranny. It exists not to serve any vested interest but only to search for that truth without which men cannot be really free. Education, however, is an impersonal word. It means no more than the meeting of minds of the educated men and women. It is for you, therefore, in these days of your training to prepare yourselves thoroughly to become a part of that great company of heroic souls who have set their faces against all tyrannies over the minds and persons of men.

MRS. NELSON F. DAVIS

Mindful of our loss in the death of one of our most respected and helpful teachers, we wish to express our appreciation of her exceptional power, of the devotion she gave to her students, and the constructive service, and the beauty of the life she lived among us. One could not be in her presence for ten minutes without realizing her unusual character. The marvelous way in which she fulfilled her duties in the home and in the classroom and among her friends, leaves us with the ineffaceable sense of her having been blessed by a contact with the truly divine.

Her students in Art and Botany have received an inspiration which will last through all the ages to come.

Marion Briggs Davis was born in New Haven, Connecticut on the tenth day of November, 1872, the youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Briggs. Her ancestry on both sides goes back to Colonial days. She graduated from Mount Holyoke College with the Class of 1895. After her graduation she taught in the schools of New Rochelle, New York. She was a graduate student at Cornell University and during many summers studied Biology at Woods Hole, Massachusetts, and also at Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island.

She pursued Art at Mount Holyoke, and after her marriage to Nelson F. Davis in 1905, continued for ten years to study with J. Wesley Little, a noted artist at Picture Rocks, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Davis was a student with Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Cobden of Philadelphia and for several summers painted under the instruction of Mr. Duffner at Boothbay Harbor, Maine. During the war while Professors Stewart and Rice were in the service, President Harris called upon Mrs. Davis to teach in Botany and in Drawing. She continued under President Hunt and courses in Art were added.

Mrs. Davis resigned in 1929 but at the request of President Hunt continued to teach for another year.

FACULTY CHANGES

Dean Amelia E. Clark has resigned her position at the "Sem" to take a similar post as Dean of the Colby Junior College, a school for girls, with a registration of more than 300 young women, at New London, N. H. Miss Clark came to Bucknell as Assistant Professor of French in 1924 and the following year was named Dean of Women. She has obtained her degree of Master of Arts from Columbia University, and during the school year of 1932-33 was given a leave of absence to study for her degree of Doctor of Philosophy at New York University. Dean Clark and her secretary, Miss Elizabeth Lawson, '27, who has been granted a leave of absence to pursue her doctorate studies at New York University, were entertained at a farewell tea given in their honor by the Susquehanna Valley Branch of the American Association of University Women. Miss Lawson received the M.A. from Bucknell in 1935. Mrs. Paul G. Stoltz, '27 (nee Lulu Coe) has been appointed Acting Dean of Women until a successor to Miss Clark is chosen. Mrs. Stoltz, who is the wife of Dr. Paul G. Stoltz, Head of the Department of Music, is well qualified to serve in her present capacity. She has served as Dean of Women during four summer sessions and later studied at Columbia University where she took a year's course in Personnel and Guidance designed especially for deans of women. After receiving her Master's degree from Columbia, Dean Stoltz served as Assistant Dean of Women at the Harrisonburg State Teacher's College, Harrisonburg, West Virginia. Mrs. Ethel Knapp, daughter of the late Dr. Raymond West, '89, will act as private secretary to the dean of women.

Dr. Charles S. Keevil, Head of the Department of Chemical Engineering at Oregon State College since 1930, will succeed Dr. S. C. Ogburn, Jr., as Head of the Chemical Engineering Department at Bucknell. A graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Dr. Keevil received both his Master's and Doctor's degrees at M. I. T. where he taught for three years and where he served on the staff of the Institute's Research Laboratory of Applied Chemistry. He has had wide practical experience as a chemical engineer and recently had charge of a committee to make a survey of stream pollution in the Willamette Valley. Dr. Keevil, who is 36, is married and has one child.

Dr. Vincent A. McCrossen, of Creighton University, Creighton, Nebraska, will become Assistant Professor of French and German, taking over some of the courses formerly taught by Dr. Leo L. Rockwell. Dr. McCrossen taught for one year at the Bucknell Junior College before going to Creighton. He is a graduate of Dickinson College and holds a Doctor of Philosophy degree from the University of Pittsburgh.

Dr. William J. Miller, '26 of the University of Pittsburgh has been named Assistant Professor of Mathematics at the Junior College. After receiving his Master's degree from Bucknell in 1926 Dr. Miller entered the University of Pittsburgh as Graduate Assistant. He served as an Instructor there for seven years and as Assistant Professor for the past two years. He received his Doctor's degree from Pittsburgh, but has also studied at the University of Michigan, the University of Chicago, and Penn State.

Two other Alumni who have figured in faculty additions and improvements are John S. Gold, '18 and Charles Godcharles, '31. Assistant Professor Gold, who has been teaching for the past three years at the Junior College, will return to the University faculty. Mr. Gold was transferred to the Junior College shortly after its organization to help establish the work there on a solid foundation. Mr. Godcharles, who has also been on the Junior College faculty, will be transferred to Lewisburg in the capacity of Instructor in Psychology and Philosophy, but will continue to teach one course at Wilkes-Barre.

EDUCATION CONFERENCE

Headliners for the eleventh annual Bucknell Conference on Education are Dr. Frank Kingdon, President of the University of Newark, Dr. C. C. Fries, '09, University of Michigan, Editor of the Oxford Middle English Dictionary, and Dr. Edward C. Lindeman of the New York School of Social Work, nationally known speaker on social subjects. In addition to these well-known men some seventy persons will speak or participate in panel discussions on the general theme, "Developing Responsible Citizenship." The first meeting will be held at two o'clock, Friday afternoon, October 16, and the last meeting at eleven o'clock, the following morning. At four o'clock Friday afternoon the Susquehanna Valley Secondary Principals' Association will hold an open meeting to which all secondary school people are invited. The Friday evening banquet will convene at six o'clock, and the school men after being fed will be tickled, figuratively, of course, by the Novelty Trio.

Weaver W. Pangburn, '10

The Friday evening meeting represents a new departure in general session meetings. Acting President Marts will preside and will present Dr. Lindeman for a thirty minute address on the theme mentioned above. Following this address the question will be thrown open for discussion by a panel consisting of Dr. Fries; Dr. W. H. Bristow, National Secretary of the Congress of Parents and Teachers; Ralph Amerman, Bucknell Trustee and Past President of Kiwanis International; Dr. R. R. Abernethy, Superintendent of Schools, Harrisburg; Paul E. Witmeyer, Superintendent of Schools, Shamokin, and Weaver W. Pangburn, '10, of the National Recreation Association and Chairman of the Fair Play Subcommittee of the Committee on Social Economic Goals of the National Education Association. It is believed that this unique feature will prove unusually interesting and thought provoking.

The Saturday morning group meetings will be in session from nine until eleven. Each of these, consisting of the fields of Elementary Education, English, Foreign Language, Guidance, Mathematics, Music, Science, and Social Science, will consist of a twenty minute address on the general theme as it relates to the specific field, followed by a panel discussion. The final general session on Saturday morning at eleven o'clock will feature Dr. Kingdon as the only speaker. Alumni have a special invitation to attend all the sessions of the conference.

SPANISH EXODUS

Professor Frank A. Sprague, arriving home after three weeks of a rather sudden au revoir to Spain, in an exclusive interview with the Lewisburg press, described his experiences as very vivid but added that the reports of the revolution in its warming-up stages were painted much more red than they actually were. Professor Sprague said that at no time was he actually in the firing area and that the danger was not particularly great, although the American embassy insisted on evacuation when the trouble began to spread in Madrid. His return passage on the Queen Mary which broke all existing speed records for trans-Atlantic voyages was but a relatively uneventful final chapter to a story which began with a forced evacuation while he was studying at the University of Madrid. A hurried all-night railroad trip from the interior to Valencia, the only open Spanish Mediterranean port, and his subsequent rescue by the United States Destroyer S. S. Quincy evidence that all is not shelter in the academic life.

STATE TRUSTEES

Among the list confirmed by the Pennsylvania Senate for positions as trustees on the boards of state institutions were two Lewisburghers, both Bucknellians. They are Clair Groover, '15, attorney, and the Hon. Curtis C. Leshner, '04, President Judge of the Union County Courts. These men will serve on the Board of Trustees of the Selinsgrove State Colony for Epileptics.

FOLK FESTIVAL

Editorial in the Lewisburg Journal, August 6: The Folk Festival is in the realm of the past. Needless to say, it was a success unequalled in the history of the state. Never was a greater interest in the heritage of this Commonwealth so fittingly manifested, and never did citizens of this territory ever betray more whole-hearted interest in the past than was this state's. More than 30,000 people saw the various presentations of this undertaking.

More than 800 from all corners of the Keystone State took part. It had defects of a mechanical nature, true, but in the glow of success we have no time for criticism.

The Festival was a success and in this success it has done one thing for Bucknell University, its sponsors. It has established Bucknell University as an unchallenged leader among high educational institutions of the country, and for this accomplishment alone, should go down in the annals of history.

DEAD LINE

The Bucknell Who's Who in Education will go to press shortly. Publication is being withheld for a short time in order that those who have for any reason neglected to report may do so. If you are engaged in any type of educational work, send at once for an information blank. The volume should be of real value to Bucknellians in the field of education. Address your correspondence to F. G. Davis, '11, Department of Education, Bucknell University, Lewisburg, Pa.

BLUE ROOM

Faculty changes are not the only order of the day. Ground or rather boards have already been broken for an "Orange and Blue" Room as an addition to the dining room of the local hostelry. It will be decorated in the modern manner and no pains will be spared to please the eyes of returning Alumni.

1889

William F. Gibbons, preacher and author, and for eighteen years a member of the Department of English and Journalism at Pennsylvania State College, died in the Altoona Hospital of complications following an operation. He was 76 years of age. Prof. Gibbons was born in Lenape, a descendant of a long line of Quakers who preceded William Penn to America and settled in Chester County. He was the author of three novels, "Black Diamond Men", "Hands of Iron", and "Toilers in the Dark", and a textbook "Making Today's Newspaper", and for five years was an advertising copywriter and an editor with the International Correspondence Schools in Scranton. For twenty-three years he was pastor of Presbyterian churches, serving at Forty Fort and Dunmore. The honorary degree of A.M. was conferred upon him by Bucknell in 1905.

A host of Lewisburgians and alumni will be grieved to learn of the death of a native son, Charles Koonce, Jr., which occurred at Clarksville, Pa., on July 5. Mr. Koonce who had been in ill health for two years was 67 years old. A veteran Youngstown attorney, he was the man responsible for building the Blackburn Home for the Aged. The YOUNGSTOWN VINDICATOR carried the following comment on his life: "He handled the Blackburn estate left to found a home for the aged, and during its construction at Poland, he supervised every detail. He took particular delight in seeing that small comforts were provided for the old folks, conveniences not usually found in homes of this type.

"The work was done so quietly and the home opened with so little ostentation that many persons did not know it.

"Youngstowners of some years ago will remember Mr. Koonce as a distinguished figure on a horse, taking early rides through Mill Creek Park. He was one of the first horsemen in the city and although he never joined any riding clubs or similar organizations, was known as a judge of good horseflesh."

Mrs. Jessie Armstrong won the annual spelling contest held at Chautauqua, N. Y., in competition with thirty-five others from as many states. She has been a trustee of Antioch College for nine years and is now pursuing a course in landscape painting at Chautauqua.

The CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR of August 11 devoted its School Page to a glowing tribute to "Uncle Sam's Farthest-North University" — the University of Alaska, a tribute in turn addressed to its president, Dr. Bunnell. The article said in part: "Dr. Charles E. Bunnell, president of this pioneer college since its beginning, is a real Alaskan. He went to the Territory in 1900, then a recent graduate of Bucknell, and taught for several years in the school at the old Russian settlement of Kodiak. He then went to Valdez when that town was the thriving port of entry for all the interior, when dog teams and pack trains left there for Fairbanks and returned laden with gold dust. He studied law in the approved fashion of the frontier, passed the bar examination, and eventually was appointed judge of the Fourth Judicial District of Alaska with headquarters in Fairbanks. During seven stirring and eventful years he ruled the court, often making trips to the lower Yukon and the Kuskokwim by dog team and listening to reports couched in the language of the gambling halls and the mixed metaphorical eloquence of the frontier lawyer.

"For the past 14 years and more he has put his entire time, his unquenchable optimism and enthusiasm, and even much of his own money into the making of a university out of what many at first thought could be only a quixotic dream. As mere incidents of the daily routine he paid the salaries of the faculty out of his own pocket when red tape held up the funds, he loaned money to students, helped to construct buildings, fought for appropriations against terrible odds before a skeptical people and a hostile Legislature, and built up gradually the prestige of the university until many of its old enemies have become its supporters."

Of the merits of this book, designed for young people and suited for use as a text or for collateral reading in junior and senior high schools, Dr. John H. Finley of the NEW YORK TIMES in the foreword writes in part: "Here is a book which in itself is adventure — and a challenge! It deals with a subject close to the hearts of you who are young. Under the skillful touch of the author it presents for your exploration the richly varied and enticing field of recreation.

"It does not stop with merely depicting the surface possibilities of recreation. It goes much farther. It shows not only what recreation is, what kinds of recreation there are, what the community has to offer, what the national recreation movement is, and to what extent this life-enriching activity is a government function, but it also outlines what you have a right to expect from your community and how you can help to bring it about."

REQUIRED READING

THE TECHNIQUE OF HAPPINESS

By Charles Francis Potter '07

New York: Macaulay, 1935.

THE SCHOOLMASTER CHATS

By J. Fred McMurray '14

The Extra-Curricular Publishing Co., 1936.

Breathes there a man with logic so dead who to himself hath never said that a minister is one who preaches; a schoolmaster likewise talks a lot but has to maintain discipline. Thus, when a minister and a schoolmaster look you right in the eye and just chat, that's news. But this is exactly what has happened in the latest additions to the Bucknell Book Shelf. More than this, these two alumni authors give both timely and entirely worthwhile advice, although neither seems to be preaching in any Sunday School sense of the word.

Dr. Potter teaches three lessons to those seeking a technique of happiness — self-examination, self-direction, and self-expression. This line-up taken at its face value seems a bit professional and arm-chairish, but Dr. Potter through abundant illustrative material and polished philosophical deduction has achieved a clear-cut and practical design for living. But to reveal it would be to deprive the reader of an evening of real pleasure, and many days of reflection. Take for example, the following case, which the author advises is of a type which puts the "minister on the spot", demanding a decision "which would not only tax the wisdom of a Solomon but confound it":

"In my first pastorate I received a call one morning asking me to perform a marriage ceremony. The address given was that of a dismal neighborhood. It was the last house in a dead-end lane of broken-down shacks. As I approached, a slovenly woman called out from a window:

"Be you the preacher?"

"I said I was and went into the house. A young woman lay on a bed, a baby at her side. Next to her a young man was sitting, literally held down by another woman.

"Hitch 'em up", she commanded gruffly. 'We figure this here kid ought to have a name.'

"The man looked as though he wanted to jump out of the window. He tried to speak but his female jailer cuffed him into silence.

"What was I to do? Should I go through with this marriage? And if I did, what kind of life would this couple lead? It was, in fact, doubtful if he would remain with her. In that case was it right to bind a young woman, with her whole life before her, to a man who would desert her, and from whom she later might have great difficulty in obtaining legal freedom, if, as was not unlikely, another man came into her life? But if I refused to create this unhappy union, what about the child? He would forever bear the stamp of illegitimacy."

Mr. McMurray, on the other hand, deals with the problems that confront the schoolmaster and his treatment might well be termed experienced reflections upon 'human animals I have known'. His is a collection of some forty short chats, written in a breezy style, and painting the sometimes strange, but altogether human, behavior of the genus homo. These short word pictures run the gamut of pupil-teacher-administrator-board member-parent-bystander interrelations, relations too often strained by misunderstood attitudes and misdirected education. This book has admirably given the reader a clearer and a far deeper insight than heretofore possible into this really vital force in our vicissitudinous world. Typical chat:

"George Jackson was the county superintendent of schools of a southern state. Semi-annually he visited the district schools of his county. Except for this slight supervision the teachers were allowed to follow their own initiative.

"Mr. Jackson's time was spent in holding in line the many school directors of the county and diplomatically replacing any school directors opposed to him by using the power of the county political organization to which he paid tribute and to which he was most subservient.

"One day he was driving his car along a muddy, mountainous road. It suddenly stopped. He lifted the hood to see what was wrong, but he could not detect the trouble. About that time an ungainly, awkward, stupid-looking youth came along.

"He asked, 'Can I help you, pard?'

"'Yes', replied the superintendent. I can't see what is wrong here'.

"The boy turned a screw and fastened a wire, and the auto was ready to run.

"The supposedly stupid boy turned to the classically and politically educated superintendent and said, 'See. That is what it means to be educated'. Then he started to walk away.

"The superintendent thanked him, got into his car and drove away saying to himself, 'I considered myself educated. I'm only an educated fool'.

Reflections.

"The term education is so broad that it should be more generally applied to knowledge other than time-honored book learning.

"Many a supposedly educated person would trade his training in Latin for some practical education concerning the automobile he is driving.

"The machine age has shifted educational objectives from book learning only to book and machine learning."

If you would meet and talk with two illustrious Bucknellians and know the by-products of Bucknell, you cannot afford to pass up the opportunity of this meeting and the benefits to be derived. We thoroughly enjoyed it.

Editor—CHARLES MCD. MORRIS, '31

HOMEcoming was a complete success. An inspired Bison took into camp and completely routed a Wildcat, dazzled as it seemed by its own viciousness. It was the type of Waterloo that forced one sports writer to admit: "One fine way to have a perfect record dented is to visit Lewisburg and try to bag the Bisons on their own stamping ground — particularly on Homecoming Day."

GUIDES were kept busy all morning showing visitors through the rehabilitated West Wing. Motion pictures of campus life shown in one of the new administrative offices completed the panorama of Life at Bucknell. Another feature of the morning program was the victory of the soccer team over Dickinson. Two extra periods were required before Bucknell broke the tie and ended the game 3-2. Approximately three hundred persons attended the alumni dinner, and the day officially closed with the alumni dance which drew two-hundred-fifty pairs of happy feet. Golf prizes awarded at the dinner were presented to Mrs. D. D. Colvin '09 and to Leroy Seemann '17.

WE have received to date nearly six hundred questionnaires and they are still coming in at the rate of about five a day. We have read every one and are reminded that there are 6800 alumni on our mailing list. Have you sent yours? Over ninety percent of the responding group have written letters and we feel very selfish in not being able to share them all. In order to rectify this, we will print a number of them with the permission of the authors in a forthcoming issue.

RISKING our reputation on not having first obtained permission of the copyright owner we herewith reproduce one letter which summarizes very well the general tone of the replies; at least it is unique:

If only I had had some children
Gladly I'd sit down and pen
All their bright remarks to you.
But as it is my babes are few
(I really haven't any).

It's other children I do train
To make the future safe and sane.
For girl scouts are my work and play
And as I meet them day by day
Their bright remarks are many.

Now all the grads that I do see
Should each send you his history.
They're doctors, teachers as of yore
And politicians by the score
And unemployed a few.

We all enjoy a chance to meet
As Bucknell friends each other week.
Our meetings are a lot of fun
So why not try to visit one?
You'd like it. So please do.

DEAR BUCKNELLIANs:

Homecoming Day has just come and gone. A week previously we observed the annual Dad's Day. A thousand or more alumni and parents of present students were our visitors on those two week-ends and their presence here at Lewisburg brought to us visible evidence of the ties of affection and memory which run out from this quiet center of learning and high endeavor into all sections of the world about us. The Bucknell spirit is a vibrant, living reality and serves to stimulate and inspire administration and faculty and student body.

It was this Bucknell spirit which won the Homecoming game against Villanova. On paper, Villanova's splendid team was expected to win. But the actual game was not played on paper, and into the playing went a will to win, on the part of players, student body, and alumni, which proved irresistible. It was a game which those who saw will not soon forget.

Much else of interest to alumni has happened since the last issue of the Alumni Monthly. One group of alumni, who are interested in books and in the intellectual phases of Bucknell life, have formed a Friends of the Library organization for the purpose of giving practical aid in strengthening our collection of books and periodicals. The details of this organization are described elsewhere in this issue. All Bucknellians who love books are invited to become Friends of the Library.

A few of our outstanding engineer alumni have been appointed on a Visiting Committee on Engineering and have held their first meeting with our Engineering Faculty. These men can render a very useful service to Alma Mater in the years ahead by bringing to the development of our Engineering Departments the knowledge and contacts and prestige which they have acquired in their careers.

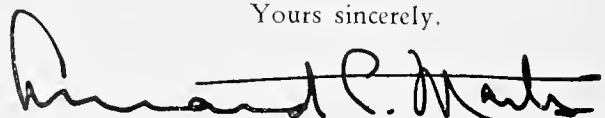

We have this month inaugurated a Bucknell Prepayment Plan, described elsewhere in the Monthly, which gives parents of young children the privilege of sending small amounts, when convenient, to the University's Treasurer to be credited toward the future expenses of their children's education at Bucknell. If a child should not enter Bucknell subsequently, the payments plus interest will be refunded. It is heart-breaking to see the financial struggles being made by many college students and their parents, and it is our hope that this Prepayment Plan may help many a youth of the coming generations to enter Bucknell prepared financially as well as scholastically.

After several years of negotiations under the leadership of a group of Bucknell alumni of Western Pennsylvania, the endowment and property assets of Mt. Pleasant Academy were merged with Bucknell University, effective November 1st of this year. During all this Academy's long and useful history, its ties to Bucknell had been close and continuous. Since the Academy can go on no longer, it is appropriate that its assets should be merged in the work of its older sister, Bucknell. The endowment will be designated by Bucknell as a living memorial to Dr. Leroy Stephens, B. U., 1868, who served as president of Mt. Pleasant and as a Trustee of Bucknell for much of his adult life.

The restoration of the West Wing of Old Main is now complete. The first floor is being used for the University's administrative offices and the second, third and fourth floors are men's dormitories. It is a lovely building. The outer walls remain as they were for nearly ninety years, while the interior is new and fire-proof and modern. The contract has been let for the similar restoration of the East Wing. The latter work will be completed about April, 1937. Meanwhile, the Old Main Campaign continues, in the hope that enough more funds can be collected soon to let the contract for the Central Section. About $75,000 more than the amount already subscribed will be required. We must carry on to complete success!

With kind regards and best wishes to you all,

Yours sincerely,

Acting President.

BISONS DEFEAT ALL COLLEGES SCHEDULED

By HUGH MORROW, JR., Sports Editor

WITH a record to date of four victories and three defeats, Bucknell's Bisons face the major tests of the season in the final two games — Penn State at State College, November 21, and Temple University at Philadelphia on Thanksgiving Day, November 26.

Judging from the season to date, Bucknell would have an undefeated team if only colleges were scheduled. The Thundering Herd has vanquished Villanova College, Washington and Jefferson College, Lebanon Valley College, and Ursinus College, but has lost to Miami University, Georgetown University, and the University of Detroit.

The victory over Villanova, before a Homecoming Day crowd of 10,000, has been hailed throughout eastern football circles as an outstanding performance. Before tackling the Bisons, the Villanova Wildcats were undefeated, but Lou Tomasetti, sophomore halfback, and Co-captain Stuart Smith, ganged up on the Main Liners to push across a touch-down late in the final period. Supported by excellent down field blocking, Tomasetti raced 46 yards on a thrust off right tackle to the Villanova four yard line, the 'Cats were penalized half the distance for roughness, then Smith plunged over right guard for the decisive tally.

In the Detroit game, although facing a team which earlier in the season had lost to Villanova, 13-6, the Bisons were tackling probably their toughest competition up to that time, and lost 33-7. Compared to last year, however, this was not a bad result, for in the previous competition with Detroit's Titans, the score at game's end was 53-0, with Bucknell on the short end of the stick. It was after that Detroit game that the Bisons came back to score startling victories over Penn State and Temple, and this past record gives Bucknell fans much hope for this year.

The series with Penn State started in 1887, back in the days of side-burned players and the Flying Wedge. Penn State trounced Bucknell 54-0 that year in a game which for the sake of the record has been called football. During the long series, oldest in Central Pennsylvania, Bucknell has won ten times and State 13. There isn't a single tie on the record.

Bucknell has won the last six games against the Nittany Lions, triumphing 13-7 in 1927, 6-0 the following year, 27-6 in 1929, 19-7 in 1930, 13-7 in 1934, and 2-0 last year. This year's contest will be the first Bucknell varsity football invasion of Nittany Lion territory since 1929, the last three renewals of the ancient rivalry having been staged in Memorial Stadium.

The series with Temple is of much more recent origin, starting in 1927, and continuing since then without interruption, each team winning three times, while three of the games ended in ties. Temple won in 1927, 19-13, in a contest at Philadelphia, but Bucknell held the Owls to a 7-7 tie in 1928 at Lewisburg. The next four games were staged at Philadelphia, the latter three at night, Bucknell winning 13-0 in 1929, Temple retaliating 7-6 in 1930, and winning 12-0 in 1932, while the 1931 game was a scoreless tie. In 1933 the Bisons played the best game of the series against the Philadelphians, Carl Snavely's last Bucknell team defeating Pop Warner's first Temple eleven 20 to 7. The Bisons electrified sports fans on Thanksgiving Day in 1934 by holding the highly touted Owls of that season to a scoreless tie, and again in 1935, turning in an unexpected 7-6 victory.

The Bisons this year again enjoyed a breathing spell over the week-end, no game having been scheduled for November 14, giving them almost two full weeks to recover from the bruising Detroit engagement, and to prepare for the competition with State. Several players suffered minor injuries in the Detroit fuss, but the entire team was expected to be ready to go against the Nittany Lions, while State had to meet a powerful Penn eleven.

Coach Edward E. Mylin in his two seasons of coaching here has had teams which won the games that count. This year the Bisons have already defeated Washington and Jefferson College and Villanova, two of the four important games, and are all primed for the final push of the season, which includes two games they would rather win probably more than any others.

VISITING COMMITTEE ON ENGINEERING

By GEORGE A. IRLAND, '15

A progressive step was taken by President Marts in the formation of a Visiting Committee on Engineering to study all problems in connection with engineering education at Bucknell. A group of engineering graduates was selected from many Bucknell men who have been successful in engineering achievement. These men were invited to meet with the Trustees of the College and the engineering faculty at a luncheon in the women's dining room at noon, Saturday, October tenth. A business meeting was held at the President's house, after which a general inspection of the engineering laboratories was made.

This committee has for its purpose the strengthening of the work at the College, by pointing out the needs in equipment, and suggesting improvements in curricula and courses. They will also assist in promoting close relations with industry, thus forming a source of opportunities for employment and advancement of our graduates, and of contacts with outstanding engineering speakers for our students.

As constituted at the present time, the committee is composed entirely of Bucknell graduates. Later, engineers of notable ability from other colleges will be invited to join the committee to give a broader basis for judgment, due to their familiarity with engineering training in various schools.

THE COMMITTEE

Calvin Oberdorf graduated in civil engineering in 1907. For about seven years he was employed by various railroads. Later he held the position of Cost Engineer with the U. S. Housing Corporation. From that he was appointed on the U. S. Railroad Administration in 1919. In 1920 he became Principal Assistant Engineer for the Florida East Coast Railroad, holding this position for about ten years. Then he began to practice as a consulting engineer in the firm of Wolfe and Oberdorf. In 1932 he was employed in the Richmond office of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad. Recently he received an appointment as a Government Engineer in Washington, D. C.

John Clyde Hostetter graduated in the class of 1908. He became a graduate student at the University of Chicago. He taught chemistry at Bucknell for several years, leaving to go to the U. S. Bureau of Standards in Washington, D. C. Later he was employed by the Corning Glass Company at Corning, N. Y. He is now employed by that company in the responsible position of Director of Development and Research. In this capacity he supervised the difficult undertaking of making the great two hundred inch reflector for the largest telescope in the world at Mount Wilson Observatory in California.

Oscar Wolf is a civil engineering graduate of the class of 1912. He was formerly Chief Engineer of the Texas Pipe Line Company. He has published many papers on economic and technical phases of oil pipe line design. He is now Assistant Chief Engineer of the Refining Department of the Texas Company, with offices in New York City.

Earl Morgan Richards received his degree in electrical engineering in 1913. He was made a Trustee of Bucknell University several years ago upon the recommendation of the Alumni Association. He has held many important positions. As Chief Industrial Engineer of the Republic Steel Corporation, Youngstown, Ohio, his work extended over 32 plants in 23 cities and towns. He is now Assistant to the Vice-President in Charge of Operations for that company. He holds membership in a number of engineering associations and is the author of numerous articles in engineering magazines. He has also published various mathematical formulas.

Albert Joseph Hamlin graduated in mechanical engineering in 1915. He has been with the Earle Gear and Machine Company at Oreland, near Philadelphia, most of the time since his graduation. He is now Sales Manager for that organization. During the war he served in the Engineer Corps both in this country and France.

Maurice Bacon Cook is a chemical engineering graduate in the class of 1916. He was first employed as chemist with the Standard Oil Company, going from there to become a chemical engineer for the E. I. DuPont Company. Later, he served in Oklahoma as oil chemist with the U. S. Bureau of Mines. His next po-

REUNE WITH DR. BARTOL

An interesting reunion was held just before the business meeting. As the men gathered in front of the President's house, Dr. Bartol came across from his home to chat with them. In the conversation the flood of last March was mentioned. Dr. Bartol gleefully told how he had estimated the height of the water to be just two feet higher than the famous flood of '89, and observed that the accurate measurements made by Professor Griffith had confirmed his estimate. When twitted about the recent flood beating the one in the old days, so that old timers could no longer boast of their recollections, Dr. Bartol instantly replied, "That doesn't worry me. I am always in favor of improvements."

The visiting engineers held a joint meeting with the engineering faculty, at which Professor Rhodes, head of the Department of Electrical Engineering, presided. In affecting an organization it was decided that the chairman and secretary should be selected from the faculty so that they would be in close touch with college affairs. Accordingly, Professor Rhodes was chosen as chairman, and G. A. Irland as secretary. Following the inspection of the laboratories, the committee passed a resolution that the remainder of the Engineering Building was urgently needed, and that the building should be completed at the earliest possible moment consistent with the plans of President Marts. It is encouraging to contemplate the great possibilities for the future of engineering education at Bucknell resulting from the activity of this committee.

sition was Chief Research Chemist with the Tidewater Oil Company. Following that he became Director of Research and Development of the Alco Products Company, a division of the American Locomotive Company. He still holds that position.

Raymond Eyler Sprenkle received the mechanical engineering degree in 1917. He held several positions as a designer after his graduation. During the War he served one year in France and seven months in this country in the U. S. Signal Corps. In 1919 he started his work with the Bailey Meter Company of Cleveland, Ohio. He now holds the title of Mechanical Engineer with that company. He is the author of technical articles and an Associate Member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

John O. L. Roser is an electrical engineering graduate of the class of 1911. He is at present Assistant to the Vice-President in Charge of Sales of the Transformer Division, General Electric Co., Pittsfield, Mass. It is of further interest to Bucknellians to know that he is contact man between the General Electric Co. and Bucknell University.

Elmer K. Bolton holds a position, that of Chemical Director of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Co., that is probably the most important position of its kind in the world. Dr. Bolton received his A. B. degree at Bucknell in 1908. Continuing his studies in graduate work, he received the A. M. and Ph. D. degrees at Harvard University. During his career he has taught advanced studies in organic chemistry at the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute in Berlin. Following his stay there he taught chemical subjects at Harvard and Radcliffe until 1915 when he entered into the industrial field as a chemist at the experimental station of the du Pont Co. in which capacity he was actively engaged in many of the developments undertaken during the company's wartime activities, and in more recent years has been closely identified with the development of the American dyestuffs industry.

Fred Oscar Schnure received his degree in Electrical Engineering in 1914. He has been with the Bethlehem Steel Co. since 1916, serving in various capacities, and is now Superintendent of the Electrical Department of the Sparrows Point Plant. Mr. Schnure is a past President of the American Institute of Iron and Steel Electrical Engineers, and is the author of several papers on the application of electricity to the manufacture of iron and steel. Son Robert is a Freshman at Bucknell.

ARMISTICE Day has rolled around again and with it the suggestion that the Red Cross annual Roll Call opened on that date. The flood of '36 is very fresh in the memory of Lewisburgers and of alumni in the affected areas. There's was a first-hand knowledge of this friend in need. Your interest and support is needed to carry on the traditions of the Red Cross and to keep it in a strong and vigorous condition, ready to act when help is needed.

WORLD LIT

Two professors of Literature of Bucknell University, Dr. Harry W. Robbins and Dr. William H. Coleman, have entered into a contract with Macmillan and Company, publishers of New York City, to produce a 1,250,000 word textbook, An Anthology of World Literature. This will be used in leading colleges and universities of the nation as the authoritative textbook for World Literature Survey courses, including English, American and foreign literature in translation.

Five years ago Bucknell inaugurated Survey courses and since that time many colleges have adopted such courses for giving freshmen and sophomores a general view of cultural subjects. Consequently, a demand for a new type of textbook has arisen and Macmillan Company, one of the largest publishers of college textbooks in the world, looked about the nation to find the college whose professors were best qualified to write such a survey textbook on World Literature. They felt that Dr. Robbins and Dr. Coleman could do this best and after a year's negotiations, finally persuaded these two Bucknell professors to undertake it.

The volume will contain numerous excerpts from the world's best authors and also very extensive introductory and critical and encyclopedic material which Drs. Robbins and Coleman will write. The volume will probably be of a large quarto size with 1,200 pages or more. University authorities are gratified that the Bucknell World Literature Courses have been paid the high compliment of being made the pattern for like courses in other schools and are proud of the recognition that has come to Dr. Robbins and Dr. Coleman.

LIVING DESIGN

Setting the fashion by attending himself, Mr. Marts procured nine outstanding Americans intimately acquainted with significant national problems to address the student body on subjects commanding vigorous thought throughout the nation today. The resultant series of talks has been designated a "Design for Living", and the incredible has happened — standing room only. Attendance will be required every other week of all save Seniors. A friend of Bucknell, interested in this new program has given $50 to be offered as prizes to students writing essays best answering the question. What is a satisfactory design for a life in the years ahead?

Mr. Marts struck the keynote of the design by emphasizing the need for increased wisdom in solving the modern dilemma. He was followed on October first by Dr. William Devitt, founder of Devitt's Camp who related the struggle and growth of his tubercular community and urged that "when it comes time for you to go to rest, you won't be remembered for what you did for yourself; it will be for what you did for others". Dr. Devitt received his honorary Doctor of Science degree from Bucknell in 1928, and attended the Academy here some forty-two years ago. Dr. Wilbur E. Saunders, headmaster at Peddie Institute stressed choosing a life's work in his subject, "Great Causes for Great Characters". It was announced at the time of his address that four graduates of Bucknell are now on the Peddie faculty, and four former Peddie teachers are now at Bucknell. On October fifteenth the chapel audience was treated to Dr. Ethan Colton's condensation of a book recently published by him, in which he discussed Communism, Fascism, Nazism, and the New Deal. Dr. Colton was head of the foreign division of the Y. M. C. A., and has visited Europe every year for the past fifteen years, and has thus had a splendid opportunity to study the swift moving currents of events abroad as well as at home. Addresses by Dean Rivenburg and by the General Chairman of the United Societies of Phi Beta Kappa, Dr. William A. Shimer, and a panel composed of representatives of three major religious groups, Dr. Everett Clinchy, director of the National Conference of Jews and Christians, himself a Presbyterian, Rabbi Philip Bookstaber of Harrisburg, and Richard Beamish, counsel for the Pennsylvania Public Service Commission, a Roman Catholic, followed in too quick succession. Remaining on the program are Arthur Howe, head of Hampton Institute, the foremost negro school in the United States, Dr. James G. MacDonald, associate editor of the New York Times and recently high commissioner of the League of Nations in charge of refugees from German persecutions, and John G. Winant, recently Republican Governor of New Hampshire, and now chairman of the Social Security Board. Such is the stern stuff of which chapel is now formed.

DAD'S DAY

Two hundred fifty fathers attended the sixth annual celebration of Father's Day held by the Christian Association on Saturday, October 24. A special committee of the Association greeted the visiting parents, accompanied by their proud sons and daughters, at Larison Hall. Two hundred mothers attended the celebration. The Temple-Bucknell freshman football game in the afternoon, and a banquet in the evening, followed by a performance of "Death Takes a Holiday" by Cap and Dagger, dramatic society, filled out the day's diversions. President Marts cancelled an engagement at Washington and Jefferson College, where he was to have been the principal speaker at the Founder's Day celebration in order to be present at the banquet.

BUCKNELL RATING

Bucknell ranks tenth this year among American universities in percentage of increase in enrolment. The following tabulation gives the figures for those institutions having the largest percentage of increase. In each case the enrolment is the largest in the history of the institution. The average increase for the colleges as a whole is about six per cent.

BUCKNELL BAND

Marching nearly five miles before a crowd of 65,000 the Bison Bandsmen won the first prize of fifty dollars as the best appearing band at the Pennsylvania Volunteer Firemen's State Convention at Williamsport, and without benefit of female members and drum majoreess. Stiff competition was offered by over a hundred bands and drum corps representing towns and cities from all over the state.

FACULTY BRIEFS

Dr. William H. Eyster, professor of botany and world famous authority on genetics, has been invited to cooperate in planning the exhibits for the Seventh International Congress of Genetics to be held in August, 1937, at Moscow, Russia. Dr. Eyster will assist in drawing up the plans for the exhibits of ornamental plants, and the handling of living materials. The Congress of Genetics is the most important organization in the world in the field and the invitation to take such a prominent part in its work comes as a great honor to this Bucknell faculty member.

Dr. John W. Rice has been asked by Attorney General Margiotti to cooperate with two other expert chemists in the investigation of the alleged "third degree death" of Frank C. Monaghan of Uniontown, Pa. These men have been retained to analyze blood stains in the Bertillion room of State Police barracks at Uniontown to determine whether they are human blood and if they are fresh, blood stains which have been partially obliterated by scrubbing. Two state policemen have already been suspended as a result of this investigation into what appeared to be a brutal application of third degree methods causing Monaghan's death.

Dayton L. Ranck, University Treasurer, attended an executive committee meeting of the Association of College Financial and Business Officers in New York last month. This association includes the treasurers and business managers of the leading colleges and universities in America east of the Mississippi River. The thirty-sixth annual session of the Pennsylvania Library Association on Thursday, October 8, featured a lecture by Miss Eliza J. Martin, Librarian. Her paper which was entitled, "Reminiscences of the Chinese Theatre" she delivered at the Hotel Lawrence in Erie. Professor Martin has been honored locally by election to the presidency of the Campus Club, an association of faculty wives and administrative and faculty women.

OLD PAPER

In Miss Eliza Martin's possession at the Library is an old four-page newspaper — the University Supplement of the Williamsport Sun and Banner of Wednesday, June 29, 1881. This four-page newspaper which recounts the Commencement Exercises of the Lewisburg University of that year opens with an article on the Institute by Professor Jones, who praises the new matron, Mrs. Rines with these words — "The girls no longer need boxes from home". About Mrs. K. B. Larison, the new Lady Principal, he says — "She keeps a close watch over the morals and manners of the young women". The Commencement Exercises lasted five days. On Sunday, six preachers spoke at the nine o'clock Sunday School Class which was followed at 10:30 by President David Jayne Hill's Baccalaureate address on "The Scholar's Dangers and His Refuge". Class Day Exercises and the College entrance examinations were held on Monday. It was thought that the incoming Freshman class would have at least twenty-five members. On Wednesday the final formalities took place. At 9:30 the graduation essays were read, degrees were given, and then everyone adjourned to the Baptist Church and "engaged in that most pleasant of all American exercises, viz., eating and speechifying". This old paper also contains an article on the future of the University. The author of the article states that at that time there were seventeen instructors, and two hundred twenty students. Mr. Bucknell had just offered the University $50,000 on the condition that much more be raised. Discounting mass production and large scale education, we wonder if times have really changed.

INSIDE SPAIN

By Professor FRANK A. SPRAGUE

Prof. Sprague

TO explain thoroughly the present conflict in Spain would require more than the scope of this article but I am glad to explain my own reaction to it as I saw the revolution break out about the middle of July while I was in Madrid.

From some points of view, a revolution has been in progress in Spain for the past five years, although it did not become bloody and assume world importance until last July.

The Republic of Spain is only five years old and has had a multiplicity of very serious problems to face and difficulties to overcome during its short attempt to establish a better life and government for the rank and file of the Spanish people.

A short review of the historical background against the present government is placed reminds us that Spain has been for centuries an absolute monarchy with very few elements of liberalism in her government. Also, the Army and the Clerical party have kept a too firm grip upon the general run of the population to allow for freedom of the individual and, in the third place, the agrarian system has done much to keep the people in a state of subjection to the absentee landlords who owned and controlled vast territories but who did nothing but collect the rents.

Naturally, a system of government which struck at the roots of these three problems and made an honest effort to better the masses in Spain, met with unlimited opposition and antagonism from the groups which were intimately affected by the reforms proposed. Hence there has grown up in Spain a group known as the Rightists who have opposed everything that the organized Government has tried or is trying to do and this element has left no stone unturned to discredit the efforts of the Republic in the opinion of the world at large. Many of this Right element lean toward the Facist ideal so that we have come to regard them as Facists. They have used the cry of "Communism" to make the general public think that Madrid is a second Moscow but I do not believe this to be true. It cannot be denied that there are Communists in Spain but they are much less numerous than the Socialist element. The Right or Facist group is made up of a variety of interests represented by five different groups, i. e., the Army, the Clergy, the Monarchists, the Carlists and a few Right Republicans while the Loyalist or Left Party is composed of the organized Government plus the Socialist, Syndicalist and Communist elements.

The weight of advantage has been on the side of the Facist or Insurgent group because this body has had the trained soldiers, the airplanes and better supplies of equipment and ammunition in addition to the moral, if not the material support of the two strong Facist countries of Europe with a very convenient entry into the Peninsula through the third Facist state. In the face of all these odds, the Loyalists have held their attackers at bay and have shown that they are fighting for a principle of freedom and greater equality for the masses which they will not give up. They are resolved not to allow the Facist ideal, which puts the State ahead of the Individual in every way, to gain a wider foothold in Europe than it already has and they are also determined not to surrender their country again to the domination of the Army and the Clergy or to other reactionary forces. Clericalism is an evil unknown in a Protestant country so it is difficult for us to understand fully what it means but in Spain the Clergy is the biggest reactionary political body and has been chiefly responsible for the lack of literacy in Spain. The Church is the biggest proprietor of lands and buildings and, for centuries, has not ceased to accumulate wealth.

The Spanish Army seems to exist to provide easy jobs for the sons of the land-owning nobility and has always been a privileged class. The proportion of officers to soldiers was absurdly high and the Republic made heavy inroads into the numbers of active officers, regarding them as a useless expense unless they could show that they were justifying the expenditure that they incurred. No wonder, then, that they long to return to some reactionary system where they will be secure again!

I agree, with Edward Conze who says in his recent book, "Spain Today", that the "Spanish revolution is deeply justified and sound, it will triumph whatever may be its temporary set-backs." The Fascists may win for the moment, largely because of the above mentioned advantages on their side, but Spain is aroused and will not long submit to any dictatorial system of government, be it Facist or Communist. Were the existing government free to go forward with its program of educational and agrarian reforms, I feel sure that Spain would shortly live down the name of "backward country" which is so often applied to her, a name growing out of a condition directly attributable to the reactionary forces who are working for selfish ends.

And best of all, Mr. Roberts has shown how a successful man may gain the richest satisfactions of life after his active business days are ended by using some of the fruits of his labor in the service of humanity, watching it accomplish, while he is still alive, the things which he wants it to do in behalf of youth and civilization.

To Mr. Daniel C. Roberts, the generous friend of ambitious youth, the Alumni Monthly sends its hearty greetings and warm appreciation. And to Judge J. Warren Davis and Senator Andrew J. Policies of the General Alumni Association: It is the ideal of the Association to include every alumnus and alumna in the membership of some local alumni club. Any group of five or more Bucknellians at present unorganized are invited to call upon the facilities of the Alumni Office in the formation of a Bucknell Club. It was further resolved that anyone who has completed at least one course in a summer session or in the extension division be enrolled as an associate member of the Association. GREATER WASHINGTON

By Mrs. Arthur Brandon, '16

October 16. The Alumni Club of Greater Washington held an enthusiastic meeting at the New Colonial Hotel the day before the Bucknell-Georgetown game. A pleasant feature of the dinner meeting was the presence of many friends from the campus and the introduction of those who dropped in during the course of the evening. The dinner was planned so that the coach and members of the team, who were arriving by train that evening, could look in on the crowd. Besides the twenty-five Washingtonians present, those introduced were Coach Mylin, Prof. Benjamin Griffith, '99, the co-captains of the football team, Filer and Smith, Mr. John Plant, Grant Painter, '17, Tom Umlauf, '20, Harold Neff, '11 and Mr. Neff's son.

Out-of-town guests at the dinner were Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Newland, Miss Trennie Easley, '31, Miss Mildred Easley, '33, and Mr. Charles Morris, '31. Dr. Joseph Shearer, '13, the President, presided and called on several of those present to tell informally of campus activities. The opening of Old Main, the landscaping of the campus, the large enrolment both at Lewisburg and Wilkes-Barre, the inauguration of the Engineering Alumni Group and of the Friends of the Library Association were items of interest reported on. The local club was proud to note that two of its members had been appointed to the Engineer and Library groups, Mr. Calvin Oberdorf, '07 and Dr. Harry Warfel, '20, respectively.

Bucknell alumni in Washington number seventy-five and include several army officers and men high in government and educational circles. It is the hope of the newly-organized group to rally all of these to a new interest in their Alma Mater. The organization should grow rapidly if Bucknellians continue to swell the Washington population as they have in the past year. Newcomers from the campus in 1936 were Dr. and Mrs. Rainey, Dr. Harry Warfel, '20 and Mrs. Harry Warfel, '19, Dr. Arthur Brandon, '27 and Mrs. Arthur Brandon, '16,

NEW YORK

By Al G. Stoughton, '24

October 26. Twenty-five Bucknellians of New York City gathered at the Planter's Restaurant for lunch to hear Acting President A. C. Marts and Alumni Secretary Charles Morris invite them all back to Lewisburg for Homecoming on the following Saturday. A show of hands revealed that fifteen of the twenty-five were planning to make the trip to Alma Mater for the week-end.

Acting President Marts reported to the luncheoners of the "state of the nation" at Lewisburg and spoke with high praise of the work of alumni in sending to the campus in September the largest freshman class in history. Mr. Morris spoke of Homecoming plans and promised a good time to all. By unanimous vote Mr. E.

A. Snyder, '11, was declared Treasurer of the meeting and collector of dues for the New York Alumni Club. President W. Cline Lowther, '14, presided and promised another New York City Bucknell party in December.

WILLIAMSPORT

LUNCHEONS

By Paul E. Fink, '29

October 27. The Williamsport Bucknell Club held its first meeting of the year when a number of alumni met at Leo's Dining Room for an informal luncheon. Those present had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Charles Morris, the new Alumni Secretary. Mr. Morris spoke briefly about general alumni affairs, and assured the club of his full cooperation with them.

Plans for the club's activities during the coming year were discussed. It was decided to hold a regular monthly luncheon. Members of the club will be notified by telephone of the date of the next luncheon. It is hoped that there will be a real growth of Bucknell spirit through these meetings.

SOUTHERN JERSEY

November 13. The Cohanzick Country Club, just outside Bridgeton, was the locale and Friday the thirteenth was the time for the party tendered by the Alumni Club of Southern New Jersey to "Bucknell's Action President". Advance publicity carried the announcement: "Mr. Marts is coming to our party. He'll talk informally about the big things that are happening at Lewisburg, and the still bigger things ahead. Meeting the man, sensing his deep sincerity and driving force, you'll realize why faculty, students, trustees and alumni alike are clamoring to make him President in fact as well as act". Dancing, cards, refreshments and campus movies completed the bill.

PHILLY STAG

November 27. Dr. E. W. Pangburn, '15 has been appointed Chairman of the Committee to arrange a buffet supper and smoker at the University Club, Wednesday night, November 25th, 1936, the eve of the Temple game. It has been arranged and all alumni are cordially invited. Mr. Marts has accepted the invitation of the committee to speak and Coach Mylin has promised to drop in during the evening to be presented to the group.

THE BUCKNELL PREPAYMENT PLAN

A Plan to Make Prepayments Toward the College Expenses of Your Girl or Boy

BUCKNELL University offers to parents the privilege of making payments to the Treasurer of the University from time to time to be credited toward the future College tuition and expenses of their sons and daughters. The operation of the Prepayment Plan is very simple:

1. Parents may enter their son or daughter in the Prepayment Plan at any age—from one day old up.
2. Bucknell will accept a Prepayment at any time of any amount of $1.00 and over.
3. Bucknell will give a Prepayment Account Book to the parents for their record of payments and will keep a ledger account for each child on the books of the University.
4. The Prepayments will be invested carefully and the net earned interest will be credited to the account annually.
5. When the time to enter College arrives, the usual entrance requirements will be in force. If the Prepayor cannot meet the requirements or does not desire to enter Bucknell, the entire account, interest included, will be refunded.
6. Bucknell will give counsel and guidance and inspiration to Prepayors in order that they may arrive at College age prepared in mind and spirit and pocketbook and enthusiasm for the great experience of College life.

The most difficult problem of many college students pertains to finances. The Prepayment Plan is designed to help ease the financial burden of future Bucknell Students.

To Bucknell Alumni--

In September Bucknell will begin its ninety-second year of service, and in all probability will have an increased enrolment over the high enrolment of this year. There are, however, many fine young people who will be graduated from high schools in June who have heard little or nothing about your alma mater, but who might become interested in the opportunities offered here if some one were to inform them of these advantages. In the short while past a campaign has been put on to rebuild OLD MAIN and alumni have been very generous in their response, but another way in which you can render a service is to tell your neighbor, your friends and your associates of your college, and to encourage them to write for detailed information or bring them to the college to secure first-hand facts.

The beginning of this letter may seem to indicate that Bucknell has all the students it needs and does not need alumni assistance. From the standpoint of numbers it may be true, but the size of the enrolment is just one item to be considered. With 7,000 alumni, most of whom live in the Eastern part of the United States, it should be possible through their influence and interest in Bucknell to select a freshman class of outstanding personality, of scholastic ability, and a group of such financial standing that time for study need not be sacrificed for earning. This does not mean that students should not earn while in college, as Bucknell is now assisting several hundred students through scholarships and work, but rather that part of the burden should be lifted from the shoulders of the University and the faculty and placed more upon those who receive the direct benefits.

The University is always willing, insofar as funds permit, to assist students of high scholastic ability and first consideration is given to those students whom alumni recommend. Your attention is called to the competitive scholarships of $1,000, three of which are awarded each year to members of the freshman class. If you know of any student of exceptional ability, he or she should be urged to compete for this prize.

Bucknell is appreciative of what you have done, and again needs your help in enrolling this coming fall a large class of high-grade students. This is a type of service you can render Bucknell which is very much appreciated.

Catalogs, campus views, and other literature are available for distribution. Any or all of these publications will be sent upon request to you or to any one to whom you may wish to have it mailed. If interested in this literature for yourself or others, mail the enclosed business reply card, and information will be sent by return mail.

Yours for Bucknell,

H. W. HOLTER, Registrar

THE open season on charges of professionalism in collegiate football ranks "to make costly athletic plants operate profitably" has rolled around again. Bucknell's football receipts are barely enough to pay for the legitimate expenses of the game, and not one dollar of these receipts is used for debts on the stadium and equipment or such other improper practices laid at the feet of some forty college elevens by one sports critic in a recent magazine article. Bucknell thus finds herself with strange bedfellows: Ohio State, Pitt, Washington, and Stanford are four of this group roped with us into the blanket charge. Many of the colleges, like Bucknell, who are surprised to find themselves travelling in such fast company have repudiated the charges with written statements.

On the other hand, the Bisons received distinctive recognition in the Sports World not for receiving a bid to the Rose Bowl, although the season was far from mediocre, but for having come close to a mark in the matter of clean play. Penalties against the Bisons totaled only 40 yards, opponents were set back 247 yards for rule infractions. Few colleges in the East were penalized less than 200 yards; Duquesne, eg., lost 600.

Dear Bucknellians:

The first semester of another academic year has slipped away into the archives of Bucknell history and the second semester has begun with dormitories and class rooms full to over-flowing with splendid young people, eager to learn and to grow and to serve.

Now we are looking down the straightway of the calendar toward Commencement on June 5, 6, 7; and it seems incredibly near. I hope many of you will plan to come back at that time to renew your friendships with fellow-Bucknellians and to rededicate yourselves to those youthful aspirations which Bucknell awakened in you.

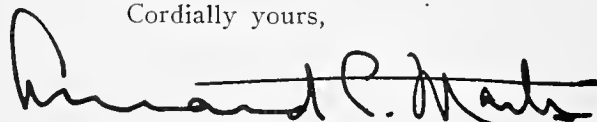

On the fifteenth of this month we will welcome our new Dean of Women, Mrs. Dorothy Dyer, who comes to take the place which Dean Clark filled so ably for twelve years, and which Mrs. Paul Stolz has filled with such ability as Acting Dean of Women for the past six months.

In June, Professor Frank Burpee, known and respected by all Bucknell men who have been on the campus during the past thirty-five years, will retire from teaching and become our first full-time Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds. For many years, Professor Burpee has carried two heavy responsibilities, Professor of Mechanical Engineering and Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, but Bucknell's buildings and grounds have become so numerous and extensive in recent years that the care of them has become a major responsibility and the Trustees have asked Professor Burpee to give all of his energy and time to this work. Upon his retirement from teaching, Professor Burpee will be named Professor Emeritus of Mechanical Engineering and special honors will be paid him at Commencement time by his old students and his faculty associates.

Work is progressing satisfactorily on the reconstruction of the East Wing of Old Main. It will be finished prior to Commencement and will be open for your inspection at that time. We still lack $58,000 in subscriptions before we can let the contract for the Central Section. We are hopeful and determined, however, in our efforts to obtain this final sum and when it comes to us from Bucknellians and friends, as I am sure it must, we will move promptly to let the contract for the erection of the Center. If we can let this contract this Spring, the entire Old Main can be finished and ready for occupancy next September.

Are you on the lookout for choice young high-school seniors who are planning to go to college next Fall? Tell them about Bucknell, and send their names to Walter Holter, our Registrar, so he may mail them Bucknell Catalogues and View Books. They should know about Bucknell—these three hundred acres set apart where great teachers teach fine young people in a friendly, academic environment, and where there is that "indefinable element of communicable character" which enriches and ennobles youthful lives.

Cordially yours,

Acting President

THE CREATION OF GOLD MEDAL FLOWERS

Professor William H. Eyster, '14

I. Double-flowered Nasturtiums

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of two articles written especially for the Alumni Monthly by Dr. Eyster, Head of the Botany Department, who is recognized as one of the nation's foremost eugenicists. The term "Gold Medal Flower" is applied to any novel flower developed during the year which in the opinion of an impartial body of judges is the "best new flower" of the year. In 1935 the Double Nasturtium and in 1936 the Super-Double Nasturtium described below were Gold Medal Flowers. For the current year the Gold Medal Flower has been announced as the Collarette Marigold, "The Crown Of Gold," and will be described in a subsequent article by Dr. Eyster. The present study was originally reported in the Journal of Heredity for February, 1936 ("Inheritance of Doubleness in the Flowers of the Nasturtium" by Eyster and Burpee) and was a cooperative project carried out in the Bucknell Botanical Laboratory and in the W. Atlee Burpee Company Experimental Gardens.

ALL normal plants and animals have beautiful forms and colors. Just when man first became conscious of this beauty is hard to say. He was surrounded by natural beauty on every hand and all that was necessary was time for its enjoyment. Primitive man's life was simple but much of his time was occupied in search for food and the other necessities of life. Perhaps it was not until much of the native beauty of our natural surroundings was destroyed that we became appreciative of the part plants play in a landscape, a range of hills, a meadow, or a home.

Nature abounds in what we call wild species of plants. We accept them as commonplace constituents of our surroundings. Anyone who takes the time and pleasure to study a wild plant or a wild animal will find a marvelous organism that is perfectly adapted to its environment. Every species of living thing is variable and gives rise to offspring which differ in many small ways and often in some rather big ways. The parent plant or animal offers Nature an over-abundance of offspring, more than can possibly survive. Those which happen to have the best combination of inherited characteristics for a particular habitat will survive and represent the species in each succeeding generation. Those which have less favorable hereditary make-ups tend to die and disappear before they reach sufficient maturity to reproduce. The result is a natural selection with an efficiency that could not be exceeded by an all-intelligent Creator.

Wild species of plants and animals are not uniform and fixed as they appear to be. What we see in any species is Nature's choice of individuals most fit to survive. That plants and animals are variable may be shown by growing any species under the protective care of man where individuals which differ from the wild type will not be eliminated in the struggle for existence but will grow to maturity and reproduce their kind. Such differences from the wild type are called variations. It was by growing wild species of plants under cultivation that man has found and selected the horticultural varieties which are grown in our flower gardens.

Until recently, we have accepted such varieties as happen to appear quite by chance. While the selected varieties had some desirable qualities, they often had some characteristics that could not be considered desirable. For example, the old-fashioned nasturtium (Tropaeolum) has brightly colored flowers but the flowers have a somewhat unpleasant odor instead of a pleasing fragrance. Nature combines inherited characteristics into all sorts of combinations. Man may choose those which please him most.

Some years ago Mr. David Burpee, President of the W. Atlee Burpee Co. of Philadelphia, Pa., conceived the idea of creating new varieties of garden flower plants which might have the maximum number of desirable characteristics with as few as possible of those which were considered undesirable. This idea was translated into action by the appearance of a variety of Nasturtium (Tropaeolum) with double, fragrant golden flowers. Doubleness and fragrance were new and desirable characteristics in this popular garden flower. In addition to being double and fragrant, the flowers were larger than the single flowers of the common garden varieties.

Some years previous to the introduction to flower growers of this new golden, double, fragrant flower under the name of "Golden Gleam", Tom Bodger discovered it on the table of his hostess at a social function where it was used as a cut flower. Can you imagine a seed grower's delight and surprise at finding such an unusual and desirable new variety of an old-fashioned garden flower? Mr. Bodger learned that his hostess had obtained the flowers from her neighbor who was Mexican. Fortunately, there were some seeds on the nasturtium plant in this Mexican lady's garden and these served as the beginning of the Golden Gleam nasturtiums. This lady had received the seeds to plant in her garden from her sister who lived in Mexico. Mr. Bodger was so desirous of getting as many seeds of this unusual plant as possible that he hurried off to Mexico hoping that he might find a larger source of this garden novelty. When he reached the place to which he had been directed by his benefactress in California, he found that the house had been abandoned and that the plants in the garden had died from neglect. However, he multiplied the seeds that he had obtained from the Mexican lady in California and introduced it, as already mentioned, under the name of Golden Gleam.

Mr. Burpee was quick to see the possibilities of producing double and fragrant nasturtiums in as many colors as occur in the single varieties of Nasturtium. He ordered the manager of his Floradale Farm in Lompoc, California, to hybridize the Golden Gleam variety with as many of the differently colored single flowered varieties as possible. Then Mr. Burpee came East and because of illness did not return to California for two years. When he returned, he found that his manager had done very little toward getting double-flowered nasturtiums in new colors, while his competitors had made considerable progress in this work. The farm manager was replaced by Mr. William Hoag who agreed to make the necessary crosses at the earliest possible moment. Later, Mr. Burpee took a train for Los Angeles to board a plane for New York. The relatively slow train ride from Lompoc to Los Angeles gave him time to come to the full realization of the handicap he had in the production of new colored, double-flowered nasturtiums. His competitors had had a two-year start on him. He almost decided to abandon the creation of the new varieties, for it would be unprofitable to produce them after one of his competitors had introduced them as novelties. But Mr. Burpee is not the person to quit. He was convinced that if he was to overcome the handicap of two years he would have to act quickly and work scientifically.

As soon as he reached Los Angeles, he wired his newly appointed farm manager to come to Los Angeles for an important conference. When Mr. Hoag reached Los Angeles, he found Mr. Burpee pacing the veranda of the Biltmore Hotel. "Mr. Hoag", said Mr. Burpee, "I want you to go back to Lompoc and make 50,000 crosses between Golden Gleam and all the flower colors in the single varieties." Who had ever heard of making 50,000 crosses? Mr. Hoag hit the roof, so to speak. He took out his pencil and did some figuring to show Mr. Burpee how much such an undertaking would cost. The cost, however, did not lessen Mr. Burpee's desire to have this gigantic breeding project begun at once.

All of the plants that were to be used as the parents in these crosses were growing and in bloom, so that the work of hybridization was begun at once. An army of men did the work that is ordinarily done by insects. It was necessary to prevent the insects from taking any part in making these crosses, because they had no way of knowing nor would they care what hybrids were desired by a commercial seedsman. It was found that insects in California do not visit flowers from which the petals, nectary, and stamens are removed. Accordingly, some workers thus undressed the flowers of thousands of Golden Gleam plants. When the pistils of these undressed flowers were ready for pollen, it was supplied by other workers who collected the variously colored flowers of single varieties in baskets. The pollen of these flowers was brushed on the pistil of the prepared double flowers which then ripened from two to four seeds each. In this way, 40,000 crosses were made and the total yield was about 120,000 seeds.

After these hybrid seeds had been dried for about two weeks, some were planted in California while others were sent to almost all parts of the world. Seeds were sent by airplane to Southern Florida, Puerto Rico, and Argentine, and by express steamer to Australia. Mr. Burpee conceived the idea that it is number of generations that is important in creative breeding of new varieties rather than time. He really considered time is incidental. By shipping the hybrid seeds to all parts of the world, new generations could be produced while the seeds of Mr. Burpee's competitors were in storage waiting for a new growing season in our north temperate climate.

While this creative work was progressing, Mr. Burpee conceived the idea of creating a fellowship in Genetics at Bucknell where he might aid some worthy student. Mr. Thomas M. Little, a graduate of Bucknell in the class of 1931, who had just finished his work for a Master's degree from the University of Florida, was appointed the first fellow on the Burpee Fellowship in Genetics.

Mr. Burpee called Mr. Little and the writer to his trial grounds in November of 1934, when the plants representing the second generation from the original cross between Golden Gleam and the variously colored single varieties (i.e., grandchildren) were approaching sufficient maturity to begin blooming. The plants could not be classed as single or doubles until the flowers opened. It was in this generation that the desired plants were expected. Would they appear? If so, in what proportions? Would it be safe to illustrate and describe for sale in the annual catalog plants which had never been seen? These were some of the questions Mr. Burpee asked the writer. It was time for the catalog to go to press. To advertise these new flowers meant a great deal—a whole year in advance of competitors who had been working for over two years on the breeding of new varieties of nasturtium.

It was June, 1934, when Mr. Burpee ordered his farm manager to make 50,000 hybrids between the double Golden Gleam and the brightly colored single varieties. It was in November of the same year when the second generation plants were half-grown, but not old enough to show which, if any, had colored, fragrant, double flowers. According to Mendel's Laws of Inheritance, one-fourth of the second generation plants were expected to be double, and three-fourths of these double-flowered plants were expected to have other colors than golden. Since the golden color is not undesirable, all of the double plants could be used as parents to breed a third generation of exclusively double-flowered plants.

While Mr. Burpee hesitated to risk the reputation of his Company, he was convinced that the principles of Genetics are a safe basis for prediction. He decided to describe, even illustrate, the new Gleam Hybrids before they were seen. These illustrations and descriptions were made only five months after the original hybrids were made.

When the second generation plants came into bloom in December, it was found, as had been predicted according to the principles of Genetics, that one-fourth of the plants had double flowers ranging from crimson to orange in color, while three-fourths of the plants had single flowers. As soon as the plants came into bloom so that they could be classified, the single-flowered plants were ruthlessly discarded, while the double-flowered plants were put up on racks. The flowers of the double-flowered plants were self-pollinated by hand. In making these pollinations, small brushes were used. The seeds of these plants ripened during December and January.

In exactly six months Mr. Burpee had produced double-flowered nasturtiums in such colors as bright crimson, dutch poppy and a few other colors. These plants were self-fertilized and their seeds planted immediately to produce seed for the waiting public. As was expected, all plants produced double-flowers, but there appeared among their offspring many new colors that had never been seen before in double nasturtiums. It was just eleven months from the time of the making of the original hybrids to the time of the offering of these new creations to the public. The development of new plants by hybridization had never been done before on such a gigantic scale.

While the second and third generation plants were growing in the open in Southern California, and in the greenhouses of Fordhook Farms at Doylestown, Pa., similar plants were growing in Florida, Puerto Rico, Argentina, and far away Australia.

When Mr. Bodger saw the colored illustrations of the new colored Gleam, double hybrids, on the front cover of the Burpee Annual, he said that it was not possible to produce such plants in so short a time. Mr. Bodger was thinking of the old way of breeding one generation a year. Mr. Burpee forgot time and thought only of generations. "How can I get the necessary generations to give me those new hybrids?" Mr. Burpee asked himself. He then thought of aeroplanes and southern latitudes and scientific breeding.

When Mr. Bodger arrived at the Flower Show in Australia on a trip around the world in the spring of 1935, he saw a great exhibit of Burpee's New Double Hybrid Nasturtiums. It must have been a greater surprise to him than his original discovery of the Golden Gleam. These nasturtiums actually haunted Mr. Bodger, for when he visited London later in the spring, he again saw a brilliant display of Burpee's New Double Hybrid Nasturtiums. Mr. Bodger had a right to the belief that new varieties of nasturtiums could not be created within a year. It had never been done before. It was done, but the cost was well over $10,000. It is doubtful whether a more brilliant project in the creative breeding of an ornamental plant for the pleasure of the multitudes has ever been achieved.

These new Double Hybrid Nasturtiums were awarded a gold medal by the Gardens of the Nations in 1935 because they were selected as the best garden annual novelty of the year. In spite of the two-year handicap in the creation of these new flowers, they were on the market a full year ahead of all other flower-seed producers. This will always stand as a great tribute to David Burpee, and to science and the scientists.

Just as we had a feeling of pleasant satisfaction in the newly created colored, double, fragrant varieties which were so enthusiastically received by flower growers in all parts of the world, there occurred, as if by magic, a super-double, giant-flowered plant having flowers that make the ordinary double flower assume a rather commonplace position. This remarkable plant was discovered by Mr. Burpee late one evening as he was inspecting several thousand of the new double hybrids which were in bloom. He was amazed to find a plant with flowers that looked more like carnations or gardenias than like nasturtiums. Nature had taken one step ahead of the breeder. When the flower of this plant

FOLK FESTIVAL NEWS

By GEORGE KORSON, Director

George Korson

ARRANGEMENTS are well under way for the second annual Pennsylvania Folk Festival to be held, during the summer session, in Memorial Stadium, Friday and Saturday, July 30 and 31. On recommendation of Acting President, Arnaud C. Marts and Oliver J. Decker, Esq., the Board of Trustees has unanimously voted to sponsor the event this summer. The administrative expenses are being underwritten by the trustees individually and by other friends of the folk festival who are not connected with Bucknell.

This year's folk festival will be as distinctively Pennsylvanian as research can make it. Racial folklore having its roots in historical Pennsylvania and occupational folklore springing from pioneer occupations and industries in Pennsylvania are being sought first. This course is virtually imposed upon us by one of the chief objectives of the folk festival—namely, to save indigenous Pennsylvania folklore from oblivion.

There will be three performances as compared with six last year—Friday evening, Saturday afternoon and evening. In shortening our program we were moved primarily by a desire to cut down our overhead, but at the same time we felt that such a reduction would permit a greater degree of selectivity of material and performers and also prove less exacting on those who will come to Lewisburg for the whole festival. The Pennsylvania Folk Lore Society, of which Colonel Henry W. Shoemaker is president, will hold its annual meeting on Saturday morning when papers will be read by Pennsylvania folklorists.

The folk festival week-end at Bucknell can be a real vacation. The golf course and tennis courts will be available between performances. Alumnae and alumni might well bear this in mind as it can be made the occasion for an informal mid-summer reunion of classmates.

Preceding the state folk festival in Memorial Stadium, there will be a series of preliminary regional and local festivals in various parts of the state. It is our policy to help build these preliminary events into local traditions in the respective communities. The folk festival has a technique all its own and until local leadership is developed to handle it properly we shall have to continue to give assistance. The preliminary festivals help us uncover hidden sources of material and performers, while providing a means of promotion for the state-wide program at Lewisburg which is invaluable.

Negotiations are being carried on to hold regional festivals in the cities in which they were staged last year. In addition we are reaching out into virgin territory.

We are meeting with a gratifying response. Pittsburgh has already decided to hold another regional folk festival. It is expected to be part of the three-day Fourth of July celebration which city officials are arranging at Schenley Park. The Western Pennsylvania Committee on Folklore which sponsored last year's festival has voted to support the city program. As no admission may be charged in a city park, the committee is raising money with which to send a representative troupe from Western Pennsylvania to take part in the state festival at Lewisburg.

Incidentally, the committee has taken significant action with respect to Bucknell and the Pennsylvania Folk Festival. On December 8, it voted to recognize us as the center of Pennsylvania folklore research and activity and to turn over to us all of its data on Western Pennsylvania folklore. These data were gathered last year with the assistance of field workers assigned by the Pittsburgh WPA Writers' Project. The material, consisting of ballads, legends, folk games and other lore indigenous to that section of the state, has already arrived in Lewisburg and is being classified. Some of the members of the committee are: Louis C. Schroeder, Superintendent of the City Bureau of Recreation; Ralph E. Griswold, Superintendent of City Bureau of Parks; Dr. Harvey B. Gaul, nationally known composer; Professor John Dambach, head of the physical education department, University of Pittsburgh, Max Henrici, editor, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph; and Dr. Wright of the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania.

The coast-to-coast N. B. C. broadcast of the festival, full page articles in the Literary Digest, News-Week and other national publications, generous space in educational and recreational journals and in the metropolitan press, as well as word-of-mouth publicity have combined to place the Pennsylvania Folk Festival prominently on the folklore map in the nation. We were surprised, not to say, flattered, when the National Folk Festival, of which Paul Green, Pulitzer Prize playwright, is president, recently offered to combine with us this summer in a joint national folk festival in Memorial Stadium. However, the budget being too formidable, we were constrained to decline the offer.

Those of you who were present at the Alumni Homecoming Dinner will recall Acting President Marts expressing the hope that Bucknell's folklore program would develop into a cultural center paralleling Chapel Hill at the University of North Carolina. Characteristically, Mr. Marts soon after appointed a committee of faculty members to study the possibility of coordinating folklore with the curriculum. The committee has held its first meeting with President Marts and the festival director, and other meetings are contemplated during the second semester.

The departments represented on the committee follow: Music, Assistant Professor Melvin Le Mon; English, Assistant Professor George MacK. Gregory; Drama, Assistant Professor C. Willard Smith; History, Assistant Professor J. Orin Olyphant; and Art, Assistant Professor Blanchard Gummo.

WINTER SPORTS OUTLOOK

By HUGH MORROW, Jr.

AFTER a brief layoff because of final examinations for the first semester, Bucknell's Winter sports program returned to full swing over the weekend of February 5 and 6, with the Temple University boxers journeying to Lewisburg on the 5th to swap punches with the Bison leather-pushers, while the Bison courtmen, after an auspicious start, resumed activities by encountering the Penn State quintet on the floor of Recreation Hall at State College.

The Bisons made short work of Temple's leather-pushers, scoring a 6-2 victory with the aid of two Temple forfeits; Bucknell had three technical knockouts.

The Penn State game proved the start of a slump for the Bucknell courtmen, for the Nittany Lions trounced Mal Musser's quintet 42-19. The following week started a three-game series of contests away from home, with Temple winning 40-23 on a glass-smooth floor which handicapped the Bisons, the University of Delaware collapsing before a Bison onslaught the following evening by a 47-23 count, while Villanova's quintet outclassed Bucknell on Bucknell's third consecutive night of play by a score of 37-14.

After defeating the Milton Y. M. C. A. and losing by one point to the powerful Williamsport Y combination, the Bisons opened their intercollegiate basketball season at Lewisburg January 14, spanking Lafayette's Leopards all over the floor in band-box Tustin Gymnasium, to win by a score of 43 to 27. Next came Susquehanna's Crusaders, on January 22, who likewise proved no match for the Bisons, and Mal Musser's team again won, 37 to 29. Things went the other way on the following night, however, as Gettysburg's Bullets pierced the Bison's hide by the slightly alarming count of 50 to 31.

The Bucknell boxers opened their season by pounding the Lock Haven State Teachers' College mittmen about the ring on January 15, to win by a 5-2 score toward which three technical kayos for Bucknell were counted.

Mike Sager, of Connellsville, has returned to Bucknell for the second semester. He was the sparkplug of last year's quintet, most successful Bucknell sports team in 1936. This is said, of course, without discounting the worth of such performers as Bill Foltz, who is being used at forward this year; Joe Deegan, another forward; Bob Summers, center; Jack Filer and Jim Hawkins, guards, and a number of others. Most of the positions on the basketball team are open, for competition among the members of the squad is very keen.

In boxing, Joe Reno has one of the best squads in his career as boxing mentor at Bucknell. To begin with, there are two intercollegiate champions; Steve Stephanou, who won the 115-pound title last year, but has taken on extra poundage and is battling in the 125-pound class this year, and Walter Ballard, holder of the 145-pound crown. Then there is Jack Bailey, whom Stephanou ousted for the 125-pound representation at the start of the season, when Reno put the two in the ring and let them fight it out, but who has shown promise of regaining his berth, intercollegiate champion or no intercollegiate champion. Boxing at 115 pounds is Walter Geyer, fast and nimble, and with plenty of punch for all his lack of weight; in the 135-pound class is Bill Androski, while Bill Beck has returned to classes for the second semester, and resumed his ring activities in the same class.

In the heavier weight brackets are Dick Reider at 155; Joe Valentino at 165; Marty Quick at 175; and Jack Lynn and Joe Rosati at heavyweight. These men are only the leading contenders at the moment; they may find themselves on the sidelines in a bout or two, for competition here too is very stiff.

Two more home games are on schedule for the Bison courtmen this season, with Dickinson the opponent at Lewisburg February 17, and Juniata at Lewisburg February 24. Then three games away from home will wind up the season. Bucknell will meet Susquehanna at Selinsgrove February 26, Juniata at Huntingdon March 3, and Muhlenberg at Allentown March 5.

The boxers will meet West Virginia at Lewisburg February 19, Washington and Jefferson College at Lewisburg February 23, Villanova at Villanova February 26, the University of Pittsburgh at Pittsburgh March 2, and Carnegie Tech at Pittsburgh March 6.

CLUB CALENDAR

PHILADELPHIA

By George T. Street, Jr. '10

November 25. About seventy-five Bucknell fans, eager for a morsel of encouragement before the Temple game, gathered in a private dining room of the University Club to listen to Hooks Mylin's pessimism and wonder how much discounting it would stand. There was never a more honest and straightforward appraisal of a team's possibilities, both pro and con, than the Head Coach offered, and every word was followed with breathless interest. With all of Hooks' illuminating and pungent comments, his forthcoming game had plenty of competition as a topic of interest, for the introduction of President Marts called forth a stirring account of developments in the old college, and every man present must have been deeply impressed with the progress recently made. One of the innovations described by Mr. Marts was the practical help of a group of "Visiting Engineers", one of whom was introduced — Albert J. Hamlin '15 of the local alumni group.

The meeting was arranged as a buffet dinner under the chairmanship of Jack Roberts '12. Romain Hassrick '06, President of the Philadelphia group, acted as Chairman and introduced Ken Slifer '26, who brought the greetings of the South Jersey Bucknellians. Mr. David Burpee of the Trustees spoke briefly, and Dr. C. A. Soars '88, gave some sidelights on the early days of Bucknell athletics. Among the stars of earlier days who attended the meeting was "Tip" Topham '15, who showed them how two decades ago.

Charlie Morris was introduced as the new Alumni Secretary, and Dr. Ed Pangburn '15 described the work of the football team from a unique point of view. Having accompanied the team to almost every game in the last decade, and having contributed freely of his time to the safeguarding of their physical condition, he manifests an intense devotion to the squad that is contagious. It was suggested that some good movie equipment would be of incalculable benefit to the team which does not now have the use of films included in their training. In spite of Coach Mylin's conservatism, there was plenty of confidence among the fans as they made their plans to attend the game.

LEWISBURG

By Anna E. VanGundy '85

December 8. The Bucknell Alumnae Club of Lewisburg met in Larison Living Room at 7:30 P.M. In spite of the very low dues required by this Club, a surplus was found in the treasury. The members of the Club decided that it should not lie idle, and it was voted that $75.00 be contributed toward rebuilding Old Main.

Mrs. Catherine Crowding '26 conducted the program on "Christmas Customs". A number of Bucknell college girls, dressed in costume, told in a charming way of the Christmas customs in various countries. The Girls' Glee Club of the Lewisburg High School, under the able leadership of Miss Inez Robinson, interspersed the program with appropriate carols. Larison Living Room was tastefully decorated and a Yule log was brought in by the girls, giving the program just the right setting.

HARRISBURG

By Robert L. Payne '30

December 16. The regular monthly dinner meeting of the Harrisburg Alumni Club in December was featured by the presence of Dr. Frank G. Davis who journeyed from the campus to describe the University Extension work to the group. Dr. Davis gave the interested Alumni much tangible evidence of the Alma Mater's strides toward high recognition in the Educational world. The Alumni Secretary was on hand to bring the members up to date on the march of campus events. Dr. Harvey F. Smith '94, Trustee, responded with a few brief remarks.

At the dinner, which was presided over by Carl Sprout '08, announcement was made of the Christmas Dance to be held at the Pinetown Rod and Gun Club, December 29th. This affair, which struck the key note of the Pinetown social season and which was well attended, was chairmanned by Nolan Ziegler '32.

The Harrisburg Alumni Club schedules two regular meetings each month—the first and third Wednesdays. The first Wednesday is a luncheon meeting at 12:15; the third Wednesday is a dinner meeting at 6:15. All meetings are held at the University Club, 7 No. Front St., Harrisburg.

WILLIAMSPORT

By Paul E. Fink '29

December 29. Fifty-six Bucknellians were present at a very enjoyable noon meeting, which was held at Leo's Dining Room. This was the third in a series of luncheons inaugurated by the local club in October. The meeting was given a more than usual collegiate air by the presence of twelve Bucknell students from the Williamsport area, who were home for the holidays. Each student was asked to rise and was introduced so that the club members might become better acquainted with these future alumni.

The President appointed Oliver J. Decker, Esq., '99 and Charles F. Bidelspacher, Esq., '01 to serve as a committee to draw up a resolution on the death of Sylvester B. Dunlap, '03. The resolution was sent to the family of the deceased. Grant Painter '17 gave an interesting synopsis of recent developments in Bucknell's progress under the leadership of Mr. Marts. Plans were discussed for a large evening affair to be held in the early Spring. Bucknell songs were sung, and the meeting closed with the promise of another luncheon in the near future.

LOCAL NOTE

NEW DEAN

Mrs. Dorothy T. Dyer of Ohio State University has been appointed Dean of Women to succeed Mrs. Paul G. Stolz who has been serving as Acting Dean since the resignation last summer of Miss Amelia E. Clark. Mrs. Dyer who will begin her new duties after February 15th is now assistant to the junior dean in the College of Arts and Sciences at Ohio State where she has assisted in the academic guidance and counseling of some 1900 students.

The new Dean received her Bachelor of Science degree in home economics from Ohio State, and has done graduate work in the Department of Psychology at the University of Minnesota, specializing in personnel and guidance, aiding in the teaching of "How to Study" courses and engaging in counseling. Several months ago she was named executive secretary of the Ohio State Mothers' Association, and last summer was a member of the Hazen Conference on counseling at Gettysburg.

Mrs. Dyer, who is the mother of three children, is the widow of the late John R. Dyer, former Dean of Men and assistant to the Chancellor at the University of Kansas. At the time of his death in 1933, Mr. Dyer was Executive Dean of the University of Idaho's southern branch in Pocatello. While at the Universities of Kansas and Idaho, Mrs. Dyer was actively interested in the problems of college students. The new dean of women is an accomplished musician. She plays both the organ and violin and studied at the MacPhail School of Music, completing a licentiate degree in violin.

ENDOWMENT INCREASE

Bucknell has just received an addition to its endowment in the sum of $8,800 as a bequest from the estate of Miss Cora L. Warg of Philadelphia. Miss Warg, who died in the Spring of 1936, was a cousin of Mr. Rush H. Kress '00, who has been a generous donor to Bucknell on many occasions. His only son, Jack, died some years ago, at the age of 15, and Miss Warg stipulated in her will that this bequest should be made a memorial fund to Jack Kress and herself. It will be known as the Jack Culberson Kress and Cora L. Warg Endowment. The income from it will be used for the education of needy boys.

CAMPUS BEAUTIFUL

The austere outlines of the Women's College have been softened by the addition of landscape gardening which has been placed around the building, according to plans made by Donald Gray '14, of Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Gray was the landscape artist who designed the gardens of the Great Lakes Exposition which was held at Cleveland this past summer. The landscaping is the result of the action of a committee appointed by President Marts of which Trustee David Burpee, of the Burpee Seed Co., is chairman. Already a total of 4675 bulbs have been planted around the Women's College campus in this new move toward the beautification of the buildings. They are the gift of Mr. Burpee and include one thousand daffodils and two thousand crocus. The remainder of the bulbs will flower at different times during the spring and summer.

The plants which now adorn the Sem buildings have been selected with close regard to color. Evergreens and Japanese yew will stand out in vivid contrast to the brick walls and snow in the winter; for spring, flowering shrubs will add touches of color, forsythia will shed yellow blooms in the very early part of the season, and later spirea and honeysuckle will blossom. English ivy has been planted at the base of the buildings and barberry bushes line the walks. The removal of the roadway which winds in front of Hunt Hall is the next step in the plans of the Landscaping Committee.

BUCKNELL AIRED

Mr. Marts with two Bucknell students represented the University on a coast to coast radio broadcast by NBC on December 28. Bucknell, Colgate, and Mount Holyoke took part at that time in a three cornered discussion of "The Merits of Segregated and Non-Segregated Schools". All phases of the Coeducational problem were discussed during the program, of which President Marts acted as chairman, with questions being asked by Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, radio actors portraying a pair of imaginary parents. This marked the third time during 1936 that Bucknell has been recognized in radio programs over national hookups. Following the broadcast, Mr. Marts entertained several Bucknell students and alumni at luncheon at the Town Hall Club. Former Dean Amelia Clark and Dean Bolbuin of Colgate were present.

JOHN PLANT

An award to be known as the John D. Plant Cup, in honor of the director of physical education for men, will be made each year to a graduate of Peddie Institute, Hightstown, N. J., who is outstanding in intercollegiate athletics. Before coming here, Mr. Plant was director of men's athletics at Peddie from 1906 to 1926. In addition to his physical education post, he coaches Bison track athletics.

FACULTY BRIEFS

A number of faculty members spent their Christmas vacations away from Lewisburg, attending conventions in their professional fields. Dr. William Eyster and Dr. T. E. Newland attended the meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in Atlantic City. Mr. John Plant spent the last two days of the old year in New York at the Athletic meeting which was held there. Associate Professor Gold also attended the Atlantic City Scientific Convention, where he was present at the executive board meeting of Pi Mu Epsilon, national honorary mathematics fraternity, of which he is general secretary-treasurer. From there, Mr. Gold journeyed to Duke University, where a mathematics convention was held. Dr. H. W. Robbins and Prof. F. A. Sprague planned to be present at the Modern Language Conference of the American Association of University Professors at Richmond, Va.

Dr. F. G. Davis was appointed to membership on two important professional committees at a meeting of the Pennsylvania State Education Association, which was held in Harrisburg shortly after Christmas. He was elected to the executive committee of the Pennsylvania Education Research Association for a four-year term, and was also appointed a member of the Legislative Committee of the Association of Liberal Arts Colleges of Pennsylvania for the Advancement of Teaching. Dr. Davis played an important role in the meeting of the State Association. He presented a paper on guidance at the guidance round table of the association. He also presented his final report as chairman of the Pennsylvania Ethics Commission from which he has just resigned.

GLEE CLUB

Fifty students comprising the Men's Glee Club, left Lewisburg, January 30, for an eight-day tour through Pennsylvania, New York, and New Jersey. During the trip, an annual feature of the club's mid-winter program, the gleemen made 22 appearances, including 3 radio broadcasts, (KYW, Philadelphia, WCAU and the Columbia chain, and WOR and the Mutual System), 7 evening concerts, and 12 recitals for high school students. The itinerary of the trip called for the Glee Club to sing in 15 cities throughout the Middle Atlantic states. Included in the entourage, besides the 50-voice men's chorus, were three vocal soloists and a magician. The last four days of the trip was sponsored by the joint Hi-Y Clubs of Northern New Jersey. During this period the club sang at eight North Jersey high schools and at a district Hi-Y conference. During their tour last year, the Bucknell vocalists were heard by more than 10,000 persons during a series of 22 concerts, the same number as scheduled for this year.

Operatic, religious, and light classical selections are combined into the program to suit any taste. As a special project this year, the gleemen have included two pre-Revolution Russian church songs and a group of anthracite miner's ballads, collected and arranged by Melvin LeMon, director of the Club. LeMon compiled these hitherto-unpublished ballads in conjunction with the Pennsylvania Folk Festival held last summer on the campus. Another LeMon arrangement featured is the Bucknell Medley, consisting of three college songs.

BURPEE HONORED

Prof. Frank E. Burpee, who has served for many years at Bucknell in the dual capacity of Professor of Mechanical Engineering and Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, was asked by the

Bucknell Men's Glee Club

Board of Trustees at their semi-annual meeting in Philadelphia, December 19, if he would consent to devote his full time hereafter to the direction of the care of the buildings and grounds. Prof. Burpee has consented to this rearrangement of his duties, to take effect at Commencement, 1937, and at that time he will retire from his teaching duties and be given the title of Professor Emeritus of Mechanical Engineering. The increase in the college property during the past few years, both in land and buildings, the comprehensive architectural development which calls for the landscaping of that portion of the Miller Farm on which the additional buildings will be erected in the years to come, and the necessity for re-conditioning West College, Harris Hall, Hunt Hall and others of our present buildings, has greatly magnified the work of the Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds and has made it necessary for the University to have a man of the highest competence giving full time to that work.

Prof. Burpee was the first choice of the Board of Trustees for this important position and they therefore turned to him with their inquiry as to whether or not he would be willing to give up his teaching in order to become Bucknell's first full-time Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds. Prof. Burpee, always loyal to the interest and demands of Bucknell, has consented to do so. At Commencement time, when the change will take effect, special honor will be paid Prof. Burpee by the Trustees and Faculty and his former students, in recognition of his long service as a teacher at Bucknell. Prof. Burpee was graduated from Bucknell in 1901 and received his Master of Arts degree from the University in 1902. John B. Stetson University in Florida honored him by conferring upon him the degree of Doctor of Engineering. Many of the buildings on the campus, including the Carnegie Library, Engineering Wing, the Foundry, and Hunt Hall, were constructed under the direction of Dr. Burpee.

SERVICE BUREAU

The Bucknell Educational Service Bureau furnishes a number of types of service. Among these are surveys of school systems, clinical service for unadjusted pupils and assembly addresses for high schools. Another service, which is particularly important at this time is that of placement of Bucknell graduates in teaching positions. We all know how difficult it is to place teachers at the present time. However, the Service Bureau desires to give every assistance possible not only to the graduating class but to all alumni out in the field who desire assistance in getting readjusted. If you know of a position that is open or that is likely to be open, won't you send a card to F. G. Davis of the Bureau telling him of this possibility? Your notice will be handled with dispatch.

SUMMER SESSION

Among the new offerings for the 1937 Summer School, announced in bare outline elsewhere in this issue, is a course in International Problems. In connection with this course, diplomats and representatives of a number of Latin American countries will be brought to the campus. Negotiations are now in process which promise exceptional results. The Pan-American Union, the State Department in Washington, and several Latin American Embassies are cooperating heartily in the project. The course will be in charge of Dr. D. Montfort Melchior, Supervisor of Public School Instruction at Girard College, who has been a popular member of the Summer Session Faculty since 1923. The first outside lecturer will be Lawrence Duggan, Chief of the Latin American Division of the U. S. Department of State.

The course in Secondary Education will attempt to anticipate the direction that secondary school policies will take in the light of current emergencies which are motivating the newer institutions to do things some believe the secondary school should have done long ago. For the discussion of the high school curriculum, Dr. P. W. L. Cox, head of the Department of Secondary Education at New York University, has been engaged. Dr. Elbert K. Frewell, expert in Extra-Curricular Activities at Columbia University will deal with the subject of his special interest. Dr. E. D. Grizzell, Professor of Secondary Education at the University of Pennsylvania, will discuss secondary schools in other parts of the world. Dr. Robert Hoppock, Assistant Director of the National Occupational Conference has been invited to consider the subject of guidance. A fifth lecturer on the subject of the psychology of the secondary school pupil has not yet been chosen.

Adult education comes in for its share in another special offering. Dr. Robert L. Sutherland of the Bucknell faculty, who during the past semester was in Portland, Ore., doing an outstanding piece of work directing one of the dozen or more public forums in the adult education program which is being sponsored throughout the country by U. S. Commissioner of Education, J. W. Studebaker, will be in charge of this feature. In this connection, it is planned to hold a conference on adult education. Dr. Studebaker and Dr. Homer P. Rainey are among those invited to participate.

SPELLING BEE

Bucknell's best women spellers are in "training" on a rigorous diet of six-syllable words for an intercollegiate radio match February 20 with a picked team of men representing Columbia University. Fifteen Bucknell coed alphabet-jugglers will be chosen to participate in the first of a series of college spelling bees sponsored by the National Broadcasting Company. The contest will be heard over a coast-to-coast network from 4:30 to 5:30 p. m. Dictionaries and anagram sets were at a premium on the campus as aspiring spellers started campaigning for positions on the squad. All of the University's nearly 400 coeds have been invited to test their word-building skill in the preliminary competition which will decide Bucknell's lineup against the men from Columbia. After the field has been narrowed down, according to present plans, candidates will try for places on the team in a final bee, the 15 high-ranking girls going to the studios of radio station KYW, Philadelphia, from which the contest will be transmitted to the nation-wide chain. The women who succeed in getting past jawbreaking words in the radio contest will be eligible for prizes awarded by the broadcasting company.

YOU ASKED FOR IT

EDITOR'S NOTE: Our breaking-in process has been conditioned to no small degree by the objectives of the General Alumni Association as set forth in the By-Laws. Article X, Section 2 reads in part as follows: "It (The Alumni Monthly) shall provide opportunity to any Alumnus for the expression of his opinion on any matter relating to the University or the Association. The Editor who shall be responsible only for his own opinions, shall not refuse to admit contributions unless they are libellous or irrelevant". We reprint below a number of letters which seem to express a cross-section of alumni thinking. These letters, all written in connection with the questionnaire included in the September Alumni Monthly and in a "you asked for it" vein, were of a me-to-you nature. We hope that their perusal will stimulate other alumni to contribute letters, written expressly "for publication".

Dear Charlie:

Well you asked for it, and whether you meant it or not, you're going to get it.

After thirty-six years, it perhaps is not strange that recollections of Bucknell consist not of magna-cums, summa-cums (none of which I acquired) but of persons and events. Among the persons I seem to see most clearly are: the awe-inspiring countenance of President Harris and the genial face of Registrar Gretzinger; next, agile Dr. Bartol, playing tennis after hours; stern looking but lovable Linc. Hulley; pompous Prof. Perrine; The Old Roman, Rockwood; Coach Hoskins — (I made the first touchdown by the first team he coached and won a cap from him); Christy Mathewson, drop kicking goal after goal from the 50-yard line; Cober, with a loop on the rear of his belt to pull half-backs through the line; Fetzer whom I discovered and sprung on Pop Warner in our first track meet with the Indians. After Fetzer had lapped the Indian two-milers before they had covered six laps, Warner turned to me and asked "Where in Hell did that man come from?" I told him that he was a farmer boy who had been running three miles to his home to do the chores after classes, but had never appeared on the track before. I can still see Warner convulsed with mirth over that; State College games (and fights) on neutral territory, Williamsport.

In fact so many faces and events arise out of the past that I see there is a lack of room for more, so must close this rambling review with,

Best wishes,

Andrew J. "Sherry" Sherwood, '00

Dear Charlie:

I have devoted the life I have lived since graduation to achieving mediocrity and I think I have succeeded. I have a job of medium importance, I live in a middle-class home on a middle-class street, and have a family that approximates the New Jersey average for size. This follows exactly the recommendations made by Prexy Harris in his matriculation address to my class, in which he pointed out the dangers of departure from the average. I work in the garden, attend neighborhood parties, play golf poorly and Contract abominably, belong to the necessary number of clubs and associations, and send my children to Sunday School.

To justify my stand as the average man, I assert that I have the world's two most remarkable children. The ambition of Miss Eight Years is to be a gardner, of Mr. One Year, to be a thug.

As to suggestions and criticisms about the work of the Alumni Office, I find it difficult to frame correctly my thoughts on the subject. There is, I believe, a distinct place in American life for the small college; we should have a true pride in its small-town atmosphere, in the advantages of true culture that it offers over its large, factory-like competitors; we should avoid the false pride apparent in the practice of aping the larger institutions. To your many duties as Alumni Secretary I suggest you add the one of cultivating a consciousness of superiority based on pride in the material with which you are working, per se, without comparison.

Dear Charlie:

Bucknell—going well but she needs money for endowment, buildings, student center, gymnasium and swimming pool (these many years). I believe that every graduate should take out an insurance policy of at least $500.00 payable to the University in 20 years or at death. Premiums that might lapse could be paid from premium income collected by the University each year. Just think about four hundred in this year's class at $500.00 each. That is a lot of money in twenty years. Group insurance at graduate age would be in the reach of every graduate. Have exploded on this as far back as 1908 but no "takers". Other universities seem to have tried it. Bucknell shies off. Among Bucknell alumni are a number of expert insurance men who could explore and advise us of the possibilities.

Dear Charlie:

Although I did not finish my course at Bucknell, I enjoy the Alumni Bulletin very much—always finding references to professors, classmates and other friends I made while there.

I believe more and more in our Christian colleges the size of Bucknell. After having a son spend one year at a large state university — 10,000 students — I found he was missing the very things I prized most from my college days—smaller classes where one gets to know the Prof., chapel exercises that left many a wonderful thought in the memory, quiet walks on a beautiful campus or country lane. Real friendships are made and will last through life. They give life a beauty and balance that education alone cannot give.

My wish is that Bucknell may retain these traditions and continue to send out a noble army of men and women to help steady our nation.

Sincerely,

Beth Hughes Browne, '11

Dear Charlie:

As former President of the New York Alumni Association, I have had some viewpoints on alumni organization that should be recorded. I feel strongly that the first job of an alumni office is to know where the alumni are. Until this is achieved with a fair degree of completeness, all other efforts at alumni mobilization are bound to be futile.

The second job is alumni mobilization. This entails the organization of alumni living sufficiently close to centers of population to be considered accessible to those centers and the setting up of an internal organization in the local branches that will bring about rapid mobilization of alumni when needed. For alumni who are not in close proximity to these centers, say within commuting distance, it is futile to depend upon the local organization to take care of them. The only way that I can see that they can be cared for is through direct handling from the alumni office.

The university-alumni relationship is a two-way thing. The alumni represent the end product of the university's efforts and unless they can be contacted and studied there is no way by which the university can find out if it has done its job satisfactorily. There is no better advice than that which can be provided by the graduates who are attempting to do the things for which they were supposedly trained and the university should call on them constantly for an interpretation of their training in order that this training may be constantly refined and advanced as the demands of the practical job advance. For example, the chemical engineers who are working at their profession should be constantly called on for advice on the defects in their preparation and on trends in their field which changes in the course may anticipate. On the other hand, the alumnus has a stake in seeing that the university maintains the highest standing possible, for the name of the university is in a way a measure of his professional standing. If the name of the university rates high, he benefits accordingly.

I believe that this approach to the alumni can do more to make them feel that they are a part of the corporation than the parties and other social events that recreate the university only in terms of a certain four years or in terms of a certain few people. At the same time if the alumni are drawn into university function in a serious way these gatherings can come to have some real meaning and appeals for funds will find the alumni in the spirit of participation rather than in the spirit of blind donation.

Most of the alumni of Bucknell are earning their livelihood through a professional effort that they take seriously. This is a common interest. Relatively few of them are approachable on the more transitory even if more intense interest provided by football and parties.

Dear Charlie:

I would like to say that my recollections of Bucknell days are very happy ones. Our life was an ideal one. We students governed ourselves, and we did it mighty well. I hold in highest esteem all the professors whom I came under. Most of them have passed on, but they still live with me as I knew them.

Dear Charlie:

May I submit an item of constructive criticism of Bucknell University's Engineering courses? For the last two years, I have been a member of a class (Pennsylvania State College Extension) in Industrial Psychology. I realize from it that if I had had this instruction before I took my first job it would have been of incalculable value to me. It is fully as important for an engineer to know how to handle people as it is for him to know his engineering technique. If Bucknell University has not already done so, I recommend a complete and compulsory course in Industrial Psychology for all engineers.

Yours sincerely,

H. E. Campbell, '14

Dear Charlie:

I suppose we must have something about the athletics but I hope it will record plans and accomplished work in the regular lines of classroom work. Personally I never read the athletic news. I have been thirty-five years in Princeton and I have never attended a football or baseball game here in that time. I think modern college athletics have utterly defeated the object for which they were instituted and have brought the whole college world into disrepute among the general run of folks by the excesses and rowdiness which have accompanied the spectacular games. I think it was a fundamental mistake for Bucknell to build a stadium. It is true that I have been among the small financial supporters of Bucknell but it has not been because I was not interested in helping her do what I should count her great task, the thing that President Harris always emphasized — the developing of men, thinkers, leaders in the world.

Yours truly,

W. B. Sheddan, '95

Dear Charlie:

The new Secretarial course that is being offered at Bucknell is a valuable addition to the university curriculum.

The only thing that helped me get a job when I got out of college was the social connections that I had made when I was a student at Bucknell. It is wonderful to know that a Bucknell alumnus of a few years ago will give a new graduate a job simply because she is a graduate of Bucknell, also. It is good to know that the alumni will help each other.

Moose came around to see if he could find any of his old pals still in the league. His presence recalled a tale to Johnny Drohan, of the Boston newspaper Drohans. As Johnny told it, during the course of Moose's undergraduate days at Bucknell there came an occasion when he had to take an examination.

"Moose supplied the answers—every one of them wrong. The professor called him on the carpet. Rattling the evidence, he said to him, 'McCormick, I don't believe you know anything!' 'Professor', responded the Moose, 'I don't even suspect anything!'" was examined more closely the following day it was found to have sixty petals instead of ten as in the ordinary double flowers. In addition there were approximately thirty petal-like but sterile pistils and as many petaloid stamens. The spur also was rudimentary so that the flower assumed a radial rather than a bilateral symmetry.

The super-double flower has so many floral parts that the flower buds are ruptured early and assume a flat-bottom-like shape. When the flower has reached approximately one-half of its mature size it looks very much like a large pansy flower, but when it has reached its full development it resembles a double carnation flower. When fully developed, the flower varies from $3\frac{1}{4}$ to $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches in diameter. An ordinary single flower has 5 petals, a double flower has from 6 to 15 petals, while the new giant, super-double flower has an average of 135 petals and petal-like structures.

In this super-double flowered variety Nature gave to the scientist a number of desirable characteristics which make it possible to create an actual queen of the flower garden. Not only are the flowers unusually large and extremely double but the plant possesses a greatly increased vegetative vigor and produces flowers most profusely. This increased vigor and the profuseness of its blooms are associated with the plant's inability to produce seeds. Many who regard the nasturtium as a favorite garden flower have said to us, "The super-double flowered nasturtiums never go to seed but keep right on blooming."

Like other characteristics in nasturtiums, the super-double flower is inherited, but unlike other known characters, it is dominant over other types of flowers. This means that it appears in the first generation plants when it is crossed with single or double-flowered varieties. By breeding this unusual plant with the single and double strains which have fragrant flowers it has been possible to create giant-flowered, profusely-blooming plants of unusual vigor. Here is a plant that is both beautiful and magnificent. It will delight even the most critical flower lover.

Because of the beauty and magnificence of the plant-as-a-whole and because of the fullness of its beautiful flowers, this new genetic variety of nasturtium was granted a basic United States patent, the only patent that has even been granted to a nasturtium and the only basic patent that has ever been granted to any plant. This beautiful nasturtium is registered under plant patent number 141. As an additional recognition of its intrinsic value, this new creation in garden nasturtiums was awarded a special gold medal by the officials of the Gardens of the Nations and were on exhibit at the Gardens of the Nations in Rockefeller Center during the months of January, February, and March of 1936.

The creation of gold medal flowers is a cooperative project of the W. Atlee Burpee Company of Philadelphia, Pa. and the Botanical Laboratory of Bucknell University. This project is of great value to both cooperatives. The laboratory is faced with problems which involve the application of the principles of the pure sciences, while the Seed Company has the advantage of these applications in their never-ending attempts to give their customers something better and more beautiful.

THE 1937 Commencement has been programmed especially to introduce alumni to the physical changes which have taken place on the campus and to give them an Alumni Day incorporating the suggestions made from time to time by individual alumni, classes and clubs. This year the reunion luncheons have been scheduled for the Women's College Dining Room to alleviate the local restaurant congestion and to give all reuners and non-reuners an opportunity to swap tales of "college days". Each reuning class will have its special table and all returning alumni and alumnae are cordially invited to attend.

A TWILIGHT band concert on Loomis Field follows the annual meeting of the Alumni Association. In the evening, the usual Commencement Play will be a revival of the 1932 Commencement play, "Bird in Hand", by John Drinkwater. At the invitation of Prof. C. Willard Smith the original cast, largely composed of members of the reuning class of '32, are severing all business and domestic bonds to return and give this production true professional color.

THAT alumni are the backbone of the University is a fundamental truth. But that the maintenance of complete, accurate, and up-to-date alumni records must be the continuing concern of the Alumni Office is a primary assumption. The strength of your Alumni Association thus depends upon your personal cooperation in supplying this information. In fact, its life depends upon it. We never intended our Alumni Statistics Questionnaires to be a burden, as one alumnus has expressed his reaction: "I am almost exhausted from filling out all the details on the face of this sheet. Then how can you expect a fellow to find time and energy to write a long letter? . . . Man, I just can't find time to write anymore." Rather, providing these data is your privilege to serve your Alma Mater.

AND speaking of letters, we have received a number of queries regarding the semi-occasional appearance of the Monthly and the scarcity of Alumni Trustee Nomination ballots. As to the first; the Executive Committee of the General Alumni Association, meeting October 10 last Fall, unanimously moved to limit the frequency of publication to five issues of at least 16 page-length. This motion was adopted as an economy measure, thus saving postage necessitated by a larger number of issues with fewer pages. This same desire to balance the budget accounts for the fact that only one Monthly is sent to a household where more than one Bucknellian resides. So, if other alumni members of your family wish to cast their votes for Alumni Trustee, additional ballots will be sent upon request.

DEAR BUCKNELLIANs:

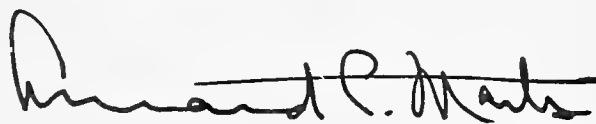

Much has happened here at your Alma Mater, which is encouraging and stimulating, since the last issue of the Alumni Monthly. I shall not, in this brief message, try to review it all, but shall speak only of the completion of the Old Main Rebuilding Fund of $375,000. We are grateful, indeed, to the many alumni who worked on the Old Main Committees in various sections of the country and are grateful, also, to the 1,500 alumni, trustees and friends who subscribed the necessary funds. I wish you all might have shared that "thrill that comes once in a lifetime" a month ago, when one modest friend of Bucknell, who does not wish his name announced, gave us the final $57,500 needed to complete the fund.

As a consequence of this successful effort, all three sections of Old Main will be back in the service of youth and of humanity when college opens next September. The West Wing is already in use; the East Wing will be completed by June first, and the walls of the Central Section are now being built. It is immensely gratifying to see this reconstruction work proceeding so swiftly and to each of you who had a part in it we send Bucknell's hearty thanks.

Commencement reunion and exercises will be held on the first week-end in June this year, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, June 5, 6 and 7. We invite you most cordially to come back for that period. Alma Mater wants to see you, and your friends want to see you. Come back, and renew the memories of the inspiring days of youth!

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

Acting President.

PLACEMENT BUREAU FOR SENIORS AND ALUMNI A REALITY

THE first meeting of the Alumni Advisory Council of the Bucknell Placement Bureau, organized to assist seniors and alumni in obtaining employment, was held at the President's House on April 10 and was attended by twenty prominent alumni named to the committee.

The bureau was created about a month ago with headquarters in the Alumni Office with Charles Morris as executive secretary and has been functioning through a committee of administration officials and faculty members, headed by Dr. Frank G. Davis, head of the department of education. Dual purposes of the bureau will be to give employers information they want about Bucknell graduates to help them choose desirable employees, and to help students and alumni to be placed in desirable positions. Dr. Robert L. Sutherland, head of the sociology department, is vice-chairman of the Faculty Advisory Committee.

The alumni meeting opened late in the afternoon and, after hearing Mr. Marts and Dr. Davis speak briefly of the proposals which have been taking shape during the past few weeks, adjourned for dinner in the Women's College Dining Room where the group was joined by members of the present senior class who are now registered with the bureau. Duties of the members of the council will be to assist Bucknell authorities in keeping in constant touch with the "job market" and in thinking cooperatively on college placement problems. "We hope to set the Placement Bureau up on efficient, rather than emotional, foundations", said Acting President Marts as he outlined the plans. "If we can make it function well, it will help to round out Bucknell's educational service to her sons and daughters successfully and efficiently".

A. R. Mathieson, '20, Assistant to the Vice-President of the United Steel Corporation, introduced the alumni program of the bureau by casting alumni in the roles of sales managers and calling them to real service to their Alma Mater. A university is a manufacturing concern and as such should have a well-developed sales force for its product. He pointed out that college placement offices have had their greatest growth in the last three years. Ten years ago when many of the large corporations were inaugurating regular visits to the nation's campuses in search of college trained men and women, only a few colleges had centralized placement, leaving this important work to the individual departments of instruction. There is no notion of replacing this departmental placement as it now exists at Bucknell, but as Dr. Davis explained, "the central placement bureau will provide a clearing house for placement throughout the University and will be integrated with the long-range vocational counseling program of the University".

This marked the fourth notable undertaking to which alumni have responded during the stewardship of Acting President Marts. The successful completion of the Old Main Rebuilding Campaign was announced the preceding Saturday coincident with the letting of the contract for the construction of the Central Section. The activities of the two other alumni interest groups, the Visiting Committee on Engineering and the Friends of the Library, are now established as permanent departments of the alumni.

The following alumni have agreed to serve on the Alumni Advisory Council:

Old Main Campaign Successfully Completed

By Judge J. Warren Davis, Chairman, Old Main Drive

WITH the full quota of $375,000 for the reconstruction of Old Main raised by enthusiastic alumni, trustees, and friends, the contract for the completion of the central section of Bucknell's most important building was awarded early in April by the Board of Trustees.

The last obstacle to the complete reconstruction was cleared away with the receipt of a final gift of $57,500 by an anonymous friend of the University. The Andrew J. Sordoni Construction Company, of Kingston, expects to finish the task of rebuilding by the time college begins in September.

In the campaign which brought about the restoration of Old Main, destroyed by fire in the late summer of 1932, 1,500 subscriptions ranging from one dollar to $100,000 each were received from alumni, trustees, and friends of Bucknell.

Alumni Loyal

Alumni cooperated loyally in all the centers where Old Main campaigns were organized. Drives were conducted in New York, Philadelphia, Trenton, Harrisburg, Wilkes-Barre, Milton, Lewisburg, Reading, Allentown, Scranton, Rochester, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Altoona, Lewistown, Cleveland, Erie, Williamsport, Sunbury, Baltimore, and Washington. Arnaud C. Marts, acting president, presented the objectives of the campaign at the opening dinner in each of the districts.

For all persons interested in the future of Bucknell the Old Main drive was filled with thrilling moments. The first came three years ago when the late Henderson Supplee leaped to his feet during a Board of Trustees meeting and said, "Let's do something about this. I will give the first $10,000."

The second highlight occurred when the late Dr. Charles P. Vaughan announced in his quiet way at the Board meeting in December, 1934, that he would contribute $50,000 to the fund. Then, as the general campaign opened in the New York district, the quota of $75,000 made success seem almost hopeless until two Bucknellians came forward with enough to complete the drive in the metropolitan area.

Friend in Need

There were many other exciting incidents, the final one taking place this March when we were $57,500 short of the goal, and a friend who does not want his name to be published gave us that entire amount in addition to a very large gift he had previously made.

Since we raised just enough money to finance the entire reconstruction, we are counting on each subscriber to pay his subscription in full as promptly as possible.

Memorial Rooms

Many rooms and sections of rebuilt Old Main will be designated as memorials. These memorials will be marked out before the building is completed, and bronze tablets with suitable inscriptions will be placed.

The west wing of Old Main has been in use since last October, and the east wing is expected to be ready for occupancy by June 1. In the west wing are administrative offices on the first floor and dormitory rooms accommodating 51 students on the upper three floors.

When finished, the east wing will resemble closely the unit already occupied, inasmuch as it will also provide dormitory quarters for 51 students, as well as space for administrative offices on the first floor.

Pillars Preserved

In order to preserve the architectural spirit of the original Old Main, the four massive red-brick pillars across the front of the central section will be kept intact. A landscaping program in the Men's Quadrangle which will enhance the beauty of the building is now being planned.

The central section of the building will include a postoffice, storage rooms, and a social center for commuting students in the basement, a large entrance lobby and offices of the dean and president on the first floor, a men's Student Union, including social, game, and conference rooms, and offices of student organizations on the second floor, and dormitories for 17 men on the third floor.

Those of us connected with Bucknell feel the deepest gratitude toward the men and women whose unselfish efforts and gifts have helped to place this splendid new building on the brow of College Hill. It is a building which in future years will render valuable service to Bucknell, youth, and humanity.

NEW HOME FOR JUNIOR COLLEGE

Gifts of Two Wilkes-Barre Residences Provide New Facilities

BUCKNELL'S Junior College at Wilkes-Barre will have a new home at the beginning of the September term as the result of gifts to the University of two valuable residences.

Rear Admiral Harold R. Stark, of Washington, D. C., chief of the ordnance bureau, and Mrs. John N. Conyngham, of Wilkes-Barre and New York, were the donors who presented their palatial homes outright to the University for the use of the Junior College.

The two homes, located in the same block on South River Street, Wilkes-Barre, will provide excellent facilities for the classrooms, laboratories, and administrative offices which the Junior College requires at its present enrollment of approximately 150 students.

The building given by Rear Admiral Stark, known in Wilkes-Barre as the Fred M. Chase home-stead, will be a memorial to Mr. Chase and Mrs. Eleanore Stark Chase, sister of the donor. The other home will be named the John N. Conyngham Hall of Bucknell University, in honor of the late husband of the woman who presented the building to the college.

Plans for making the Junior College a permanent part of Wilkes-Barre's cultural life were discussed April 3 at a luncheon meeting in the Hotel Sterling attended by members of the Board of Trustees and the Junior College Advisory Council composed of prominent Wilkes-Barre citizens. On the same day the trustees considered proposals for the remodeling of the two homes to meet the needs of the Junior College.

LITERATURE BUILDING NAMED IN HONOR OF CHARLES P. VAUGHAN

The first completed unit in Bucknell's new building program will be named Vaughan Literature Building in honor of the late Dr. Charles P. Vaughan, of Philadelphia, chairman of the Board of Trustees from 1931 until his death last year.

The Literature Building, completed in 1934 at a cost of $135,000, will be a fitting memorial to Dr. Vaughan since the Philadelphia business man was chairman of the committee which engaged Jens F. Larson, architect, to lay out Bucknell's longtime campus development plan.

Dr. Vaughan, who served as acting president of Bucknell for several months in 1931 between the resignation of Dr. Emory W. Hunt and the inauguration of Dr. Homer P. Rainey, was chairman of the committee which supervised the construction of the Literature Building. He was a most generous contributor to Bucknell, his gifts to the Stadium and Endowment Funds assuring those campaigns of success.

"SCOTTY" WHYTE--A TRIBUTE

By Lewis E. Theiss, '02

"SCOTTY" WHYTE is dead. The University's ambassador of good will, whom all the college, and all the town, and all Bucknellians everywhere, as well as a host of other folks, affectionately called by his nickname rather than by his more formal baptismal name, James Primrose — that genial instructor and friend of man, has passed on. He died on Saturday, April 18, of heart failure at his home. In his passing Bucknell has lost an able teacher, the students have lost a warm friend, the faculty has lost a well loved colleague, and Bucknell has lost one of her finest representatives. Both the University and mankind are the poorer for his passing.

But they are the richer for his having lived. Rarely does any teacher bring to his work the varied training and the multitudinous experiences that made Professor Whyte such an exceptional character. He had run the gamut of life from poverty to prosperity. He had fought his way up from obscurity to prominence. He had been schooled in the stern classroom of life and in cloistered academic halls. He knew the poor and the rich. He mingled cordially with the forgotten man and the man of eminence. All this enabled him to check theory with practice, to test the false by the genuine, to detect truth in whatever guise he met it. Unlike many self made men who have struggled upward through trying circumstances, he had not lost that tenderness of heart that also characterized his fellow countryman, Bobbie Burns, who sang so pitiingly of a mouse.

He himself delighted to tell the story of his boyhood and its meagre days. "When I asked my mother for tea," he used to say with a laugh, "she would answer: 'Have you finished your porridge?' And if I said 'No,' she replied, 'Then you cannot have it,' and if I said 'Yes,' then she answered, 'You do not need it.'"

It was his own experiences in those meagre days of youth that gave him the warm sympathy he had for every lad and lassie who was fighting to climb to better things. It was his experience as a business man, as a manager of one of the shadows that will make Bucknell an enduring institution. considerable enterprizes, that helped him to judge things for what they were and not to be misled by specious arguments. It was his own participation in sports and the coaching of athletes that made him sympathetic with the athlete of today, that gave him comprehension of their problems, that made him a valuable member of the Bucknell Athletic Council. It was his own experience as a public speaker that made him such a forceful teacher of those who would be speakers. In every realm of life he had learned by experience, and he made his experience helpful to others.

Coming to Lewisburg unheralded and unsung, he modestly took his place in the ranks and threw himself with characteristic enthusiasm into the work before him. Even if he had tried, he could not have hidden his light under a bushel. Men soon knew him for what he was. His friendly nature and his pleasing personality brought him a host of acquaintanceships. In Rotary he climbed rapidly, and it was not long before he was a district governor. As such, he traveled far and wide, making friends wherever he went.

He was an excellent speaker, and was soon in great demand as an after dinner orator and speaker. More and more he went abroad for the college, speaking to thousands upon thousands of high school students. Everywhere he went he created good will for Bucknell. He was indeed Bucknell's ambassador of good will.

With it all he was a good husband, a fine father, an exemplary family man. He devoted himself to his children to a marked extent. One of the familiar sights of Lewisburg was that of "Scotty" Whyte rolling slowly along in his car with his children. It was quite typical of him that the last thing he did before his death was to take his family for a motor car ride.

His interest in children did not stop with his own. His heart went out to all children. For years he had been a valued member of the Lewisburg Boy Scout Council. Although he was busy, as only such a man can be busy, he never hesitated when asked to give some of his time to work for the boys of Lewisburg.

Bucknell has had few teachers who have impressed themselves so deeply upon the college and its alumni. For fourteen years he taught at Bucknell, with hundreds of students passing through his classes. For a time he was director of extension work and of the summer session. He served long and faithfully on the Athletic Council. He was a member of the Artist Course Committee. He represented the Department of English in the University Council. In ways innumerable he served the college. He was a frequent speaker at alumni gatherings. And he was in tremendous demand as a speaker before high schools, and at public gatherings of various sorts. Wherever he went, he made friends for Bucknell.

"Scotty" Whyte is gone, but his influence will live after him. It will live in the hearts of his colleagues. It will live in the minds of his students. It will help to shape the lives of those yet to be Bucknell students, who will become Bucknellians because they knew "Scotty" Whyte. His is

The Friends of The Bucknell Library

By Norman E. Henry, '05

ALTHOUGH the group known as "Friends of the Bucknell University Library" is less than a year old, the results are already encouraging and far-reaching. The four-page quarterly Bibliotheca Bucnellensis is rapidly making alumni book-minded for Bucknell. It is edited solely in the interest of the Library and the cost of publication is borne privately by a few interested friends of the cause. The mailing list now contains one thousand names. Any alumnus may receive it regularly by joining the Friends of the Bucknell University Library. Send your name and address to Miss Eliza J. Martin, Librarian. There are no membership fees. The only desideratum is an interest in books and a desire to promote the growth of the Bucknell Library.

MEMORIAL AND OTHER GIFTS

An attractive bookplate has been designed by Miss Elizabeth Snowdon Chalfant of Pittsburgh for such accessions as may result from this Friends of the Bucknell Library Movement. A special bookplate will also be designed for large collections of books which may be purchased or presented to the Bucknell University Library as memorials. This plate will contain space for the name of the donor and that of the person in whose memory the volume is presented. In this way all such books will be marked in a permanent and appropriate manner. It is hoped that the response in money and books will be generous and that thousands of worthwhile volumes may be acquired in this way. It is indeed hard to conceive of a more fitting and useful memorial to the memory of a loved one than a bequest invested wisely in books that will inform the minds and inspire the hearts of college youths.

THE MCGREGOR FUND

A rare opportunity to expand and enrich the Bucknell Library in the field of Americana and history is now offered by The MacGregor Plan whereby the Library may receive $500 annually for ten years on condition that alumni and friends of the college raise an additional sum of $500 annually over this ten-year period.

The McGregor Fund is administered by a Michigan corporation, founded by the late Mr. Tracy W. McGregor of Detroit. Its purpose is to encourage book-collecting by American College Libraries in cooperation with the Committee on Americana, appointed by the American Historical Association. Allegheny College, Lafayette, a score of other liberal arts colleges have already accepted the terms of The McGregor Plan and have been participating in this fund. Bucknell is favored by the McGregor Committee on account of its excellent standing as a college of liberal arts.

The editor of Bibliotheca Bucnellensis, through the cooperation of the University office, recently sent out a circular letter addressed to a large group of alumni and Friends of the Bucknell Library, urging them, if they favored the acceptance of the McGregor offer, to send their pledges or checks to Dr. Robert M. Steele, California, Pa., the Secretary-

Treasurer of the Friends of the Bucknell University Library Association. If you have not received such an appeal and you wish to help, you are hereby urged to send your pledge or check at once and thus insure the acceptance of this $500-a-year offer. Several five dollar, ten dollar, and twenty-five dollar pledges have already been received. Any amount from one dollar up will be welcome. Here is a chance to help the Bucknell Library in a vital and constructive way.

THE NEFF COLLECTION

During February and March the Library has been privileged to exhibit a unique collection of old books and manuscripts which are the property of Mr. George H. Neff (class of 1916) of Sunbury. The first of three displays contained incunabula (books printed before 1500) and examples of the work of famous early presses. Perhaps the most interesting items were a Bible, a geography, and a Talmud, all in Latin as well as two small Latin volumes, works of two of the earliest presses, the Elizevira Press of Amsterdam, and the Aldine Press of Venice.

On a second display there were early Pennsylvania imprints. Several from the press of Christopher Sauer of Germantown and from the press of the Brethren at Ephrata were among the rarest. There were very early local publications from Selinsgrove, New Berlin, Milton and Northumberland. One of the works of Dr. Joseph Priestly published in Northumberland is a very rare book which Mr. Neff has been fortunate enough to secure. Another item, an early edition of Poe, is so rare that the Library of Congress does not have an identical copy.

The exhibit of old parchment deeds contained several printed on parchment as well as those beautifully written. There were deeds signed by John Morton, signer of the Declaration of Independence, by Thomas Penn and John Penn, grandson and great grandson of William Penn. Among the local deeds there was an early Lewisburg deed signed by Ludwig Derr and also an old Selinsgrove deed in German script. The manuscripts included a letter from Henry Clay written to a young lady in Danville. There were in addition army commissions containing the signatures of James Madison, James Monroe and Abraham Lincoln.

Mr. Neff has presented to the Library a deed printed by the Brethren at Ephrata in 1763. On the occasion of the football banquet in November he gave to the Library an autograph album which had belonged to Oliver B. Leonard of the class of 1855 and which contained signatures of his classmates, of the faculty, and the college students of that day.

Mr. Neff's interest in old books is a part of his interest in history. He is a vice-president of the Northumberland County Historical Society. He has acted as chairman of the Committee on Publications and has presented papers before the Society which have been printed in the Proceedings. He has recently leased the old Priestly mansion in Northumberland and is making his residence there.

CAVING----

A New Hobby

By Charles E. Mohr, '30

News Item: Life magazine, issue of March 8, devoted four pages to Charlie Mohr's underground photography and caving-craft.

Personal Mention: Mohr teaches Biology at the Reading Senior High School, directs Summer classes at the Reading Museum, works for his Ph.D. at the University of Pennsylvania week-ends, spends his spare (?) time studying and photographing subterranean creatures.

We are proud to publish this article, written especially for Bucknellians, and this small collection of photographs from Author Mohr's album of cave-dwellers.

THERE isn't much adventure left in our modern, mechanized world. Most of us get ours vicariously in the cinema, but that sort of adventure is short-lived and unconvincing at best. I have found a real variety, an exciting, stirring activity which is accessible to anyone reasonably sound in health, and eager for physical effort in a new and different atmosphere.

I'm speaking of cave exploring, a hobby that is as engrossing as mountain climbing, yet one that could be practiced any week-end, close to home. Near-at-hand, if you live in the southern half of this state, is one or more of the hundred Pennsylvania caves.

If you have never been underground you would do well first to visit one of the dozen commercial caves where your path has been smoothed and your way lighted. But if it's excitement you crave, you'll soon want to explore an undeveloped cave. There's one in Dale's Hill, high over Buffalo Creek, a few miles from the Bucknell campus. Some of you have squirmed down its "chimney", to the ledge overlooking its single room, and then slid down the heavy rope to the bottom. You were well slathered with mud by the time you came out, but you had had an exciting experience.

That was one of my first bits of cave exploration. Since then I've climbed down ropes a hundred feet or more, and been in mud to my knees, and in cold water to my chin. I've dodged falling rocks and fought my way out of a swarming mass of bewildered bats.

"How did you get interested in caves?" people ask me, curiously, often ill-concealing their belief that there must be something a little queer about anyone who would willingly go crawling into caves. "Through my studies in natural history at Bucknell University", is the simplest reply. As a matter of fact The Bucknellian is responsible, for it was the desire to arrange some unusual entertainment for student journalists attending an Intercollegiate Newspaper Association convention that introduced me to caves. Deciding that a trip to Woodward Cave would be a novelty, I drove out to the cave, thirty miles west of Lewisburg, arranged for the trip, and viewed the cave myself. That was my first cave visit.

I don't recall being particularly thrilled by the experience, but when, a few months later, I read in a scientific monograph that a newly described species of bat had been collected in a Centre County cave, I naturally thought of Woodward Cave and decided to go look for some of the bats mentioned. I did, that very night, but not knowing one bat from another I gathered a few fistfulls at random and innocently stuck them into a knapsack which I deposited in the rumble seat of my car.

By the time I reached Lewisburg all but three of the bats had escaped, and these three soon died. I neglected to dispose of them, however, and eventually discovered that they had become mummified. In the meantime I learned that I had gone to the wrong cave, that these particular bats were in Penn's Cave, not Woodward.

That should have ended the whole matter. It happened, however, that I took the mummies along with me on a visit to the Reading Museum, and there Earl L. Poole, assistant director, recognized one of the three bats as being an exceedingly rare species, the least brown bat, Myotis subulatus leibii, of which only eight had found their way into museum collections in eighty years.

Learning something about the identification of different bats, I returned to Woodward with the expectation of finding more least bats. I looked in vain, so visited a hundred caves in search of them. The least bats could be found in none except within a small area in Centre and Mifflin Counties. There, during the last five winters, I've found more than 150 of these tiny bats. That's about ten times as many as have been found elsewhere although the bat ranges over most of the eastern states.

Other caves more distant and famous intrigued me so pre-vacation nights were spent studying maps and scientific reports on cave regions, assembling, collecting equipment, and loading extra cartridges of film. Using flashlight bulbs for illumination, I photographed the various colonies of bats which I found.

Ordinarily, taking a picture of a mass of hibernating bats presents no difficulties other than maneuvering into an advantageous position, focusing, and remembering to keep the camera shutter open while the flashbulb is being set off. That is all surprisingly simple when using a miniature camera such as my Leica. Probably the easiest picture to take was that of a colony of more than 14,000 bats in Marvel Cave, Missouri. To my knowledge, that is the largest aggregation ever photographed. My heart was in my throat, though, before I got a picture of the bats in Nickajack Cave, Tennessee. There the bats hibernate at the far side of a sixty-foot-wide stream of forty-degree-cold water. The row boat I was to use rested at the bottom of the stream, so there was nothing to do but pack the photographic equipment into a fishing basket, boost it to my shoulder, and wade in sans raiment. So cold was the water I scarcely realized that it was lapping at my chin.

Least brown bat, whose discovery in Woodward Cave led the photographer into a study of cave animals. Bats always hibernate with their heads hanging down.

The trip back seemed a little less chilling because I had discovered that the bats were the same kind that I had seen a dozen times in Penn's Cave, but a species which had never been known from so far south. There in Nickajack Cave the bats slept peacefully and so I left them. I should have done the same in Indian Cave, Tennessee, where I came upon a colony of 2,000 bats in a room the size of a two-car garage. Instead of photographing them I started to collect a bagful of the bats. In an instant they were swarming down from the walls and ceiling. "Attacked by two thousand bats", a newspaper writer described my predicament. Actually the bats were merely trying to escape through the tunnel. I just happened to be in their way. The panicky bats flew against me and climbed all over me but soon crowded their way outside. I had enough of bats for awhile.

Salamanders, "spring lizards" to most persons, have always interested me. While many kinds are common enough they are usually nocturnal, and since they are always wet and slippery, they are elusive. Several strikingly colored salamanders are cave dwellers, and a blind species inhabits a few of the Ozark Mountain Caves. I collected and photographed the blind salamander but only after a long, arduous crawl through a remote section of Marvel Cave. In a nearby cavern I saw my first blind white crayfish, a truly beautiful creature. I gasped with astonishment as the flashlight beam revealed it in the depth of a quiet pool.

Centuries of disuse have taken sight from these crayfish and salamanders, and from the blind fish too. Increased sensitivity to sound and tactile stimuli compensates for the loss. The blind fish I saw first a mile inside Hidden River Cave, Kentucky.

Photographing these blind but sensitive creatures is often difficult. Occasionally, as with the fish and crayfish, the specimens are brought out of the cave and photographed in an aquarium. There is greater satisfaction in photographing cave dwellers in their natural haunts, however, so often an endurance contest is waged between a salamander, intent on escape, and the photographer, determined to get a picture. The temperamental subject is herded back into the photographic field time and again until in a moment of exhaustion it "freezes" long enough for a picture to be taken.

None of these blind fish, crayfish, or salamanders have been found in any Pennsylvania cave, nor have some of the more southern cave bats, nor any blind cave beetles. Indeed, there is much to look for in the caves of this state.

The very existence of some caves may be unknown or unreported to scientists. Many doubtless lie close to the surface waiting only for quarrying or road building operations to open them. Some may contain fossils of genuine scientific importance. The last wood bison, for instance, were killed a few miles from Lewisburg, 125 years ago. There is not a specimen in existence, yet some may have fallen into central Pennsylvania caves and may lie buried there.

Discovery and adventure, can be found, science and recreation can be served, within an hour's ride of the Bucknell campus, in caves. Go see for yourself.

LOCAL NOTE

FOLK FESTIVAL

At least six regional folk festivals designed to uncover a comprehensive cross-section of Pennsylvania's rich folklore for presentation this summer at the state-wide Folk Festival on the Bucknell campus will be held during the next three months. In addition, arrangements for several other preliminary exhibitions are pending. George Korson, director of Bucknell's project to preserve Pennsylvania's legacy of folklore, said. The finest performers from the regional events will be invited to come to the Memorial Stadium July 30 and 31 for the Pennsylvania Folk Festival.

The first preliminary demonstration will be held the latter part of April, when the lore of the southern anthracite district will be presented under the sponsorship of the Zerbe Newspapers of Pottsville. This initial competition will serve as an elimination tourney of traditional minstrelsy for an all-anthracite festival to be held May 12 in Wilkes-Barre. The Playground and Recreation Association of the Wyoming Valley is backing this festival.

Two new strata of the state's folklore will be explored this year in preparation for the composite picture to be offered in the Memorial Stadium. North Tier and Bituminous Region festivals are the additions made to last year's program. The North Tier festival, to be held May 3 in the Canton High School gymnasium, will recall the deeds, songs, and tall stories of the lumbermen who once labored in the stands of virgin timber covering northern Pennsylvania's mountains. This is a vein of folklore untouched last year. The Beethoven Music Club of Canton is taking the initiative in assembling the material for this fete. The Bituminous Region festival, celebrating the folklore of central and Western Pennsylvania's soft coal miners, is scheduled for May 21 in the Clearfield High School auditorium under the auspices of the Commercial Club of Clearfield.

Other regional festivals for which plans have already been completed include one for the Pennsylvania-German region, to be held in Allentown late in June under the sponsorship of the Allentown Recreation Commission and another for western Pennsylvania, scheduled for Schenley Park, Pittsburgh, July 3. The Bureau of Parks and the Bureau of Recreation of the city of Pittsburgh will cooperate in the presentation of the western Pennsylvania festival. Negotiations are now under way for the planning of several other regional festivals, including exhibitions in central Pennsylvania and the oil region.

Alumni and trustees throughout Pennsylvania are aiding the University in its preparations for the second Pennsylvania Folk Festival to be conducted by Bucknell. In the preliminary festivals this year heavy stress will be laid upon the compiling and presentation of occupational folklore, the branch in which Pennsylvania is most wealthy. Folk songs and customs which sprang from the lumbering, mining, rafting, and oil industries will be featured, Mr. Korson explained.

FACULTY BRIEFS

Dr. T. Ernest Newland, Assistant Professor of Education, was re-elected vice-president of the American College Personnel Association at the annual meeting of the organization held recently in New Orleans. He is also chairman of the records and research division of that organization. During the coming year Dr. Newland will be a member of a subcommittee appointed to cooperate in making an evaluation of the National Youth Administration and its activities. Dr. J. Hillis Miller, former dean of students at Bucknell and now president of Keuka College, was chairman of the program committee at the sessions.

Dr. William C. Bartol, known to all living Bucknellians, is engaged busily every day at his work as Historian of Bucknell, to which position he was appointed by the Board of Trustees in 1935. Dr. Bartol is assembling a great deal of useful historical material in anticipation of "A History of Bucknell" to be published in connection with the Centenary to be observed in 1946. Dr. Bartol has completed two pieces of work in connection with this service, one a hundred page hand written book which he has entitled "An Index to Bucknell Publications Preparatory to the Centenary History of the University". In this index, Dr. Bartol has listed all the catalogues, books, and college publications by students, alumni and administration, copies of which are in his collection. Dr. Bartol has a copy of nearly every piece of printed matter ever published at Bucknell. In his Index, Dr. Bartol cites over two thousand events of interest in Bucknell's history and indicates where the account of each may be found. Dr. Bartol has also completed a hundred page hand written account of his memoirs of Bucknell from the earliest days when, as a boy, he was attracted here to college. These memoirs will be published in future issues of the Alumni Monthly.

George Korson, Director of the Pennsylvania Folk Festival recently addressed the Women's Club of Wyncote, Pa. Mr. Korson outlined the major sources of native Pennsylvania folklore and made the point that Bucknell's folklore program was laying the groundwork for a literary revival in Pennsylvania. Bucknellian members of the club who heard Mr. Korson were Mrs. Charlemagne T. Wolfe, Secretary, and Mrs. Joseph W. Henderson of Chestnut Hill.

Dr. Robert L. Sutherland, after a semester's absence, has resumed his post as Professor of Sociology. During his leave, Dr. Sutherland participated in an experimental project in adult education which was carried on by the United States Office of Education. He was director of the Social Science division of the program which was presented at Portland, Oregon, and was assisted by four other prominent educators in presenting a series of Public Affairs Forums in the western coast city.

Dr. Paul Stolz, director of the Music School, was elected to the presidency of the Susquehanna Valley Music Club at a dinner meeting of that organization held in Sunbury.

Professor Cyrus H. Karraker of the European History Department has accepted an invitation to serve as visiting lecturer in European diplomatic history during the George Washington University Summer Session this year.

MARY WILSON SIMPSON

Mrs. Mary Wilson Simpson, wife of Professor Frank M. Simpson, died at her home on South Fourth Street, Lewisburg, Pa., Friday morning, February 12, 1937, after a prolonged illness.

Mrs. Simpson was born at Dover, Minn., March 19, 1873, the daughter of Thomas and Mary Geddes Wilson. In 1892, she came to Lewisburg with her parents, who were both natives of this place, their ancestors having settled in this community early in the history of Pennsylvania.

She entered Bucknell Institute and was graduated with the class of 1895, receiving the Senior Prize for scholastic excellence. She entered Bucknell University in the fall of 1895 as a special student and in 1896, matriculated in the University of Michigan where she studied during the years 1896 and 1897, withdrawing on account of her health. She was an active member of the Pi Beta Phi social sorority both at Bucknell and Ann Arbor.

On June 25, 1903, she became the wife of Professor Frank M. Simpson, who, at the time, was the instructor in science in the Bucknell Academy and instructor in mechanical drawing and physics in the University.

Mrs. Simpson was always very active in civic affairs. She was an active worker in the Lewisburg Civic Club and the various Parent-Teachers Associations. She was also active in the W. C. T. U. and was the president of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Beaver Memorial M. E. Church for many years. She was a tireless worker for her church. She was a member of the Shikellimo Chapter of the D.A.R. acting as their Regent in 1914-1915.

Of the various College organizations, she was at one time, President of the Bucknell General Alumnae Association and of the local club of this organization. She was a charter member of the Campus Club.

Surviving Mrs. Simpson besides her husband are the following children: Geddes W. Simpson, '29, of the staff of the Agricultural Experiment Station, University of Maine at Orono, Me.; James R. Simpson, '31, of the Manufacturers Trust Company, New York City; and Helen E. Simpson, a student at Wilson College, Chambersburg, Pa. One brother, Mr. Thomas S. Wilson of St. Charles, Minn., survives her.

Funeral services were held at two o'clock on Monday afternoon, February 15, 1937 at her home on South Fourth Street. The Reverend W. L. Crowding, of the Beaver Memorial M. E. Church officiated at these services, with President Emeritus Emory W. Hunt assisting. The interment was at the Lewisburg cemetery.

BENJAMIN K. FOCHT

While all business affairs in Lewisburg were suspended temporarily, more than 1,000 persons paid last tribute to the memory of the late Congressman Benjamin Kurtz Focht who died suddenly of a heart attack in Washington April third. Legislative dignitaries, prominent Republican leaders, and hundreds of friends from the eighteenth Congressional district which he served for such a length of time as Representative in Congress, crowded the facilities of the Lutheran Church, while hundreds of others lined the streets from the church to the Lewisburg cemetery where the late legislator's remains were interred.

The following tribute is quoted from an editorial which appeared in the Bucknellian:

"In the passing of Benjamin K. Focht, congressman from this district and for 55 years publisher of the Lewisburg 'Saturday News', Bucknell has lost an old and valued friend.

"Mr. Focht was intimately associated with affairs of the University for nearly two-thirds of its 91-year history. The legislator-publisher's connection with Bucknell extended even farther back, because Mr. Focht was a descendant of John Brown, who sold the college the 78 acres which formed the original campus.

"Mr. Focht himself attended Bucknell Academy before establishing the 'Saturday News'. His three children, one brother, one sister, and other more distant relatives were all graduates of the University. Therefore, Mr. Focht's death will be felt as a deep personal loss by students and faculty alike".

MENTAL HYGIENE

Three Bucknell alumni, nationally known in the field of mental hygiene and psychiatry, have been appointed a Committee to make recommendations to the Bucknell faculty regarding the possible appointment of a trained mental hygienist on the college staff. These men are Dr. George S. Stevenson, '15, Dr. Stanley P. Davies, '12, and Dr. Edward J. Humphries, '26, all of New York City. During the past few years a few colleges have experimented with the plan of having a skilled psychiatrist on their faculty for the purpose of conferring with individual students and helping them to release those mental capacities that often remain dormant. Considerable success has been attained by these experiments in certain colleges and the Counseling Committee of the Bucknell faculty are interested in adopting the plan here. Dr. Stevenson, the Chairman of the new Committee is now Director of the Community Councils of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene. Dr. Davies is Executive Secretary of the Charity Organization Society of New York, and Dr. Humphries is Director of Research of Letchworth Village in New York. These three alumni, close friends, have a wide reputation throughout the country for their scientific and practical achievements in this modern movement for emotional and mental health.

NEW TRUSTEES

Biographical Note: Charles B. Franks is manager of the Yough Valley Lumber Co. in Connellsville, Pa., and comes to the Bucknell Board after serving for twenty years on the Board of Trustees of the Mt. Pleasant Academy. Mr. Franks commented as follows upon his election to the Board of Trustees of Bucknell: "I want to express my appreciation of the distinctive honor of being elected a member of the Board of Trustees of Bucknell University, and am looking forward to a happy and friendly business association with the great and noble men of this board. I bring greetings from my old Alma Mater, the Western Pennsylvania Classical and Scientific Institute of Mt. Pleasant in memory of its builder, Dr. Leroy Stephens. He came, he saw, he conquered!" Mr. Franks has long been active in the Baptist Church and has served on the Board of Trustees of the Connellsville church for sixteen years, being chairman of the board for the last three years.

William I. King is an alumnus of the Mt. Pleasant Institute of the class of 1897 and entered Bucknell in September, 1897 with the class of 1901. He served on the Board of Trustees of the Mt. Pleasant Institute for some years, during the last five of which he was Secretary of the Board and also Treasurer of the Endowment Fund. He was nominated as a Trustee of Bucknell by the Pittsburgh Baptist Association, pursuant to provisions of the agreement of the merger of Mt. Pleasant with Bucknell. Mr. King's home is near Pittsburgh, at Rosslyn Farms. He practices law in the Frick Building, Pittsburgh.

LODGE SITE

Announcement was recently made of the purchase of a twenty-eight acre plot of ground at Cowan to be used as the site for a rustic lodge to be erected by the Bucknell Christian Association. Purchase of the woodland site, long known as the A. K. Dieffenfer property, marks the end of a two-year search for a suitable location for a lodge to be used by students and faculty members for informal gatherings planned to promote student-faculty relationships. The site is located about seven miles from the campus on the western extremity of Buffalo Township on Buffalo Creek.

CURRICULUM REVISION

A comprehensive reorganization of the engineering curricula, designed to put more emphasis upon mastery of the principles of engineering and less upon specialization, has been announced.

Under the new plan, which will go into effect next September, as a result of study of modern developments in engineering education by the faculty, more emphasis will be placed on theory and on analytical courses in order that engineers may be better fitted to master complicated problems as they arise.

The new curricular set-up will permit the student to postpone definite selection of the engineering field he wishes to enter until he has studied the fundamentals of all the engineering departments. To achieve this purpose a common freshman curriculum has been established for all engineers. Electrical and mechanical engineers will take virtually identical work during their sophomore year and throughout most of their junior year.

Throughout all engineering fields the emphasis will be on basic subjects which will facilitate the changing of courses for students who find it advantageous to make curricular adjustments.

This change adds the engineering departments to the Bucknell Plan, designed to provide broad general education during the first two years of college with professional specialization reserved largely for the junior and senior years.

CHAPEL SERIES

The lack of correlation between our educational system and the demands of the business world were stressed by Dr. Homer P. Rainey, former President of Bucknell and present Director of the National Youth Administration, in the final talk of the "Personalities and Careers" chapel series. Dr. Rainey enjoyed his homecoming as completely as did his old friends on the campus, many of whom were able to join him for luncheon at the Women's College

Dining Room. Dr. Rainey was preceded in this series by two other Bucknellians and a noted Geologist. Dr. Edward J. Humphreys, '26, Director of Research at Letchworth Village, discussed the "Emotional Adjustment of Personalities". Dr. Mary Belle Harris, '94, author of the national best seller, "I Knew Them in Prison" followed Dr. Humphreys and told of her work as Director of the Federal Institution for Women at Alderson, West Virginia. A number of Lewisburgers who knew Dr. Harris as a girl and remembered her father, Dr. John Howard Harris when he was President of Bucknell, attended the chapel exercises.

"No man or woman is truly happy until he can find a cause outside of himself into which he can throw his energies", President Marts told the undergraduates as he opened the new series of weekly convocations on 'Great Causes Challenging Youth of Today'. The first out-of-town speaker on this series was G. M. Lowden, special agent for Pennsylvania of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who discussed the government's war on crime. Other speakers will include: William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor; Stanley P. Davies, '12, President of the American Association of Social Workers; Dr. George F. Stevenson, '15, Director of Community Service of the National Committee on Mental Hygiene; Walter Van Kirk, General Secretary of the United Peace Societies; and Robert Johnson, Vice-President of Time, Inc.

CLUB CALENDAR

WASHINGTON

By Mrs. Margaret Weddell Brandon, '16

January 14. Washington Alumni held their second meeting of the school year at the club house of the American Association of University Women. Thirty members, with husbands and wives, enjoyed an excellent dinner and several informal after-dinner talks which informed them of current interests on the campus. Dr. Rainey, always an honor guest of the Washington meetings, spoke of the college from the trustees' standpoint; Prof. Harry Warfel, '20, a member of the Executive Committee of the Friends of the Bucknell Library, told of the plans of that recently-organized group; Calvin Oberdorf, '07, a member of the Visiting Committee on Engineering, explained what that advisory group hopes to accomplish; and Arthur Brandon, '27, told of Bucknell's athletic program and the highlights of the past football season.

There followed several spontaneous reminiscences from various grads which proved most entertaining; among them being "Mickey" Sheehan's early baseball exploits, and Hubbard Ruoff's more recent ones; and Lawrence Manley's recollections of his first arrival in Lewisburg. William Leshner, '11 told of how it feels to be a Bucknell parent, and Mrs. Rainey spoke of the happy days she had spent in Lewisburg.

A committee of recent graduates, headed by Mrs. Louise Manley Kreuger, '32, was appointed to plan for a buffet supper for the next regular meeting of the club. Dr. Joseph Shearer, '13, presided.

HARRISBURG

By Allen A. Rarig, '29

March 3. At a dinner meeting held in the University Club the following officers of the Harrisburg Alumni Club were elected for the coming year: President, Allen A. Rarig, '29; Vice-President, Allen F. Jones, '25; Secretary, Mrs. Janet Blair Bogar, '33; Treasurer, Nolan F. Ziegler, '32. Two regular meetings of the local club are held each month. On the second Wednesday of the month we meet for luncheon at 12:10 P.M. and on the fourth Wednesday for dinner at 6:15 P.M. As in the past all these meetings are held at the University Club, 7 North Front Street, Harrisburg, Penna.

BALTIMORE

By Eleanor L. Buchholz, '31

March 8. Preliminary arrangements to organize a Bucknell Alumni Club in Baltimore were made at the first meeting held at Lord Baltimore Hotel. There were sixteen present, including Mr. Marts and Mr. Havard Griffith, '07, who told us of the progress of the Old Main Campaign, and Charlie Morris, '31, who showed us moving pictures of the life at Bucknell. Others present were: A. Edgar Sable, '11, Mary G. Sanders, '26, Bromley Smith, '95, Ralph L. Thomas, '08, David J. Evans, '32, Mrs. Anna Kieffer Hay, '83, Mrs. Dorothy Bunnell Schnure, '16, George W. Horoschak, '35, Raymond A. Kanyuck, '36, and a few others. There are approximately thirty Bucknellians in and around Baltimore and we sincerely hope to include each one of them as well as the twenty other Bucknellians in other parts of Maryland as active members of our club.

The following officers were elected: President, J. Fred Moore, '22; Vice-President, Harry Angel, '19; Secretary-Treasurer, Eleanor Buchholz, '31.

WASHINGTON

By Mrs. Margaret Weddell Brandon, '16

March 9. Fifty Washingtonians gathered for dinner at the Hotel Roosevelt to greet Mr. Marts, Mr. Griffith, and Mr. Morris at the final "Old Main Campaign" affair of the year. Among the honor guests, besides those from out-of-town, were: Senator James J. Davis, Hon. LL.D., '24; Dr. and Mrs. Homer P. Rainey; Mrs. Florence Lombard, who has a son at Bucknell; and Mrs. Laura B. Riddell of the Institute class of '75.

Everyone present was glad to greet the Acting President of Bucknell and to hear his report on the present state of the college and of the campaign for the financing of Old Main. Mr. William Leshner, '11, area manager, presided as toastmaster and before the address of the evening introduced Senator Davis and Dr. Rainey to the group. Later, Mr. Havard Griffith, '07, campaign manager, told of similar meetings which had been held in various sections of the country where alumni had responded cordially to the opportunity for having a part in the rebuilding of Main College. Mr. Leshner announced the appointment of the following committee to aid him in the Washington area: Lawrence Manley, '07; A. M. Sherwood, '10; Linn Drake, '06; and Arthur Brandon, '27.

After viewing the campus moving pictures shown by the Alumni Secretary, the crowd dispersed, with many of those present wishing they could lie immediately to Lewisburg to see the scenes in reality.

The Washington Club is fortunate in having some twenty recent graduates in the city, either working or studying, and six or seven former faculty or administration members whose interest in present campus affairs is keen. Add to this the continuing loyalty of such earlier graduates as Linn Drake, '06, William Leshner, '11, Calvin Oberdorf, '07, Lawrence Manley, '07, A. M. Sherwood, '10, James Sheehan, '08, Norman Whited, '14, H. L. Rosenberger, '18, and Joseph Shearer, '13, and we have a fine nucleus for an alert alumni group. There are altogether 96 Bucknellians in the Washington area.

PITTSBURGH

By Samuel J. Leezer, '31

March 19. President Marts was the principal speaker at our Big Party held at the University Club. The occasion which was in the form of a dinner dance, was in honor of Trustees William I. King and Charles B. Franks, recently elected to the Board from this district. There were about ninety Bucknellians present to welcome the guests of honor. Roy G. Bostwick, '05, who acted as Toastmaster, was introduced by our President, John R. Criswell, '14. In addition to the toastmaster and honored guests, the Trustees of Western Pennsylvania were represented by John T. Shirley, '09 and Earl A. Morton, '05.

We were highly honored by the attendance of two of our perennially young "oldster" alumni, Dr. Spenser B. Meeser, '83 and Carl C. Law, '85, but were sorry not to have Edwin P. Griffiths, '04 with us. Mrs. Griffiths died the morning of the day of our party. Would that we could extend more comfort to him than our very great sympathy.

NEW YORK

By Al G. Stoughton, '24

April 13. The regular schedule of second Tuesday luncheons at the Planters Restaurant of the New York Alumni Club was temporarily suspended (for the month of April only) in order to "give a break" to the mid-town crowd. The special meeting, held on April 13 at 12:15 P.M. at the Roger Smith Restaurant was to acquaint alumni with the scene of the big New York dinner dance party on April 30. With emphasis upon an "open door" policy, The Bucknell Alumni Club of New York has arranged this dinner dance of April 30 to which invitations have been mailed to all alumni and friends of the University in the metropolitan area. The party will be staged at the Roger Smith Restaurant, 40 East 41st Street, between Madison and Park Avenues. The entire establishment has been reserved for the party. The committee is urging all Bucknellians to bring their friends to this first social gathering of sons and daughters of Alma Mater this winter in New York.

Many prominent speakers of national reputation who have appeared on the campus in recent years will be invited to the affair as special guests. President Marts will be present and W. C. Lowther, '14, Club President, will preside. Two speakers from the campus, Professor M. L. Drum, '02, and C. Willard Smith, have been invited to speak briefly of campus affairs.

The committee in charge of arrangements includes E. A. Snyder, '11, Oscar Wolfe, '12, H. N. Derr, '21, and Al G. Stoughton, '24. A list of prominent New York alumni will serve as a sponsoring committee and a special committee of graduates of recent years will enlist the younger alumni and their friends in order to make the affair an all inclusive function. The price of the entire evening including both dinner and dancing has been kept to a minimum of $1.50 per person. An attendance of more than two hundred is expected.

LEWISBURG

An illustrated lecture on "Better Homes and Gardens" was presented.

The February meeting was our Guest Night and the living room was well filled. Under the able direction of Mrs. Margaret Stoughton Myers, '05, two little plays were presented. Mrs. Martha Wolfe Kalp, '05 and Miss Thelma Showalter, '29 took the parts in "A Midnight Fantasy". Mrs. Sara Deck Crossgrove, '28, Mrs. Elizabeth Bates Hoffman, '94, Mrs. Helyn Kerstetter Bechtel, '23, and Miss Carrie D. Foresman, '16 gave "Off The Old Block". He was active in his various charges for a period of over 42 years, retiring from active service at the age of 70. During his active pastorates, Dr. Street was very active in the affairs of the Baptist Church. He is survived by a daughter and two sons, one of whom is George T. Street, Jr., '10. Just before his death Rev. Street had communicated with the two surviving members of his class for the purpose of bringing them together for their 60th anniversary.

Dear Classmates:

In 1932 only "Pat" and "Deacon" were present at the class fest of '92. We went over the campus and reviewed the events that occurred during our class history. We went into the dormitories, and visualized each one of you in your accustomed places for study and fraternizing. We missed you. Then Old Main----- She is rising from her ashes. We want to come back to see what Bucknell cooperation and push has done. We want to see the new rooms and compare them with ours; to see and feel the influence of that wizard of college finance and management, Dr. Marts; we want to reverse the 2 and be '29; we want to give the old yell and compare its effect with the new; we want to see some of the girls again; we want to play two games of football to make "Andy's" even 100th.

Yours fraternally,

"Andy's" right guard, "Deac".

Rev. George A. Waid, retired Baptist minister of Marshall, Mich., died at his home April 7th. Death followed Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Charlie:

I have one suggestion to offer.

It seems to me that the method used of having class reunions can be very profitably changed. As I understand the system now a reunion is held each year of four or five classes, those classes chosen because of the last digit in their year number being the same as, for instance, '91, '01, '11, '21, '31, a method which brings on the campus alumni groups between which there is nothing in common except that they are all from Bucknell.

Would it not be better to have a reunion of several classes that graduated during four or five consecutive years so as to provide a large group who would thus be able to meet again those alumni who attended Bucknell at the same time? In other words if the reunion would be of the classes of '10, '11, '12, '13, '14, that would be more than one college generation and an alumnus would meet those whom he knew when in college but were not necessarily of the same class.

In the best interest of Bucknell,
I am,

Very sincerely yours,
George C. Johnson, '36.

a stroke of paralysis suffered a few days previously. While at Bucknell as an undergraduate Mr. Waid organized the first chess club ever established on the campus and was its first president. Later he attended the Crozer Theological Seminary and the University of Chicago Divinity School. The Rev. Waid and his family came to Marshall in 1924 when he assumed the pastorate of the First Baptist Church and continued there until his retirement in 1930. For the past twenty-six years he had served as Recording Secretary of the Michigan Baptist convention and wrote the Centennial History of that body, which was published in 1936.

To the Members of the Class of Ninety-Seven of the College, the Institute and School of Music.

Loyal Bucknellians:

This coming Commencement will be the 40th anniversary of our graduation. It will also be a time of reunion. Forty years is a long time ago and tremendous things have happened and immense changes have come to us all during these years.

It is timely for us to "renne" (excuse the word — it is not in the dictionary) again this year along with many other classes. It is timely because it is a year of marked achievements in the affairs of our beloved Alma Mater. We should help by our presence on the campus to make the Commencement season this year exceptionally enthusiastic and significant.

I am addressing this call to those who belong to the class of ninety-seven of the Institute and School of Music, although not members of the class of ninety-seven of the college. Your presence will enrich our fellowship and heighten the occasion of our reunion very greatly.

Besides we shall welcome members of families, husbands, wives, sons and daughters, to our reunion gathering.

So let plans be set a-going and preparations made by us all to reunite our minds, hearts and spirits in happy fellowship on June 5. A summons will go to each one of our ninety-seven group by mail in the near future. We shall hope for a large response.

In behalf of all concerned,

Edward C. Kunkle

"Will you please tell me what my balance is? I'm Bina Carr".

"That's interesting", observed the teller politely, "And what is the name"?

"I'm Bina Carr", repeated the lady from the Community Fund.

"Yes, so you told me", said the teller patiently. "But what is your name"?

"I'm Bina Carr", she said a bit ruffled.

The teller was tolerant and inclined to humor her. "New or second hand"?

"We've been told she doesn't bank there any more."

1907 Ahoy!

Know ye, all good and faithful members of the ever great and glorious Class of 1907 that this June we are to celebrate The Best Thirtieth Reunion ever held on the Bucknell campus. Anyone who stays away does so at his own risk and to his eternal sorrow. Mary Stanton Speicher and Bill Raker are sounding the pibroch for the gathering of the Clan; their efforts have already caused earthquakes on the Pacific Coast, and they'll do worse than that to any shirkers who neglect the clarion call.

From Alaska to Arizona, from Connecticut to California the gang will gather, with children, grandchildren, and other descendants. Fail not the hour of the summons nor the place of the gathering. Bring claymores, bagpipes, timbrels, and saxophones, kilties and kiddiecars, or what have you to start a riot with?

Let not Oklahoma be missing, nor Chicago be unrepresented. We'll steal the bell from the college clock (after all, who has a better right to it?) and parade down Market Street with it as of yore. Grandmothers will be allowed to ride; all others must trudge.

Remember the tall tales at our Twenty-fifth? They'll be taller this time, with whiskers! Be thar!

Done by authority of the Alumni Secretary, this first day of April.

Stanley H. Rolfe, Acting Superintendent of Newark School System, since November, was appointed Superintendent by unanimous vote of the City Board of Education at a special meeting February 9th. In commenting upon the appointment the President of the Board said, "To select a superintendent with the ability, understanding and energy to continue the progressive policies instituted by Mr. Logan and to keep Newark abreast of modern educational procedure was no easy task". The Newark News in an editorial recognized in Mr. Rolfe the combination of "an inspiring educator and a capable administrator in a single person."

Born in Nanticoke, Pa., Mr. Rolfe has been associated with the Newark school system since 1912. He began as an elementary day school teacher. He had been an assistant superintendent since April, 1929 and in January, 1936 was named Deputy Superintendent. Mr. Rolfe's daughter Jeanne is a member of the class of 1940; another daughter, Doris, was graduated from Bucknell in 1934.

Emil Hurja, statistical wizard of the Democratic National Committee, owes his life to a Bucknellian — Allan G. Ritter, and to his ardor as a Kappa Sig. Hurja was in Los Angeles, had purchased a ticket on the plane, which crashed in San Francisco Bay in February when he met Ritter, a high officer in the Kappa Sigma fraternity. Ritter persuaded brother Hurja to stay over, take the night train to San Francisco, which he did. That evening all passengers in the plane were drowned.

Clipped from the "Personalities at the Capitol" column of a Harrisburg newspaper:

"Senator Charles R. Mallery, chairman of the Local Government Commission, which has just given a notable report to the General Assembly, has two qualities which commend him especially. One comes from location; the other from training. Senator Mallery is a mountain man. He was born and bred and has lived in Altoona which is up on the top of the Alleghenies and therefore he is inclined to take the broad view of things. In his service in the World War he was an officer of artillery. And he is known as a straight shooter.

"Both of these qualities showed in his work on the Commission, which had a wide field and a call for something constructive and straightforward. He was the sponsor of the resolution creating this body and gave much thought and effort to its numerous hearings and consultations, holding to the idea that the object was to pave the way to cut down costs and save taxpayers money."

To the Class of 1912:

From the interest already manifested by many members, it is certain that the Class of 1912 will have a large, enthusiastic and enjoyable reunion. A self-appointed committee is working; it will have interesting data to submit and will have plans made for a fitting celebration. You will be sure to meet many of your old cronies and we urge you to write to your closer friends, and tell them that you will be there and that you want to see them and their families. Direct communication will advise you of developments and of the particular plans arranged.

A beautiful new all-year trophy has just been presented to the intramural council by Dr. Edward W. Pangburn. This is the second such trophy which

Dr. Pangburn has contributed to interfraternity athletics. In order to gain permanent possession of this award, a fraternity must amass the greatest number of points in intramural sports for five years. The present trophy bears the inscription "The Edward W. Pangburn Bucknell Intramural Trophy".

This was the tenth season for Coach Carl E. Geiger as head coach of Peddie basketball. Strangely enough, he was never a varsity basketball man while at Bucknell. Coach Geiger came to Peddie in 1919 and developed a friendship with John D. Plant, then Director of Athletics at Peddie and since 1926 Director of Athletics at Bucknell. In addition to his duties as Director of Athletics, John Plant coached basketball and track, having started the former sport at Peddie. Before long, Plant had drafted Carl Geiger as his assistant in basketball and from this experience Peddie's present coach gathered enough experience to be able to take over the head coaching job at Peddie a year after Plant had gone to Bucknell. This is his first undefeated season. One of his former team members is Larry Kelley, who is now on the Yale squad and will return to Peddie next year as a master. Jack Filer at Bucknell and Bill Thompson at Syracuse have also been first string men for Geiger. In addition to his coaching duties, Mr. Geiger teaches English and prior to 1927 was faculty adviser of the Peddie News. He may be reached during the summer at Camp Kanuka, Lake Clear Junction, N. Y.

Dear Charlie:

The years have rolled by and here we are on the eve of the thirtieth anniversary of our class, the class of 1907. It seems almost incredible. But years have no significance, somehow, for memory enshrines unforgetably the old days, and we are young again when we think of old Bucknell. The Old Hill is still there and other boys and girls climb up it to attend classes and dream their dreams. I have been back only once in the thirty years, to give a lecture, and there were too many ghosts around for me to enjoy the experience. But I am coming back for the thirtieth, cancelling all appointments in my busy life, and I hope to recapture some of those dreams. College days are epic and eternal. Then we were what we hoped to be. The magic was yet potent. After years may have disillusioned us, and the ideal may have proved elusive, but we still attach to Old Bucknell the hopes we once had, and the Hill is still our holy place. No man or woman who has once been a Bucknellian can ever be satisfied with the mean and the second best. So we hail our Alma Mater as the source of our best inspirations. No one has yet fully realized how steady and potent our old college memories really are. Long live Bucknell!

Fraternally yours,
Charles Francis Potter, '07.

One of football's sensation of yesterday was recalled in Havey Boyle's column in the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette. It concerns Dean Sturgis, a prominent Uniontown attorney, who was a star on the Bucknell eleven, and catcher for the Philadelphia Athletics. The article follows:

"There was a pretty good country kicker among the spectators at the Pitt-Notre Dame game. Dean Sturgis now president of the Fayette County Bar Association, probably, as he watched the football game, recalled that day back in 1913 when Pitt was not quite so good as it was last Saturday against Notre Dame. Dean Sturgis was then with Bucknell, and Bucknell got away with a 9 to 0 victory because Sturgis booted no fewer than three field goals over the bar".

Dear Classmates:

Again the wheel has turned and our number has come up. There are probably many in the class of 1917, who, like myself, have never been back at Commencement time. Something always turns up to prevent. Ours was the class that had many absentees from its own Commencement exercises, because of the World War, who received their diplomas from Prexy by proxy.

From all that I hear they are preparing a rousing welcome for us at Bucknell. Nineteen Seventeen always accomplished things at school when they wanted to badly enough. Let's do it once more and make this our 20th reunion the best yet.

Sincerely,

C. C. Gillette

All Twenty-Two-ers:

Hardly seems like fifteen years, but that is what my watch says. Then, on the other hand, it seems like a century since we have seen each other. So, I trust that every one of you, wherever you are, will be planning to be back for Commencement. This is our year again. The tenth reunion was a dandy with thirty-three present, but we can make this one better if YOU will help.

By the time this reaches you the committee members will have been notified, and the promotion gotten under way. Save your pennies. Dust off the old machine, or get a new one. Bring the family with you. And we shall have a great get-together for the sake of old Bucknell. If any of you have any suggestions, drop me a line and they will be passed on to the reunion committee

Yours for a great reunion,

Digested from the Santa Fe New Mexican:

"New and important facts concerning the Rocky Mountain tent-caterpillar have been uncovered by Norman Appleton, parasitologist in charge of the WPA research laboratory here. Although this pest has probably done a great deal more damage to soil and timber than its eastern cousin, very little was known about it prior to the establishment of the Santa Fe laboratory. Before the laboratory started investigating, only five kinds of parasites were known to attack this pest. Appleton has raised the number to 18, several of which are secondary and therefore noxious. Some of these extremely beneficial insects have never been seen before so that Appleton will have to describe and name these for the benefit of other entomologists. Scientifically accurate drawings will also have to be made, a task for which he is admirably suited, and many unique photographs of parasites in action have been secured.

"The work of the laboratory has already attracted the attention of the Canadian government where scientists are much interested in Appleton's findings. They hope that efficient parasites may be found which may be taught to acquire a taste for their brand of caterpillar which has caused a great deal of damage in the prairie provinces this year".

Warfel, '20, in reviewing this production, commented upon Johnnie's performance as follows: "John Forsht returned to Bucknell to score a triumph in the title role of "Hamlet", a part made the most difficult, probably, of any in the English theater, by reason of its immortal greatness and the many famous players' names associated with it. Yet so wholly satisfying was his interpretation, so precise was his enunciation, so well modulated were his alternations from moody doubt to passionate eagerness in action, that Bucknellians will always count his performance among the memorable ones of their experience".

COMMENCEMENT, JUNE, 1937

DEAR BUCKNELLIANs:

This has been a year of remarkable progress in the history of Bucknell. Under the able leadership of President Marts, the Old Main Drive for $375,000.00 has been completed, a new home for the Junior College obtained, two alumni movements, known as the Friends of the Library and the Visiting Committee on Engineering, organized, a lodge site for the Christian Association purchased, an Industrial Placement Bureau established, and a campaign for a new gymnasium started with a gift of $53,000.00

This Commencement should be, to all Alumni, the greatest since graduation. Old Main, the College Home for many of us, will be practically restored. Ivy, tradition, the echo of lost footfalls — have been retained in its restoration. You can show your appreciation to President Marts, the Board of Trustees, and all who helped to make this possible, by coming back to Commencement.

On Saturday noon, June 5, we will have a joint luncheon with the Alumnae Association. This is their traditional banquet but they have very generously invited us to attend. Class reunions will be held before and after the luncheon.

Come back and get in tune with a new Bucknell.

Yours sincerely,

President, General Alumni Association.

DEAR ALUMNAE:

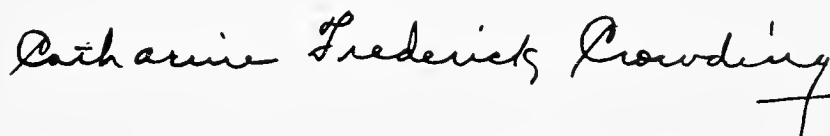

Spring has come again, and Springtime and oak trees bring memories of Bucknell. The Campus is just as beautiful as it was when first you came to your Alma Mater.

Springtime at Bucknell means Commencement, and Commencement means meeting old and new friends. We are all looking forward to meeting once again at the "Sem."

The early days when women were seen and not heard have passed, and although we, as Alumnae, do have our individual Association, we are individual only as a convenience for handling purely Alumnae affairs. The annual business meeting of the General Alumnae at 11:00 o'clock, Saturday, June 5th, at Larison Hall, will give you an opportunity to share in your organization.

A most happy arrangement has been planned for the luncheon. Alumnae and Alumni will dine together in the Dining Hall at 12:30. At the conclusion of the meal the Alumni will find many interests elsewhere and we Alumnae will complete our program with brief responses from the reuniting classes, and will add those final feminine touches which make the luncheon for us a very lovely and valuable part of our Commencement activities as Alumnae.

Loyally yours,

President, General Alumnae Association.

Dear Bucknellians:

Another Commencement has come and gone. It was a delight to see so many of you back in Lewisburg on that occasion, and it was inspiring to feel your affection and loyalty for the College "on the Hill". I hope you will come back oftener, both for your sakes and for our sakes.

The next Bucknell event of general interest will be the Pennsylvania Folk Festival for 1937 which will be staged in the Memorial Stadium on July 30th and 31st. This annual Folk Festival is taking on a cultural significance of wide importance. Last year visitors came from more than a score of states. This year the program will be even more interesting. Make it the excuse for another visit to Lewisburg.

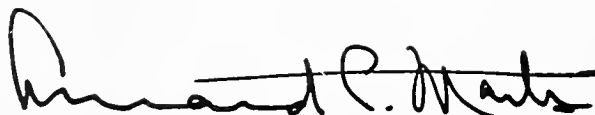

The reconstruction of Old Main is nearing completion. East Wing has been completed and we are now moving the offices that were driven by the 1932 fire into the first floor of West College back into the first floor of East Wing. The walls of the Central Section are now up to the third story. We are assured that it will be finished by September 1st. Recently I was asked if the numerals 1911 would be painted on the cupola of the Central Section, as they were on the old cupola which was destroyed by the fire. Why not? Let us preserve as much as possible of the traditions and beauty and memories of that lovely old building.

You have heard of the gift — unsolicited and spontaneous — of $53,000 toward the fund for a new gymnasium. This gift has given us courage and stimulus in our efforts for a new gymnasium. When the fund grows sufficiently to make the new gymnasium possible, it will be erected on the North Playing Field, with its back to the Cemetery, facing toward "the Hill". Tustin Gymnasium, which has served the men of Bucknell so faithfully and well for nearly fifty years, will then be re-fitted for another half century's service as a Women's Gymnasium. Speed the day when these two steps can be taken.

College will re-open on Wednesday, September 22nd. We are looking forward to a splendid academic year. On the first Saturday of the Semester, September 25th, the U. S. Marine Band will give two open-air concerts, afternoon and evening, in the Memorial Stadium. That will be another fine excuse for a week-end trip to Lewisburg.

With kind regards to you all — and with special greetings to our newest alumni, the Class of 1937.

Yours sincerely,

Editor's Corner

THE Reunion Luncheon was a mild success. For those who have tuned in late, the Reunion Luncheon was a brain child of the Alumni Association this year and was a sincere attempt to give all Alumni and Alumnae, reuning and non-reuning, an opportunity to meet and dine and greet their friends of undergraduate days under one roof. Two classes, 1907 and 1912 which had planned an elaborate program were unable to join us but secured accommodations in town. However, over three hundred Bucknellians attended this luncheon which was held in the Women's Dining Room and heard words of greeting from President Marts, President of the Alumni, Millward and President of the Alumnae, Crowding. The Men's Glee Club rendered a fine program of songs. Following this the group was dispersed to the campus in front of Harris Hall to pose in their best reunion style.

WE use the term "mild" in describing the success of the experiment as a result of some valid criticisms which have been leveled upon our heads. The occasion lacked organization. Several of the reuning classes were separated in the "come and get it" scramble. The group picture-taking was typical of most picture-taking through no fault of the photographer. But with all this we have been complimented from all sides upon the venture. Every one enjoyed seeing his friends of other classes and was delighted with the program. With a head start next year (the Commencement Program Committee did not take action this year until late in April) and with class support enlisted early in the year we promise returning alumni a bigger and better Alumni Day.

PRESENT indications point to another capacity enrolment this Fall. Registrar Holter has been compelled during the past few weeks to refuse admittance to a number of women because they did not heed his warning to apply early in the year.

ALUMNI still have an opportunity to interest high-grade men in coming to Bucknell. Perhaps you know of some young men who know little about your Alma Mater but who through you as a Bucknellian could learn more and be encouraged to apply for admission. But tell them not to delay.

Pennsylvania German "Schnitzin" Party

BUCKNELL'S second annual Pennsylvania Folk Festival, which attracted more than 25,000 persons to the campus last Summer, will be held in Memorial Stadium July 30 and 31 this year, with another varied panorama of the State's folk culture.

Here will gather Nanticoke Indians, Welsh, Ukrainians, Pennsylvania-Germans, Negroes, English, Scotch, Norwegians, Danes, and Swedes: old-time fiddlers, ballad singers, country auctioneers, square dancers, clog dancers, street criers, canal boatmen, lumbermen, Conestoga Wagoners, sailors, and anthracite coal miners who have contributed much to the indigenous lore of Pennsylvania.

Nanticoke Indians will leave their little colony on the banks of Indian River in lower Delaware to make the first return to Pennsylvania of their tribe since they left the banks of the Susquehanna River almost two centuries ago. They will perform tribal dances, adopt Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and Camp-fire Girls into the tribe, and wear their Indian garb.

Pennsylvania-Germans will hold an old-time "Schnitzin Party", or apple butter frolic. A Negro chorus will sing melodies of Stephen Foster. Welsh folk songs will be sung in the native Welsh tongue and in English by the Welsh Women Singers of Philadelphia, and Ukrainians dressed in colorful costumes will perform their gay folk dances.

"A Maytime Scene in Old England", dramatizing English folk songs will be presented by the Woman's Municipal Chorus of Wyoming Valley, Wilkes-Barre; Scottish folk songs and dances will be presented by the Pittsburgh Highlanders, and a Scandinavian Mid-Summer Fest will be held in anticipation of the State-wide celebration next year of the 300th anniversary of the settlement of New Sweden, first white colony in Pennsylvania.

Pennsylvania Folk Festival

JULY 30, 31, 1937

By Hugh Morrow, Jr.

State-wide contests in ballad singing, country auctioneering, tall story telling, old-time fiddling, clog, and square dancing, are being featured. Special honor will be paid the oldest active fiddler in the state, with all of the entrants in the fiddlers' contest more than 70 years of age.

Pennsylvania street and farm cries will be heard, a medley of Pennsylvania canal boatmen's tunes and Pennsylvania lumbermen's ballads sung. Conestoga Wagoners' descendants will present the songs, ballads and fiddle tunes of their ancestors, and give demonstrations of fancy whip-cracking. Sea chanteys of Old Philadelphia, heard along the waterfront in the days of tall ships and cobblestone streets, will be sung, and the stories, folk songs, ballads, jigs, clogs, reels, hornpipes and fiddle tunes of the anthracite miners presented.

The Pennsylvania Folk Festival is not a pageant, but a colorful, informal presentation of the native folk arts and handicrafts, customs, traditions, folk songs, ballads, and games which are a heritage of Pennsylvania's great past.

Last year's Pennsylvania Folk Festival brought Bucknell nation-wide attention. Stories were carried in nationally-circulated magazines, and newspaper clippings have been received here from such far-away places as Texas and California. As Pennsylvania is the mother of American folklore interest in the Bucknell-sponsored folk festival is nation-wide.

Alumni are invited to return to the campus for a folk festival vacation week-end. There will be golf, tennis, and other amusements for you, as well as the interesting and enjoyable program arranged by George Korson, folklorist and author, who directs the folk fete.

SPRING MEETING OF VISITING ENGINEERS COMMITTEE

BY GEORGE A. IRLAND, '15

The second meeting of the Visiting Engineers Committee, with seven members present, was held on Saturday, May eighth. An enjoyable luncheon at the Women's College Dining Room gave an opportunity for the visiting members and the engineering faculty to meet socially, after which a very enthusiastic business meeting took place at the President's house.

One new member, Mr. Ralph Becker Derr, who was appointed to the committee last February, attended this meeting. Mr. Derr graduated from Bucknell, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Science in Chemical Engineering, in 1917. His first position was Research Chemist for the General Chemical Company, which position he held for nine years. He then became Research Chemist for the Aluminum Company of America at New Kensington, Pa. He now holds the important post of Chief of Development Divi-

202 Seniors Join Alumni Ranks

. . . Lehigh President Commencement Speaker

TWO HUNDRED AND TWO men and women, the largest contingent of graduates to enter the alumni ranks at Bucknell's June Commencement since 1931, received baccalaureate degrees Monday morning, June 7, during the University's 87th annual graduation exercises. This year's class was the first to complete four years' work under the Bucknell educational plan calling for broad, general training the first two years, followed by intensive specialization in the Upper Division.

Another milestone was reached at the Commencement with the graduation of the first group of students who studied during their freshman and sophomore years at the Junior College in Wilkes-Barre. Thirty-five former Junior Collegians completed their courses in June.

Dr. Clement C. Williams, President of Lehigh University and speaker at the out-door ceremony, told the graduates that education is "the hope of democracy because the exigencies arising from complexity in the modern social and economic situation can be met only by the best trained minds". The speaker received the honorary degree of Doctor of Engineering later in the exercises.

"Education for democracy should be tailor-made so far as practicable to fit the individual for the level where nature placed him," Dr. Williams said. While cities are crowded with maladjusted college degree-holders, industry is unable to find the number of skilled mechanics it needs, he added.

Speaking on the subject, "Education — the Hope of Democracy", the college president declared, "Through education, democracy will solve its problems, provided democracy persists in the effort. The danger of failure lies in weariness or discouragement, for these may cause democracy to give up, and permit a dictator to take charge.

"Sober opinion quite generally condemned the unstable monarch who, annoyed by the duties of high office which interfered with his personal pleasures, recently disregarded his solemn obligations to his country, and abdicated," Dr. Williams said.

"Will sovereignty (of the people) in American democracy grow weary of striving and abdicate for the crimson nails of labor control, the plucked eyebrows of a specious social security, and the rouged lips of governmental subsidies?" he asked.

Emphasizing that the selection of leaders is becoming an increasingly important function of education, the Commencement speaker repudiated the Jeffersonian concept of personal equality, saying, "I would challenge Mr. Jefferson, if he were present today, to find even two men who were created equal, or any two who were exactly equal in any one respect.

"This country suffers from the misdirected efforts to give a higher education of a traditional sort to those who were never equipped natively to do the work and assume the responsibilities which college education should contemplate," Dr. Williams continued.

A cross current threatening to destroy democratic organization is the growing insistence upon the obligations of society to the individual rather than those of the individual to society, the speaker stated. "A democracy will put its faith in an education which aims to dissolve class barriers and to prepare for vocational proficiency," he said.

As a corollary to his proposal that education should be a functionally selective process, the college president advocated the disenfranchisement, complete or partial, of the illiterate and the economically incompetent.

"Their disenfranchisement would remove a large part of the clog which so cumbers governmental operations and prevents advance in civic systems," Dr. Williams said, referring to those "so defective or so indifferent as not to have acquired at maturity sufficient ability to read and understand the rudiments of government.

"By the same token, the economically incompetent, such as those regularly on relief or public charity, might well have only a restricted franchise," he continued. "They as well as all others would be benefited by intelligence and integrity in public affairs. An intelligent representative republic, neither fascistic nor communistic, is the goal of democracy."

Current socialistic doctrine errs in its assumption of the equality of individuals, Dr. Williams said, while the virtue of democracy lies in its recognition of the infinite variety of individuals.

"Freedom and liberty are achievements of the intellect and of the soul, which are fostered under a social order that individualizes, while stifled and cramped are the mind and spirit under mass action and leveling," he declared. "Education emancipates the individual; democracy succeeds only as individuals are permitted and encouraged to achieve their highest development. Education brings vision and an appreciation of the heights to which the intellect and aspirations of the individual may attain, and therein lies the hope of democracy."

Dr. Williams emphasized the necessity for liberty of thought and expression if education is to be serviceable in a democracy, commenting, "Impoverished indeed is the college which owes its spacious buildings and its elaborate equipment to sources, either governmental or private, which limit its freedom or scholarship and teachings."

Charging that governmental pressure in academic matters is becoming "terrific", Dr. Williams said, "The chief menace to democratic education at the present time is from political influence."

"Education to serve democracy must be free to announce its findings without interference from constituted authority," he added.

"Of course, academic freedom is not academic license," Dr. Williams explained. "Academic freedom should be inseparable from academic responsibility for accuracy and correctness of scholarship and thoroughness of scientific investigations. However, the dictates of truth only should place limitations on researches and teachings."

"Any theory or belief which a professor can prove or substantiate before his colleagues in his field should be suitable for presentation from a professorial chair, and a properly conducted inquiry into any realm of human concern should be free and unrestricted," he said.

CONFERRING OF DEGREES

Degrees were conferred upon 228 men and women during the Commencement exercises. In the traditional highlight of the ceremony, 202 seniors received baccalaureate diplomas from the hand of Acting President Arnaud C. Marts. In addition, 23 Master's degrees and three honorary degrees were awarded.

Bachelor of Arts degrees numbered 105. The 97 Bachelor of Science degrees were divided as follows: Biology, 24; Commerce and Finance, 24; Education, 20; Chemical Engineering, 15; Electrical Engineering, 9; Civil Engineering, 2; Mechanical Engineering, 3.

Master's degrees included the following: Master of Arts, 13; Master of Science, 3; Master of Science in Education, 6; Master of Science in Chemical Engineering, 1.

HONOR GRADUATES

Completing a pre-medical course in three years and receiving his degree with the distinction of Summa Cum Laude, John W. Raker, of Kutztown, son of W. W. Raker, '07, was the academic pace-setter of the class of 1937.

Raker, who is 19 years old, was following an old family precedent, because his father was graduated Summa Cum Laude 30 years ago. In addition to ranking at the top of the class, Raker received two academic awards, the Decker Scholarship Prize and the Ziegler Biology Prize. He expects to enter Harvard Medical School in the autumn.

Twenty-one students were graduated with honors in recognition of their excellent scholastic records, this year's honors group numbering nine more than that of last year.

The distinction of Magna Cum

Laude went to three women and three men: Dora L. Elleni, Exeter; Lyetta Marshak, Bayonne, N. J.; Albert F. Rohlfs, Wilkes-Barre; Joseph H. Salsburg, Wilkes-Barre; Ambrose Saricks, Wilkes-Barre; and Elizabeth A. Talley, Williamsport.

Fourteen seniors graduating with Cum Laude ranking were: Margaret E. Campbell, Marietta; William B. Clemens, Milton; Frank W. Dunham, Meadville; Jeanette C. Evans, Haddon Heights, N. J.; Ellen D. Gronemeyer, Scranton; Leslie D. Hammer, Catasauqua; Ethel M. Kienzle, Frackville; J. Gibson Logue, Jr., South Williamsport; Joseph P. Lord, Wilkes-Barre; Clyde M. Noll, New Providence, N. J.; Irene M. Piszczek, Plymouth; Jean L. Roser, Pittsfield, Mass.; Adelaide O. Seaton, Williamsport; and Anthony W. Yodis, Nanticoke.

Miss Campbell also received her degree with the citation, Cum Honore in Anglicis Litteris, for her outstanding work in English Literature.

Eleven prizes were awarded at the Commencement exercises, with two of the honor students receiving two prizes each. Adelaide O. Seaton won the Barrows Latin Prize and the Bucknell English Prize, while Raker also received two awards.

Other prizes were bestowed as follows: Gretzinger Economics Prize, Dora L. Elleni; Tustin Prize in Philosophy and Psychology, Anthony F. Vasquez, Philadelphia; Decker Engineering Prize, Albert F. Rohlfs; Conversational French Prize, Jeanette C. Evans; Bucknell Prize for Women, Lyetta Marshak; Alpha Chi Sigma Chemical Engineering Prize, Anthony W. Yodis, and Delta Mu Delta Commerce and Finance Prize, Leslie D. Hammer.

GRADUATE AWARDS

The awarding of Bucknell graduate fellowships and scholarships worth a total of $5,000 was announced at the Commencement by Dean R. H. Rivenburg. The financial aid will be used for graduate study at Bucknell during the coming year by 14 persons.

Four students, three of whom were members of the graduating class, will receive fellowships carrying a stipend of $500. They are: William B. Clemens, Milton; Ly-

Scholarships providing a stipend of $300 for a year of graduate study will go to Margaret E. Campbell, Marietta; Ellen D. Gronemeyer, Scranton; Edward G. Hartmann, Wilkes-Barre; Naomi Heritage, '34, Mullica Hill, N. J.; Sara K. High, '36, Curwensville; Thomas J. Mayock, Wilkes-Barre; Miriam O. Newman, Lewisburg; Alice W. O'Mara, Millburn, N. J.; Carolyn B. Stryker, Williamsport; and Anthony F. Vasquez, Philadelphia.

BACCALAUREATE ADDRESS

Because education has abandoned its former teammate, religion, man has been unable to enjoy the fruits of his learning. Arnaud C. Marts, Acting President, told the senior class in his baccalaureate sermon June 6 in the Beaver Memorial Methodist Church.

Speaking on the subject, "Education's Lost Teammate", Mr. Marts addressed a large audience of seniors, parents, and alumni. A colorful academic procession preceded the beginning of the service.

The Rev. W. L. Crowding, pastor of the Methodist Church, and the Rev. James B. Ostergren, pastor of the First Baptist Church, pronounced the benediction and the invocation, respectively. Miss Inez Robison, Lewisburg contralto, sang a solo during the offertory.

"Not only has education dropped its teammate; it has actually led the attack upon religion," Mr. Marts charged during his address.

The speaker criticized the growing neglect of spiritual values by education, which, he said, is "satisfied with its own strength and critical of its former teammate, religion".

"It is no longer God-centered nor humanity-centered," he declared. "It has gone through several phases in recent years, centered about other loyalties; once culture-centered; once science-centered; then child-centered; now the totalitarian states are teaching us to make education state-centered."

Mankind's apparent inability to use education as a way to happiness is "the tragedy of our age", Mr. Marts said.

"Here, in the midst of inventions created by our educated men and women for the comfort and enjoyment of mankind, the world is restless, unhappy, shaken by the memory of a recent war and its aftermath and haunted by the fear of another war that may plunge all civilization into a bottomless pit of blazing fury," he explained.

Discounting the view that war and human misery are products of ignorant, primitive man, the speaker described "the paradox of our generation" as the spectacle of "brilliant, educated man, using his highest genius brutally to exploit and destroy his fellowmen, instead of gloriously to serve his fellowmen".

Mr. Marts told the graduates that education has done wisely in repudiating outworn, dogmatic religion, but, he added, "In destroying the wrong forms of religious faith, we have too often destroyed faith itself."

"It is the business of the college — the compelling business of the college at this time of the great divide in human affairs — to recreate a vital faith and to bring the lives of college youth to a focus under the sovereignty of a supreme purpose outside of themselves. Such a concept is Christ and His concept of a brotherhood of man," he said.

"The college must find God again and reassert leadership in the moral world," Mr. Marts emphasized. "It must be able once more to set the hearts of its youth on fire with love for God and humanity, eager to do battle for righteousness and for a better world."

Working together, religion and education are "the two great forces which have pulled mankind constantly upward," the Acting President stated.

TRUSTEE-FACULTY

DINNER

Opening the crowded program of activities during the University's 87th Commencement season, the Trustee-Faculty Dinner was held Friday evening, June 4, in the College Dining Hall with more than 150 guests in attendance.

Guests of honor were Dr. and Mrs. William G. Owens, who returned to the campus for Commencement, following a two years' stay abroad. Dr. Owens, who retired in 1935 after serving for 55 years as a teacher at Bucknell, was the only speaker at the dinner. He described briefly his experiences in China, where he taught chemistry for a year at the University of Shanghai.

Acting President Marts presided and introduced Dr. and Mrs. Homer P. Rainey and Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Humphreys. Dr. Rainey, former president of Bucknell, is now chairman of the American Youth Commission, while Mr. Humphreys is the newly appointed head football coach.

A string trio played throughout the dinner.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES MEET

Meeting in its annual Commencement session Saturday morning, June 5, in the President's house, the Board of Trustees elected one new member, appointed seven new faculty members, and chose a Dean of Men.

Dr. Elmer K. Bolton, '08, was named to the Board. Later in the day, alumni elected Harland A. Trax, '01, of Upper Montclair, N. J., as their representative on the Trustee group.

Dr. Robert L. Sutherland, head of the Department of Sociology, will fill the newly created post of Dean of Men, the Board voted.

Trustees re-elected for four-year terms are: Oliver J. Decker, Williamsport; Dr. Mary B. Harris, Alderson, W. Va.; Arnaud C. Marts, New York City and Lewisburg; Julius Long Stern, Wilkes-Barre; W. C. Walls, Lewisburg; and John M. Wilson, Pittsburgh.

The Board also re-named all its officers as follows: Judge J. Warren Davis, Trenton, N. J., Vice-Chairman; Oliver J. Decker, Secretary; D. L. Ranck, Treasurer; Arnaud C. Marts, Acting President; and Dr. R. H. Rivenburg, Vice-President.

The Board authorized plans for building the first section of a new gymnasium as soon as the necessary $125,000 can be obtained. An anonymous gift of $53,000 toward the construction of the gymnasium was recently announced. The first section will include a gymnasium floor and bleachers.

ENTERTAINMENTS

Centering on musical and dramatic features planned for the enjoyment of alumni and guests, Commencement week-end entertainment this year was featured by the presentation of Bucknell's first Alumni Play, a revival of John Drinkwater's comedy, "Bird in Hand".

Men who were popular actors on the campus stage five years ago returned to take part in the Alumni Play, which, it is expected, will become a regular feature of Cap and Dagger's yearly program.

The cast of "Bird in Hand", which was presented Saturday evening, June 5, before a near-capacity audience in the Lewisburg High School auditorium, included two alumni who are now professional actors. Warren Young and John Forsht, both of whom have appeared on the New York stage since leaving Bucknell, had prominent roles in the comedy.

Other alumni who returned to act in "Bird in Hand" were: Franklin Bower, a student at Andover-Newton Theological Seminary; John James, Johnstown newspaperman, and Walter Hopper, of Freeport, N. Y. All scored hits in their roles.

Undergraduates appearing in the play were: Margaret M. Bortz, Upper Darby; Jean M. Fisk, Suffern, N. Y., and Paul Tebbs, Harrisburg, George Both, Scarsdale, N. Y., was the director.

According to the plans of Cap and Dagger dramatic society, it is hoped that the Alumni Play will become a traditional feature on the fifth anniversary of each graduating class.

The revival of the twilight band concert was another entertainment feature of the Commencement season. Held at 5:30 o'clock Saturday evening on Loomis Field, the band concert, conducted by Melvin LeMon, was one of the most interesting of the five musical programs offered during the week-end.

The Men's Glee Club, directed by Mr. LeMon, opened the musical festivities by singing five numbers Saturday noon at the General Alumnae and Alumni luncheon.

Thirteen students in the music department presented a recital Saturday afternoon in the Baptist Church, the program consisting of piano, organ, and vocal numbers.

The Symphony Orchestra, directed by Paul Gies, and the Men's Glee Club united Sunday afternoon in a concert on the campus in front of Hunt Hall.

Mendelssohn's sacred cantata, "Hymn of Praise", presented Sunday evening in the Baptist Church, was the final musical offering of the week-end. Miss Marian Campbell, of Williamsport, soprano; Miss Inez Robison, Lewisburg, mezzo-soprano, and James Montgomery, Philadelphia, tenor, were the soloists. Dr. Paul G. Stolz, head of the music department, conducted the cantata, for which Miss Grace Jenkins coached the chorus.

HONORARY DEGREES

Two college presidents and a clergyman received honorary degrees at Commencement. They were Dr. Mary E. Woolley, who retired last month after 37 years as president of Mount Holyoke College; Dr. Clement C. Williams, the Commencement speaker and president of Lehigh University; and the Rev. H. G. Weston Smith, of Detroit, Mich. Of this group, the Rev. Mr. Smith is a Bucknell graduate; he received his Bachelor of Arts degree in 1913.

CLEMENT CLARENCE

WILLIAMS, Eng.D.

President of Lehigh University since 1935, Dr. Williams previously had served as dean of the college of engineering, University of Iowa, from 1926 to 1935. A graduate of the University of Colorado in 1907 with the degree of Bachelor of Science in Civil Engineering, he received the degree of Civil Engineer from the same college two years later.

Following several years of varied engineering experience with railroads and as a superintendent of construction in Denver, Dr. Williams entered teaching in 1914 as professor of railway engineering at the University of Kansas. He has been, successively, head of the department of civil engineering, University of Kansas, head of the department of civil engineering, University of Illinois, dean of the college of engineering, University of Iowa, and president of Lehigh.

In presenting Dr. Williams for his honorary degree, Dean R. H. Rivenburg mentioned that he established the University of Iowa Institute of Hydraulic Research, served as president of the Society for Promotion of Engineering Education, and wrote three books and numerous articles in the field of engineering.

Dean Rivenburg described the candidate as "a distinguished scientist and engineer; teacher, professor, dean and president in institutions of world wide reputation; a teacher of rare power, an executive and administrator of large calibre; a man of vision, of honor, of good report, of integrity; a lover of mankind, a moldier of the destinies of men".

In conferring the honorary degree upon Dr. Williams, Acting President Marts said, "We are happy to honor you because of what you yourself are, because of the place of distinction which you have achieved in your chosen profession of engineering, and because of the very great service you are rendering youth and the nation as a teacher and a leader of young men."

MARY EMMA WOOLLEY,
LL.D.

America's foremost woman educator, Miss Mary E. Woolley, retired from the presidency of Mount Holyoke College the week after receiving the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from Bucknell. She was graduated from Brown University in 1894, a year later receiving the Master of Arts degree from the same college.

After serving as instructor, professor, and department head at Wellesley College, Miss Woolley was invited to become president of Mount Holyoke College in 1900, and since that time has been a leader in the cause of education for women.

Dr. Woolley has also taken an active interest in civic affairs of local, national, and international significance. Her part in the movement for world peace has been especially outstanding. She served as a member of the American delegation to the Geneva conference for the reduction and limitation of armaments, and also as a member of the Committee on International Justice and Goodwill of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. She has also been affiliated with many other religious, educational, and cultural societies; for six years she was president of the American Association of University Women.

Dr. Woolley was presented for her honorary degree by one of Bucknell's outstanding women graduates, Dr. Mary B. Harris, '94, head of the Federal Institution for Women, Alderson, W. Va.

As he conferred the honorary degree upon Dr. Woolley, Mr. Marts said, "You are the ideal and inspiration of the educated women of our generation. You have proved conclusively what Miss Mary Lyon hoped and dreamed might be proved when she founded Mount Holyoke 100 years ago — that the mind of woman is the full equal of that of man. Indeed, you have made mere man, in turn, long to be your equal — in mind and character.

"Your brilliant career as a scholar, teacher, college president, advocate of world peace, and brotherhood has helped to rend the veils that for all the centuries have hung across the force and power of womankind.

"America is proud of you as our foremost woman educator, proud of you as woman's spokesman in the crusade for peace on earth, and proud of you as a truly great Christian, and as modest as great . . .

"As you retire from the presidency of Mount Holyoke next week after your distinguished career there, we shall follow with personal interest — as one of Bucknell's own — your further career as educated America's first woman of the land — and will wish you many years of happy, fruitful service."

HENRY GRIGGS WESTON SMITH, D.D.

The Rev. H. G. Weston Smith, one of the many Bucknell alumni who have achieved eminence in the field of religion, is now pastor of the Grand River Baptist Church, Detroit, which recently called him from the Calvary Baptist Church, Norristown. Throughout his ministerial career, he has done notable work in projects linking religion and education.

The Rev. Mr. Smith was graduated from Bucknell in 1913 and from Crozer Seminary in 1916, also receiving the Master of Arts degree from the University of Pennsylvania in the latter year. During the 20 years of his active ministry, he has served several important pastorates, among which are the following: Ridgefield Park, N. J., Greenville, Pa., Mount Morris, N. Y. C., Norristown, and Detroit.

Presenting the citation for the degree, Dr. Charles M. Bond, professor of religion, said, "His ministry at Norristown, where he spent 12 years, was outstanding in quality and effectiveness . . . Mr. Smith has given himself fully to education and religious interests beyond the limits of his own particular church."

Mr. Marts awarded the honorary degree to the Rev. Mr. Smith with these words:

"You have dedicated your fine mind and restless energy to the unselfish service of your fellow-men and of your God.

"You have kept education and religion yoked effectively in your work. You have made religion educational and education religious, and you have opened the way of life by your spoken and written word to thousands of young men and women. Alma Mater is proud of your life and your achievements."

CORPORATION DINNER

As the concluding event on the gala Commencement program, as well as the finale of the University's academic year, the annual Corporation Dinner held Monday noon, following the Commencement exercises was attended by 200 persons.

Acting President Marts presided at the dinner, which was attended by many of those who had been graduated an hour earlier, their families, alumni, and friends.

Guests of honor introduced at the dinner, a traditional highlight of the Commencement season, included Dr. Clement C. Williams, president of Lehigh University, and Dr. H. G. Weston Smith, Detroit, Mich, minister, who received honorary degrees during the graduation ceremony; Mrs. John Howard Harris, widow of the late president of Bucknell, and Dr. Robert L. Sutherland, who was named dean of men on June 5 by the Board of Trustees.

Miss Mary E. Woolley, president of Mount Holyoke College and a distinguished guest at the Commencement, was unable to be present at the Corporation Dinner, preparations for her retirement from Mount Holyoke presidency making it necessary for her to leave for South Hadley, Mass., immediately following the graduation.

A number of older alumni present at the Corporation Dinner were introduced. They included:

Judge Edmund H. Reppert, '77, of Uniontown, and the Rev. T. P. Morgan, '77, of Scranton; William K. Lord, '78, Chester; Samuel Bolton, '85, Philadelphia; Mrs. Eugene Marsh, '87, Lewisburg; Mrs. Leroy Stephens, '87, Portsmouth, N. H.; Professor Walter S. Harley, '87, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Dr. Milton G. Evans, '82, former president of Crozer Theological Seminary, and Mrs. Geo. R. Bliss, '02, of Carpinteria, Cal.

The Creation of Gold Medal Flowers

Professor William H. Eyster, '14

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second article by Dr. Eyster, Bucknell Botanist, describing the development of prize-winning blooms (Gold Medal Flowers). The Crown of Gold has been adjudged the 'best new flower' of 1937.

PERSONAL: Professor Eyster (left) has recently been honored by inclusion in the forthcoming 1937 edition of the International Blue Book. This valuable reference work contains brief biographical sketches of about 19,000 persons considered by its editors to be of "international prominence". The United States will be represented by 2,650 individuals, in which allotment but thirty American botanists will be included.

II. CROWN OF GOLD MARIGOLD

MARIGOLDS have held the center of attention for several years. Guinea Gold from England, Yellow Supreme from Ohio, the dwarf French Monarch strain from England and Dixie Sunshine from Georgia have led the grand march of marigolds.

The marigold is one of America's most popular garden annuals, and can be grown successfully by almost anyone because of its adaptability to practically all cultural conditions. It will grow quite as well in the south where the summers are long and dry as in the north where the days are bright and the growing season is short and hot.

In the flower garden the marigold reigns supreme during the summer months, and competes with Zinnias and Asters for high honors in the autumn. As a cut-flower the marigold has few equals, for it lasts for days in an apparently fresh condition.

The marigold, like other flowering plants, has both good and bad qualities. Many of our native varieties bloom so late in the season that they are killed by early frosts before they unfold the great majority of their beautiful heads of yellow and golden flowers. All of our existing varieties of marigold have a decidedly pungent plant odor which is a delight to some people who regard it as much an essential part of the marigold plant as the golden or yellow color of its flowers. A considerable number of flower lovers, however, regard the plant odor as disagreeable, while a few, particularly those who are susceptible to hay fever and other allergic conditions, claim that the odor affects them in much the same way as plant pollens. The plant odor thus acts as a real barrier to the acceptance by a considerable number of people of this otherwise very desirable and beautiful garden annual. If other objections to the marigold were to be mentioned, they would probably be the late-season flowering of many varieties and the rather limited range of flower colors — lemon and orange in the African varieties; and lemon, orange, and mahogany in the French varieties.

One of the first to recognize the good and bad qualities of the marigold as well as its future possibilities was Mr. David Burpee, President of the W. Atlee Burpee Company of Philadelphia, Pa. Mr. Burpee, who would rather discuss plants than almost any other subject, conceived the idea of producing new varieties of marigold which possess as many of the desirable characteristics of the species as possible and lack the qualities which make the existing varieties unacceptable to a considerable number of garden enthusiasts. Among the qualities which tend to interfere with the general acceptance of the marigold to its rightful place in the flower garden are lateness in time of flowering, the pungent plant odor, and weak stem or other bad plant habits.

When we decide to create a new variety of plant, we never bother with trivial or unimportant matters on our experimental farms. So, when we decided to increase the popularity of the marigold by developing a variety free from the pungent plant odor and other undesirable qualities, we already recognized it as one of the outstanding garden flower annuals of the United States. We wanted to make it available and acceptable to those who prefer fragrant flowers to pungent plant odor. We realized that it will grow in every section of the country and under all types of weather conditions, and that it requires very little attention.

However, this garden annual is deficient in the range of its flower colors. Since we began the tremendous task of developing new, more acceptable varieties of marigold early in 1932, we have been cross-breeding many of our commercial types in our attempts to create varieties with a wider range of flower colors, larger and more interesting flower heads, better plant habits, fragrance in the flower heads, and the absence of the pungent odor in the vegetative parts of the plant. The resulting hybrids are being inbred and are being subjected to the most careful selection. Only individual plants which have the desired inherited qualities are selected for further breeding.

Mr. Burpee is an apt student when it comes to learning just what characteristics of plants appeal to flower growers. When he has learned what folks actually want, he immediately makes plans to create it. The first step in synthesizing something new is to find existing varieties which possess one or more of the desired characteristics. Often it is necessary to extend the search for breeding stocks to all parts of the world.

In our attempts to create a marigold with as many of the characteristics of the ideal flower as possible, we collected from all parts of the world as many of the species and horticultural varieties of marigold that we could get. As early as 1932 we had 642 varieties of marigold in the experimental gardens of the Fordhook Farms at Doylestown, Penna. Although we found new and interesting variations in height of plants; time of flowering; size, form, and color of flower heads; not a single plant in the thousands that were grown in our tests failed to produce the tiny oil glands which are about the size of a pin point and secrete the terpene oil that is responsible for the pungent plant odor. A plant breeder can create new varieties only by cross-breeding such types as nature provides. By cross-breeding, he can combine into a new variety any number of desirable characters that occur in the existing horticultural varieties. He can, so to speak, reshuffle the different inherited characters, and thus obtain new and more desirable combinations.

It was impossible to even begin the breeding of marigolds that lack the pungent plant odor because we could not find anywhere in the world a plant that lacked plant odor. We would have welcomed the discovery of a plant with odorless foliage no matter how miserable and undesirable it might be in other respects. No such plant was found and it began to look as though we could not produce the much-desired marigold with odorless vegetative parts.

We then began a world-wide search for a plant which lacked the pungent plant odor. Through our agents without portfolio in far-off lands, we began searching in swamps, plains, mountains, and forests for a marigold without the plant odor. The discovery of such a plant was indispensable in the creation of a marigold which would be acceptable to those who regard the 'body odor' of our native marigolds as an objectionable characteristic.

First and third leaves have oil glands that appear like pin-holes. They secrete a turpentine which gives the pungent marigold odor. The center leaf lacks the oil glands and the pungent odor.

We corresponded with flower collectors, gardeners, fanciers, and scientists from India to England in search of an odorless marigold to be used in our breeding work. In the meantime we carried on what experiments we could with native varieties with the hope that we would eventually find an odorless plant. Although many reports of the occurrence of odorless plants came to us, all that were investigated by us were found to be false. The work, although interesting, became tedious and exacting, and it seemed, after a considerable period, that we had accomplished practically nothing.

The turning point in our experimental work came in the form of a much-battered, stamp-plastered letter from the Tibetan border in Central China. The letter was from a missionary-customer of the Burpee Seed Company, who lived thirteen days' journey from the end of a railroad. A frequent purchaser of Burpee's seeds, he wrote that he had discovered a marigold such as he had never seen before. This letter included a snapshot of a marigold which the Chinese call the 'big golden aster' or 'Tibetan marigold'. It was scrawny in plant habit and lacked floral beauty, according to the missionary's description, but it was devoid of the pungent plant odor which is so characteristic of our American varieties. The missionary asked Mr. Burpee if he would like to buy a little seed.

Here was the one characteristic that we needed to combine with the qualities of our native varieties to produce the kind of marigold that Mr. Burpee had in mind. We immediately wired the missionary in Central China to send the seeds of his interesting discovery to us. From the photographs it was apparent that the plants of the Chinese variety have a creeping, scrawny habit and small, inconspicuous heads of flowers. It is doubtful if anyone could be found who would consider them beautiful or give them a place in the flower garden.

Mr. Burpee and his assistants entered upon their experimental work with renewed interest and renewed hope. Eventually, three acres of these wild marigolds were grown on the Floradale experimental farms in California. Thousands of plants were grown but the 'big golden aster' turned out to

Dr. Robert L. Sutherland, Head of the Social Science Department, has been named to the newly created position of Dean of Men. Professor Sutherland will continue as Chairman of the Central Counselling Committee, and will be enabled with a greatly reduced teaching schedule to devote more time to the activities of this important counselling service. This committee which is elected by Faculty and students from the larger General Counselling Committee of approximately twenty-five faculty members, will next year develop to a greater degree dormitory and fraternity group counselling. Plans for the Fall semester include the interviewing of all Freshmen by some member of the committee. In this preliminary 'get acquainted' contact with the first year men and in subsequent conferences, no attempt will be made to take over the academic counselling which can be more advantageously handled by the individual departments. Dean Sutherland in his work will place specific emphasis upon the Freshman student, but not to the exclusion of upperclassmen, and will stress the improvement of the counselling program. Dean of Women Dyer will serve the women students in a similar fashion and will be closely associated with the Dean of Men in this work.

Dr. Sutherland returned to the campus at the beginning of the past semester after a leave of absence spent in Portland, Oregon, where he was Director of the Social Science division of that city's experimental project in adult education, carried on by the United States Office of Education in ten cities. More recently he co-authored with Julian Woodward of Cornell a textbook, "Introductory Sociology". Although this book was published less than a month ago, it has received adoptions in four colleges, Kansas, Nebraska, Knox, and Miami. On July 21 Dean Sutherland will address the Biennial Convention of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs in Atlantic City. This is an organization of some 1,600 clubs throughout the country. He has been asked to introduce their national program for 1937-38, "Our Town's Business".

FACULTY CHANGES

Seven faculty promotions were announced by Dean R. H. Rivenburg at the Commencement exercises. One full professor was named, five men were elevated from the post of assistant professor to associate professor, and one was promoted to an assistant professorship. Malcolm E. Musser, assistant director of physical education was named assistant professor in that department.

New faculty members, as announced by the Board of Trustees, include the following:

Dr. Richard L. Anthony, of Yale University, professor of mechanical engineering and head of the department, succeeding Dr. Frank E. Burpee, who recently resigned to become Bucknell's first full-time superintendent of buildings and grounds.

Dr. Robert T. Oliver, of the University of Wisconsin, assistant professor of public speaking, succeeding the late James P. Whyte.

Dr. Allan Halline, of the University of Wisconsin, assistant professor of American History; Theodore Parker, of St. Lawrence University, assistant professor of sociology; Miss Barbara Ryerson, of LaSalle Junior College, instructor in French at the Bucknell Junior College, Wilkes-Barre.

Albert E. Humphreys, of North Tonawanda, N. Y., instructor in the department of physical education; Donald Blankenship, of Kenosha, Wis., assistant professor of economics at the Junior College.

NEW COACH

For the second time in recent years, Bucknell has chosen a prep school coach to guide its football destinies, with announcement by Dr. B. W. Griffith, graduate manager of athletics, that Albert E. Humphreys, who coached at Cook Academy six years and at North Tonawanda, N. Y., high school four seasons, will succeed Coach Hooks Mylin, who resigned to become head coach at Lafayette. Carl Snavely, one of the most successful coaches in Bucknell's history, and now head coach at Cornell University, came to Bucknell from Bellefonte Academy. Simultaneously with Dr. Griffith's announcement, Arnaud C. Marts, Acting President of Bucknell, said Mr. Humphreys has also been appointed an instructor in the Department of Physical Education at Bucknell.

Election of Humphreys to the two posts is an innovation in the athletic program at Bucknell. He will devote all his time to football in the fall, and will teach classes in physical education during the second semester. Selection of a new line coach will await Mr. Humphreys' choice, Dr. Griffiths said. In his ten years of coaching, Humphreys has turned out teams totalling 70 victories, 14 defeats and three ties. In 1927, his first season at Cook Academy, his football team was undefeated, and in 1929 was rated Eastern prep school champion. His 1929 Cook Academy basketball team won the Eastern prep school and National Academy championships, and in 1930 the quintet he coached won the Eastern interscholastic basketball championship. He was equally successful at North Tonawanda High School, his undefeated 1934 team tying for the championship of Western New York, while in 1936 his team won the Western New York championship after an undefeated season in which it scored 167 points to 22 points for its opponents.

Humphreys was graduated from the University of Illinois, where he played football under Coach Bob Zuppke, in 1927. He was also a varsity wrestler. The new Bison coach received the degrees of Bachelor of Science in Physical Education, and of Master of Arts at Illinois. He is married, and the father of a two-year-old daughter. At Cook Academy, Humphreys coached a number of recent Bucknell stars, including John Sitarsky, now Freshman coach at Bucknell, and Stuart Smith, co-captain of last year's eleven, and generally conceded to be one of the best all-around backs in Bison football history.

GYM GIFT

An anonymous gift of $53,000 toward the fund for erecting a new gymnasium was announced by President Marts at the undergraduate chapel exercises in May. In announcing the gift Mr. Marts indicated that it was an unsolicited voluntary contribution from a man who does not wish his name to be made public and who during the past year and a half has volunteered his gifts on several occasions when crises arose in connection with the rebuilding of Old Main. Mr. Marts added that, "This latest gift brings his total of giving up to the point that makes him the largest living donor to Bucknell".

The gymnasium will be located on North Field, facing the Hill Campus, with the field house toward the cemetery. Mr. Larsen, University Architect, is now at work creating a suggested design for the building. According to present plans, the building will be constructed in units, much like those of Old Main. The floor of the gymnasium will be 140 by 75 feet, providing one large basketball court, or three practice courts. Permanent bleachers on each side of the floor will provide seats for 800 on each side, with room for temporary bleachers seating 400 on each side. Lockers and shower rooms are situated under the bleachers.

PENSION PLAN

A pension system, establishing a joint contributory plan which will provide retirement annuities for Bucknell employees, was approved by the Board of Trustees at their annual meeting. The proposal as presented to the Board by the Faculty has been left to the Administrative Council to inaugurate and apply as the budget permits. The proposal that Bucknell affiliate itself with the Teachers' Insurance and Annuity Association of America was also approved. It is gratifying to know that Bucknell is keeping company with the more than 200 colleges, universities, junior colleges, preparatory schools, and research organizations in the United States who have established retirement funds with this organization which was founded in 1918 with the aid of a grant from the Carnegie Foundation.

BASEBALL PASSES

Bucknell probably will not enter intercollegiate baseball competition next season, Dr. B. W. Griffith, graduate manager of athletics, has announced. Bucknell has withdrawn from the Eastern Pennsylvania Collegiate Baseball League, and no schedule is being arranged for next year. The shortness of the training period permitted by the weather, and the brevity of the season were given by Dr. Griffith as the reasons for the abandonment of intercollegiate competition, at least so far as next season is concerned. Spring football drills cut into the baseball training period so far as previous coaches were concerned, and student interest in the sport has been on the wane. The announcement follows one of the most unsuccessful baseball seasons in many years. The Bisons lost ten, won two, and tied one during the season just closed. While Edward E. Mylin, who resigned as football coach to become head coach at Lafayette, was in charge of both football and baseball, his successor, Al Humphreys, will coach football in the Fall, and serve as a physical education department instructor in the Spring.

SENIOR GIFTS

Four days before receiving their diplomas, seniors voted to make gifts totalling $1,700 to various University agencies, the largest single contribution, $700, going to the Alumni Loyalty Trust Fund, which was established in 1931 for the purpose of making loans to Bucknell seniors.

The graduating class also allocated $600 toward construction of the Christian Association Lodge at Cowan. A third gift of $400 was made for purchasing a motion picture camera, to be used by the University as it sees fit.

sion, Aluminum Research Laboratories, for that company.

Professor W. K. Rhodes, Chairman of the Committee, introduced President Marts, who gave a report on the progress of engineering at Bucknell. He announced that the Board of Trustees had opened the books for contributions to complete the Engineering Building, need for which had been expressed by the Visiting Engineers Committee at their previous meeting.

Following the President's statement a more detailed report from the faculty was presented. This report outlined the new curriculum revision, pointing out the reasons for the changes made, and describing the new courses added. It also listed laboratory equipment needed by the four engineering departments.

After a very spirited discussion, in which all the visiting engineers participated, the meeting adjourned to inspect the changes recently made in the Chemical Engineering Laboratory. The committee expressed decided approval of these alterations.

The next meeting of this committee has been scheduled for the morning of Home-Coming Day, Saturday, November thirteenth.

REUNIONS IN REVIEW

1872

Three members of the class of '72 assembled at the home of Dr. William C. Bartol, Friday afternoon preceding Alumni Day, in celebration of the 65th anniversary of their graduation. These three, the only living members of the class are: Dr. Bartol and John H. Wingert, the latter having been a prominent Union County farmer, and Mrs. Sara Pomeroy, Sunbury, who was graduated from the Female Institute.

They are the survivors of a group of 21 men and 16 women. Of the men of the class 11 became doctors of divinity, 4 became lawyers, and 3 physicians, one a business man, and one a farmer.

Families of the members made up the balance of the group attending the luncheon. Mrs. Willard O. Shaffer, whose late husband was a member, attended with her son, Professor Harold Shaffer, '13; Mrs. William Leiser, whose late husband, Dr. William Leiser, II, was a member, attended with her son, Dr. William Leiser, III, '09; Professor L. E. Theiss, '02 and Mrs. L. E. Theiss, '94, the latter a daughter of Dr. Bartol; Miss Belle Bartol, also a daughter, were present. Mrs. Pomeroy was accompanied by her daughter, Miss Mary Pomeroy; and Mr. Wingert, by his daughter and granddaughter, Mrs. Marina Wingert Cook, and Mrs. Wilbur Cook. Professor F. G. Ballentine, '99 and Mrs. F. G. Ballentine, were present, the former's father having been a member of the class.

Dr. Bartol and Mr. Wingert were the speakers of the luncheon, each recalling interesting events of their college days. These two seemed the most enthusiastic and alert persons at the luncheon. Mr. Wingert was president of the class.

Dr. Bartol exhibited a baseball, signed by the 21 men of the class, which was used in an inter-class game in 1872. He told of the organization of fraternities, the inconveniences and hardships of those college years.

by JUDGE EDMUND H. REPPERT

There are but two surviving members of the class of 1877: Thomas Prosser Morgan of Scranton and Edmund H. Reppert of Uniontown, Pa. Both attended the Commencement exercises, a granddaughter of the Rev. Morgan being a member of the graduating class. They had a most happy reunion at the Corporation Dinner. Through the thoughtful kindness of the sons of Harold M. McClure and George T. Street a table was reserved for Messrs. Morgan and Reppert, the son of Judge McClure, the two sons of Rev. Street, the son of Rev. Morgan, and Rev. W. K. Lord, '78, when incidents of happy days long gone were recalled. It was delightful to have around the board these sons of McClure, Street and Morgan. Rev. Street only recently entered into rest and he had been looking forward to this reunion with the greatest interest. So with it all were tender memories of those who have passed on.

In the words of Judge Dickinson, a non-graduating member of the class: "Old friends and comrades are leaving us with increased and saddening speed, and we have experienced that 'the names we loved to hear have been carved for many a year on the tomb' ". None of the non-graduating members of the class were present. Only two of the fifteen are known to survive: Oliver B. Dickinson, Chester, Pa.; and William D. Holliday, R. D. 2, Tyrone, Pa.

Alumni Secretary,
Bucknell University,
Lewisburg, Pennsylvania.
My dear Fellow-Alumnus:

As you know I am the only survivor of the University class of 1882. I enjoyed my reunion, for I have nothing but pleasant recollections of my old class and college companions, and gratitude for all who made Bucknell possible for me as a place of college education. Every time I visit the Campus my sense of obligation deepens. On this fifty-fifth anniversary of my graduation, I could not help contrasting the University that graduated less than a dozen in 1882 with the University of 1937, when more than two hundred received diplomas. My heart was made glad when I saw so many young men and women eagerly entering life with the influences that have made mine so pleasant. Am sure that they will, years hence, rejoice in Bucknell as I do now.

My return this year was made increasingly joyful because of the enthusiastic cooperation of fellow-alumni in raising funds to complete Old Main. The rebuilding of this home dear to so many is like the rebuilding of Jerusalem. Alumni scattered far and wide will be reunited as never before. Their influence will enlist new friends for an institution that has the pledge of immortality. Old friends have gone, but these though speechless speak a language sentiment understands and gives courage and hope.

I regret that I have no recent picture. The most recent one is fifteen years' old. I regret, too, that I live too far from a photographer to get a picture to you by the end of the week. If I had a picture of myself as I looked, approximately, in 1882, I would send it, for it was 1882 that was returning. However, probably you would not have used it. (Editor's Note—We found one in our files and have used it.)

Your fellow in loyalty to Alma Mater,

MILTON G. EVANS.

The Class of '87 was represented during the Commencement period by Mrs. Anna Kaler Marsh, Mrs. Nanna Wilson Stephens, and Walter S. Harley. Dr. W. E. Staub and Dr. J. W. A. Young regretted their inability to attend.

We who had the great pleasure of attending recalled that our class was the first to be graduated under the Bucknell name; that it was the first class to which women were regularly admitted; that the Observatory was dedicated, and Tustin Hall was first proposed, at the Commencement of 1887; that the whole number of college students was then less than one hundred; and that the president was also dean and registrar.

Our outstanding delight was in meeting the two surviving members of our faculty, Dr. Bartol and Dr. Owens, both older in years but the same in spirit. With the fondest of memories of the past, the new Bucknell, much greater and stronger in physical and intellectual equipment, inspired our pride. Now that we have passed the half-century milestone, we pledge to President Marts and his loyal faculty our allegiance for the next fifty years.

'92 seems to have left out the '9 and reunes in '2's. W. A. Laning of Pittsburgh, Pa. and E. S. Corson of Bridgeton, N. J., represented those of the class who are living. Cordial letters were received from George W. Wagneseller of Pocatello, Idaho; Dr. A. R. E. Wyant of Chicago, Ill.; James A. Paterson, Wilmington, Del. Sarah Johnson Pope, Institute '92 came and shared her presence and bon mot with Corson and Laning. At the Alumnae Luncheon, Mrs. Llewellyn Phillips took "Llews" place as no one else could do. The unseen members were visualized as we knew them in the various phases of their college life.

The hospitality of the varsity was seen and felt on every hand. We were lost among the new buildings, and, especially marveled at the rapid reconstruction of Old Main. We congratulated the future students who would occupy the pleasant and convenient rooms. We were especially impressed by the Baccalaureate Sermon by President Marts. We were in doubt as to how the faith and sacrifices of the fathers were being kept and honored. With such a man, with a symmetrical character like Dr. Marts; actuated by the principles and methods set forth in the sermon, we can continue to give and pray for the success of our beloved Alma Mater.

by EDWARD C. KUNKLE

The fortieth anniversary of the Class of '97 of the College was celebrated jointly with the Classes of '97 from the Institute and School of Music. The following members of the classes were present: Leroy T. Butler, David S. Grim, M.D., John M. Gundy, Dean R. H. Rivenburg, Herbert C. Stanton, M.D., Rev. Edward C. Kunkle, all of the College; Ruth N. Davis (Mrs. E. E. Johnson), Mary Anna Kline (Mrs. Charles E. Bunnell), Emma Josephine Lawshe, Eliza J. Martin, Edna S. Shires (Mrs. Edna S. Slifer) and Gertrude Stannert (Mrs. Walker B. Kester), all of the Institute.

All met around two tables reserved at the General Alumni and Alumnae Dinner at the College Women's Dining Room. Some members of the two classes had not seen each other since their graduation. After the general gathering at dinner, the classes of '97 met on the lawn of Dean and Mrs. Rivenburg for an hour of good fellowship and reminiscence. The roll was called and known items of interest were given concerning each one. It was a time not only of happy fellowship but also of deep feeling and impressiveness as the members of the classes were brought to mind in the review of forty years of marked changes in the lives of all.

The recent loss that came to Vincent Barrett Fisk by the death of Mrs. Fisk was noted and a message of interest and sympathy to Mr. Fisk voted. The Friends of the Library project was given attention and interest in its success expressed.

Plans are going forward for the election by mail of new officers of the class, the results of which will be reported, when completed, in the Alumni Monthly.

Appreciation was voiced by all for the courtesy and hospitality of Dean and Mrs. Rivenburg in connection with the reunion of the Classes of '97 on their spacious lawn.

by M. L. DRUM

The Class of 1902 had its reunion in the Dining Hall on Saturday, in connection with the other reunions. Three tables had been reserved for us and the meal was attractive and well served.

We had a list of our members, furnished us by the Alumni Office and during and after the meal we called the roll and heard the latest reports. "I saw him last year in . . ." "He's . . ." "Teck Goddall? Same old boy, only . . ."

In a lull in the proceedings we gave the old class yell and retold some of the old tales.

Those present assured each other that Time had not even left a trace, "You look just exactly like you did when you graduated, J. W. — Oh, maybe a trifle more mature! But I see the same look in your eyes!"

We had a fine time and resolved to stir up our decrepit and somnolent brothers and sisters and have a big time when next our class number is called.

by MARY STANTON SPEICHER

Old Ponce de Leon spent many years of his life and oodles of cash searching for the fountain of youth. His search was fruitless so the story runs. We of '07 were wiser than Ponce de Leon for we knew right where to find the fountain of youth. We went back to the old college town where it was easy to slide back into the atmosphere of youth. The years rolled off our shoulders until presto! we had dumped the worries and troubles and were 21 again, carefree and happy.

We had our celebration at the Hotel Lewisburger and let me tell you, you '07ers, who could not be there, you missed something.

First of all Gordon Evans, our old band leader was there fresh as a daisy, right in the pink. His presence alone would assure us of a lively afternoon, but we had in addition to Gordon quite a group of witty boys who made us forget our rheumatism.

These are the gangsters who held up the Lewisburger on June 5th:

Leo Lawrence Rockwell, class president, head of the English department at Colgate University. Vera could not come with him, but he brought two fair daughters. (He could easily pass for their brother.)

Bill Raker and Mrs. Raker from Kutztown, were enjoying a two fold celebration, our 30th reunion and the graduation of their son John with the class of 1937. They are justly proud of John as he heads his class and has completed a four year course in three years. This is the second brilliant son of the Rakers to graduate from Bucknell.

Walter Brinker, the spark plug of '07, was chaperoned by his daughter. His Mrs. surely knows her onions. It was the first time we had seen Walter since the horse and buggy days. Iowa hasn't changed him beyond adding some additional tang to his ready wit. See him in the picture with the bull dog!

Stubby and Mrs. Benn from Pittsburgh,
Buzz and Mrs. Burrows from Picture Rocks.
Harold and Mrs. Godshall from Philadelphia,
Coit and Mrs. Hoechst from Pittsburgh, are regular attendants at reunions. That is why we can promise every one a grand time in advance. They were all on hand early and stayed until the lights went out.

Peter Cober closed up his law office for the day at Somerset and drove in to join in the merrymaking. He is another '07er who likes to come back and swap yarns about the good old free hair cuts and hazings.

Becky Shove came back to Lewisburg for the party, but got lost in the heavy traffic and failed to locate us. Sh! Sh! Becky! We were in the back room of the Lewisburger with the door locked. Be sure to carry your directions with you next time and don't forget the pass word.

Havard Griffith, the only parson present, managed to keep the boisterous crowd in order. He has been helping the University raise funds for restoring Old Main. Havard has a son enrolled at Bucknell now and a daughter is registered for next year.

Elkanah Hulley, owner of Pittsburgh, was on hand with his nephew William Hulley. He spent most of the afternoon chuckling over Brinker's barrage of '07 anecdotes, some real and some fancied. Elkanah may be a University Trustee to some, but he is "Volcano" to us.

Harry Snively and Mrs. Snively came from Newark. Harry declares he will attend all reunions until 1962. From that time on he has other plans. I've a feeling however, that Harry will wing his way back even after he's an angel. It's so hard to break a habit.

We were thrilled to see Vera Duncan Haskell. She and her Colgate husband drove from Canada to be with us for the brief afternoon. It was her first reunion. She and her husband are rearing a British son.

Emma Myers Ulmer of Lock Haven is a regular "reuner". With two grown up children she still possesses a girlish figure and not one gray hair. Can it be due to reunions, I wonder?

Mary Stanton Speicher was celebrating a class reunion as well as a family reunion. It was anniversary month for the Stantons. Eveline Stanton became Bucknell's first Dean of Women 40 years ago. Dr. H. C. Stanton, of Philadelphia graduated at Bucknell 40 years ago. "Cappy" Stanton of Cleveland graduated 35 years ago.

William Dudley Hinman hadn't been back for "yahs and yahs" and what a welcome he received! He brought Mrs. Hinman and the family pets, two handsome bull dogs. The dogs, as well as the Hin-mans, liked the party, the only objection being it was too short.

Theodore Hoy and his wife had many of us guessing for a long time. They came in late and we were stumped. It was great fun trying to place this boy whom we had not seen for 30 years. Theodore has been a busy man. If you don't believe me, just get down your catalogue and look at the degrees back of his name. Why they take up half a page! He is practicing law in New York.

When a fellow drives for days like mad through rain, wind and hail a distance of sixteen hundred miles, just to go out for lunch, what do you say about him? Uh huh, I heard you. Well, he's not. He just has a good dose of '07 class spirit. It was Earl Whitney. His body was worn out, but not the old spirit. Earl was right there even though his home is Oklahoma. After such a demonstration of zeal we can understand Earl's success in business. Earl has seven children. We know of no one in the class who can top that record.

There were two more '07ers present, Ernest Gress and Lawrence Manley. We'll serve them up on the same platter.

Ernest Gress, everyone knows, is the State botanist and Manley is a Washington accountant.

Let me introduce them properly

"The '07 grandpops"

When we were in college a grandfather was a dignified old gent, stout and jolly, with a smiling be-whiskered face. He leaned on a cane and was connected with pumpkin pies, Thanksgiving and other good things. The grandpops of '07 have gone modern mentally and physically. They are even streamlined. The old tummy that shook, like a bowlful of jelly is missing — so are the whiskers.

The '07 grandmom was not there, but she'll be there next time if she isn't too busy practicing the rhumba.

Letters were read from absent ones with all sorts of alibis, but one letter in particular brought a gasp of surprise from the men and a gasp of dismay from the gals. It was from Zug announcing his marriage. Cheer up gals! We still have Joe Weddle.

It was noted that the following members of '07 have sons and daughters attending the University:

W. W. Raker, Leo Rockwell, Ernest Burrows, Harold Godshall, Calvin Oberdorf, Gilbert Perez, E. W. Groover, George and Margaret Leshar Riggs, Havard Griffith, Jay Wolfe and no doubt others whose names I failed to hear.

The members of the class paid tribute to the memory of Tommy Leach who was killed in a motor accident in 1934. Musician, sportsman, gentleman, Tommy was a favorite with all of us. Bucknell held a big place in Tommy's heart all through his life. It was significant that his pall bearers were Wendall August, '07, Percival Andrews, '07, Frank Hutchinson, '07, Charles Marsh, '05. To Ursula Parmley Leach, his wife and our classmate, we extend sympathy.

1912

by J. H. FLECKENSTINE

The quarter of a century reunion class this year was that of 1912. A most delightful dinner gathering was held at the Lewsburg Inn, Saturday, June 5, at 12:30 noon. Twenty-nine grads of the class were there with thirty-six other members of their families. Speeches were omitted and the entire time was given to the renewing of acquaintances, to the talking over of old times, and to the meeting of the wives, husbands, and children who have been adopted into the class group. The fried spring chicken dinner at the Inn was enjoyed in its own right but the enjoyment was enhanced because of the associations.

The 20th reunion of the War Class of 1917 was by far its largest and best. Despite the fact that no special effort had been made by class members to have a large attendance, about thirty were on hand for the reunion luncheon in the Dining Room of The Women's College at 12:30 on Alumni Day.

Following the luncheon we met on the Women's Campus for a delightful hour of reminiscence and the exchange of class news. Because of other meetings, the reunion ended with the taking of the reunion picture.

It was generally felt that our time together was altogether too brief — so it was enthusiastically resolved that special plans be made for our 25th Reunion in 1942. The committee, Alice Johnson Schug and G. Grant Painter promise that this resolution will be carried out under this slogan:

"One of the 'Musts' in '42,
Your Twenty-fifth at old B. U."

The following members of 1917 were registered at Alumni Headquarters: C. M. Kriner, Henrietta Heinsling Kriner, F. G. Rogers, Ailcen Johnston Connelly, Lora McQuay Young, Alice Haslam Flynn, Alice Johnson Schug, Edith Horton Evans, Ray Speare Topham, Hazel Williamson Heberling, John A. Heberling, G. Grant Painter, Frank E. Williams, G. T. Bender, Charles J. Hay, Lewis A. Eyster, Betty Redelin Davis, J. R. McCormick, M. H. Cryder, G. B. Champion, Elizabeth Lehr McCarthy, Jeannette Cooke Armstrong, Geraldine Hanson Giffin, S. Leroy Seemann.

by FINLEY KEECH

The class of '22 met at the home of Professor and Mrs. Lowry at 11 a. m. for a social and business get-together. Several business matters were acted upon, mostly concerning the straightening out of our class memorial fund and the election of an alumni representative. Professor Lowry was chosen as the Alumni Council representative. Then at 12:30 we went over to the dining room for the dinner, and were scattered around promiscuously due to the uncertain markings of the tables, and were together again only for the picture.

by "SHORTY" PARMLEY

On June 5th the Class of '27 met as a group for the first time since graduation. A letter from the Alumni Secretary was read and suggestions approved. In discussion we agreed to sponsor reunions of consecutive classes such as '25, '26, '27, or '26, '27, '28 at the same time. We are also in favor of the combined alumni-alumnae luncheon, and wish that both business sessions might be held in the same place to avoid rushing about the campus and scattering of groups.

The following officers were elected for the next five-year period: President—Caryl Dutton Slifer; Vice-President — Dr. John S. Cregar; Secretary-Treasurer—Florence E. Parmley. It is our desire to boost the next reunion to greater attendance with enthusiastic "fliers" between times. We urge you of 1927 to return to Bucknell campus every year—to make each one a reunion. Caryl, Johnnie and Shorty will always be there to greet you.

It was such a pleasure to meet again with Doug Anderson, Harry Bradley, Howard Bull, Sam Convery, Dr. John Cregar, Bill Darkes, Rev. Lew Davis, Agnes Dunbar, Caryl Dutton Slifer, Martie Felty Ackerly, Bruce Miller, Betty Haslam, Arlene Kimball, Bill Laning, Shorty Parmley, Kitty Smith, Fred Farnsworth, Dick Vastine and Harold Webber.

Others of '27 on the campus who did not attend the meeting include Florence Beckworth Miller, Kitty Gaventa, Betts Lawson, Ruth Marion, and Helen Thomson.

1932

by JAMES B. STEVENSON

The siren call of Marian Ash McClain, printed in The Alumni Monthly and urging members of the Class of 1932 to return for their fifth reunion, was weak, wavering, and heard only by a few. Her plaintive cry, to which so many used to respond, seems to have all been used up on Warren J., '31. Only a mere handful of the once strong class gave heed and showed up in Lewisburg. Even the echo of her plea failed, and Marian herself did not react.

Frank Koehler left his cows and child in Scranton, Joe McMurray abandoned Williamsport, Mrs. Louise Manley Kruger deserted some unconserved soil on a desk in Washington, and Ella Bibby, Ruth Taylor, Bill Curnow, simply packed and fled. William N. Sweet got away from something, too, but searching parties failed to find him at the luncheon or in the unofficial class picture. Those Kappa Sigs, y'know . . .

Later in the day, Charles McCall Stump arrived, after being delayed by initiating a class of 50 Elks in Cumberland and by being forced to sell a big policy Saturday morning. It wasn't until Sunday morning that William H. (Bell Hop) Wood managed to shake Earle and Margiotti and get to Lewisburg. These Democrats are busier than when we knew them back in 1932.

That's about all that's fit to print — the words of the loyal group who came back, used in respect to their non-returning classmates, certainly aren't. If more don't show up in 1942, there'll be trouble—worse trouble than the New Deal, too.

Alumni Organizations In Annual Meetings

Dr. Bartol Delivers Annual Alumni Address

THE annual meeting of the Bucknell University Alumni Association was called to order at 3:00 P. M., June fifth in the Literature Building Auditorium by the President, Carl C. Millward. Dr. Milton G. Evans '82, pronounced the invocation.

Appointment of Committees: In the absence of the Alumni Trustee Nominating Committee (Stanley Davies '12, Howard V. Fisher '13, Katherine G. Carpenter '11) the President appointed Walter S. Wilcox '04, C. B. Comstock '06, Mary Bartol Theiss '94 to act as tellers, and declared the ballot for Alumni Trustee officially closed. Malcolm E. Musser '18, James A. Tyson '11 and Dr. Lewis E. Theiss '02 were appointed by the President to serve as the Nominating Committee for the election of officers of the Alumni Association.

Dr. Millward introduced the new Athletic Coach, Albert E. Humphreys, who asked for the support of the Alumni throughout the year.

President Millward spoke briefly of his activity during the year in interesting a group of Alumni Association Presidents of small privately endowed colleges in gathering together to discuss mutual problems of their institutions. These plans should materialize during the coming year with the probability of the initial meeting being held on the Bucknell campus. Dr. Millward feels that by considering these matters from the viewpoint of a presidency of a college alumni association these men can make a real contribution to the present and future policies of the small college.

BUCKNELL: IN THE BEGINNING*

by William C. Bartol '72,

University Historian

* This sketch is a view taken in part, from historic sketches by Professor Taylor, President Harris, James Moore, Jr., and 3rd, J. Merrill Linn, John M. Lyons and the Bucknell University catalogues.

LOCAL CAUSES

Dr. Thwing in his noted history entitled "The History of Higher Education in America", tells us: "The founding of most colleges, is the result of the operation of local causes". Such, certainly, was the case in the founding of Bucknell University. Stephen W. Taylor, the chief factor in the founding of Bucknell University wrote a brief history about the founding, which puts before us some of these local causes. I gather from Taylor's Sketch: "In various regions of Pennsylvania, Baptists pressed the inquiry—Where is a good school for our sons and daughters? Near our homes, we have respectable schools, under the management of the religious denominations, practically all of them except the Baptist. In other States, the Baptists are maintaining respectable Universities and Colleges, at which, more than forty of our young men are placed, most of them students for the Gospel ministry. But what are the thirty thousand Baptists of Pennsylvania doing for the cause of Literature and Science? Evidently not a tithe of what they would do, if, as other denominations are, they were united in the support of a respectable Literary and Scientific Institution, within the State of Pennsylvania".

But there was no general plan of action to found such an Institution, until the 14th day of August, 1845. A committee was then appointed by the Northumberland Baptist Association. This committee directly reported to the Association a resolution as follows:

Resolved—that we esteem it desirable that a Literary Institution should be established in Central Pennsylvania, embracing a High School for male pupils, another for females, a College and a Theological Institution,—to be under the influence of the Baptist denomination.

This committee was then instructed to prepare and address the various religious bodies of the Baptist denomination in the State of Pennsylvania on the subject of the proposed High School and College. It was instructed to adopt such measures for the furtherance of the proposed object, as it saw fit. This committee was made up, for the most part, of residents of Lewisburg and near-by places. They assumed the title: The Baptist Literary Association of Pennsylvania.

About this time they learned that Stephen W. Taylor, one of the professors in the Hamilton Literary and Theological Institute, now called Colgate University, had resigned his chair in that Seminary. They learned, also, that Taylor had an experience of thirty years as an educator in Literary Institutions, and that he had proved himself eminently fit and successful, wherever he went.

The Rev. Eugenio Kincaid, known to them as the "Hero Missionary", and the Rev. Joel E. Bradley, Secretary of the Literary Association, both old friends of Professor Taylor, wrote to him,—authorized to do so by the Association,—hoping to enlist him in the school enterprise. On the 8th day of December, 1845, Professor Taylor was appointed, "The General Agent" of the Literary Association. Professor Taylor, upon his visit to Lewisburg on the 27th day of December, 1845, found the members of the Literary Association very sanguine in their expectations that the necessary funds for their project would be procured within a month, and that all the school buildings would be erected and furnished with library and apparatus, in season to be opened, for the accommodation of students, in the fall of 1846.

Professor Taylor matured his plans and brought them forward. He said: We must raise an endowment. One hundred thousand dollars should be secured before we ask the Legislature for a charter. In addition we should have three suitable buildings. Another hundred thousand should be in sight for that. A good library and school apparatus should be secured. All these, Professor Taylor pointed out, "were essential to moderate success".

The committee was somewhat staggered at the vastness of their undertaking, as seen through the eyes of Professor Taylor. A conference of interested friends was called and held, to consider further the situation. Here Professor Taylor took the opportunity to assure friends, who were present, that he had in mind much more than the founding of a local school. He proposed that a wide constituency be built up and that all parties interested join hands to plan and work together for a great institution.

He had in mind a Baptist University; and yet a university, in a large way undenominational. He planned that trustees and faculty should be Baptist but not exclusively so; and that they be chosen not locally, but chosen from throughout the State.

The plans of Professor Taylor, after discussion, were in the main part, endorsed by the conference. Soon the work as proposed began to take shape.

Lewisburg was the site chosen for the Institution, and Lewisburg was ready to show the way. More than one hundred citizens of Lewisburg came forward with substantial subscriptions. The Northumberland Baptist Association pledged $20,000; or twenty per cent of the proposed endowment.

Professor Taylor, encouraged by the outlook,—prepared a charter for a university on wide lines. He was now ready for Harrisburg. The Legislature was then in session. It had been deemed necessary to give the charter a form that would preserve the University under the control of the Baptist brethren. This put some difficulties in the way of its passage, but after the lapse of seventeen days the charter was unanimously granted in the identical form in which it had been presented. It was then signed by Governor Francis R. Shunk on February 6th, 1846.

In Professor Taylor's mind the final success of the effort to found a college at Lewisburg depended in the main upon the kind of support it would receive in Philadelphia.

The Philadelphia Association promised to raise one-third of the $100,000 endowment aimed at. It later went high over the top redeeming its pledge. Other promising fields in Pennsylvania and New Jersey were successfully canvassed for funds by Taylor and other interested parties.

Taylor now turned his attention to the University grounds, and to the planning of college buildings upon them. The work of soliciting funds was put into the hands of the Rev. Eugenio Kincaid and the Rev. William Shadrach. The work for the most part devolved upon Shadrach. He visited nearly every church in Pennsylvania and secured subscriptions from more than four thousand persons. Through his efforts largely, the one hundred thousand dollar endowment was finally raised.

THE SITE

Since the days of Indian domination, the country round about this University site has been held to be a choice piece of country, in scenery and in fertility. A glance backward brings us that view.

Glancing backward to pioneer days we may gather some interesting items from a story by J. Merrill Linn '51. Mr. Linn says: "It was the policy of William Penn, and that of his sons,—to reserve, out of each purchase of land from the Indians one-tenth of the land thus acquired. This one-tenth was to be selected as the most desirable land in the entire purchase. It was to be surveyed and set aside for the proprietors before the land office, for that tract, was opened to purchasers". Mr. Linn tells us that: "William Maclay, a deputy surveyor in Colonial days, (1769) was ordered to mark off in Buffalo Valley, for the 'Honorable Proprietaries', a 320 acre tract of select land. This he did. He surveyed the 320 acre plot by commencing at the White Oak near 'Strohecker's Landing' (a point on the river bank not far from the present University foundry building.)

Passing up the river a short distance, he came to a fine clear spring, flowing freely throughout the dryest summer. Maclay continued for a mile up the river to the mouth of Buffalo Creek. Then passing up the creek to a Hickory tree which stood exactly where the public road to Red-Top reaches the old iron bridge, he blazed the Hickory tree. If we could today start at that Hickory tree, and run a broken line westward and southward to the starting point at Strohecker's Landing we would approximate Maclay's course in locating the 320 acre tract, selected for the proprietors. The best in the way of fertility and scenery, in this vast purchase from the Indians.

The seventy-acre plot purchased later for the University by James Moore, Jr., Samuel Wolfe and Dr. William Ludwig, and on which plot the University is built, lies within this choice plot, reserved by the proprietors for themselves because of its beauty and richness.

As to buildings,—the first in which classes were held was the new Baptist church, providentially prepared for this college venture.

Mr. James Moore, Jr., was the main human factor in this preparation. Mr. Moore, was a sterling Baptist, well to do, who lived on a farm near Lewisburg. He had a loved daughter and six sturdy sons and he hoped to see them all well educated in a Baptist college. While the Baptists in Central Pennsylvania were planning to establish an "institution of high order" Mr. Moore was planning to establish a University.

At that date there was no Baptist church in Lewisburg. The town was almost barren of Baptists. Mr. Moore's thought was: Let us have a Baptist college in Lewisburg; but first of all we must have a Baptist church. It is a necessary introduction to a Baptist college.

James Moore, Jr., was a mighty worker. He and his friends went to work and established a church; and the church set to work and directly erected a modest church building. It was completed just in time for Professor Taylor to domicile in it his little school,—the beginning of Bucknell University.

The Board organized promptly and its Executive Committee requested Professor Taylor to get together a "High School" and take charge of it; they desired it to be opened in Lewisburg as early as the first Wednesday in October, 1846. Accordingly, the proposed "High School" was opened October 5th, 1846 in the basement rooms of the Baptist church. The teachers were Professor Taylor and his son Alfred, both having been appointed by the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees.

At the beginning of the first session in this church basement, there were 22 pupils, not one of whom had ever studied Greek or Latin. And with one exception, no one understood Arithmetic to the Rule of Three, nor English Grammar, so far as to parse.

In the basement of the church building were three good sized rooms, which were used for assembly, chapel, lectures, study, and recitation purposes. In the rear was a large yard where the boys played the old time games of ball.

In the local newspaper called: "The Lewisburg Chronicle and West-Branch Advertiser", dated July 17, 1847, we find the following advertisement: "The Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees of the University at Lewisburg take pleasure in announcing that they have most encouraging prospects of early success in their effort to secure the amount of funds required for carrying out the provisions of their charter. It seemed to them, however, best to open in Lewisburg as soon as practicable. 'The Lewisburg High School', for the accommodation of such young ladies and gentlemen as might wish, to take advantage of such an institution. They have accordingly engaged the services of Professor Stephen W. Taylor for Principal, — recently Professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy in Hamilton Literary and Theological Institution whose experience and eminence as an educator, will be, to parents and guardians, sufficient guarantee as to the character of the school.

"They have engaged as assistant, Alfred Taylor, A.B., graduate of Madison University and they will increase the number of efficient teachers as the wants of the institution may require.

Nine months before this newspaper advertisement was printed in the Lewisburg paper, the first session of the High School in the church building, was held. J. Merrill Linn of Lewisburg entered the school as a pupil at that first session. He continued his studies and graduated from the University, in its first class, the class of 1851. Linn when he entered the school had just passed his birthday and was thirteen years old. The first year of this so-called High School closed on August 24, 1847.

At the opening of the second year in the High School, Mr. Isaac N. Loomis, a Colgate graduate of the class of 1845, having been duly elected by the Board of Trustees, took his place as a teacher in the High School. The faculty of the High School was then made up of Professor Taylor, his son Alfred, and Isaac N. Loomis. They were in every way efficient teachers and both Alfred Taylor and Mr. Loomis were honored later when the school moved up the Hill.

In February, 1848, ground was broken for the Academy building, now known as Stephen William Taylor Hall. The building was nearly completed that year and in the early spring following, the University school moved from the church basement rooms into the Academy building. The church basement school's duration was about two years and eight months.

With moving day happily over, Professor Taylor began to arrange the school according to his own sweet will.

On the upper floor of this new Academy building, each student, boy or girl, was provided with a chair and desk; all arranged in rows from front to rear of the room. The girls were assigned the west side of the room and were faced to the West. The boys were assigned the east side of the room and were faced to the East.

This was co-education, with a small part of its accompanying pleasures mildly dismissed by the back to back arrangement for the boys and girls. Of course this plan of seating boys and girls, made strict attention to the text book on the desk, less easy. John Morris Lyons one of the pupils thus unhappily seated, remarked: "If we looked around once in a while there was no harm done.

We have in this brief story, traced the University, from its inception by the Baptists of Central Pennsylvania, through its opening struggles, until we find it comfortably and proudly seated in the Academy building on the college grounds.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY

The recital of the activities of the Alumni Office under a new Secretary becomes largely a picture of the trials and errors of that individual. Twelve years of alumni work under one Secretary has given real strength to the Bucknell Alumni Association. It was only natural then that we should carry on and be tempted only slightly to try new things under advisement from the Officers and Executive Committee of the Association.

The regular work of the Alumni Office as Campus Service Station and Alumni Clearing House is too well known to require recounting here.

This report, therefore, will be concerned largely with discussion of new policies and new projects. Their continuance will depend entirely upon approval by the General Alumni body.

Alumni Club work has been unusually active this year due to the renewed interest in the University through our Active President, Mr. Marts, and through alumni participation in the Old Main Rebuilding Fund. In deference to the Old Main drive for funds, no solicitation has been made in behalf of the Alumni Fund. With President Marts we attended Old Main meetings in Baltimore, Washington and throughout Central Pennsylvania: Scranton, Wilkes-Barre, Allentown, Reading, Pottsville, DuBois, Altoona, Lewisport, Williamsport. In addition, we brought news of the Alumni Association to regular meetings of Alumni Clubs in Harrisburg, Williamsport, South Jersey, New York City, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Washington and Elmira. New alumni clubs have been organized in Allentown and Baltimore.

The first meeting for the current year of the Executive Committee of the Alumni Association was held on October 10. At that time the suggestion was made that we attempt to coordinate alumni and alumnae reunions at Commencement time. Through the consistent efforts of a committee composed of the Presidents of the two associations and the Alumni Secretary the joint luncheon today was realized.

At this same meeting it was agreed that in order to keep the Alumni Monthly regular in size and yet remain within the budgetary allowance five issues be published a year of at least sixteen page length. In order to satisfy the postal requirements of seven issues a year, two special two-page leaflets were published, one—the President's Christmas Greeting and the most recent issue, the Commencement Program. The editorial policy has been more "personals", more pictures, and more articles written by alumni.

In the fall an excellent committee headed by Carl Millward, '06 planned and directed another "finest Homecoming in history". A large amount of credit is due the football team which dispelled any hopes that Villanova may have had of going to the Rose Bowl. The annual dinner and dance was highly successful with over three hundred alumni attending.

Through the generosity of alumni in contributing to the Alumni Fund in previous years, the facilities of the Senior Loan, which is used to enable needy upperclassmen to graduate, was extended to fifteen seniors. In this regard we wish to pay tribute to the following alumni for their unsolicited gifts (a total of $111.60) to the Alumni Association during the past year:

Cyril E. Lewis '16, Mrs. Emma Hyman Sampsell '91, Mrs. Dora Watrous Spratt '78, Dr. J. A. Thompson '22, Mrs. Ida Greene Wattson '94, Mrs. Flora Sigel Pohlman '98, George F. Bailets '09, Mrs. Louise Bassell Belcher '17, Josephine Brown '10, J. C. Diffenderfer '68, Lynn S. Goodman '05, Rev. Charles F. McMann '94, Felix Meinikheim '35, Dr. John M. Snyder '30, Mrs. Olive Richards Landers '08, Charlotte E. Lebo '32, Mrs. Hazel Galloway Hemphill '13, Dr. E. S. Corson '92, Mrs. Carol Spratt Foster '08, Katherine L. Gammans '33, Grace M. Moore '35, Elizabeth C. Walker '95.

The Alumni Office has cooperated in the preliminary steps in the formation of two new alumni organizations: the Friends of the Library under the Presidency of Norman E. Henry '05 and the Visiting Committee on Engineering under the chairmanship of Professor W. K. Rhodes '03. Unrestricted space in the Alumni Monthly has been extended these societies and as a result of this publicity, two other Universities have become interested in the set-up of our Friends and Visiting Committee.

More recently (April 10) a Placement Bureau for seniors and alumni was organized at a meeting held at the President's House attended by twenty alumni prominent in business and the professions. This Committee, known as the Alumni Advisory Council, is chairmanned by Prof. F. G. Davis, '11 who is also Director of the Bucknell Teacher's Appointment Bureau. In this connection your Secretary contacted some twenty Personnel Directors in Philadelphia and New York who in addition to placing us on their preferred list expressed approval of our program and agreed in the desirability of centralized placement, but at the same time emphasizing the value of direct contact between interviewer and professor.

As a result of this trip and the interest shown by alumni a number of seniors have been assisted in securing positions for next year and new avenues of summer employment have been opened up to undergraduates. Alumni are being assisted in learning of greater opportunities in their chosen fields.

COMMITTEES REPORT

Malcolm E. Musser, Chairman of the Nominating Committee presented the following names for offices of the Association:

Vice-President, Mrs. Margaret Phillips Matlack '18; Member of Executive Committee, Kenneth W. Slifer '26.

Upon motion, duly seconded and carried, the Secretary was authorized to cast a vote for the entire ticket. The President declared the election carried.

The report of the tellers for nomination of Alumni Trustee was heard and approved. The President instructed them to turn the report over to the Board of Trustees for final action.

Dr. Mabel G. Leshner, Vice-President, presented the report of the Executive Committee with the following recommendations: (1) that no active campaign in behalf of the Alumni Fund be undertaken this year, but that we continue under the subsidy of the University for another year, and (2) that we make recommendation to the Board of Trustees for an increase in the Alumni Office personnel to the extent of a full-time Field Secretary who would devote his time to re-selling Bucknell to the alumni while interesting them in active participation in the University's admissions program, and in creating good will through more personal contacts not possible under the present set-up; all this without benefit of requests for funds.

In the absence of the Treasurer, Mr. Ranck, the Secretary reported that since the Treasurer of the Association is also the University Treasurer, the annual Treasurer's Report will be included in the regular University Treasurer's Report.

GENERAL ALUMNAE MEET

The official minutes of the meeting as reported by Mrs. Christine Sterner Moyer '28, Secretary, follow:

CLUB CALENDAR

PITTSBURGH

by J. R. CRISWELL, '14

About fifty of our Alumni in this district attended this year's Commencement and all report having had a very pleasant week-end at Lewisburg. Most of these Alumni with a number of friends are already planning to attend Homecoming in a body.

At one of our regular Thursday luncheons, Dr. Spenser B. Meeser, '83 read the following poem:

OLD MAIN

The Home of haunting, hallowed memories,
The cherished memories of griefs and joys,
Which ever hover round these honored walls,
Transporting us to days when we were boys.
Here dreamed we of the days that lay before,
Here fashioned high ideals for our life,
Here broke the brazen implements of immaturity,
And wrought our golden armor for new strife.
Here truth we trailed with eager wrangling minds,
Dug deep into the pits of wisdom's lore,
Sometimes despaired, oftimes the goal we gained,
And seeking fame, through this open door.
Here found we friends and learned of chivalry,
In great emprise we knit our hearts as one,
And shared our wealth with each in poverty,
The poverty and wealth of mind we each had won.
From here set sail in our frail bark of life,
To make our voyage of discovery,
Columbus like, the land of an ideal self,
To find forsooth, on an uncharted sea.
And as, from distant shores, we scan our course,
The way we came, we feign would voyage there again,
And lay some treasure of our fabled land,
Upon the reconstructed home "OLD MAIN",
For though the famished flames her walls seared hungrily,
They could not scorch her burnished living soul.
"OLD MAIN" still lives in loyal hearts, and vividly
In minds which ever pay her honor's toll.

SOUTH JERSEY

by KEN SLIFER, '26

Fifty-five Bucknellians attended a party staged by the Bucknell Alumni Club of Southern New Jersey on Friday, May 28th, in the Women's Club of Vineland. A local committee, headed by Lawrence Kimball, '23, planned and provided a very pleasant evening. Comic murals by Don Streeter, '28, each one headed "Remember?", were amusingly arrayed around the walls.

Election of officers for the new two-year term occupied most of the brief business meeting. The Nominating Committee, of which Anne Zerby Sum-merill, '26, was chairman, submitted printed ballots with two nominees for each office. When the tellers had finished and checked their count, these new officers were announced: President, Joseph McCormick, '26; Vice-President, John Kohl, '32; Corresponding Secretary, Frances Harris, '27; Recording Secretary, Elizabeth Mayhew, '34; Treasurer, Clyde Ellzey, '27. Two members of the Executive Committee, Dr. Mabel Grier Leshner, '01 and Helen Hare Sholl, '10, retain office for another year and four new members were elected: Lawrence Kimball, '23, Katherine Carpenter, '11, Harold Reber, '28, and Kenneth Slifer, '26.

Several songs by a Bridgeton quartet followed the business program, an orchestra played for dancing, tables were set for cards, refreshments were served, and graying grads reminisced far into the night.

Marigolds

be a plant with a scrawny habit that was a late-flowering marigold with small flowered, dull-colored flower heads.

The wild Chinese marigold lacked the pungent plant odor but, as if to offset this desirable quality, it was well loaded with such undesirable qualities as late-flowering, scrawny plant habit, and small flower head.

We found that the wild Chinese marigold transmits odorlessness of the vegetative parts from the parent to the offspring. We found, in other words, that the absence of the odor in the leaves is an inherited characteristic. According to our breeding plans it would take three or four years of strenuous breeding to create an odorless marigold suitable for the flower garden. As so often happens, however, nature stepped in ahead of man. A hereditary change, known as a mutation, occurred in a single plant which has most of the characteristics of our ideal flowering plant. This plant was more beautiful than any we could have produced in many generations of scientific breeding. It was a gift of Mother Nature to the gardeners of America.

Nature always rewards richly him who asks something of her. Burpee persisted in his search for an odorless marigold until he found it in the interior of China. When this odorless variety was growing in California, Dame Nature lent a helping hand and transformed, as if by magic, a scrawny, late-flowering plant with small, dull-colored heads into a plant that could be considered almost the ideal marigold. When the seeds of this plant had developed into a new generation of plants, it was found, to our great surprise, that the mutation had bred true.

The plants have strong stems with symmetrical branches and graceful leaves which give them a vegetative beauty in the early stages of their growth. The unusual beauty of the flower heads are in keeping with the graceful charm of the vegetative organs. Each of the numerous branches is crowned with a beautiful head of golden flowers more than twice the size of those of the parent type. Each head consists of a cycle of broad ray flowers around a generous cluster of disk flowers which have elongated, incurved corolla lobes. The ray flowers form an attractive collar around the central cluster of flowers. In appearance the head resembles a golden Chrysanthemum surrounded by a distinct collar. These flower heads which terminate the main stem and each of its numerous branches are veritable crowns of gold. Not only do the leaves and stems lack the pungent odor so characteristic of all other varieties but the flowers possess a delicate and delightful fragrance. The plants of this new variety begin to unfold their crowns of gold early in the season and keep right on blooming until they are killed by autumnal frosts. By the middle of July, each plant has been transformed into a mass of golden heads.

This newly created queen of the marigolds was introduced to the public in January, 1937, when it was presented formally by Mr. Burpee. This introduction was received with the greatest enthusiasm by all who find pleasure in marigolds, and particularly by those who object to the pungent odor of our common varieties. This marigold is like a dream that has come true, and represents one of the finest creations of Burpee's Floradale Farms in Santa Barbara County, California. It has been given the distinguished name, "Collarette Marigold, Crown of Gold".

Last year the "Crown of Gold" marigold was grown in trial grounds in all parts of the country in competition with other garden annuals and was selected by impartial judges to be the most outstanding garden annual to be introduced in 1937. It is the only Gold Medal winner of 1937 and is the first known variety of marigold with entirely odorless foliage and fragrant flowers.

The "Crown of Gold" is the first of a series of new marigolds that will be introduced by the House of Burpee. It represents the beginning of a new era for the marigold as a plant for the flower garden.
